Scanned from the collection of
The Museum of Modern Art Library

Coordinated by the Media History Digital Library
www.mediahistoryproject.org

Funded by a donation from Domitor

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2012 with funding from Media History Digital Library

http://archive.org/details/moviwor08chal

RE WORLD

LLIED INTERESTS

George Has Nothing On

IS A CROWN OF SUC

THE BIO CARBON

he Parade Be a Bio

ALL LIVE EXCHANGES SELL

BIO CARBONS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

ear Righ

stalling a perfect movi machine.

To please your patr must Project Perfect P

There is only fect Motion P. chine—

Power's No.

In one year since th
introduction of this wo derful machine it has b come the favorite of hibitors and operators. Its sa now exceed those of any tw other American moving pict achines—and we can prove it.
No other motion picture machine er made such a record.
y. Send for it today.

ER COMPANY
New Yor

nakers of motion picture machines

WE — GUES

Last week we introduced to you lobby, the demand for which h compelled to d

FRAMES a

WE REPE

A Beautif

We furnish you posters each film released. If yo exhibitor we will send yo

Sent to any theatre in films are released. Ev
Complete synopsis of

LL.

STOCK
Size
Price of frame, f.
Entire output of P
LAST WE

City

ILM

C.

ndent nd

RS

ny amount
You don't e when you
ing for you.
s Co. is at xchange ton, Mass.

186 W.

om, No. 309, 169 W.

Champion Films

WHAT WE WISH TO ANNOUNCE IS our resolution for the approaching New Year to NOT deviate one iota from the effectively mapped out program of GOOD FILM execution, which we are pursuing at the termination of 1910. We have met with, engaged with and o'erswept the difficulties that have attended our progress, and the successful disposition of them has crowned our efforts in our

RELEASE OF JANUARY 11, 1911

BILL'S WIDOW

You have failed in your duty to the public if you fail to procure this laugh-extracting COMEDY. Your PROGRAM IS INCOMPLETE without this CHAMP which, when advertised, will necessitate an increase in your seating capacity.

Scene from Bill's Widow

Dont forget CHAMPS on Wednesday

Don't take our word for it, investigate for yourself. Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

See Release Dates for Champ Features

CHAMP

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfess
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at Cortesville on the Hudson

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

Eclair F[ilm] Co.

To Greet You[r] JOINT

A Happy and Pros[perous]

New Year

To All EXCHANGE[S] and EXHIBITORS

Make Assurance of Success in [the] Following Doubly Sure, by Handling

ECLAIR Productions

"Well Begun is Half Done"—
Order NOW!!!

For January 9th

"MOTHER'S PORTRAIT"

930 FEET

A Beautiful Drama of Unusual Pathos; Irresistible in its Human Interest and Impelling Charm—A Superb Production that Will Hold Your Audience Spell-Bound.

"Procrastination is the Thief of Time"—and Money

THE ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK - 31 East 27th Street
CHICAGO - 35 East Randolph Street

IF THERE WERE NO CHILDREN, what then?

Our lives would seem rather dreary without the sunshine of Innocent Childhood to brighten and cheer us, don't you think? And the Child In The Picture is almost as alluring and welcome as the dear one in the home, because in the Picture We've made there enough sentiment and real interest to touch the heart-strings of the most hardened cynic.

It's Coming Wednesday, Jan. 11

A Letter To The Stork

The story of a Sweet Child's plea for a baby brother to bring happiness to a sorrowing mother whose child had just died.

Don't Overlook this Atlas Masterpiece

Novel Posters Bulletins Mailed

Atlas Film Company
10 East 15th Street, New York City SOLE AGENTS

Yankee Headliners Coming

We're going to celebrate the New Year in Fitting Fashion by introducing a succession of New and Novel Features seldom seen in Moving Pictures.

Our Big Release of Monday, Jan. 2

Mrs. Danver's Divorce is decidedly one of the strongest Dramatic stories it has ever been your pleasure to see in Motion Photography.

Note Change Out Friday, Jan. 6 Note Change

The Royal Wishbone

A Massive, Oriental Comedy Spectacle.

Coming Monday, January 9

An Erring Son's Awakening

A powerful story of the Pool Room and its influence.

¶ Your Business Interests Demand Every One of These. Bulletins, Posters and Details on Request.

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 East 32d Street, New York
Telephone, 6170 Madison Square
Write Your Order to the Sales Company

N O T I C E

OWING to pressure of work, we are reluctantly compelled to postpone our opening releases, "The Birth of the Gnomes," "Alice in Funnyland" and "Alice's New Year's Party" for a few days :: :: :: :: ::

In the meantime we are making more new Pictures and will be prepared to continue regular releases from the start :: :: :: :: ::

As we are not a member of the Sales Co., kindly address all communications to us direct, and send us your name now for Bulletin of the Gnomes :: :: :: :: :: ::

Gnome Motion Picture Co.

S. W. Cor. Park and Tremont Aves. NEW YORK CITY

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY • 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 JANUARY 7, 1911 No. 1

A Happy and Prosperous New Year to All World Readers for 1911

The last number of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD closed Volume VII., and rounded off the year 1910 with a brief editorial review, dealing, under the title of, "Past, Present and Future," with the trade in its recent outlook and future possibilities. We tried to persuade the reader that the moving picture industry is full of good augury for success and expansion, if the heads of the film producing establishments will rise to their opportunities. We insisted that the danger of the public tiring of the pictures is remote, if the quality of the picture progressed in response to public demands. With this reiteration, we take leave of the subject.

Now, in the first number of the volume for the new year, we will briefly concern ourselves with our own policy and program for the ensuing twelve months. The policy can be very briefly expressed. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD stands for:

THE PICTURE, ITS PROGRESS AND ITS IMPROVEMENT.

We want to see the picture increasing in popularity with the public. To help towards such a consummation is our object. Our program, therefore, resolves itself into advocating and endorsing all that is best in the quality of the picture and the manner of its presentation to the public. The columns of the paper are open to any of our readers who, from their wisdom or experience, can furnish ideas and suggestions for that purpose.

Let us repeat, that the aim of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, in the future, as in the past, will be the exaltation of the picture. We stand, as we have said over and over before, for that which is best in the moving picture: good scenic subjects, good educational subjects, good dramas, good comedy, good industrial subjects. For records of current events and happenings. For every subject which is an indication of, or an incentive to, human progress.

In the domain of the picture narrative, we stand for good, clean, wholesome comedy, dramatic and humorous subjects. We want to see good acting, good stage settings, good photography. We want to see the picture pure, stimulating, inspiring, progressive—something at which all may look without offense, at which old and young, rich and poor, may look with mental profit and entertainment. This, in brief, is our ideal of what the moving picture should be during the coming year. We intend to pursue that ideal to the limit of our capabilities.

As in the past, we shall deprecate the unsuitable subjects—the suggestive, the ultra-sensational, the sombre. For years, our effort has been directed to purify the moving picture screen of unsuitable subjects. That effort has been partly successful. There is still much to be done, as our columns testify every week, in the elimination of any film which harrows and debases the mind and disgusts and alienates the public and damages an expanding industry.

This is all we need say by way of elucidation of our policy for 1911. We shall stick closely to the letter and spirit of that policy. Once more, let it be asserted that this is an untrammeled publication, allied to no faction in the business, controlled by none, dictated to by none. It stands for the picture and its progress. In adhering to our policy, week by week, we shall not allow ourselves to be influenced by this, that, or the other trade interests; conscious, as we are, that in standing for the progress and purity of the picture, we are standing for the best interests of the business as a whole.

1911—Progress.—1911

Rudyard Kipling said America reminded him of a mid-journey railroad station, where you left one train and were compelled to pass a tedious wait for another. The evident meaning being that of a state of change in which one is midway between his start and his destination. Many believe this characterization of America correct and that indeed it is midway between what it sprang from and what it is to be. In like manner the writer feels that this is the precise position of the moving pictures. The cinematograph has passed through all its experimental stages and has become an established and perfect scientific, artistic and commercial instrument. In its use as a moving picture machine it has passed through its initial and infantile stage, and has become a permanent thing in the realm of exhibition purposes whether educational or amusing, also its handling has outgrown the toy or plaything experience so common to new inventions, so also in its handling it is rapidly passing from the abuse of those whose usage of it was no higher than their own limited mental, moral, or educational powers. As a young man graduating from college leaving behind him all elementary and immature ideas, stands with the diploma of his qualifications before the world with a "life to make" before him; so the cinematograph in its uses stands thus on the threshold of its own immediate future. This moment of "change" or "graduating" is the supreme moment on which much depends and while an individual may make a mistake a whole world in itself is less likely to be faulty than otherwise. Therefore, in the world of the moving picture, this future is fairly well assured as in the great and many changes each one will be higher, broader, better.

In all phases and uses, both men and purposes will be greater, the small man with his little purpose will pass away; the man incapable of great things will find that having on his hands an instrument of greater capabilities than himself he will necessarily fail, while his old servant, now his master, "goes marching on." There is no part or section in the whole world of cinematography where this change will not strike, manufacturers, actors, scene writers, exhibitors, operators and all, everywhere will be carried forward on this wave of progress if they are equal and capable; otherwise they will fall by the way, and be lost; making room for others more able to begin where they were compelled to stop and carry to another climax this worthily popular and powerful agency.

The twentieth century is looked upon as the ideal century of progress, the latter half of the nineteenth century was more crowded with progress than any preceding century, the first decade of the present century has also seen a "year crowded in a day;" may not this new year (nineteen hundred and eleven), the first of the second decade in the twentieth century, be one in which many of the next immediate developments of the cinematograph shall materialize? At any rate we hazard the venture that this year will be rich in this way. Therefore, we wish the MOVING PICTURE WORLD a prosperous New Year.

The Ambiguous Picture—Some Causes.

Ambiguity in pictures is one of the chief failures of the day in moving picture subjects, this is evident to the critic and the public. If only the critic experienced this ambiguity it might become a matter of opinion between keen minds, but when the student of moving pictures finds it difficult sufficiently to grasp the "plot" or see the "point," there is further evidence of this weakness; finally when the public is full of inquiries so that when sitting in the theaters one overhears a constant stream of queries—especially the exclamation at the sudden, abrupt or ambiguous ending of a subject. Anyone, who like the writer, is vitally interested in the welfare of the picture, must feel that it is time to inquire into and find some cause or causes for this continued ambiguity.

There is one firm in particular whose productions rank equal with any in the whole realm of moving pictures, indeed but for the ambiguous fault they would easily be the superior of all others. Their choice of subjects is of the highest order and the execution, both professional and technical, is splendid, but the continuation is invaribly broken and the ending abrupt.

One of the first causes is a purely mechanical one, it is a strange fact that the technical length of the film seems to be the cause of a great deal of trouble, it is a self-evident fact that the great mistake is everywhere being made of making the play or subject fit the film, rather than making the film fit the subject. Truly the reel is the servant of the film, and the film is the servant of the picture or it should be; but at present it seems that the subject is in abject subjection to the film; hence the artistic is controlled and spoiled by the purely mechanical.

In proof of this one has only to watch the number of pictures the ending of which is "chopped off" with a suddenness that causes audible exclamations in the audience, and often the expression "what a strange ending!" "How funny!" "What does it mean?" "Could you understand it?" "Well, I never thought it was going to end like that!" "The end just spoils it!" etc.

All these expressions are common to the ears of the writer, from them may be learned many lessons; even as the artist profits from the criticisms of the public, so the manufacturer can derive great benefit from these public comments.

It would seem that the time has come when the length of the film should in no way have anything to do with the subject matter; there is too much evidence of "cutting up" and "cutting off" to the detriment of the continuity of the pictures, and this slaughtering of the subject only increases the ambiguity of the whole.

In the issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of August 27th there appeared an article on "Eloquent Pictures," which should be read by all scenario writers, artists, photographers and film makers, because it is manifestly evident there is great need for the application of the principles therein enumerated. There is a most extraordinary relationship between moving pictures and oratory, in that there is a similitude of purpose, i. e., that of favorably impressing the hearer or the beholder. In the speaking theater these naturally blend and so ambiguity is impossible; true, the silent picture is at a great disadvantage in this respect, and it is because of this very disadvantage that greater need arises for the observance of those principles which shall lift the pictures out of this unfortunate ambiguous situation. The lack of eloquence is then another great, and perhaps the chief cause of the present trouble; if a speech were built up upon the plan adopted by many of the films today, it would fall exceedingly flat and pointless, while on the other hand if many of the pictures now exhibited were built upon the principles of true eloquence, they would not only be vastly improved, but perhaps made positively perfect.

In all simplicity there are three parts to a perfect presentation to the human mind. They are: a plain beginning, an intelligent continuance and a fitting and timely ending.

Perhaps the most important in the end—whether it be a climax or a preoration it must carry the audience to an issue of intense satisfaction. It is a rule with the true speaker that he must know not only when to stop but how to stop. With many this has become such an art that many an otherwise poor subject has been made popular by a good finish. In this latter particular lies one of the greatest failures in moving pictures, the bad finish already referred to, and for which the writer has placed the blame upon the mechanical nature of the film interfering with the eloquence of the subject, making it appear that the writer of such subjects knows not either when or how to finish, hence the abrupt end and the ambiguous results.

There cannot be any doubt but that the removal of both a time and length limit is imperative for the perfect production of a good subject, the time has passed for this trifling with good productions. A tolerant public is becoming impatient and unless there is an early receiving of the scenarios, moving pictures will become a drug upon the theatrical market that even the "daily change" will fail to remove. Clear, well sustained plots carried to a full and finished ending, leaving with the audience a feeling of satisfaction and completeness are demanded.

The Cost of the Picture.

There seems a tendency on the part of these manufacturers who, at one time, were noted for lavishness of outlay in the making of the picture, to draw in their purse strings. In other words, not so much money is nowadays spent on feature films, as was the case a short while ago. We believe we are correct in saying that these big productions, speaking generally, did not pay for themselves. They acted as advertisements for the other films, but the returns for this extra expenditure hardly justified it. Striking an average, manufacturers were perhaps putting too much money in the picture.

It is a moot point whether spectacular lavishness, on what we may call an excessive scale, appeals to the public at large. Or at any rate appeals to it sufficiently to influence it in favor of the other films of the manufacturers. We have long been of the opinion that spectacle and magnificence by themselves are not sufficient to assure popular success. We never neglect the opportunity, when conversing with patrons of picture houses, to ascertain their preferences, and if possible, the impressions made upon their minds by a study of the pictures. Rarely do we find that they approve of spectacle and magnificence alone. If, however, these be accompanied by strong dramatic action, it is almost invariably the case that the latter qualities are those held in the most esteem.

This question of the cost of the picture is a sure one for the manufacturer. It is possible to put too much money into a film, just as it is possible to put too little. Common sense points to the choice of the happy mean. It is notorious that many a theatrical manager has ruined himself by over elaboration in his productions, while it is equally true that the best business men are those who keep their eyes constantly on the cost of production and so have proved successful. The Christmas number of the "Billboard," remarks: "Perhaps the manufacturers are not anxious to continue too strong a struggle of competition, realizing that this would increase the cost of production." The writer, too, realizes that the manufacturers have done more than their share in money expenditure for the pictures, and that it rests with the exhibitor to redouble his efforts at his end of the business, and to accustom the public to an acceptance of pictures which do not cost so much as they have done in the past.

We think far too much money has been expended in the purely spectacular part of the picture, and not enough in the scenario and acting ends. The contention of the Moving Picture World all along has been that the formula for success in a moving picture is: A simple story, clearly told, well acted and well photographed. This does not, it is apparent, imply the provision of spectacular magnificence involving a lavish outlay. It comes to this, that a high class popular moving picture which will go down with the public may be produced at a moderate cost, and that it would be just as successful, just as satisfying as one upon which money had been too lavishly expended.

Writing entirely from recollection, we would say, generally, that the pictures that were most successful with the public during the past year were not necessarily those which had cost the most money, but were those in which good stories, good acting and good photography were conspicuous.

We do not undervalue the importance of competition in picture making. But if it is to be mere competition in money expenditure we fail to see that the picture or the business profits. As a personal preference we would much rather see an effective, simple theme on the screen—a theme which got home in virtue of the excellence of its presentation, than any number of magnificent productions which rely wholly or chiefly upon spectacle for their appeal. Such subjects, in our opinion, defeat the manufacturers' pay roll in the wrong direction. The picture, if it is to continue in popular favor, must rely upon its intrinsic excellences for its success. Those intrinsic excellences, as we have pointed out, involve the expenditure of comparatively small sums of money. Let us put it in another way. We know some manufacturers whose average expenditure per picture is, let us say, $$2,000$ or $$3,000$, and who are probably selling as many copies as other manufacturers, whose average expenditure per picture is twice or three times the amount mentioned. "Going one better," we know is a confirmed American habit, but not always a profitable one. Moderate and judicious outlay in prime cost seems to be the common sense way of making money in the moving picture industry.

The Simultaneous Release of Similar Subjects.

By Henry.

The simultaneous release of similar subjects by the manufacturers, is harmful to both manufacturers and exhibitors, as will be pointed out. It is harmful to the manufacturers in that the exhibitor practically always will refuse to use but one subject of a kind in his program. Variety of subjects is always looked out for by exhibitors and thus we see where the manufacturers lose sales by the proceeding. It is injurious to the exhibitor in that he is often forced to allow a good picture to slip by him without his using it, because he has already a film of a similar nature booked. Thus we see both sides lose by this simultaneous release of similar subjects. Why should the licensed manufacturers have simultaneously released so many war pictures to be exhibited the first half of the week of November 2, when a little co-operation on their part might have easily eliminated this objectionable—or rather this absurd feature? Why should so many pictures with children playing the leading roles be released on the same day? Specific instances of simultaneous releasing of similar subjects could be pointed out indefinitely, as every exhibitor well knows. Let the writer offer a suggestion. If the Motion Picture Patents Co., and the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co. would send each individual manufacturer who is a member of their own organization a list of the films to be released each month, with a concise description of their nature, the evil would be overcome. When any manufacturer discovers that a film similar in nature to his own is about to be released by another maker, a member of the same organization as himself, a little co-operation between them would arrange matters so that the release date of one of the pictures could be changed to either an earlier or a later date. It no doubt is too much to ask the Patents and Sales Companies to co-operate in this matter, but surely the members of each organization should be willing to pull together for their own mutual financial benefit. Exhibitors who operate houses in nearby locations often do something similar to this idea in that they make arrangements whereby the output is fairly divided between them; rather than that they both should exhibit identical subjects.

The plan as outlined above is simple and inexpensive, and would work much benefit to all concerned.

Orthochromatic Films for Moving Pictures

The use of orthochromatical films for the making of moving pictures, in order that correct tone renderings may be obtained, has often been advocated in the pages of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. In the pages of our London contemporary, The Kinematograph & Lantern Weekly, Mr. C. N. Bennett, furnishes the following practical details which we commend to the attention of the American Maker: Into M. P. Ink!

Is there a the commercial orthochromatic kinematograph film? Has any one seen it? I am not talking now about the special and extremely delicately poised production put out to licensees of the Natural Colour Kinematograph Co. Even were that highly color-sensitive firm available for the general public, which it is not, it would not be, in any respect, the article I am now referring to. I mean by the term "commercial orthochromatic film," a kinematograph film sensitive to yellow and green as well as blue which can be bought at a price practically the same as that of ordinary black and white stock, which can be kept without fear of its going off prematurely, and last, but not least, which can be loaded into the film box, used, and developed with practically no more precaution than the careful man always employs. Where is such an article to be obtained?

The best solution I can offer to the problem is to advise the go-ahead film house in search of a bit of a pull over its more sleepy neighbor to color-sensitise a trial batch of ordinary black and white film on the premises. In that way one will be sure of getting the right article, nor will any very undue expenditure of time and trouble be necessary. As to the cost of turning any good, fresh consignment of black and white stock into "orthochromatic" stock, this is scarcely worth mentioning, at any rate as far as materials are concerned. A thousand feet sensitised, two hundred feet at a time, on a frame in a fifty-pint bath will run away with rather under a shilling's worth of the reagent employed. Time occupied for sensitising operations, but not including winding, about one hour. And now for the directions of the process. First of all, as to making up the color bath. See that the porcelain surface (presuming the receptacle is of the usual china-faced stoneware) is thoroughly clean. The chemicals employed are two in number—ordinary strong ammonia and the good dye known as Erythrosine (Hoechst). As to this latter, Ewest Brothers, of Philpot Lane, are the agents for it, and it is important to get it from no other source. This is not an advertisement, but a piece of well-meant advice which we never will disregard to his own cost. Proportions are:

Ammonia, pure strong (.880)	1 pint.
Erythrosine (Hoechst)	½ drachm.
Water	49 pints.

Add the ammonia to the water, stir, and lastly pour in the Erythrosine dissolved in half a pint or so of water. Above all, be careful to work cleanly throughout, keeping clear of dirty manipulation.

The actual sensitising operation is of the simplest. All that has to be done is to wind the unexposed film stock on the frame by the usual ruby light and plunge into the sensitising bath, keeping in gentle motion for five minutes. At the end of the time rinse well in a bath of clean water and wind off on to the drying drum.

And now a word as to this drying operation. The only thing which has to be borne in mind here and which is different from the drying of developed film, is that for our present purpose daylight must be rigidly excluded from the drying room. It must be turned, in fact, into a second dark room, illuminated only by one sufficient deep ruby light to make possible the necessary winding manipulations.

In the case of a firm deciding later on to make regular batches of color sensitised film, this problem will doubtless be tackled in a permanent manner. For the purposes of giving the method a first trial, one might suggest that the experimental color sensitising be arranged to take place on Saturday morning. Meanwhile the window, skylight, or whatever may be the light source of the drying room, must have been thoroughly blocked up and some sort of a deep ruby photographic lamp brought on the scene to give a red light for working in. Of course, I am concluding that the sensitising room and drying room are contiguous, otherwise it will be best to carry the necessary sensitising baths into a corner of the latter apartment, and thus make a one-room job of the whole.

Once the film is got off on to the drying drum, lights are turned completely out and rotation started in the ordinary way till closing time. From this point drying at the normal rate should be found to give quite satisfactory results. I am presuming the room is sufficiently well warmed and ventilated to dry off ordinary developed film in not more than eight hours. Leaving on the drum throughout the week-end, and until the film can be wound off on the Monday morning, should do it no harm, always supposing the place has really been made light-tight.

That is the whole process of conjuring up yellow and green sensitiveness in kinematograph film, or for the matter of that in any sort of photographic emulsion. It is neither more difficult nor more expensive than has here been set forth. The only wonder is, such film has not been put on the general market long ago. Perhaps it is that film users have not quite awakened to the pull this "orthochromatising" or their emulsion can give them in a great deal of their scenic and landscape work.

That the gain accruing from using this color sensitive film rather than ordinary black and white stock is, in many cases, a very real one, I hope to show more clearly. At the same time it will be well to point out that, while black and white stock fails miserably on many subjects where orthochromatic stock would certainly score success, the reverse in no way holds good. There is nothing sacrificed in any way by putting a film through the erythrosine bath, providing always the sensitising and developing light employed when handling such stock is one of a deep ruby color and not used too strong. The photographer equipped with color sensitive film is debarred from nothing which he might have attempted with the old ordinary emulsion. Nor will the film's orthochromatic qualities obtrude themselves in any way where not wanted.

When it is wished to take advantage of the film's yellow sensitiveness, all that is necessary is to slip a bit of pale yellow gelatine film—or a pale yellow glass disc—into the lens hood so that the light getting to the gate of the camera will have first to pass through this colored medium or "filter," as it is called. With ordinary film, as has already been pointed out, such placing of a lemon colored filter in the way of the light would bring about nothing but disastrous under exposure. With the orthochromatic film, exposure will be slightly prolonged, only when such a light filtering medium is employed, not at other times, from one to three times the normal exposure will be required with the lemon screen to obtain the desired result, together with the special advantages which our color film affords. In other words, where in the ordinary way one would employ the stop F 11 in taking the view, one would use instead F 6 or F 6.5 and the lemon screen for a color corrected result. For landscape and scenic work of reasonable light, nothing will ever be risked, either in definition or fullness of exposure, by such a course. In those rare cases—as in the case of topical films taken under adverse circumstances—where the light turns off at the last moment so that the lens aperture has to be opened out to its fullest, even without the color filter, then one only has to relinquish the use of the tinted glass or gelatine number to be level in resource with the ordinary black and white film man. Many topicals could be taken with the yellow screen in place and be far better for it, as will be subsequently explained

Theater Comique Boston.

Written especially for the World by Hosea

It is fitting that a photograph of an article on the Theatre Comique, Boston, should be presented to Moving Picture World readers, as this house was the first to be built in Boston for the especial purpose of exploiting the cinematograph. Furthermore, it was practically the first house in the whole of the New England States which could be called a real moving picture theater—one worthy the name—and not a "store" or nickelodeon, as they are sometimes termed. As has been pointed out editorially in this journal, Boston is one of the few cities in this country exhibiting the pictures in surroundings suitable to its presentation. Probably Mr. Michael Mark, the original builder and owner of the Comique, deserves a great portion of the credit for the state of things as all Boston houses built subsequent to his were erected of such a quality as could successfully compete spectacularly with the Comique. Had the Comique been a slipshod affair, Boston would not have such houses as is the case. First the architects who built the later Boston houses used the Comique as a pattern in sane respects. This house has a front of 40 feet, and a depth of a somewhat slightly larger dimension. The height is also in the neighborhood of 40 feet, thus making an almost square shaped theater. The outside decorations, as can be easily noted from the photograph, are artistic. The colors used in the front are mostly pure white. The large arched dome and the peculiar placing of the large ogee above it are novel features of the outside. Electric lights are an great profusion the theater's entire mounting over the one thousand mark. The lobby has considerable advertising space, which is used for paintings, posters, written matter etc. It might be jotted down that the one fault of this house is poster alone. Too many paintings of murders, robberies etc. often spoil the Comique's beautiful lobby. The arched words "Theatre Comique—Continuous performance," and the circular signs "admission ten cents" are all electrical signs. The Comique has a seating capacity of slightly less than 600, including a balcony which was installed this fall, which seats approximately 90 people. Owing to its square shaped dimensions, the Comique has few aisles in the auditorium, thus giving it a more theatrical appearance than would be the case if it had say a single aisle. The operating booth is small, yet answers all requirements of the stringent Massachusetts laws. The screen is approximately 12 x 14 feet, and is practically 60 feet from the operating booth. The machine in use are as often the case hereabouts, the Powers No. 6. The house is well ventilated by fans, and kept cozy and warm over the winter by a good furnace. The seats in the house are plush and covered with pure quality of leather, which is in use throughout. The colored electric bulbs which are used during the exhibition of the pictures to keep the auditorium from dazzling the eyes, are a novel feature. The auditorium is so light and generally well proportioned that the great amount of piano accompaniments were needed to render it delightful, to the theater. The orchestra is made up of a pianist and violinist, Manager Mark himself officiating at the piano. The Comique pays its pianist a salary of $30 per week, and pays its violinist $25 per week. Since its inception the Comique never used vaudeville in connection with the regular program, and to one of the very few Boston houses seems to keep the rule of "adhering to the pictures and latest events." Some weeks ago, however, with the beginning of the regular vaudeville season, Manager Mark installed a drummer to operate the usual traps. Manager Mark and Headmaster Cox, who has charge of the ushers, personally engage nearly every one of their employees

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

The Princess Theater, Wakefield, Mass., has recently been considerably enlarged by Charles W. Hodgdon, proprietor and manager. This house is doing a big business under Mr. Hodgdon, while formerly it always was a loser for its several different owners.

The Clement Theater, Dover, N. H., which was recently opened, is doing very well according to all reliable reports Mr. A. E. Willis, who is in charge, offers an orchestra, licensed moving pictures and illustrated songs.

Haverhill, Mass., will soon have a new moving picture and vaudeville house in the wholesale district. Haverhill is a big show center, and always draws good patronage to the moving picture houses.

The Music Hall, Brockton, Mass., has been re-opened under the management of Messrs. Kerr & Woodhead as a picture house, with the name changed to the Globe.

L. M. Boas, of Fall River, has been gaining both in patronage and popularity by offering prizes to the most popular mill girl of his town. Boas is continually putting such ideas into execution, and, as a result, the Savoy, Bijou, and Premier theaters, of which he is general manager, are always doing good business.

Messrs. Le Duc & Strauss, proprietors and managers of the Empire Theater, Lowell, have cut out vaudeville in connection with the films, and have reduced their rates to 5, from 10 and 15 cents.

The Colonial Theater, Lowell, opened December 26 under the control of the Manchester Amusement Company. The house offers moving pictures and vaudeville, with two weekly changes of vaudeville, and four changes per week of pictures. The house charges 5, 10 and 15 cents admission, and gives three complete performances each day. Mr. Marcus is the resident manager. It can be safely stated that the Colonial is offering a bigger and better show for the money than any other moving picture and vaudeville house in Lowell.

The Palace Theater, Fall River, has recently received a new manager in the person of G. C. Graham, who succeeds William Stecker. The Palace is now using independent films and illustrated songs, with attendance not very assuring. This house has never been successful, and it is hoped that Mr. Graham will be able to turn the trick.

HENRY.

BOSTON, MASS.

Frank L. Browne, general manager for the Old South Theater Company, which controls the Old South and New Washington theaters, has resigned his position after acting as manager for 16 weeks. The death of James Donaldson, the president of the company, has made changes, and Mr. Browne decided to resign. Nat Burgess, whom Browne succeeded, will return to his former position.

The Globe Theater has returned to the straight drama once more, after one of its frequent excursions into moving pictures and vaudeville. The best reports state that the Globe returned to the "legitimate" only to play out its list of bookings, and that about March 1, 1911, it will again take up with moving pictures and vaudeville.

Manager Johnson of the Savoy Theater has found a new way to reduce expenses. The Savoy is now running licensed films—and advertising slides, thus doing away with the illustrated songs. It hardly would seem that four reels of films and advertisement slides are worth 10c, judging by what other Boston houses are offering for the same admission fee.

The New Central Square Theater, Lynn, was opened to the public Monday, December 19, with moving pictures and vaudeville. The house has a seating capacity of approximately 1,250, including the balcony. Mr. W. J. Burke, an old time performer, is in charge of the house, with his son, T. H. Burke, as his assistant. The Central Square was built by The Central Square Amusement & Operating Company. M. Connolly, president, S. Frankel, treasurer, both Lynn business men.

January 16, 1911, has been the date set by the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local 182, I. A. T. S. E., for the first yearly gathering and social functions.

Bernard Corbett, until recently business agent of the operators, has resigned from that position, in order to connect himself with the Edison Manufacturing Company in the capacity of traveling salesman. Mr. William O'Donoll will succeed to the position of business agent for the operators.

Mayor Fitzgerald refused Jack McAuliffe's request for a permit to exhibit lantern slide pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries fight in this city, in connection with a lecture. McAuliffe is a former lightweight champion pugilist. He called at the mayor's office, but could not gain permission. Thus both films and slides of all prize fights are barred in Boston.

The Realistic Moving Picture Company, which operates the Jollette Theater (Joe Ruthe, general manager), has taken over the Olympic Theater, and will run both houses, the Jollette Theater (Joe Ruthe, general manager) has under independent service, the latter the first films. Manager Ruthe states he wishes to keep the two houses as formerly, as far as the films are concerned. Not long ago a moving picture concern operating two Boston houses wished to place one house independent and the other licensed. The Moving Picture Patents Company decreed that either both houses licensed or neither was their wish. Both houses were promptly placed independent, and are still using that service. Manager Ruthe has not as yet decided what he will do, should the same problem confront his theaters.

Mr. Jacob Lourie, of the Beacon Theater, will open the New Colonial Theater, Nashua, N. H., about January 1. Mr. Lourie states that this is only the start of his operations, and that he expects to have a string of moving picture and vaudeville houses in the not distant future. The Colonial seats about 1,200 people, and is credited with being Nashua's premier theater.

HENRY.

ESSANAY ANNOUNCEMENT.

Upon the first day of January, 1911, the city officers of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company will be removed to Suite 521, First National Bank Building, Chicago. Kindly forward all correspondence, remittances, etc., to the new city offices. All returned film, merchandise and other express matter should be addressed to the shipping and receiving departments, now located at the address of the factory and studio, 1333 to 1333 Argyle street, Chicago.

NEW MANAGER FOR PENN THEATER.

The Penn Theater people of Pennsylvania and Liberty Avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y., are to be congratulated upon securing the services of Mr. Chas. E. Fein as manager of their house. Mr. Fein is a young man with practical experience. He possesses the essential qualities for managing a picture theater. Mr. Fein is one of but a few whose effort is ever in the direction of pleasing the patrons. He has demonstrated by his experience in the past that it is wise to refuse putting on pictures or songs which are questionable in character and demoralizing in influence. His past experience especially qualifies him for any possible improvement.

BOY SCOUT WORKER HITS FILMS.

"The usual thing," in the form of an evil to be avoided by members of the Boy Scouts, an organization of no small magnitude, was outlined before a meeting of men at Moline, Ill., by Earl L. Baker, a Boy Scout organizer. He said:

"We never tell the boy not to do a thing unless we can tell him 'why not.' For instance, you go to a moving picture show. The film begins to turn. You are forced to sit still and witness the arrival at a cabin of a number of cruel brigands. They enter the cabin and drag out members of the resident family. Some of the brigands mount their horses and ride away with the wife and daughters, while others fire the cabin and, tying the head of the family to a nearby tree, lash him to within an inch of his life. The pictures show you no reason for the action of the brigands. They are not promoters of 'peace on earth.' The thing they do is arouse your temper. Therefore you are educating your temper when you see such pictures. Do you want to educate the tempers of your sons by allowing them to attend such shows?"

GASHED MAN IN FILM; GIRL FAINTS.

This, from the St. David, Ill., correspondent of the Canton Daily Register, may be a tribute to the realism of the production, but will it help the exhibitor?

Picture Causes Illness.

Miss Eva Price had a peculiar experience while attending a moving picture theater Sunday evening. One of the pictures represented a man who was so handsome that his wife, fearing that his good looks might prove too attractive to other women, proceeded to mar his beauty with a carving knife, slashing his jaw with the weapon, and causing an ugly wound. The scene was too realistic for Miss Price, and she suffered sudden nausea and faintness, necessitating her removal from the room, the heated condition of which is believed to have also been a contributory cause of her temporary indisposition. She recovered shortly after reaching the outside air.

National Board of Fire Underwriters' Rules.

Exhibitors are advised to make memorandum of date of this issue as these rules will not be published again.—H. Richardson.

Underwriters' Rules.—From Iowa comes the following: "What kind of a booth is required to pass underwriters' inspection? I asked a traveling insurance inspector if a wooden booth, lined with asbestos and sheet iron, would do, and he said no, it would have to be all iron, with no wood about it."

Well, Iowa, I am going to answer your question very fully and completely by publishing the rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and let me say right now, that the rules as here published cover the entire matter, and are all the rules the National Board of Fire Underwriters have governing operating rooms, so far as the writer knows.

65 A. Moving Picture Machines.

a. Arc lamp used as a part of moving picture machines must be constructed similar to arc lamps of theaters, and wiring of same must not be of less capacity than No. 6 B. & S. gage. (See No. 31A d. [1].)

b. Rheostats must conform to rheostat requirements for theater arcs. (See No. 31A d. [1].)

c. Top reel must be encased in a steel box with hole at the bottom only large enough for film to pass through, and cover so arranged that this hole can be instantly closed. No solder to be used in the construction of this box.

d. A steel box must be used, for receiving the film after being shown, with a hole in the top only large enough for the film to pass through freely, with a cover so arranged that this hole can be instantly closed. An opening may be placed at the side of the box to take the film out, with a door hung at the top, so arranged that it cannot be entirely opened, and provided with spring catch to lock it closed. No solder to be used in the construction of this box.

e. The handle or crank used in operating the machine must be secured to the spindle or shaft, so that there will be no liability of its coming off and allowing the film to stop in front of lamp.

f. A shutter must be placed in front of the condenser, arranged so as to be readily closed.

g. Extra films must be kept in metal box with tight-fitting cover.

h. Machines must be operated by hand (motor-driven will not be permitted).

i. Picture machine must be placed in an enclosure or house made of suitable fireproof material, be thoroughly ventilated and large enough to operate to walk freely on either side of or back of machine. All openings into this booth must be arranged so as to be entirely closed by doors or shutters constructed of the same or equally good fire-resisting material as the booth itself. Doors or covers must be arranged so as to be held normally closed by spring hinges or equivalent devices.

The "No. 31A d. (1)" referred to, reads as follows:

31A d.—Arc lamps used for stage effects must conform to the following requirements:

a. Must be constructed entirely of metal except where the use of approved insulating material is necessary.

b. Must be substantially constructed, and so designed as to provide proper ventilation and to prevent sparks being emitted from lamp when same is in operation, and wire must be used for frame insulation.

c. Front opening must be provided with a self-closing hinged door frame in which wire gauze or glass must be inserted, excepting lens lamps where the front may be stationary, and a solid door be provided on back or side.

d. Must be provided with a one-sixteenth-inch iron or steel guard having a mesh not larger than one inch, and be substantially placed over top and upper half of sides and back of lamp frame; this guard to be substantially riveted to frame of lamp and to be placed at a distance of at least two inches from the lamp frame.

e. Switch on standard must be so constructed that accidental contact with any live portion of same will be impossible.

f. All stranded connections in lamp and at switch and rheostat must be provided with approved lugs.

g. Rheostat, if mounted on standard, must be raised to a height of at least three inches above floor line, and in addition to being properly enclosed must be surrounded with a substantially attached metal guard having a mesh not larger than one square inch, which guard is to be kept at least one inch from outside frame of rheostat.

h. A competent operator must be in charge of each arc lamp, except that one operator may have charge of two lamps when they are not more than ten feet apart and are so located that no sun glasses, switch and safe are between lamps.

In addition to the above, I am sorry I am unable to give the National Board of Fire Underwriters' rules and requirements governing the storage and handling of nitro-cellulose films in motion picture machine exchanges.—H. Richardson.

Rules and Requirements Governing the Storage and Handling of Nitro-Cellulose Films in Connection with Motion Picture Film Exchanges

1. Film Storage.—(a) Each reel of film to be kept in a separate metal box with tight-fitting cover, except when same is contained in vaults.

(b) [illegible]

(c) Films should be stored in a separate building or vault not containing other property, if permitted in a building with other occupancy, to be in standard fireproof vaults or safes.

Vaults.—In buildings of non-fireproof construction, to have self-supporting brick walls not less than 12 inches thick, laid in cement, and extending from the ground. Top and bottom of vault to be fireproof and those of brick or concrete arches of the same thickness as walls (arches may be spaces between steel beams if the latter have standard protecting coverings); no wood to flooring to be used. Size of vault not to exceed 750 cu. ft. Openings into vault to be protected on outer side of wall with standard vault iron doors at least 2 inches thick and made to overlap by closing against a rabbet at top, bottom and one side; hinge side of door to close into a groove; door and wall frames to be equivalent construction to the standard iron fire-proof vault pattern, and on the inner side of the wall by an iron door at least No. 14 U. S. gauge. Fixtures inside vaults to be of incombustible material. No lights other than stationary vapor-proof incandescent electric lamps, properly guarded to be installed; switch to be outside and provided with pilot light or other indicator. No heat to be permitted in vault.

In fireproof buildings having standard protection on the steel framework, vaults may be carried on the structure from floor to floor. Walls to be of brick, not less than 8 inches thick, or of hollow tile not less than 12 inches thick, all in cement. Size of vault not to exceed 750 cu. ft. Top and bottom of vault to be waterproof and made of brick, tile or concrete at least 8 inches thick, in all other respects to comply with specifications for vaults in buildings of non-fireproof construction.

Safes.—Size not to exceed 750 cu. ft. To have an angle iron frame continuous at all edges, angle iron to be at least 2½ x 2½ inches and for large doors increased proportionally to the safe; larger than 30 inches high, 30 inches wide and 30 inches deep, an additional stiffening of heavy steel at least ½ inch thick, and of width proportioned in size but never less than 2 inches, to be used at top, bottom and sides. Sheet steel plates to be not less than No. 12 U. S. gauge for the outer shell and not less than No. 24 for the inner shell. Filling space of cement concrete not less than 4½ inches thick, except that the doors may have 4 inches of concrete and a shield, sealed in spaces the space may be used for the lock and bolts. Doors to have stepped sides so as to be smoke proof. No cast iron to be used in the construction of the safe, except such parts as casters, hinges and flanged screw drawers.

Ventilation of Vaults and Safes.—Vaults and safes to be connected to the outside air by an opening having a net throat area of at least 10 square inches (0 size of vault or safe is less than 100 cu. ft., the vent may have a minimum area of 5 square inches). Vent pipes to be of metal not less than No. 18 U. S. gauge or 16 ounces per sq. ft. to expose other property, to be shielded from the weather and provided with a wire screen of not larger than ½ inch mesh.

2. Examining and Repairing.—(a) To be done only in a room having outside ventilation and separated from the balance of the building by such partitions of incombustible material with doors of equivalent partitions and doors to contain no glass other than wired glass.

(b) Blowpipe to be used neither for storage nor handling of combustible materials other than the films.

(c) The number of reels of films to be in a room under examination and repair at any one time to be limited to one (1).

reels containing films under examination, or in the process of rewinding, to be enclosed in magazines similar to those required on motion picture machines.

3. Waste Cans.—Standard metal cans to be provided where repairing is done. All scrap or waste from the films to be kept therein and removed from the building daily to a safe location. Such waste to be kept separate from paper waste or other rubbish.

4. Cement.—Any compound of collodion and amyl acetate or similarly inflammable cements to be limited to one quart, preferably that exceeding the quantity required each day.

5. Lighting. Lighting to be restricted to incandescent electric lamps in vapor-proof globes. Installation to be in accordance with requirements of the National Electrical Code.

6. Heating. Examination and repair room to be heated only by hot air, hot water or steam, and a metal shield or screen provided to prevent the films from coming in contact with radiators or heated pipes. No hot air floor registers to be used.

7. Smoking.—To be prohibited in any room containing films, and signs posted to that effect.

8. Motion Picture Machines and Booths.—(See National Electrical Code, Paragraph 65-A.)

9. Protection.—Each room to be equipped with at least two approved three-gallon hand fire extinguishers. At least one pail of water and one pail of sand to be provided for each vault in use.

LIMITING AMPERAGE.

F. H. Richardson.

Numerous complaints have reached the writer concerning the action of the inspectors of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, of the City of New York, in refusing to allow the use of any but New York approved 25-ampere rheostats.

The writer has been after this proposition for some time and is now assured by Mr. Wynkoop, who has charge of these matters, that there is no limit placed on amperage other than the capacity of a No. 6 rubber covered wire, viz., 45 amperes. This means, in practice, 45 amperes, since there is no such thing as a 46-ampere fuse. Basing my statement on the above authority, I now make the unqualified assertion that no inspector has authority or right to forbid the use of 45 amperes of current for projection purposes in the City of New York, provided all wires, cut-outs, switches and all electrical appliances be of sufficient size to carry that number of amperes; or, in other words, all wires, cut-outs, switches and appliances be of size rated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to carry 45 amperes of current. This should be clearly understood and it is the rock whereon many stumble. If you have, for instance, a 30-ampere plug cut-out, you cannot use 45 amperes until you have installed a cut-out of proper size to carry that current. See to it that everything is of 45 ampere capacity and then if Mr. Inspector raises any kick about your using that amount of current, take the matter directly to Mr. Wynkoop and you will find that you will be allowed to use 45 amperes. The trouble seems to be that for a long time the inspectors had it pounded into them that 25 amperes was the limit and it is very hard to get a man to unlearn something he has very thoroughly learned.

And why should amperage be limited even to 45? The limiting of amperage is something which, so far as the writer knows, no other city in all these United States does. In Chicago there are more moving picture theaters than there are in Greater New York. Amperage is unlimited, and yet there are no more film firms in Chicago than there are in New York City. In England and Germany the common practice is to use 80 to 90 amperes of current for projection, and there are no more film fires there than there are here. In Australia the use of 100 amperes for moving picture projection is not at all uncommon, yet there are no more film fires in Australia than elsewhere, all of which would seem to prove beyond any question of a doubt that there is no good and valid reason for limiting amperage. As a matter of fact, such limitation operates to hamper good projection. It is, therefore, a detriment not only to the operator and exhibitor, but to the public at large as well, since they pay their money to see inferior projection where a better class of work would be accomplished with the use of a stronger projection current. The writer would, however, not object to the limiting of D. C. amperage to 45, but he strenuously insists that 45 amperes A. C. is not sufficient for good projection except with a very small picture. Of course, if the amperage were increased above 45, correspondingly larger wires, switches, cut-outs, etc., would have to be installed.

A SCHOOL FOR THE TRAINING OF PHOTO PLAY-RIGHTS.

A real effort is at last to be made to train playwrights in the art of writing good scenarios. In Chicago the Associated Motion Picture Schools have been established to teach writers by a correspondence course, how to select good material and how to put the material in picture form.

Out of the thousands now vainly trying to write for the moving picture manufacturers, about one per cent. know how to put their ideas into the proper shape to get even a reading. The combination of an idea and a well-prepared scenario is a rara avis. The scenario readers or the producers, as a usual thing, have to rewrite the manuscripts submitted and, as in the case of the regular stage, the "plays are not written—they are rewritten."

It is assumed that no one will welcome the establishment of such a school more than the manufacturer. In a recent issue of the Moving Picture World, the scenario editor of one of the companies complained of the dearth of good scenarios and stated that the manufacturers would welcome the time when scenarios worth $100 each were to be secured. The Associated Motion Picture Schools have the opportunity to train writers to turn out such scenarios.

Such graduates will know what things to avoid. They will know the limitations of motion picture production. They will not write plays with murders, suicides, robberies and other crimes as the themes. They will be taught not to plagarize and encouraged to use their own brains. They will be drilled in the terms in use in the motion picture profession and all the methods of production, manufacture, sale, projection, etc. And when they are ready to submit their efforts there will be great satisfaction on the part of the readers and editors, who will know the moment their eyes behold the manuscript that it is the work of one who knows something about the business. We wish the Associated Motion Picture Schools the success they deserve. They fill the proverbial long-felt want.

COULDN'T FOOL COHEN.

Louis Cohen, proprietor of the Royal Motion Picture Theater, at No. 228 Superior avenue N. W., Cleveland, Ohio, long had an ambition to have a uniformed ticket taker. The other day he asked his tailor if he could supply him with a uniform, and explained what he wanted it for.

A uniform, such as was used by Cleveland patrolmen some years ago, was delivered. With slight alterations, it fitted Mr. Cohen.

Somebody told the police of what Cohen was going to wear. Yesterday Mr. Cohen received his new suit of police clothes, and donned it. The buttons were those used some time ago, bearing the letters "C. P." There was a string of people waiting at the theater when two policemen appeared.

"You're arrested," said one of them to Mr. Cohen.

"What for?" said the moving picture man.

"For pretending to be a policeman," was the reply. "Those letters on the buttons of your coat stand for 'Cleveland Police,' and you are impersonating an officer."

"Oh, no," said Mr. Cohen, "they don't mean that; they stand for Cohen's Pictures!"

CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE THEATERS SWELL FIREMEN'S FUND FOR RECENT DISASTER.

George Gilmore, North Avenue, gave on Tuesday the entire receipts of his Ideal Theater, without deducting running expenses, to families of the firemen killed at stockyards fire. We hear that the Halstead Theater showed the same generous spirit by denoting the proceeds of last Tuesday to the same worthy cause.

PICTURES FOR THE AFFLICTED.

The Lyric Theater, at Yankton, S. D., was engaged to give an exhibition of motion pictures at the State Hospital for the Insane, on Christmas Day. This is only the first of a series of such entertainments that will be given at stated intervals. Messrs. Valentine and Johnson, who have built up a fine reputation for their Lyric Theater, can be depended upon for putting on a good show at the hospital.

TULSA, OKLA., HAS A NEW THEATER.

The Usee Theater was opened on December 19th, at Tulsa, Oklahoma, and is reported to be doing capacity business. The independent program of pictures is being run, with illustrated songs, by Cecil Smith, "the boy with the different voice." Miss Elsa Bradford presides over the musical end of matters. The Usee is one of the best equipped and most attractive houses in that section of the country.

Five Hundred Volts.—Mr. Richard Thompson, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, writes as follows: The first thing I look for in The World is The Trouble Department, because while I am getting good results I want better. I read in July 20 issue of The World, your description of the Kinemacolor machine. It was very interesting, but you failed to describe the rheostat and it is on the matter of resistance I desire your advice. What size wire and how many pounds of it would be required to make a rheostat to reduce 80 to 100 amperes from 500 volt lines? Would you recommend Climax wire? I use 500 volt current, consuming 25 amperes and while the light is good, I want it better. I doubled the number of coils and placed them in multiple series. This gave me 35 amperes and a much better light, but the carbons made a roaring sound, which was very bad, and the light was variable. Can you kindly advise me? Could you suggest a remedy for the noise and variation."

Mr. Thompson, it is possible that your current is taken from a trolley wire, and trolley current is notoriously variable. However, inasmuch as you make no complaint as to variableness before pulling additional amperage, I think the fault probably does not lie there. You say you hitched up in "series-multiple." I think this is hardly likely. You probably hitched up in two or more series and then hitched the series in multiple with each other, which would be "multiple-series." Now, to start with, if you were getting a "good light" you were pulling more than 25 amperes, and when you added the series in multiple you probably increased your amperage to such a point that your coils evidently were too small. They became so intensely hot and the crater became so large, that you could not control it, hence the "variation." I don't positively know that this is correct, but I believe it is. I would suggest that you install a motor-generator set instead of using rheostats. Rheostats are enormously wasteful when used on high voltage, and the higher it is the greater the waste. With 500 volts you use the amount of wattage represented by the number of amperes you are using multiplied by 500. If you simply pay flat rate for a certain number of amperes, the light company cares. If you are on meter, you lose. A motor-generator would stop the waste and give you more satisfactory results. If you insist on rheostats however, I would recommend cast-iron grids for that voltage, rather than wire coils. The Climax wire is excellent resistance wire. I have requested its manufacturers to communicate with you, giving required data. I have also asked others to communicate with you concerning motor-generator sets and cast iron grids.

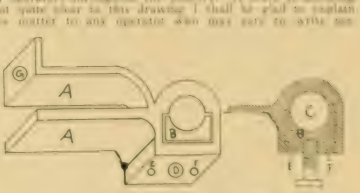
* * *

Sarcasm? Los Angeles, Cal. writes: "Just a word or two as I read over The World in silent appreciation. I noticed several times you have approved the use of two rheostats for 220 volt work. It may seem curious, but 220 is 2 x 110, so therefore I take it that three rheostats would be necessary, because on a three wire balanced circuit a house uses two machines and needs two rheostats, thereby placing two lamps and two rheostats on 220 volts. If one lamp were dropped, I take it that there would be an appreciable difference. How do you do it? Also, would like to remark that films are scratchable on both sides. I wish for the wisdom (?) of it, you would examine both sides of a second or third run film, and state results in The Forum. As regards the takeup I notice. If users of machines having a slip clutch takeup friction, would clean out the clutch once a week and put some machine oil in it, making the come where it is made to come, and you get the idle drive (belt, I suppose you mean. Ed.) the tension equalizer business would be a failure. Also if films are not wound tight they run up easier. Is that too hard for your kid? Now for a little grammatical error. Why are moving picture patrons called an audience? when there is more to look at than to listen to? Please do not add my name to this, though you may label it Los Angeles if you wish. With hearty appreciation, I am ——"

Well! Is Los Angeles sarcastic or what? As to the rheostats, you are altogether too indefinite. I don't know what you are driving at. Two standard 25 ampere 110 volt rheostats in series will do just as well as three, though they are somewhat more cumbersome and destructive of amperage. Since each lamp is connected entirely separate from every other lamp, I fail to understand what you mean by "dropping one lamp." Surely you haven't got your lamps connected in series? You will have to be more clear than that to me. I think you will find that their hunos may only one lamp at a time in those two rheostats, which would easily be done, though it is bad practice. Certainly films scratch on both sides. I had no idea of what you had. They scratch much worse on the emulsion side, however. As to coasting in the takeup, you are quite correct in assuming and assuring it, but what is that to you? Places the star where it rightly should be, it does not to any way reduce the film strain which depends wholly on differences in footages when the reel is empty and when it is full. If the slip in the friction wheels or on the belt, there must be sufficient tension to revolve the reel when it is full and that means excessive tension when it is nearly empty. You need to study that problem, Los Angeles. As to the audience matter, well, while taking the grammatical position you are correct, still custom rules, and the custom is to call a assemblage of people in a tent or picture theater an audience. What in thunder else would you call them? They aren't a congregation, are they? I must tell you those pretty hard on some things in your letter, Los Angeles, but maybe you really needs it all right and I don't. I print the letter just as it was written, emphasis and all.

* * *

Carbon Jaw. Mr. M. A. McGrath, Maryland Theater, Albany, N. Y. writes: "In the issue of December 21 page 1386, appears a cut of a carbon jaw contributed by Brother Joseph Egan of this city. The drawing was made from my original, the same, however, being so manipulated as to spoil that I herewith submit the original drawing by which I obtained patent on same and now position it for the benefit of operators throughout the country. If there is anything not quite clear in this drawing I shall be glad to explain the matter to any operator who may care to write me."



Also I will furnish the jaws at $1.25 per pair. My object in writing this is simply to get the credit due me as the inventor and patentee of this jaw. As regards your suggestion of making a new "C" shaped portion of brass so as to take both the carbons, would say that in the years I have made for theaters, I have furnished more one with a set of reversing carbons, so that any carbon from one inch down to a quarter of an inch may be used."

I do not think Operator McGrath, that Edward Swan had the idea of stealing your thunder. If you will be sure to refer back to the article in December 28th issue, that he did not claim to be the inventor of the jaw, though, of course, one might readily infer that he was. It would have been better had he given you credit for the invention, but he has been so accustomed that through any difference in opinion. I thank you for submitting the explanation, and will print it if you furnish me a cut of those jaws very early next week. Your object in allow operators to have those jaws made while you hold the patent are safe in every question, and I am sure will be duly appreciated.

* * *

The English Lamp Scientific, S. J. continues the following: "I read Richardson's article on English projection lamps in the issue of December 14, and I am sorry to say that I cannot agree with him in his statement that the English lamps are superior to the American lamps. I have had considerable experience with both lamps, and I find that the American lamps are much more satisfactory than the English lamps. The English lamps are very hard to keep in alignment, and the mechanism is very complicated. The American lamps are very simple in construction, and are easily kept in alignment. I have had no trouble with the feed mechanism of the American lamps, but I have had considerable trouble with the feed mechanism of the English lamps. I have had the English lamps in use for about two years, and I have had the American lamps in use for about one year. I have had no trouble with the American lamps, but I have had considerable trouble with jection lamps (page 1417, December 17th issue), was read with much interest. At my place of employment, a large hall, we project a picture a trifle less than 16 ft. by 12 ft., throw 100 ft. I had difficulty in securing sufficient illumination, and last summer had a friend bring over from England a Urban Model U arc lamp. I had to tear the whole back out of my Powers lamp house, and tilt up the hood to accommodate the gigantic lamp. I used 65 amperes D. C.

right off the wire. It certainly gives a brilliant light. I use two 7½-inch condensers. With No. 3 wire connections and the heavy construction of the lamp, no resistance device has ever been necessary; carbons ¾ cored above and ⅝ solid below. Now, a word about the flickerless shutter. I have equipped my Powers No. 5 with an inside shutter which gives as brilliant a picture as a motiograph, and is absolutely flickerless. I took white cardboard and cut two shutters out of it, taking the regular Powers No. 5 shutter as a pattern. I then cut cardboard out on the inside of these patterns, leaving just a skeleton ½ inch wide, as per sketch. I then cut out a third pattern from heavy oiled tissue paper, same size and shape as the No. 5 shutter. I glued this in between the two skeletons, placing one on each side for stiffness. To mount the shutter, I had to make a special threaded bushing with two threaded washers to hold the shutter, the whole being held to the spindle by the customary set screw. Will gladly furnish a diagram to show the shutter mount to anyone interested. This shutter cuts the picture entirely off the screen, but does not cut all the light; hence, less contrast between light and darkness with resultant elimination of flicker."

You have certainly got me guessing, Somerville. You say, in effect, that you have no resistance in series with your lamp, leaving me to infer that the large wire and large lamp offer sufficient resistance. This is an absurdity on the face of it, and I think you certainly did not mean to say anything of that kind. If you connected up your lamp without any resistance, you would simply create a dead short circuit when the carbons of the lamp were brought together; and this short circuit would instantly blow your fuses or, failing in that, heat your wires red-hot and burn them of. The larger the lamp and wires, the less resistance they would, in themselves, offer. I should like to know what kind of a proposition you have got, anyhow. As to the shutter scheme, it seems as though it really might have considerable effect in reducing flicker, though the same thing has been tried out long ago by various machine companies, and for some reason or other discarded, though one machine has a shutter something on that order. If any of the other readers care to try this scheme out, I shall be glad to know what their views are of the results attained.

* * *

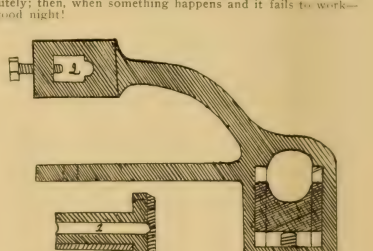
Foreign Appliances.—Mr. Joseph C. Honstein, Hoboken, N. J., writes as follows: "In December 17th issue, page 1407, I see the Department editor holding an English lamp, and also read some very interesting descriptive matter pertaining to same. Having some catalogues of English lamps, machines, etc., I mailed them to you that you may study up some more dope of that kind to hand us through the Trouble Department. I read the whole of the Department, week by week, and all I have to say is this: Fine; good; keep it up! We are the only house in Hoboken running three reels and two songs. All the rest run four or five reels, but we produce the goods on the screen. Good pictures, combined with good projection. I have been in this house five and one-half years, and Mr. Daley, the proprietor, has never yet had a kick coming. He is one of the employers who treats all the help 'right'."

Many thanks, Neighbor Honstein, for the catalogues, though it so happens that I am pretty well stocked up on that kind of "dope." I intend, as soon as possible, to publish considerable matter concerning foreign appliances and operating practice. At the present time I am so crowded for space that it is impossible. I intend to drop over some night in the near future and see you, but cannot say just when.

* * *

Various Things.—Portland, Ore. R. O. Bahlke writes as follows: "Have read the Trouble Department with much interest and profit, and wish, for the benefit of others, to relate my experience with condensers. I use a model 'B' Edison and Edison lamp with about 35 amperes D. C., ¼ Bio upper and lower carbons. My condensers are 6½ back and 7½ front, and they usually broke within five minutes of installation. I finally took the condensers out of my dissolver and put them in the M. P. machine, where they have now been for about three months. They had previously been used in stereopticon for nearly a year. I use one of the round condenser holders, and have the lenses loose enough so that they rattle and run with the ventilation holes open. I have experimented on a three-wing shutter to be used inside the machine in place of the regular Edison two-wing shutter, but find one built on the same relative angles and proportions of the Powers No. 6 will not work. I have one nearly perfected, however, which I believe will deliver the goods. Will send you a working drawing of this shutter within a few days. I do not believe in the automatic fire shutter nor the film guards. The latter are merely in the way, and the best automatic, if loose enough to be reliable, is so loose you have to run too fast to keep it open. I find that by re-winding film with the emulsion side out, it will help the buckling proposition, and scrape it less in the magazine rollers. I enclose money order for $3.00 for two copies of your Handbook."

The condenser proposition is passed on to our readers as one more promising-looking scheme. As to the inside three-wing shutter, I think you will find trouble with that particular proposition. If you make it work successfully, you will do something that many others have tried to do, and failed. I suppose you refer to rewinding the film in the take up. You are wrong about the automatic shutter. A good automatic shutter properly adjusted will raise and stay open when the machine is running down to the limit of low speed. I am also a believer in film guards and other safety appliances. The real trouble with the automatic fire shutter is, that one becomes accustomed to depending upon it absolutely; then, when something happens and it fails to work—good night!



Another Carbon Jaw.—Mr. S. F. Jones, Schenectady, N. Y., favors us with the following: "Noting cut of carbon holder, on page 1467, December 24th issue, would say that I have been using a pair of these holders, but have improved them considerably. I found the wire connection to be one weak point, another being the sliding shoe that clamps the carbon. I enclose drawing illustrating how I improved both the sliding jaw and the wire connection."

I am obliged to you, friend Jones, for your kindness in sending in the drawing. It is self-explanatory and requires little or no explanation. I believe the improvements you have made are both of them excellent.

A Couple of Suggestions.—From Mr. Leon E. Burton, Rochester, N. Y., comes the following: "A Handbook ordered, has been received, and is certainly all right. I read in the World two or three weeks ago a suggestion as to using a box with a light in for making film patches. In reply, you suggested setting a piece of plate glass in the bench with a light beneath. Here is my scheme, which works all right: I set a piece of plate glass in flush with the top of the bench, with a piece of plain white paper underneath it. One can see where one is scraping just as well as with the light. Instead of using alcohol only to polish lenses, I add about one tablespoonful of ammonia to a pint of alcohol. Ammonia is very fine for polishing glass. To the World and the editor of the Trouble Department, I wish a very merry Christmas and happy New Year."

Many thanks to you, Friend Burton, for your suggestions, which will, no doubt, prove of value to our readers.

* * *

A Good Record.—Edw. J. Cooper, manager Metropole Theater, Telluride, Colo., Crystal Theater, Montrose, Colo., and the Montrose Opera House, writes: "I am sending you two clippings from our daily paper, which, if you have room, would like you to publish, since it will show what wonderful growth moving pictures have made on the Western slope. Two years ago I started in a small mining town with $50 borrowed capital. Today I have three of the best equipped picture houses on the slope, everyone of them making money. My success is due entirely to high-class pictures, and the employment of nothing but experienced help. This should be a hint to the wise."

The clippings sent in by Neighbor Cooper are too lengthy for publication, but we cannot refrain from commenting on his phenomenal success, particularly when he attributes it largely to good pictures, plus good projection. I know that country like a book, Neighbor Cooper, and many times have ridden horseback from Telluride up through the Liberty Bell Basin, over the Saw Tooth, down past the Old Virginus Mine; also from Ouray up past the Tom Boy, over the High Line Trail and down in through Savage Basin, to Telluride. The editor of this Department now has three children living in Montrose, so that your letter was almost like a letter from home.

* * *

Knowledge. Mr. J. Engler, manager Key West Hippodrome Company, Key West, Fla., writes as follows: "Enclosed find check for the Handbook, something I think which will be very valuable to me, as I am not an experienced operator. Since I have been reading the Trouble Department, I find there is much more to learn about projection than I had ever dreamed. I had just five days' experience under the tutelage of an operator in New York City before I opened a moving picture house here. I have had no trouble so far, but from the Trouble Department I have discovered the fact that it is up to me to get busy and learn something about projection. I have an Edison Model 'B' machine. I extend my thanks to you for the help received through the Trouble Department."

I have published this letter with a very good reason in view. There have been those who have rather criticised me for the very plain, simple language used in my answers. The answers to problems in this department are made just as simple and plain as it is possible for me to make them, for the reason that while many operators and managers are well enough posted to understand technical terms and technical language, the great majority of them are not in this class. In answer to this, some may say that a man should not go into the business until he has first acquired knowledge. Granted! I thoroughly agree. We are not, however, dealing with theories, but with conditions, and the condition in the moving picture field is that the great majority of both operators and managers know little or nothing about either electricity, mechanics, or the refraction of light through lenses. The machine companies and exchange men are, in many instances, to blame for men of absolutely no knowledge at all entering the moving picture field. The sales agent will sell the man from the farm a machine, assuring him he can learn to run it in a day's time. This has been done to hundreds if not thousands of instances. The man has been led into an investment representing possibly all the capital he has, and he has been led into that investment through what amounts to nothing in the world but false pretenses. He is entitled to instruction, and the machine companies, film exchanges and all others connected with the business should extend the hand of welcome to the Trouble Department. Take the case in point: Mr. Engler is running an Edison machine. Certainly, the Edison Company ought to be only too glad to have this man taught so that he can give a creditable performance with the machine which is the product of their factory. The exchange man ought to be glad to have him taught, because it means better pictures on the screen as well as better care for his film. The operator ought to be glad of the opportunity to exchange ideas and improve. I do not know that it is at all necessary to set all this forth in print, and I only do so by reason of the fact that a certain few have not shown the most friendly spirit towards the dissemination of projection knowledge. They are, however, in a very small minority.

* * *

Condenser Focus.—Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Will you please tell me the best size condensers to use on 8½ ft. throw for moving picture projector?"

To answer your question intelligently, Pittsburgh, I would have to know the size of the pictures we shall be throwing. However, if your picture is not smaller than 14 ft. in width you will be safe in using two 7½-inch condensing lenses.

* * *

Edison Front Shutter.—Messrs. Wicker & Wiegand, Main Theotorium, Carmi, Ill., write as follows: "We have been interested readers of the Trouble Department ever since it was started, and wish to tell you that we have learned many valuable things, although one can see Mr. Wicker, has been operating a machine for more than three years. We saw your answer to one of the Column readers sometime since, in which you said you did not think a front shutter on an Edison machine could be made practicable. We wish to inform you that we have an Edison on which we have installed a front shutter, and which we could not operate. It is absolutely flickerless, although our throw is only 50 feet, and we are getting better results than with any other machine we have seen this year, and we have been to see several. I will give you a description of how we fixed it, upon request.

"We also have an extra carbon holder to clamp in our carbon arm to save carbons, and by this we have reduced waste to about 2 per cent. Will give you a diagram of it in our next letter. Thus far we have had no trouble that we have not been able to handle, but if at any time in the future we do, we shall not hesitate to write you fully in regard to it. We intend ordering the Handbook in the very near future."

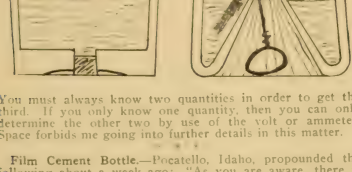
I think you must have gotten my words a little bit twisted. If I said I did not think a front shutter could be installed successfully in an Edison machine, I did not express my meaning. I have a faint recollection of someone asking my opinion as to the practicability of installing a front shutter on an exhibition model machine in a certain way. I believe I replied that I did not think it could be done, not meaning by that, that a front shutter could not be installed on an Edison machine at all. A front shutter can be installed on any machine, and be made to work successfully too. I shall be very glad to have a description and sketch of your method of attaching the shutter, as well as the carbon holder of which you speak. Send them along at your earliest convenience.

* * *

Resistance. Russellville, Ark., writes as follows: "It is not too much trouble, will you please favor me by telling me how I can figure out the resistance?

"It never too much trouble to give information, Russellville, so here goes. Knowing the amperes and volts, the ohms may be determined by dividing the volts by the amperes. Where you are figuring the resistance of a resistor which works in series with an arc, however, the resistance of the arc must be taken into consideration. The voltage across an arc at center is drop in voltage running from 40 to 60, but usually taken at the rate of 45. Now, supposing you want to know how many ohms resistance there are in your rheostat through which you are sending 20 amperes at 110 volts, the voltage which you desire to be at standard 45 ampere arc with rheostat. You first subtract 45 from the voltage, 110, which leaves 65, divide this by the ampere, 20, and the result will be the number of ohms resistance in the rheostat and the arc. Simply divide the voltage 110 by whatever it may be, the number of amperes flowing. The result will be the number of ohms resistance in the rheostat and the arc combined. Should you wish to know how many amperes of current will be delivered by an ampere arc and rheostat working in series on 220 volts, you would proceed as follows: Subtract the arc drop (45 volts) from 220, that being the voltage on which one of the rheostats will deliver 20 amperes; divide the remainder by 20, which gives you the ohms resistance for one of the rheostats; multiply this by 2 and you have the total resistance, in ohms, of the two rheostats when hitched in series.

You now subtract 45 from the voltage of 220, on which the series will work, and divide the remainder by the number of ohms resistance in the two rheostats, which will give you the number of amperes they will deliver on that voltage. All these problems may be worked out by use of a little formula. V = 45 A. To use this rule you simply cover up the quantity you seek to find and what remains will be the answer. For instance, if you were to seek to find the number of ohms in a rheostat, cover up the "O" and you see that the volts minus 45, divided by the amperes, gives ohms. If you want the amperes, cover up A, and volts minus 45 equals ohms.



You must always know two quantities in order to get the third. If you only know one quantity, then you can only determine the other two by use of the volt or ammeter. Space forbids me going into further details in this matter.

* * *

Film Cement Bottle.—Pocatello, Idaho, propounded the following about a week ago: "As you are aware, there is more film cement wasted than there is used by considerable, the bottles in which the cement comes being easily upset. The cork has a very decided tendency to stick fast in the mess on the bottle and break all to pieces. Can you not suggest some better way of keeping cement than in those little bottles?"

I have taken a week, Pocatello, to think that matter over. I well know what an aggravation the ordinary cement bottle is just when you are in a hurry, the darned cork will break off, or something equally pleasant will happen, and quite frequently the bottle upsets and spills all your cement. Fully realizing what an annoyance this little item is in thousands of operating rooms, I have, as I said, thought the matter over and have evolved the scheme which I believe will work successfully. I have not tried it out, but I see no reason why it should not do the trick. Get an ink well, such as is shown in the accompanying sketch. Get a small artists' brush, cut the handle off and attach a handle of about No. 22 copper wire (bell wire); the sketch tells the rest. The ink well can, I believe, be had at almost any stationer's store. I should be very glad if some of the men would try this out and report as to its utility. When turned bottom side up, it should rest on a piece of soft felt laid on a perfectly flat surface so as to be as nearly as possible air-tight. Get as small an ink well as you can procure. "A" shows the ink well right side up, ready for use; "B" shows it bottom side up, with the brush hanging in the cement. The copper wire handle may be straightened out when you want to use the brush. Make the loop of the handle big enough so that it won't drop through the hole when well is right side up.

* * *

Several Things.—Stromsburg, Neb., (W. Batterson), contributes the following: "In taking current from a theater dynamo for projection work, would it make any difference in the light whether the dynamo be high speed or low speed, provided it was running at the rate of speed intended by the manufacturer? I followed your advice, and put my machine in line to remedy a case of 'bad focus' on one side of the picture. It cleared up the picture all right. I cannot find any reason why changing position of the lamp house would have any effect on the focus of the picture. Changing lamp house does not change the relation of the film to the projection lens. If the lamp house were out of line, loss of the light would be wasted, but I think that would be all. I set my front and back lenses in the projection lens tube a little further apart, and it gives me a clear sharp focus. I made some spacing rings and dropped in the tube. Your advice to 'line up' isn't the first hint I have made good use of from the Department. I have one of your little books published some years ago. I have had it nearly three years. Of course, I shall have one of the new Handbooks—that will be my Christmas present. Bully for you for getting Bausch & Lomb to promise us something on lenses and light rays! A merry Christmas and happy New Year to yourself, the Department and the Moving Picture World."

The speed of the dynamo, Friend Batterson, would make no difference. In fact all dynamos are made to run at a certain given speed, and they will only produce the voltage they are designed for when running at that speed. I know of no reason why a high-speed dynamo would give you any different current from that produced by a low-speed machine. A low-speed alternator may produce high-cycle current, if there are enough pole pieces, while a high-speed alternator might produce low-cycle current, if it had only a few pole pieces. The answer to your question, however, is just a simple plain no—no difference whatever.

The squaring of the lamp house with the machine is important, since otherwise the condensing lens will not set square with the projection lens, and this, under certain conditions, will affect the focus, the "conditions" being where you have a poor projection lens. You may not be aware of the fact, but, particularly with short focus projection lenses, the mere raising or lowering of the arc in relation to the condensers will frequently throw the top or bottom of the picture out of focus, and will also, with outside shutter, frequently cause a slight travel ghost. I do not pretend to say why this is, for the simple reason that I do not know; but it is the fact, nevertheless. Usually the disturbing of this relation of the two factors of a projection lens, while it will change the size of the picture, materially injures definition. There are, of course, exceptions. Yours appears to be one of them.

* * *

Condensers.—Mr. E. Morris, manager Gem Theater, Ellsbury, Mo., writes as follows: "As a constant reader of the Moving Picture World, who has received much valuable information from same, I would like to ask a few questions. The spot from my condensers consists of one bright spot and one hazy spot just above it. Can this be avoided? I have purchased a Perfecto calcium light outfit, and cannot get enough light on the picture at 47-ft. throw. Is there any special kind of a condenser used for calcium light? Why is it that the carbon burns away from the lower thumb screw? It burns a crater in the carbon where the screw holds the carbon."

As regards the spot, I think the hazy spot must be caused by your arc being burned too long; that is, by the carbons being too far separated from each other. I do not think of anything else that would cause anything ever approximating that condition. I would suggest that you procure a copy of the Handbook from the Moving Picture World, and on page 88 you will find all the different ways—right and wrong—of setting carbons, fully described and fully illustrated. To reproduce it here would require much more space than I could spare this week. I am not acquainted with the Perfecto calcium light outfit and, therefore, cannot give you any information whatever concerning it. It is not the throw that cuts the figure, but the size of picture. You cannot throw as large a picture with calcium light as you can with electricity. There are no special condensers made for calcium light, but with calcium you should use a very good grade of condenser. The current burns the crater where the screw touches the carbon, for the reason that your carbon is not making good contact with the carbon arm on the side opposite from the screw. It is probably caused with scale. Clean the carbon and metal off, so that the carbon will make good electrical contact with the metal, and I think you will have no further trouble in that respect.

* * *

Advertising Stunt.—From Mr. John Blohm, Blohm's Bijou Theater, Chesley, Ont., comes the following: "Enclosed find check for operators' Handbook. I and Geo. Springfield has taken up my advertising scheme, and is getting results from it. Where trouble is experienced in reflecting by mirrors, I would suggest a double baseboard for the machine with a bolt in the center. By having the lamp wires long enough, the whole machine can be turned end for end in a moment without throwing it out of place, provided the lower magazine is in front of the machine. A couple of thumb screws will hold it firmly in place and are quickly adjusted. Of course, any one with a separate lamp house and stationary lens can have it installed stationary, as Springfield has. Same can be used nightly for throwing ads. of merchants, etc., on buildings across the street; also the results of elections, sporting events, etc."

Neighbor Blohm then speaks at some length of the opportunities for stereopticon moving picture advertising stunts in large cities, his idea being to install a suitable screen in a prominent place on top of a roof or the side of a building and project pictures and ad. slides. For his benefit let me say, that about everything imaginable in the way of that kind of stunt has been tried, tried and re-tried in cities. When it was a novelty, it paid, but it is a novelty no longer, and its use has been very largely abandoned in cities. Neighbor Blohm, in speaking of the reflection by mirrors, etc., has reference to the articles, "An Enterprising Manager," page 1230, November 26th issue, and "An Advertising Scheme," page 1409, December 17th issue, in which Springfield, Vt., sets forth his way of accomplishing the same thing by means of a second machine. The scheme of having a double baseboard for the machine with a bolt in the center so that the whole thing, lamp house and all, can be swung around, would ask all right if, as Neighbor Blohm says, the magazine was in front of the machine instead of underneath.

* * *

The Arc.—Mr. Geo. Pringle, St. Paul, contributes the following: "Friend Richardson: On page 1349 you make the statement that I said the carbon resistance becomes excessive above 40 amperes. If you will refer to my letter, you will find that you are in error, as I did not make any such claim. What I said was, 'The drop in the last two, in my opinion, is due to the fact that from 40 to 50 amperes is the full working ability of that size carbon, and anything above that is mere waste of energy.' We have since tried larger carbons and find that the contention seems to be correct, as there is no drop up to 80 amperes. This resistance is in the arc, not in the carbons, as any measurement of the resistance of a piece of carbon of any length introduced into the arc has no bearing. The following is the explanation of the variance of the resistance of the arc at different amperages. I have it from several sources, but a letter from the Driver-Harris Wire Company's engineer, L. O. Hart, covers the ground: 'The current does not jump from carbon to carbon, but the carbon vaporizes and the current is carried over by a steam of vapor with an increasing current; the greater the amount of carbon you vaporize in a given space of time, the greater is the cross section of steam increased; consequently its resistance is lowered. In this way the resistance of the arc automatically adjusts itself to the current.' A careful reading of this statement will make it clear to any one who cares to understand the action of the rheostat and arc in series. It also conforms with Mr. Edison's statement, that the entire line voltage is dissipated. I wish every seeker after knowledge a very merry Christmas."

Well, Neighbor Pringle, I am not quite sure that I am able to follow you in this matter. Exactly why the resistance of the arc itself should be very much greater when you are using 50 amperes of current on a five-eighths carbon than when you are using 40 or 30, I do not understand; and your statement seems to amount to an assertion that excessive resistance noted above 40 amperes is due to added resistance of the arc. I cannot make anything else out of your letter. As regards the current being carried across the gap by a stream of volatilized carbon. I am not satisfied that this is the case, notwithstanding Mr. Hart's able description of the action of the arc. He may be right, but I personally have a different idea of the matter and I have heard but few different explanations advanced by able electrical engineers. I have heard some electrical engineers make the statement that the carbon vapor flowed from the negative to the positive or up, while the current flowed in the opposite direction. I have, however, never yet heard an explanation of the action of the electric arc which satisfied me, and I have done some studying on that proposition, too, and talked with many men of recognized ability, one of whom was the head of the Electrical Department of the Armour Technical School of Chicago, one of the greatest technical schools in the world. The thing that really puzzles me, and for which I have never heard what seems to me an adequate explanation is, what makes the arc and the carbon incandescent. This may, at first glance, sound foolish, in view of all the many glib explanations advanced by electricians, but I think the more you really study the proposition the more you will be dissatisfied with these same explanations. Nevertheless, I thank you for your contribution and hope to hear from you again in the near future.

* * *

Do Things Right.—Syracuse, N. Y., writes the following: "I am the 'daddy' of them all here in Syracuse, having operated the first moving picture theater in the city, which is my home. I was with Mr. George Morgan of the Novelty one year. He has doubled his seating capacity since he started, and it is today, as it always has been, a straight picture house, showing only the latest and best films, nothing being too good for his audience or his operating room. I am now operating in a vaudeville house and have nothing to complain of, though it is like most mixed houses; they give less attention to the pictures than they deserve. I ran one film today with eleven mis-frames, requiring a hand on the framing lever all the time. My advice to operators who do not know much, as well as to those who know it all, is to avoid trouble for yourself and annoyance to your manager and audience by getting to your booth in time to have everything shipshape when the show starts. Have your machine cleaned thoroughly and see that everything is in proper adjustment, all connections tight, and, in fact, everything just as it should be. Then you can start your show with confidence that all will be well. Spend all the time you like experimenting and improving, but never let it interfere with the work in hand, namely, the putting on of first class projection, not sometimes, but all the time. I thank the department for its many valuable hints and beg to be included among the friends of its editor, whom I wish a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year."

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

Upon a petition from Moline merchants, the city council decided to grant no more licenses for moving picture shows in that city. The petitioners set forth that the show places tend to block traffic and result in depreciation of business values.

J. T. Bragg is now sole owner of the moving picture show at Roseville, Ill., having purchased the interests of Mr and Mrs. Jacobs. Change daily will be the rule for films.

Robert Riffel, of Brazil, Ind., is now the trap-drummer and singer at Landes & Mc Coy's Lyric Theater, at Villa Grove, Ill., while Mrs. Riffel is the pianist.

The chief of police at Minneapolis, Minn., barred the Nelson-Moran fight pictures, although Mayor James C. Haynes admitted he had issued an edict forbidding only films in which one of the contestants was black and the other white.

Articles of incorporation have been issued at Jefferson City, Mo., to the St Louis Motion Picture Company, with capital of $85,000, fully paid to manufacture and deal in motion pictures. The incorporators are Anthony C. Wagner, Jr., Arens and C. R. Goebel.

The Lyric Theater, formerly the Crystal, at Elkhart, Ind., has closed.

William and Harry Perks have opened the remodeled Palm Theater, at Mound City, Ill. Vaudeville occasionally, is announced.

W. W. Snyder, proprietor of the moving picture show at Mt Pulaski, Ill., recently used Fred Beck, the baseball national outfielder, as an attraction, featuring his tenor voice and set of special song slides.

There seems to be a disposition among managers who invest in Powers No. 6 to acquaint the public with the fact as news items are frequent in Illinois papers noting the installation, leaving the impression upon patrons that the Cameragraph is about the last word in projectors.

Thomas' new moving picture theater, at Mt Carmel, Ill., has been equipped with new chairs.

Dee Robinson has resigned his position with the Illinois Manufacturing Company, at Peoria, Ill., and will devote his time to amusement enterprises with which he is connected. He will be assisted by his brother, Sumner Robinson, resident manager of the Princess at Peoria. Dee Robinson has been interested with Vernon Seaver, in the Princess and Liberty at Peoria and other houses.

Manager Muller of the Grand Theater, Litchfield, Ill., has purchased the Elsen Theater at Mt Olive, Ill.

M. H. Harvey and J. L. Nicholson, the latter editor of the Illinois Star, at Beardstown, will erect a theater on East Fourth street, Beardstown, to be used for illustrated plays and road attractions. With the seating capacity of 800 will be obtained. A rest room for ladies will be a feature. Stage equipment has good scenery will be provided, but present plans call chiefly for moving pictures and vaudeville. Construction work will begin soon after January 1.

William H. Marple, of Weeks Kan., already owner of two moving picture houses, purchased of Frank Thomas, for $20,000, the Palace Theater, at Aurora, Ill. The Majestic, at Kewanee, may be sold to Thielen to Marple.

Johnson & Harvey, in the name of the new firm now managing the Star Theater, at Savoy, Ill.

Supervision of moving picture shows will be one of the duties of the proposed Public Recreation Commission of St Louis, Mo.

Manager Harvey, at the Colonial Theater, at Decatur, Ill., entertained members of the city department of that city at an exhibition of "Into the Jaws of Death." at the M

THE POSITION OF THE SCREEN.

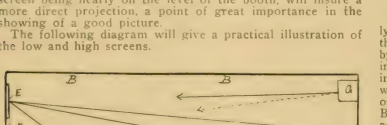
In my travels, I have found that most of the screens are placed half way between the floor and the ceiling, while others are too low, and some of them too high. With a screen too low, the spectators of the middle and rear seats have to look downward and, naturally, their vision strikes the shoulders of the persons sitting in front of them. With a high screen, the spectators have to look upward, and consequently the heads and shoulders of the persons sitting in front of them are no more in their visual line.

The screen placed half way strikes a happy medium, as the persons in the rear of the house have a clear view, while the persons in the front seats have not to look upward. The screen placed half way, would appear to be the most rational, if we could decide all the spectators to sit in the same position, and if we could decide the ladies to remove their hats.

The low screen is out of the question, and has too many drawbacks to be even considered. With a low screen, the projection from the booth must take a downward course, and each time that a person or usher passes in front of the light, a shadow is shown on the screen.

The high screen offers some advantages. The first and most important one is to force the spectators to look upward and, by so doing, they will seek a more comfortable position by leaning back in the chairs. With a high screen, the tallest man can walk in the aisle without the danger of having his shadow thrown on the curtain. Another advantage that should not be overlooked, is that the high screen being nearly on the level of the booth, will insure a more direct projection, a point of great importance in the showing of a good picture.

The following diagram will give a practical illustration of the low and high screens.



B. B. represent an auditorium 100 ft. long and 25 ft. high.
C. C. represent the inclined floor with a pitch of 5 ft.
D. D. represent the chairs.
E. represents the high screen. A screen 10 ft. high and at 12 ft. from the floor.
F. represents the low screen. A screen 10 ft. high and at 2 ft. from the floor.
G. represents the operating booth.

The straight lines represent the visual lines from the front, middle and rear seats on the upper screen.

The dotted lines represent the visual lines from the front, middle and rear seats on the lower screen.

It is easy to see, by the diagram, that the straight visual lines on the upper screen will clear the heads and shoulders of all persons sitting in front, while the dotted visual lines on the lower screen, will fall on the heads and shoulders of the persons in the front seats. With a low screen, you will force the visitor to sit on the edge of the chair and lean forward, while with the high screen, you will force him to sit in a more comfortable position, leaning in the back of his chair.

In Terre Haute, Louisville, and other places, I have found a number of places with high screens and in theaters with the chairs on the same level, the persons in the rear had a better view than the spectators in houses with an inclined floor and a low screen.

The diagram is not given as the exact proper height of a screen, but was prepared to illustrate the two extremes of the low and of the high screens.

In the same diagram, the straight line from the booth shows a more direct projection on the screen, while the dotted line from the same booth shows the bad angle of the projection on a low screen.

A NEW PROGRAM BOARD.

Many program boards have already been offered to the exhibitor, some of them very ingenious affairs, but all of them requiring too much time and artistic taste to make the daily program. Gummed letters, like metal letters pressed under a plate glass, require a certain skill and taste to have the letters straight and well spaced.

The new Interchangeable Program Board is finished in Flemish Oak, and is made in two sizes, viz.: No. 1—31 x 38, and No. 2—37 x 56. The board No. 1 has 11 slides, while the board No. 2 has 17 slides. These boards can be placed against the walls of the lobby or on easels.

The words of the program are formed with interchangeable porcelain letters. These letters are made in underglaze black on porcelain blocks, measuring 2½ inches high, and 1½ inches wide, and ¼ inch thick, and, as they are removable, they can readily be adjusted to make any name or program desired, by sliding into the groves (or slides) of the board. As they are made of porcelain, highly glazed, they are, with ordinary care, practically indestructible, and they always remain bright and clean, if wiped off occasionally with a damp rag.

The price of this new Interchangeable Program Board is moderate, and includes 200 block letters.

The beauty of this new program board, is the great ease with which a daily program can be made, as no previous experience is required and the letters are bound to be straight and well spaced.

GROWTH OF M. P. HOUSES IN BROOKLYN

Only a few months ago the moving picture business in Brooklyn was a deplorable disgrace; there were only a few houses and those of a mediocre character; today this is all changed, not only by a large increase of new theaters, but a larger number of moving picture places giving exhibitions of a nature superior to many in the Manhattan borough. The first conspicuous development was in the Flatbush section where many handsome houses have opened, on Fifth avenue, taking in the park slope and South Brooklyn there are now more than twelve places, giving an average of one place for every quarter of a mile on the whole length of Fifth avenue; it is further noticeable that the greater number of these places are devoted entirely to moving picture entertainments. That the days of the "old store" theater is passed is emphasized by the handsome and positively elaborate buildings and decorations, showing at once that no lack of money or ability has been permitted to insure up-to-date and attractive places. In several places, too, uniformed attendants are most courteous in their attention to the numerous patrons, of whom there are often crowded houses.

The selection of picture subjects and illustrated songs is also showing a continuous marked improvement; and, last but not least, but rather of vital importance, the musical parts are increasingly superior, so much so that we of Brooklyn feel somewhat in advance of our Manhattan contemporaries, who have not yet graduated from many of the earlier and cruder accessories of moving picture accompaniment. It is worth while recording that, in addition to this growth in the amusement world, many churches are installing the necessary appliances for the entertainment of their own people. May they all prosper!

MISS FLORENCE LAWRENCE.

In answer to many correspondents who want to know why Miss Lawrence is no longer appearing in Imp films, we are informed that Miss Lawrence is enjoying a lengthy and well-earned rest. Her mobile face and winning smile will begin to appear on the screen again in about three months.

MISS PICKFORD.

Several of our readers have written us to inquire if the little lady whose picture we published a few weeks ago is the same character that has recently appeared in many Biograph films. Yes, and her face will probably appear in other Biograph films that are not yet released. Under the Biograph she had a very valuable schooling in the art of the silent drama, and her experience should make her a very valuable asset to the Imp films in which she will be seen hereafter.

Miss C., New Jersey, writes: "I have not tried working up pictures until lately. As an interested reader of your articles, I would like to ask a question. In melo-dramatic pictures, where frequent changes of music are necessary, do you think it best to stop when the scenes change and when the sub-titles are shown? I mean, pause long enough to make a noticeable wait. I hope I have made my meaning clear and that you will not find it too much trouble to answer this."

It is no trouble at all. I shall welcome all questions and answer them if I can, though it must be understood that many times I can only give an opinion. However, in this case, I think all will agree with me that it is not a good idea to make many pauses "long enough to make a noticeable wait." Sometimes a distinct pause is effective, but, as a general rule, I think we should try to preserve a continuity in the music. Finish your number each time before your change when the picture permits it. Of course, many times we must break off abruptly and go to another number, but in such cases the picture makes an abrupt change. It seems to me that it is the better way to continue your music (subdued) through the sub-title and change when the new scene is shown. There are exceptions, however. If the coming scene is pathetic or mysterious you will find it effective to start the pathetic or mysterious music a little before the scene; it thus serves as an introduction to what follows. When a picture is filled with nothing but long andantes I don't see any objection to making a pause between each number. But such stops as you indicate between short numbers, will, if frequent, give your work an incomplete and "patch-work" effect, which is not satisfactory. Let me hear from you again.—C. E. S.

Ernest Buckwald, Bellinger, Texas, writes: "Your article "Music for the Picture" in the Moving Picture World, is very interesting and of great value to piano players as well as managers, and I wish to congratulate you on same and hope you will keep the good work up."

For the past seven years I have made a special study of playing for moving pictures and my experience in this, it is nearly impossible to use an orchestra to play for moving pictures, as I experimented in my own house and the nearest and best result was piano and traps. I have found a great number of amateur managers, men who have a business and just own and run a theatre as a side line or fancy, and it seems to me that these are the ones who first should be educated to the value of good and proper music. Here, for an illustration: A manager was looking for a good piano player, and found one through a booking agent. The piano player played the pictures. The second night a very pathetic picture was shown, a dying child and a grieving mother, was the scene, as the manager came to the piano and asked the player if he couldn't play any rag time, if he couldn't he should quit. An argument was opened and the result was the leaving of the piano player. I heard a manager say: "I don't use any vaudeville, so I don't have to have any good piano player: I can get a local girl to play for $5 or $6 a week and save $20 to $25."

Whenever it comes to the point, where managers realize the value and the necessity of good music, it will mean more money to all parties interested. The managers, musicians and the manufacturers. I have more than doubled the receipts of a moving picture theater with big opposition, one house playing vaudeville for the same price of admission, the other being an Air Dome with the best location in town. How was it done? Just simply show the good pictures and playing the proper music for them.

I see answers to read your next article in the Moving Picture World and I hope you will be of some influence to managers.

C. S. Thornton, Providence, R. I., says: "I am a close follower of your articles in the Moving Picture World. Let the good work go on. If some of those 'star' pianists who supervise or 'take' everything for pictures should run across one of these articles perhaps it would shame them into buying some music and playing it if they can. It would certainly be a relief to suffering humanity." In a second letter Brother Thornton says: "This 'Music for the Pictures' is a subject which interests me very much and I hope you will keep at it until we see results. I can't understand why some managers will put up with the stuff 'handed out' by these wonderful (?) improvesarios who seem so proud of the fact that they "read no music." I have the greatest respect for a good extemporaneous player, but how many are even fair at it? I attended a picture show the other evening right here in the heart of our big city and the pianist played a short hurry of about eight bars almost through the entire picture. Do you wonder that people think any one can play good enough for a picture show?"

Brother Thornton evidently feels very keenly on this matter, which is much to his credit. If these articles can be the means of inducing others to feel the importance of appropriate music for the pictures, I shall believe my labors to be not altogether in vain. As to the extemporaneous playing, I, too, have a high regard for those who can do it well, but not all are gifted that way. There is so much good music on the market that the playing of mediocre stuff can only be accounted for by the conceit or ignorance or laziness of the one who habitually does it. However, I do not want to believe that all offenders are either conceited or lazy. I have reason to think there are many hard working conscientious ones who are sincere in their desire to fit their pictures correctly, and a number have been kind enough to say they have derived some benefit through this page. While this is gratifying, I feel there is a handicap in the difficulty of illustrating the points I wish to make clear. We all want to see our first problems worked out; it helps us to an understanding of what is done and how and why it is done. The only way I can think of is to describe some recent number, answer it, and suggest the music—and right here is the handicap. Our pictures are so short lived that before my article reaches the people I want to reach, many of them have seen the picture and forgotten it. One cannot remember the details of a week old picture clearly enough to follow an analysis or even to be interested in one, to that reason we move slowly, but I have hopes for better things.

Charles Powell, manager Powell's Theatre, Rushville, Indiana, writes: "As I am an interested reader of your Music for the Pictures, I am going to offer a suggestion. I have an 88 note Player piano in my theater and, of course, cannot have a picture as it should be done on account of changing the rolls at the exact time, and the time taken in changing. Why should it not be a good thing for film manufacturers to make perforated reels for their pictures; make the music for a reel of films on one roll and have it arranged so that sub-titles on the film are marked on the music and in that way it would be easy enough for movement to keep together. * * * I am not able to employ an expert musician to a small town like this and must depend upon myself almost entirely."

I believe this subject is not entirely new, although I never heard that it progressed any farther than a suggestion. I have had no opportunity as yet to collect any sufficient data to form an opinion on, though speaking off hand, I don't see why it could not be made feasible. I talked with a dealer in regard to the matter and he figured the expense of producing a reel himself entirely. It costs about seventy dollars to make the first or "master" roll and a great many must be sold before any profits are possible. Whether the picture makers would care to take the risk in view of the few pianolas used and the short lives of the pictures is a question for them to answer. However my curiosity is aroused and I intend to learn something further in the matter.

(To be continued.)

Philadelphia Exhibitors have started an organization to fight state license law of 1907. About 175 exhibitors joined what will be known as the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which will include the entire state in its scope.

West Hoboken License has been raised to $100 per year payable in advance.

John Collier, secretary of the National Censorship Committee is one of the best friends the moving picture has. His able defense of it on the lecture platform places every picture man vastly in his debt.

Court Decision handed down by Judge Baldwin, of Milwaukee, holds that a picture show in construction cannot be restrained as a nuisance until it is finished and possess so

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Never

Begin Now!

Turn a New Leaf—Resolve to Enjoy The Bliss of A Prosperous Year!

For Real Happiness and Prosperity Get the First Great Picture of the Year

At Cedar Ridge

For Release Wednesday, January 4th, 1911 — Length 985 Feet

I Have Resolved to RUN Nestor Films on Release Day (Wednesday).

STOP taking service from the exchangeman who does not get Nestor Films as released, who deals or attempts to deal in old worn-out film, who dabbles in "dupes."

STAY in business and do a live business by sticking to Nestor Films —the films that never fail to satisfy and always bring in the money.

Signed: Mr. EXHIBITOR

APROPOS

Delays are dangerous—so PLACE your ORDER NOW for

"At Cedar Ridge"

A Western Jewel in A Magnificent Western Setting

BOOK IT NOW! GET IT!

Scene from "At Cedar Ridge"

"At Cedar Ridge" is the forerunner of a series of pictures that will revolutionize the film world—it marks the beginning of a new motographic era, which will cause many to rub their eyes and wonder how we did it.

"AT CEDAR RIDGE" tells a story that does not deviate from the Nestor standard—always clean and wholesome and punctuated with many thrills. The acting, flawless and true to life, is superior to anything you've ever seen. The scenery, artistically chosen, is nature's very own, and the onlooker will marvel at its beauty. The photography is a revelation pure and simple. There is not a weak spot in the entire production—nothing that smacks of the "usual thing."

It is hard—nay, impossible, to convey the charm of "AT CEDAR RIDGE." Get it! See it! then you'll agree with us.

COMING!---"SLEEPY HOLLOW"--- WEDNESDA

A Picture of a D

FILMS

urpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

Resolution

Of Wise and Wide Awake Exchangemen:-

Nestor Films Forever!!!

The Following Exchanges Are Happy and Prosperous Because They

BUY NESTOR FILMS

For Release Wednesday Jan. 4th, 1911

"At Cedar Ridge"

The First Great Picture Of The Year.

Get It!

—

A Happy New Year and A Nestor a Week to You!

LIST OF EXCHANGES:

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
Bijou Film and Amusement Co	1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
Capitol Film Exchange	422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
Central Film Service Co	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Chicago Film Exchange	48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.,	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O.
	315 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Consolidated Amusement Co	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Eagle Film Exchange	43 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Empire Film Exchange	150 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Dixie Film Co	503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.
Gaumont Co	Montreal, Que.
Globe Film Service Co	107 E. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Green Film Exch. (Inc.)	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1317 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Paramount Film Co	428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	31 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	118 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co	723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	200 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	103 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
United Film Co	Troy, N. Y.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Company	168 E. 12th Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
Western Film Exchange	405 Empire Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

For Release Wednesday Jan. 11th, 1911

"Sleepy Hollow"

The Second Great Picture Of The Year.

Get It!

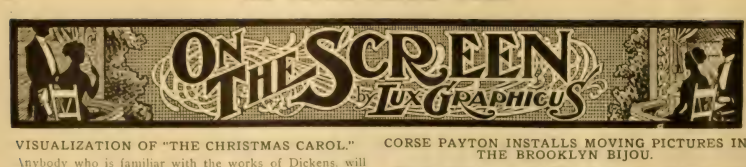
—

One Good Nestor Out Every Wednesday

NUARY 11th, 1911
nd a Dream of a Picture

NESTOR FILMS

ARE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY



VISUALIZATION OF "THE CHRISTMAS CAROL."

Anybody who is familiar with the works of Dickens will recall the name of the publication of which he was, for many years, editor, and in which I believe, but am not sure, the "Christmas Carol" was printed. The publication was called, "Household Words." My editorial room in London was next to the room in which Dickens worked in the late sixties. Dickens died in 1871, but in the early eighties, I wrote one or two articles in "Household Words," which was then edited by Charles Dickens' son, who I believe is still living. For years, my daily lot was cast in what is known in London as, "Dickens' Land," that is, near the Old Curiosity Shop, Lincolns Inn fields; Clare Market, The Strand, Holborn, etc.; all of which places must be familiar by name to readers of Dickens' works. It was always a pleasure for me, when working in London, to show American visitors over what is left, in modern London, of the real Dickens' land.

More than that, I have heard the "Christmas Carol" read by well-known elocutionists. I have seen the story produced as a play. The moral of the "Christmas Carol" is said to be responsible for a great deal of the Christmas spirit which prevails towards the end of December in English-speaking countries—the "peace on earth," "God bless us every one," sentiment, etc. So, in my eyes, especial interest attaches to this film, for the foregoing and other reasons.

Dickens, it has been said, over and over again, owes much of his renown to his illustrators, H. K. Browne, Seymour, Cruickshank, Fred Barnard. These draughtsmen, it is averred, created the Dickens' types, like Pickwick, Jingle, Fagin, Old Weller, and so on down the list of the famous novelist's famous characters. These types are so familiar to most people now-a-days that they are easily recognizable, and one does not need to read the books in order to know to whom they refer.

The Edison people took advantage of this fact so cleverly that we all, in the theaters where I saw the film, recognized Scrooge by instinct the moment his image appeared on the screen. We all recognized Marley (or, rather, Marley's ghost ("Marley was dead to begin with"). We recognized Bob Crackit and other characters. I certainly regard it as a very great success for the Edison Company, way up in the Bronx, to make a picture peculiarly English in sentiment, which I believe, if it were shown in the poorer quarters of London, would get over in virtue of its clever realization of Dickens' own story and the characters.

Of course, everybody knows the story: how the parsimonious old Scrooge was converted into a good-natured man by a series of dream pictures of his past, of the Christmas spirit, etc. I thought the actor who played the part of Marley, wonderfully successful in his make-up and impersonation, and I thought the series of pictures of early Victorian life, as featured in the "Christmas Carol," very effective and pretty. The picture was full of tender sentiment. But when old Scrooge was converted by a dream, or a series of dreams, from a tightwad into an open-handed philanthrophist, scattering his money about like anything and exuding kindliness and benevolence amongst his poorer relations and servitors, I "kinder sorter" leaned back and murmured, in the words of Ibsen, "They do not do those things." The Christmas Spirit, as imagined by Dickens, may exist somewhere, at all events it is an ideal myth wherewith to amuse our children.

To come back to the Edison picture, it "went over," as the saying is, with eclat. Whether it was the sentiment, the acting, or the photography, the minute the picture was off the screen, applause was heard all over the house, an audible testimonial to the power of the silent drama, which is music to the ear of picture fans like myself.

Indianapolis, Ind., is thinking of following the example of Milwaukee, in providing free moving pictures, municipal dances, band concerts, etc.

Insane Asylums are quickly following the example of the Memphis institution that first installed moving pictures for the inmates.

CORSE PAYTON INSTALLS MOVING PICTURES IN THE BROOKLYN BIJOU.

For the holiday season the Bijou is given over to moving pictures and vaudeville. For the purpose of proving what kind of entertainment is given, the writer visited the theater one afternoon this week. While there is some of the usual common vaudeville, there are also a few attractions of a more substantial kind. These altogether enhance the value of the pictures, which are always the most interesting. "The Nine of Diamonds" (Vitagraph) is a story of gambling, sacrifice, and heroism passing through California gold days and Civil War history; a divided "nine of diamonds" being the means of saving one life and losing another; it is a typical story of the time and well acted. "The Musical Ranch" (Lubin) is a strange idea; picture patchwork would describe it, for, from a series of disconnected pictures, at the end one is able to put them together and find out that on a certain ranch all were music mad; a poor comic, and if a play absolutely without plot or theme, yet good in execution. "An Exile's Love," by the same makers, is a much better picture. Exiled from his Russian home, a nobleman becomes a gardener in the employ of a wealthy American, ultimately marrying the daughter and regaining back his estate, fortune, and title, and as usual "living happily ever afterwards."

A picture, evidently a Biograph, was the neat, unfortunate, nameless, titleless orphan. What a pity makers are so dishonest with the audience. The leading character was an "Edith," who is the main support of a blind father and feeble mother. At the store in which she works she meets a captivating traveling salesman, who wishes her to elope with him. The temptation is great, and Edith's struggle and final moral victory in staying at home is a noble exhibition. It is better to produce a picture of good moral stamina of this kind, than one of failure and remorse. Let virtue triumph occasionally. "The Bouquet" (Essanay) shows how a bouquet of flowers may unite a "drifting apart" young married couple, even if the flowers were intended for another in a fit of jealousy. The fact that the outcome was creditable to them as young married people carried a good lesson to many similarly placed in the early trying period of married life. The sequel is a good one. "For a comic 'Hank and Lank at Rest" were to be depended upon. These "gentlemen of leisure" are now well known to all; the fun they provide is novel. It might be as well to suggest, however, that they take a "tour around the world," as they have pretty nearly exhausted opportunities at home. The musical accompaniments were superior, evidently the orchestra had been well prepared, some of the pieces were most appropriate combinations with the scenes. The drummer forgot himself once, but when we remember how often in many theaters he is a nuisance it is well to record that he kept his place here. How soon will all theater managers realize that suitable music enhances the value of the picture and increases the appreciation of the public.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY MIGRATES TO CALIFORNIA.

The Biograph Stock Company, directors and manager, numbering fifty all told, left New York on Thursday, December 20, for Los Angeles, Cal. Their operations at the same place last winter was much in the nature of an experiment, but it proved so successful that permanent quarters have been secured and their stay this time may last well into the spring. Such pictorial masterpieces as "Ramona," "By the Changing Sea," and others that stand out among the pictures of the year were done in and around Los Angeles last winter, and we look forward to still greater triumphs this year. The expense of moving a company of fifty people clear across the continent shows to what extent a film manufacturer will go to obtain local color and at the same time preserve the quality that can only be assured by organization and team work. The Biograph Company might have sent a director and a few leading people and depended upon picking up local talent to play the minor roles; they could have done this at a tithe of the expense and obtained, no doubt, some very good pictures—but pictures lacking that satisfying completeness and tone which has earned them the sobriquet of "Biograph quality."

Topical Pictures give promise of coming in vogue. Views of the New York Central explosion disaster were shown in Hoboken two days after the event.

THE "POLICE GAZETTE" ON THE SCREEN.
Where Are the Censors?

Last week's Moving Picture World, containing an article by "A Well Wisher of the Picture," entitled, "The Police Gazette on the Screen," had gone to press when "Film Fancies," for December 17th, issued by the Carlton Motion Picture Laboratories and the New York Motion Picture Company, of 1 Union Square, New York City, fell into our hands. We found, in this sheet, matter for comment, both painful and surprising, and not less emphatic than that which "A Well Wisher of the Picture" assigned to the Reliance film stories, "When Woman Wills," and "So Runs the Way."

The Reliance release, of Saturday, December 24th, entitled, "The Refuge," is thus described by the editor of "Film Fancies":

"A subject that will be recorded in the annals of motographic history as the most powerful and eloquent sermon against the evils of drink ever produced. No scenes of battle, with war-begrimed heroes locked in deadly embrace, can touch the human heart and cause the welling of sympathetic tears as does the struggle of the unfortunates in 'The Refuge,' with the Demon Drink, which winds its sinuous grip about them and drags them down, down, the abyss of degradation and despair, until reinforcements arrive—the lads and lassies marching under the banner of the Salvation Army—and the enemy is ignominiously routed."

One of the scenes in the film is said to depict:

"The Struggle in the Barracks with the Drink-Maddened Man!!!"

The complete synopsis of the film as given in "Film Fancies" is as follows:

A young man has become the victim of Drink, and his wife and child endure his maniacal abuse until, their lives in jeopardy, they appeal for aid to the Salvation Army. The intervention of these agents of mercy, goads his poisoned mind to greater excesses, and in desperation the woman buries herself in the slums, eking out a miserable existence with her needle. Infuriated, the man calls at the Army barracks, and proceeds to wreak his vengeance, but is overcome by the police. The gentle Army captain refuses to press a charge, and the man is released. The shock of the loss of his wife and baby, and the kindness of the missionaries, bring about his reformation, and he becomes a member of the band. Meanwhile, the wife is bravely struggling with the ravenous wolf of poverty, and while the unequal conflict is going on, the Grim Reaper enters and takes her little one. It is the last straw. Shattered in mind and body, plunged into the Slough of Despond, in a hysteria of madness, she seeks oblivion to her woes through the source of her misery, and welcomes the brain-numbing influence of the Demon Rum. As she wends her unsteady way through the street she is seen by her husband, who has been diligently seeking her. Quickly he follows to her miserable apartments, and tenderly he takes her in his strong arms—now a harbor of love, trust and protection from the rough seas of life upon which she so nearly became a derelict.

Consider now: Some thousands of this house organ are circulated amongst moving picture exhibitors, who, in turn, distribute synopses and other matter in the theatres, and amongst the patrons of their theatres. Does the writer of the foregoing sordid synopsis really think that a story which deals with the "demon drink," "degradation" and "despair," "drink maddened men" and the like, do they really think that this sort of thing is calculated to uplift the moving picture in public esteem?

Let us analyze the story. A man goes wrong through drink, and is reclaimed. Surely this is enough horror for one film story, but the press agent and his employers evidently do not think so. They go on to show us the man's wife seeking oblivion to her woes "through the influence of the demon rum." What an ennobling, uplifting subject for a film maker—the degradation of a woman through drink! True, she is finally reclaimed to her converted husband, but for all that, what a depressing subject it is for a film story! Last year, when Zola's masterpiece "Drink" was filmed by Pathe, there was an outcry against its realism by the very same people whom we are now taking to task. But here we have this company and their employees putting out a subject even more degrading and repulsive to our cameras than the Pathe "Zola." Fancy a film dealing with the subject of "a drunken woman unsteadily wending her way through the streets." This is a quotation from the above synopsis. We think such stories as this entirely unsuited for treatment on the screen, and we hope the Reliance people will not give us any more of them.

"Film Fancies" for December 24th, printed a Christmas greeting "by C. O. Baumann," which contained the following message:

"Let us hope that the Christmas spirit will linger with our enemies, and supplant the feeling of primitive savagery which prompts the utilization of dark, dubious and futile efforts to destroy us and bring them to a realization that in this 20th century of intelligence the measure of success a manufacturer shall enjoy will be decided by the exhibitors."

Nobody wants to "destroy" the companies for which Mr Baumann stands sponsor. Their only enemies are those who are responsible for the kind and class of pictures that have aroused public criticism. If they will get out good pictures, based upon clean, wholesome stories—the kind that the public want—nothing that anyone could write or say would deprive them of the measure of success to which they would be entitled. As far as we are concerned, our policy is constructive, not destructive, and we are hoping that the time is not far distant when we can use the strongest language at our command to extol their pictures

AMERICAN PLANS IN THE WEST.
An Interview with A. M. Kennedy, Gen. Manager American Film Mfg. Co.

"Prior to the departure of our western company from Chicago a great deal of time, thought and consideration was given to the localities that they would visit. Much to our surprise we ascertained, upon investigation, that no moving pictures had ever been taken along the Old Santa Fe Trail—the trail that has gone down in American history and literature as being unquestionably the locale for more thrilling stories of the mountain and desert country than any other locality in the United States.

"We have already completed three or four reels of comedy and drama taken in and around Old Santa Fe, also in another picturesque part of New Mexico, containing ruins of the Cliff Dwellers. Many new scenes and stories have been built by us around these ancient buildings. From Santa Fe our company will proceed to the Indian villages of San Felipe, San Domingo, Isleta and Laguna. Great difficulty has been experienced by us in obtaining permission from the United States Government and from the chiefs of the various tribes residing in these villages to enable us to take moving pictures, but all obstacles have been overcome and we do not hesitate to assert that the products of our untiring efforts, with a view to surmounting difficulties encountered, will undoubtedly prove to be sensational in the extreme; and the western films taken amidst these surroundings will undoubtedly add a feather to the reputation of the American Company.

"From Laguna the itinerary of our western stock company will carry us to Acoma, asserted to be the most picturesque of the Pueblo villages. From Acoma we will proceed to Gallup, and direct to the locality termed 'Moki Land.' Here we propose to take pictures of the Snake Dance and other ceremonials, and likewise, build some thrilling western stories around the settings that there will be available. The Moki Indians are considered to be the most interesting tribe of savages on the American continent. In order to reach them the company will have to travel a distance of from 50 to 75 miles over the Great American Desert.

"From Zuni, the last of the seven cities of Cibola in the Moki territory, we will proceed to Adamana, where is situated the great petrified forest of Arizona, covering some 10,000 or 15,000 acres. Undoubtedly very interesting pictures will be obtained by us in this locality.

"We then propose to proceed to Flagstaff in the San Francisco Mountains and have already in preparation a scenario covering an exceedingly thrilling western story, the principal scenes in which will be set in the Canon Diablo within a few miles of Flagstaff.

"From Flagstaff the company will proceed to Phoenix. Arizona pictures of a character suitable to this frontier city will be taken. From Phenix we will proceed southward into the Apache Country, which is conceded to contain the wildest and most striking scenery in Arizona. Pictures of a comical nature will be taken in and around the Grand Canon, Arizona, showing the trials and tribulations of the tourists etc.

"From results already achieved by our western company, as set forth in negatives we already have in our possession, our progress through the wild and extremely interesting portion of America will undoubtedly be triumphant to point of results. Our western pictures ought to be doubly interesting in that they will be taken on the very scenes where the pure camera has never been prior to the formation of this company."

* * *

From a copy of the Santa Fe "New Mexican" just to hand we note that the American company of actors has been given the freedom of the city by the Mayor. They have been allowed to take guns, wear war paint and otherwise transact themselves as Indians supplies. As a result the whole population of the city came forty dramas were pulled out and the people in the neighborhood have been taking full advantage of the free show

"White Roses" (Biograph).—A comedy of a bashful man. He is afraid to propose, so he arranges a code of signals with roses, sending the roses and code by a boy, with the usual results. The boy loses everything, the girl gets and wears the wrong roses and the very mischief is to pay until a wise police judge succeeds in untangling it all when the original box and the code turns up in the hands of an arrested youngster. The audience will get much fun out of the difficulties of the bashful young man and his vain attempts to propose. The girl wasn't to blame. She did more than her part several times. It is all amusing and keeps the audience in good humor.

"Recreation of an Heiress" (Biograph).—A good bit of comedy representing the discomfiture of some fortune hunters who determine to marry their son to an heiress. When informed that the supposed maid is the real heiress he speedily transfers his affections, but shortly afterward the heiress departs, peremptorily ordering the supposed rich girl to carry her bag. The appearance of the young man when the denouement comes is quite the funniest thing in the picture.

"An American Count" (Lubin).—A funny picture, illustrating how they fooled a girl into marrying her old sweetheart, whom she summarily dismissed, when told a foreign count was to visit her. But the ending is different from what might be expected, since when the groom's disguise is removed she is plainly pleased, and when the count does appear and falls on his knees to tell his love he is summarily pitched out doors. There is life and plenty of activity in the play, but not much that can lay claim to any particular dramatic strength.

"A Western Welcome" (Melies).—Here is a novelty in humor. A newly married couple on their way to visit an aunt in Texas are held up by two escaped convicts, who force them to change clothes. Then the fun begins. The convicts visit the aunt and get the welcome, while the newlyweds lead the sheriff a chase he won't soon forget, ending at the aunt's, where the convicts are captured and the unfortunate newly-weds lose nothing by their experience. The film has plenty of life, and plenty of fun, even though it is a bit fast and furious in spots.

"Overland to Fremont" (Selig).—A Western Indian tale, the scenes of which are laid in the shadow of Mt. Shasta. It deals with the oft repeated exhibition of an Indian's treachery and an Indian's gratitude for favors done. A young man, the son of a colonel of a frontier post, is ill and in his delirium calls for his sister. She starts with a guide and an Indian girl as companions. They are taken by the Indians, but the Indian girl effects their release. After a long, heroic struggle they reach the son, who falls dying into his sister's arms. There is privation by hunger and thirst and a long list of disagreeable features to add zest to the picture, and they are all illustrated in such a way that they appear probable. It is a good film, presenting certain phases of Western life accurately and graphically.

"The Christmas Carol" (Edison).—It is useless to undertake a description of this film. It is Dickens' story put into motion pictures and so cleverly reproduced that the characters actually live before one. There is Scrooge at his office, lacking the spirit of Christmas, abusing those around him and refusing to contribute for the benefit of those who are in need. Then comes the vision and the change and the working out of the principal features of the story so plainly that whether one has read the original or not there will be no difficulty in understanding the picture. It is one of the best releases of this company for a long time. The actors have caught the spirit of the selection and have interpreted the characters with rare fidelity. The visions and the ghost of Marley are produced in a more visionary way than usual, making them appear much more ethereal. In truth, it would be difficult to suggest any improvement for this excellent film. And, released before Christmas, it may exert an influence upon someone besides Scrooge, who has failed to imbibe the spirit of the season.

"When Lovers Part" (Kalem).—A production from the Southern stock company, based upon events just before the war. A girl and her lover are parted by her relentless father. Both go to war, the father is killed, but the lover lives to return and claim his bride. The story is much such as many others have been based upon similar episodes, but the scenery has an added charm which will cause the picture to appear more attractive than it otherwise would. There are delightful old Colonial houses, blooming rose gardens and huge Southern oaks clothed in moss for a background, adding their share to the pictures' features. The story is well told, and the combination pleased the large audience

"The Lucky Charm" (Pathe).—A colored fairy story, representing a young man abused by everyone, refused the hand of the girl he loved, and sent away riding backward on a mule. But he finds a charm. The fairies begin to work for him and many strange things happen to those who bothered him, and, all obstacles removed, he marries the girl of his choice, with the fairies as attendants at the wedding. The work is well done and the film will please grown-ups as well as children.

"Betty's Fireworks" (Pathe).—The irrepressible Betty amuses herself with setting off a quantity of fireworks in unexpected places. The result is eventually a conflagration which demands the services of the fire department.

"Clancy" (Vitagraph)—Clancy is a policeman who does his duty and is eventually almost killed by the gang. His limp body is carried home to his wife and child just as they are trimming the Christmas tree. But he is only badly hurt and lives to enjoy a Happy New Year with them and probably arrest the leaders in many more gangs. It is interesting as the reproduction of the dangers of a policeman's life. It has no claim to dramatic excellence beyond telling a life story in a straight-forward way.

"The Bad Man's Christmas" (Essanay).—A Western story, based upon the jealousy of a cowboy for the Eastern man who successfully won the love of the ranch maid's daughter. Bent upon killing him, the cowboy impersonates Santa Claus, but the spirit of Christmas takes possession of him and by the time the presents are distributed he joins the hands of the lovers and wishes them well. It is a transfer of Christmas to the plains and a reproduction of the novel methods taken to make it merry. Of course, much of the time-honored paraphernalia is necessary, but it is a new way to work it out. The film is scarcely dramatic, but it tells a good story in a plain, easily understood way, and presents the novelty of Christmas in the West. These features add to its interest and make it attractive.

"The Old Home" (Gaumont).—The home of his youth falling under a mortgage, the young man flees, lacking courage to face the ordeal. An old servant and the coward's fiancee succeeded in paying off the mortgage. Then the young man returns and offers profuse thanks. It is scarcely apparent why this film was made. It tells no interesting story and it offers no explanation for its existence. Even though the mechanical work is good, it seems like a waste of film and labor to produce it.

"Cain and Abel" (Gaumont).—Reproduction in picture form of the murder of Abel by Cain and his being driven forth to wander upon the face of the earth with a mark in his forehead. All pictorial representation of such scenes must be, in a sense, imaginative. While it is possible to obtain fairly accurate ideas of costumes and manners it is difficult to know from the narrative just what occurred. But the producer has put into concrete form the impressions which are most likely present in the minds of most people who have read the account in the Bible. Possibly this is not the highest type of educational picture, but, on the other hand, it is practically impossible to secure accurate data and if the picture represents the most common impression it is, perhaps, sufficiently good to be worth while. It is beyond the knowledge of average persons to determine the accuracy of the pictures which represent Biblical stories, but those who have made a life study of these subjects have generally commended Gaumont's work. This, the first murder recorded in history, is used as the basis of an important change in the human family, therefore it is of importance to every person who believes the Bible. The work is well done and there is no question about its impression upon the minds of those who see it.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

A Week of Comedies

Release, Monday, January 2nd

"Mrs. Gaylife's Visitors" COMEDY

An American "Screech"—A comedy of fun and laughter.

Release, Thursday, January 5th

"The Tenderfoot's Round-up"

WESTERN COMEDY

A typical Western range—a tenderfoot and hordes of cowboys—Oh! It's funny.

A Week of "American" Beauties

Release, Monday, January 9th

"An Arizona Romance" WESTERN DRAMA

The Arizona desert as a background to one of the most thrilling tales ever told in pictures.

Release, Thursday, January 12th

"Lucy's Lover" "The Borrowed Flat"

COMEDY

Two on one reel and both as funny as they can be made

THREE comedies including one Western.

ONE Drama of real Western life.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR AMERICAN FILMS

American Film Mfg. Co.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, CHICAGO, ILL.

"I WANT ANOTHER MOTIOGRAPH

I am using two now and want one more with a double dissolver."

So writes a prominent Minnesota theatre man.

THE WISE EXHIBITOR WILL HAVE NO OTHER for he knows the MOTIOGRAPH projects the best pictures and is the most durable of all machines.

The reasons are scientific and logical, and are covered by patents to us.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 501-572 West Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agent, 16 E. 23rd Street, New York City

EDWARD H. KENT, Agent, 565 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. E. GREENLEES, Agent, Dominion Block, Toronto, Canada

"Sunshine in Poverty Row" (Pathe).—A Christmas story, representing a postmaster finding a letter from two poor children to Santa Claus and himself playing the part of that good saint to the destitute little ones. The principal interest lies in the representation of contrasts between the Christmas of the rich and the Christmas of the poor. The story is not new, but it is perennial. Like some of the others which touch the heart, it never grows old, and the audience rejoices in the good fortunes of the children whose dream of Santa Claus and his jolly factory comes true.

"Jean and the Waif" (Vitagraph).—A touching story of a pampered dog and an abused orphan forced to go out into the world alone, but who eventually reaches the house and the bed in which Jean sleeps. When the child is found with the dog the next morning she is immediately adopted and the two become inseparable friends. This film is one of those touching little heart stories that appeals to the audience in an indescribable way. The acting of the dog is interesting, but there is such a feeling of relief shown on the faces when the child finds a home where she will be cared for. The Vitagraph people have an unusually fine dog actor, but they are wise in not overworking her. The few appearances she makes are all interesting and leave the audience wanting more.

"Winning Back His Love." (Biograph).—The story of a woman whose husband became infatuated with an actress, and the latter encouraged his attentions under the impression that he was single. The wife follows them to a restaurant in company with a friend and acts the part of an abandon to show her husband his folly. Her ruse is successful and she wins him back.

"Making a Man of Him" (Lubin).—How a father feigned poverty to see whether his pampered son had anything in him or not. The young man, when he believes his parents have lost their money, goes out into the world and does things for himself. When he returns and discovers that it was all a hoax the situation has changed. He is no longer a pampered son, but a man capable of holding his own with the best of them. The picture tells a pleasant story, but possesses no claims to dramatic strength.

"The Bowling Fiend" (Pathe).—Perhaps the young man's friends could have permitted his craze to pass unnoticed, only he seized every possible opportunity to practice his fad, bowling over everything moveable, using as balls whatever came handy. In a vigorous scene his friends convince him that the alleys are the proper places for bowling.

"The Atonement" (Pathe).—A gentleman friend makes love to a chemist's wife, who, coming suddenly from his laboratory, discovers them and orders the friend from the house. Going back to his work he is so flustrated that he mixes wrong chemicals, which cause an explosion that destroys his sight. The end is poverty and the sheriff. At this juncture the friend places his fortune at the disposal of the stricken family. Misunderstanding it at first, he is again ordered from the house, but when a child reads the letter making the proposition to the blind man, he accepts and asks the gentleman's pardon. It is difficult to see where this picture has any special interest. There is no opportunity for good acting and it is not particularly pleasant to see a man stricken blind and finally turned outdoors by the sheriff.

"The Rustlers" (Selig).—A Western drama depicting the experiences of a young man who went wrong, gambled and drank and finally was captured with a gang of rustlers. Making a desperate effort he escaped, though severely wounded, and thereafter had ample opportunity for meditation and repentance. The picture has some element of interest in the illustrations of the operations of these rustlers who make it their business to drive away the cattle of others. Aside from this point, its interest is no more than ordinary. In fact, Western pictures of whatever type have ceased to attract the attention they once did. Some novelty in this variety will sometimes arouse a tardy applause, but the majority of them are looked upon with indifference.

"Girls Will Be Boys" (Essanay).—Quite the usual thing. It tells how a mother brought up her girls as boys and how it went well until three men appeared. Then came Cupid, and eventually the girls no longer appeared as boys. Aside from excellent photography, and the depiction of one or two rather amusing episodes, especially the one in the gymnasium, this picture has little to commend it. The photography is excellent, and the staging has been attended to with extreme care. But what the characters do and how they do it possesses comparatively little real interest.

"Eldora, the Fruit Girl" (Edison).—An ambitious father separates his son from a girl whom he loves upon the ground that she is below his station and will drag him down. Being convinced of this by the young man's father she acts a part and drives the young man away, but broken hearted, seeks to make away with herself. Reading the story in the papers, the father takes his son to the hospital and re-unites them, then does all he can for the young woman, realizing that money and position and power are not all there is in life. The girl's acting when she decides to send the young man away is the feature of the picture and in places reaches dramatic heights which have seldom been touched.

"The Adventuress" (Gaumont).—The story of the means taken by a pair of thieves to rob a rich ranchman, which was foiled by his secretary. The picture cannot claim any dramatic interest. It tells a common enough story, laying the scene in different surroundings, but after all, substantially the same. The photography in some places is weak, especially where an attempt has been made to produce brown tones. The night scenes are better, but are not worth bragging about. The farm scenes are not bad, the rounding up of the cattle and the scenes as the horsemen ride away are all reasonably good. There is a neat bit of acting where the secretary pieces the torn bits of the letter together, but to merely make marks across the paper does not create the appearance of torn places.

"In Neighboring Kingdoms" (Vitagraph).—Here are those irrepressible youngsters, a prince and princess in neighboring kingdoms, who refuse to wed as their fathers wish. They run away, assume disguises, meet, fall in love, but can't marry, because each tells the other that he or she is of royal blood. Then they relent and decide to accede to their fathers' wishes, only to discover upon the wedding day that they love each other after all. While the picture is not particularly striking, it has more interest than some of this type, because it depicts what two young people might really do under similar circumstances.

INDEPENDENT.

"Little Nell's Tobacco" (Imp.)—A touching picture representing the love which existed between an old man and his granddaughter, the death of his daughter, the coming of another wife and her heartlessness to the old man, which resulted in his death, and the loyalty of the granddaughter. The little one's loyalty in securing his pipe and tobacco after the step-mother had thrown it out the window is a tender bit of acting. Then comes the cruel banishment to the attic, and the little one's using her hoard of pennies to buy more tobacco, only to find that her grandpa was dead. The last scene, where she is placing flowers on his grave will arouse the emotions very strongly so pathetic and natural is it. The film is all good, with sufficient pathos to make an unusual heart interest.

"Her Husband's Deception" (American).—A comedy that will keep the house laughing. The poor woman's difficulties are so plainly apparent, and this deception is so serious that the audience will show their pleasure by a steady laugh from beginning to end.

"The Troublesome Parcel" (American).—On the same reel with the above, and quite as lively and snappy. At this season, when everyone is laden with parcels, it has more point, perhaps, than it would at other times. Anyhow, the parcel does cause a lot of bother. There is no question about the fact that short comedies like this are much more likely to prove attractive than are the attenuated films, so-called comedies, which are spread over so much space the fun is lost in the blank area.

"Who Was the Culprit?" (Itala).—A comedy presenting a mixup that looked dark for innocent people some of the time. The audience will extract many a laugh from the picture before it closes.

"The Pawnshop" (Solax).—The story of an organ-grinder who became possessed of the gambling spirit, wins, then loses and undertakes to pawn his organ and the monkey for money to try again. Failing in this, Marietta offers herself as security and remains with the pawnbroker until redeemed by the young man. His difficulties in trying to secure the needed money to get her back are interesting. Finally he frustrates a plot to rob a house, and is rewarded with $100, and straightway gets Marietta out. The acting of the monkey will prove one of the most attractive features of this film, through the idea of pawning a girl is new. The action is natural, and the story is told in a convincing way.

"The Childhood of Jack Harkaway" (Thanhouser).—The story of a boy taken from his mother and brought up among strangers. He escapes from the school where he is confined and, seeking refuge in a house by the way, discovers his mother. When they come after him, the mother forces them to allow the boy to remain with her. It is a heart story, which will interest, because it presents more or less unpleasant possibilities of this character. The acting is well done, and the film will prove popular with most audiences.

"Bill Plays Bowls" (Lux).—A trick comedy that will please by the unexpected occurrences. Not many could bowl as Bill does, but then, there are few alleys where Bill would be a welcome player. Maybe the tricks are no worse than the balls play with most bowlers, after all.

"Rosalie's Dowry" (Lux).—A snappy comedy, which will please with its unexpected and quite out-of-the-ordinary ending. Both of these comedies are on one reel, and they are all the better that they are short. While Bill's antics in bowling are funny, for a short film, they would scarcely do for a longer one, and Rosalie's situation is the same. Made short, they are satisfactory, and add a pleasing variety to the evening's entertainment.

"The Paleface Princess" (Bison).—An Indian story, which has attractive features, offering something of the quality which pervaded the output of this house when they began. The occurrences are probable, and the actors have interpreted the story with sufficient accuracy to hold the attention of the audience from beginning to end.

"The Necklace of the Dead" (Great Northern).—Here is a film which will make a profound impression upon any audience, not so much because of what they see as what is suggested. A girl dies, and is buried with a necklace placed on her neck by her lover. The undertaker's assistant, coveting the necklace, goes to the tomb in the night, opens the coffin, and begins to remove the necklace, when he is startled by a movement. Recovering himself, he reasons that possibly the girl has been buried alive, and hastens to her lover. Together they return to the tomb and find that she has got out of the coffin and is waiting inside the closed door, half dead from fright, until someone shall release her. The man confesses all, and is given the necklace, but under the circumstances he believes he should devote it to the church. There isn't much in the story, yet it would be difficult to devise anything which will linger longer in the memory. A large number of people possess a dread horror of being buried alive. And this, somehow, emphasizes the possibility. It is not dramatic in the sense that it is extraordinary acting, but it is horrifying in its suggestions, and causes the fear of something similar happening to one to take possession of one's faculties for the time. It will be considered one of the strong films of the week, though it has nothing about it unusual, excepting the conception of the story.

"Greediness Spoils Foolshead's Christmas" (Itala).—If it is possible to get into a scrape, Foolshead can be depended upon to accept the possibility. In this instance he might have had a pleasant Christmas, but he was too greedy. He wanted too much, and so got nothing. The working out affords opportunity to display to good advantage his peculiar talents, and the audience is kept in good humor throughout the picture.

"A Father's Love" (Powers).—The story of the separation of a couple because of the unreasoning jealousy of the wife. The child longs for her papa, and writes a letter to Santa Claus, asking him to bring papa home. Santa comes, and, throwing off his disguise, proves to be papa. The mother enters and finds the father and child in each other's embrace, accepts the reconciliation and takes him back. It is a Christmas story, or is given a Christmas flavor by the presence of Santa Claus.

"Girlies" (American).—A comedy involving what happened to three girls and three men. Some humorous situations are developed, and there are points where the audience looks upon the picture as funny enough to provoke laughter.

"The Lock-Keeper" (Eclair).—How a foolish wife, who became dissatisfied with her husband, was cured of her folly. Walking with her sailor lover, her child falls in the river. The sailor refuses to go to its assistance, and attempts to hold her back, while her husband plunges in and saves the little one. The difference between the two men becomes apparent, and she no longer has any use for the sailor.

"The Fear of Fire" (Eclair).—A comedy representing the unreasoning fear of fire which seized Mr. Coward on all occasions. At last weary of his constant interference his friends decide to burn red fire outside his door, and when he appears, crying fire, ice cold water is poured over him. Heroic treatment, perhaps, but his friends thought it necessary.

"The Unexpected Honeymoon" (Imp).—How a young man obtained a fortune by marrying a girl whom he supposed to be homely, paying her $25,000 to be his wife for a year and never see him, at the end of which time it was understood they would be divorced. But at the end of the year the girl has removed her disguise, and instead of a divorce there was a honeymoon. The unexpected changes in this picture constitute its chief interest. The scenes are admirably worked out, and there is much that is interesting and funny.

"The Insane Heiress" (Yankee).—A detective story representing the methods taken to acquire knowledge of an heiress, who had been abducted by a guardian who feared her money, and the way the guardian was brought to justice. Like all detective stories, this one is interesting, and does not fail to keep the audience up to the highest pitch of excitement as the mystery is unraveled. The scenes are worked out with care, and the picture is well photographed.

"The Station Agent's Daughter" (Powers).—A blazing story of the West, which shows how that region is cured of making heroines, even of little girls like this one. It shows plainly how the girl saved her father's life when it was in peril. There is much of life and much of that indescribable human quality which attracts by appealing to something in us which cannot always be touched.

"Freddie's Courtship" (Powers).—A comedy which has elements that make for sport. Freddie would have been all safe in his courtship if it hadn't been for McDuff. When the two individuals come together, there is sure to be fun, and in this instance the possibility is more than realized.

"The Vicar of Wakefield" (Thanhouser).—Another of those successful reproductions of literary masterpieces, which have been made a feature by this house. The good old Vicar of Wakefield, Goldsmith's moving story, is here reproduced in all his kindliness. The characters seem to live before one, and all the pathos and beauty of the original is faithfully produced. The mock marriage of the daughter, the imprisonment for debt, and the kindly offices among the prisoners, and, finally, the discovery that the marriage was performed by a real minister, and the forcing of the young man to ask the girl's pardon with the reunion to follow, while the squire asks the hand of the other daughter. The picture closes with a glimpse of the happiness to which the good man is clearly entitled. As has been said before, in this column, these reproductions of masterpieces are of benefit to everybody who sees them, while the presentation of such works is to be commended from every standpoint. They are well done, and to those who have read the stories they come as illustrations of what they already know. If they have not read it, they are introduced to something which surpasses that to which they are accustomed.

"TWELFTH NIGHT" AND AFTER

In many European countries the Christmas season ends on Twelfth night—that is, the sixth of January. In some countries the sixth of January is called "Little Christmas," and as far as practical purposes we will assume that the sixth of January is this side of the Atlantic overlooks the Christmas season, with its "peace and good will" and "merry Christmas."

During the last two or three weeks there has been a marked absence of rumors with regard to impending changes between the "licensed" side and the "independent" side of moving picture making. We are not wish to be understood as going into the ethical or moral side of this question, as we heartily ask and tired of that. But at the same time, for the benefit of those so to take a glimpse of any away from the trade outlook as a whole. In conversation with Mr. J. E. Brulatour, the newly elected president of the Sales Company, the other day, we learned that the alleged infringements on the forthcoming Vitagraph will have the advantage of the services of one of the best firms of patent lawyers in New York city. The Sales Company have taken steps in that direction. Mr. Brulatour thought we did not wish to go into the question, and we took that a compromise could be arranged between the two companies. The Independents cannot be put out of business—that was patently clear in ordering increasing quantities of film" be delivered on the standing order to keep the theaters busy, but some concessions must be made, a very unlikely one.

Reliable estimates will not be undertaken by any one at the Universal Manufacturing Co. before the middle of January. Burlington, Vt., before. But it must be months before a long time before it is put on the market, for the simple reason that the process of manufacture [illegible] was one. A great deal of costly experience has to be gone through before satisfactory moving picture machines can be successfully and uniformly made.

NOTES OF THE LOS ANGELES STUDIOS.

By Richard V. Spencer.
Coast Correspondent of the "World."

Mr. Paul, western director of the Kalem Company, has arrived in the city with a company of actors and extra people. They are soon to leave for the foothill studio of the Kalem Company. The studio is picturesquely situated in the midst of beautiful California scenery, scenes of which will soon appear in Kalem films. It is the intention of the directors to specialize on Indian themes.

Charles Inslee has recently joined the Bison Company to play special leads. Between times, Mr. Balshofer, the director, promises to keep him busy writing and staging scenarios.

The Essanay Company's western company are now at work at San Jose. Several local moving picture actors have recently left for the north to join the company. Last year the company maintained a Los Angeles studio, but whether they will come south this year is as yet problematical.

"Bob" Leonard, juvenile, has left the Hartman Comic Opera Company to rejoin the Selig Company, with whom he has appeared before.

Mr. James L. Magee, business manager of the Selig Pacific Coast Studio, has completed all arrangements for taking the Tournament of Roses pageant at Pasadena. An interesting feature of the films will show the chariot races, which are closely contested annually. This film will be shown in ten thousand American theatres, and five thousand theatres in Europe and abroad.

Mrs. Sherry, wife of J. B. Sherry, leading character actor of the Bison Company, died recently after a brief illness. Mr. Sherry has been in receipt of many messsages of condolence from local friends.

Messrs. Hyman & Prochazk, proprietors of a chain of local moving picture theartes, on Christmas morning threw open the doors of their various theatres to the free admission of the city's newsboys, orphans and deserving poor of the city. Words fail to describe the appreciation and delight with which the poor children welcomed and cheered the films, songs and splendid music provided at the various houses. The firm deserve special commendation for their thoughtful remembrance to brighten for a few hours the lives of the city's poor.

FILMS FOR COMMUTERS.

P. R. R. to Show Moving Pictures at Pittsburg While Waiting for Trains.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 28.—Commuters who use the big Union Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad in this city will no longer be bored while waiting for trains. The announcement was made to-day that moving picture shows will hereafter be presented to them in the station. The innovation met with instant favor from railroad officials when it was broached a few weeks ago, and negotiations are now being conducted with moving picture interests. The apparatus is expected to be installed in two weeks. The films will be changed daily, but the railroad officials propose to act as censors and to eliminate all objectionable pictures.

"There will be no pictures of train robberies," said Albert Swinehart, who is in charge of the Pennsylvania Railroad detectives, "nor of train wrecks. It would leave a bad impression on the minds of the travelers."

The innovation will dispense with the raucous-voiced train callers for five minutes before trains leave announcements will be thrown on the canvas on which the pictures will be shown.—New York "Times."

THE DIXIE FILM CO., A LIVE WIRE IN THE SOUTH.

A World representative gained a very optimistic view of the film business in the South, during an interview with Mr. H. Fechtenberg, president of the Dixie Film Co., Maison Blanche Building, New Orleans, La., in which Mr. Fechtenberg told of the wonderful growth of his exchange after it had joined the independent ranks.

Mr. Fechtenberg went on to say that he fully realized, and was confident that after taking up the Independent cause, that he could see nothing but success for the future. He said: "Three months ago I was purchasing nine reels of film weekly, and today I can state without the slightest contradiction that we are buying twenty-four reels weekly of different makes." We are not advising that we are purchasing duplicate copies of any particular make, but have selected twenty-four different reels. He further stated that the enormous growth of his business necessitated the installation of two branch exchanges, namely: "The Dixie Film Co., San Antonio, Texas, and The Dixie Film Co., Birmingham, Ala.

"From our point of view we consider that an Exchange that will invest $2,400 for film and $800 for cost of operation weekly, will be authentic equipped to handle the requirements of the most particular exhibitor, and we truthfully believe that it will be to the interest of all moving picture men operating in the jurisdiction of the Dixie Film Co., of New Orleans, La., and its branch offices to get in touch with these Exchanges, thus placing themselves in a position to secure a film service that is thoroughly in keeping with the times."

LICENSED MANUFACTURERS' MEET AND DINE.

The annual meeting of the Patents Company, licensees, was held on Monday, December 29, followed by a banquet at the Hotel Plaza. Mr. Thomas A. Edison was the guest of honor, as at last year's function. The only presentation made was on the part of the Biograph Company, who presented each manufacturer with a parlor mutoscope and a set of the pictures of the group of manufacturers made in their studio last year.

GREAT NORTHERN PROGRESS.

If any American manufacturer engaged such stage notabilities as Sothern, Marlowe, Drew or Elliott, the fact would be heralded in big headlines; but that is just what the Great Northern Film Company is doing in Denmark. The star actors of the Royal Theater of Copenhagen appear in all their big dramatic productions. We saw one the other day depicting an episode of the Russo-Japanese war, in which it was difficult to say whether the acting, the settings or the photography was the more perfect. Exhibitors make no mistake in demanding G. N. films, as they can always be depended upon to lend tone to the program.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Stolen Machines from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., were located in Peekskill, N. Y., and Union Hill, N. J. They were stolen by an operator who had been berrieended, financially, by his boss.

Teaching Chorus Girls to dance by means of moving pictures, although at present only a press agent's yarn, is a thing that might fill a long-felt want.

Tuberculosis Film has made a hit with the daily press everywhere, and carries with it a certain prestige. A few more sensible things like that and all the knocks will turn to boosts.

Chatham, N. B., Can.—The Royal, a new moving picture house opened last week. Mr. J. D. Lahay, the proprietor, is to be congratulated on the way he has transformed the old Masonic hall and is now displayed in the finest style. The latest model Edison machine has been installed; an orchestra has been engaged; DeWitt Cairns, a noted vocalist is a special attraction, and, with an excellent operator, Thos. S. Daley, and good film service, Mr. Lahay has started out on the path that leads to success for the Royal.

Scranton, Pa.—There are now eighteen moving picture shows in Scranton, ten of whom are using independent service. Mr. Barnet Freeman, formerly one of the Philadelphia Film Exchange, has leased a suite of rooms in Miller's Block, one of the finest and best located business blocks in the city. He will open a new independent film exchange called the Scranton Film Exchange. He ought to do well, as he is an affable gentleman, has been much on the road and has a host of friends.

No. Brookfield, Mass.—The Star Theater, under the management of J. Berthiaume & Co., who also operate the Park M. P. House at Spencer, Mass., will open its doors to the public on December 31. The place has a seating capacity of 700, having been the old Union Church, which has been converted into a modern appearing moving picture house at a cost of $5,000. It is furnished with the latest equipment, even to their own electric lighting plant.

FLICKERS.

Nobody ever has to hunt for a cop in moving picture land.

* * *

Speaking about the Passion Play; after going the rounds, these three long years, it is finally censored by the Mayor of Denver, as being "Too Gruesome." Well, the Bible is good place to make a beginning.

* * *

Mayor of Painesville, Ohio, leased a picture theater for a day, to give Passion Play on Sunday. He gave an exhibitor the authority; the authority was questioned; exhibitor got cold feet, and just to show who was boss, the mayor ran the show himself. You can get away with lots of things, if you're a mayor, that you couldn't as an exhibitor.

Letters to the Editors.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir.—Photoplay actors and actresses are certainly of great interest to the public. Many of my patrons are asking me frequently who are certain ones that we see in different productions, and, of course, I am not able to tell them, as I don't know. I would think that if the manufacturers would have slides made of all their leading players, one by one, with names of them and space to announce when and what play they're taking part in, I know, I and many other exhibitors would be delighted to show them in advance to the audience, and many people would see productions that they don't see now, if they'd know that such players as Mr. Maurice Costello, Miss Florence E. Turner, and many others, which names are unknown to us, took part in.

Hoping that you will find room in your valuable paper to publish these few lines, I thank you in advance and with compliments of the season, I remain,

Yours truly,

SAMUEL ACRI

ANOTHER CRY FOR COMEDY.

Sandusky, Ohio, December 27, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—Being an exhibitor I would like to have my opinion in your paper—why the motion picture has fallen down and not attended as it used to be. In the first place, the makers of films are too busy trying to get ahead of each other in some things, but not in producing good pictures and interesting subjects. They have entirely too much drama and not half enough comedies and scenic films. We have enough drama in our every-day life without watching it on our curtain. Just think, we have twelve short comedies out of fifty-seven subjects put on the market this week! Give us more good, clean comedies so that we can send our patrons out with a smile, and they will come back and bring their friends. Not so with dramas; they tell them to stay away. In order to bring the business up to the standard where it should be, let the manufacturers bury the axe and give us the comedies.

Yours truly,

CHAS. REARK.

ABOUT POSTERS.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 23, 1910.

The Moving Picture World,
125 East 23rd Street, New York.

Gentlemen—Was much interested in your article in issue of 19th November re, "The Posters." You hit the nail on the head when you say "more crude and inartistic work is impossible to imagine." How intensely annoying it is, when you know you have a good picture, to have to put out in front a hideous daub supposed to advertise it, and then see people come along, stop, hesitate, debating whether to go in or not, get a glance at the posters, then hasten away. You can't blame them. There is not a single attractive thing about the posters furnished with the films. We hope there will be a concerted demand from the exhibitors that will make the manufacturers "sit up and take notice" on this particular question, and you can help the good work along wonderfully.

Yours very truly,
The Ideal Amusement Company.
Wm. W. Hoyt, Mgr

GETTING TOGETHER.

In my last article, "Vermont and The Moving Picture," I put forward a few statistics such as would tend to supply food for thought to present theatrical investors and those who may invest in the future, and while those statistics solely applied to one State, Vermont, they ought to have, and probably will have, a deep bearing on the present and future showman's methods of procedure anywhere, be it circus, dramatic, vaudeville or moving pictures, particularly the latter, as they are more permanently located than the others, with the possible exception of vaudeville, and outside of the big cities.

In Vermont, again referring to this State as a particularly good illustration, there are approximately thirty five moving picture, or moving picture and vaudeville, theaters, and according to the population, bank deposits and many other favorable conditions there should be at least twice, and possibly present population as active, industrious and progressive, and less applicable to the "night wad" fraternity many of whom can only increase their capital by the "sweat of their brow," as other agricultural communities are, there would be, at least, a hundred picture theaters and enough population, standing and floating, to easily support them all. I am not knocking, far from it, although relations of plain, cold, unvarnished facts and figures are often considered in that light. Nevertheless, this is the situation in one State and can't be denied. But, can it be remedied? Can the moving picture interests, the manufacturers, jobbers, exchanges and renters, exchange ideas in Vermont? I think we at least have a start started individually but collectively, and with a prettty good certainty of it all coming back through the increased number of box offices and the exhibitors to the exchange and then to the manufacturer. Elucidate.

A star or a big production has a press agent, or more modernly termed, publicity promoter, and an agent or advance man, and the attraction is promoted by all the newspapers they can be "planting" and advance billing, in every town and hamlet in the country where found by the aforementioned agent, and it matters not to the "other fellow" what it is talking about it, and consequently stirs to see it. They do, and if it is good it gets a nice patronage for the entire next day and the producers add another leaf to their private mill of fame, and even if it is poor they get the advertising and prominence just the same. Producers and big potteries are famous all over America and England, even if the ware occasionally put out an inferior one.

Now, why can't the film manufacturers play the same tactics in a milder degree? You may say "because they put out too many pictures and would not have the time for such extensive publicity." But why should they put out so many pictures? It is not necessary. Do the exchanges demand it? If they do, it's the exchanges' and the exhibitors' fault, as it does not help the business in the long run, not by a jug full, over-production never does. Some will say that the expenses involved and the possible profits in moving pictures as against those pertaining to the legitimate stage and its companies would prohibit as extensive a policy as promoting the pictures. So it would if carried to the magnitude and extreme, as permissible in the "legitimate" vaudeville or field, but that is not necessary or logical or even possible still the idea is there; apply it as extensively as you can, but apply it.

Figuratively speaking, the moving picture is pretty well represented both artistically and educationally, considering its short time before the public, but in its business and financial end it is lack of system in the manufacture of production, advertising (or publicity promotion) and distribution, it sadly needs a master organizer and systematizer with plenty of financial backing and a long head. Like a new town, the boom is over, the town is established and we must now settle down to a safe sane and progressive administration, free from an erratic and financial standpoint.

The time is going by when the public will mount a picture theater to see any old picture as long as it being new at the time; they will have to be informed, interested and led on it by various methods of publicity; they will have their favorite makes, and their favorite actors and actresses as they have today. They will have their favorite industrial and educational pictures of subjects and classes in which they are students. These pictures should be of swell merit as to content featuring, and should not be hurled at the exchanges almost before they have had time to dry, but should be plugged, boosted and advertised all along the line, on the screen, in the lobby, and in the papers, and kept on longer than one day. Now, advertising pages at a time in the trade papers to inform and interest the exchanges and the exhibitors. This is all right as far as it goes, and to an per cent of the news that is put as far as it does go, it seldom reaches the public, that is the masses, for they do not as a rule read the trade papers pertaining to the picture, particularly the laboring class. But they do read the daily papers, but they do not shed tears a sign or glance that reads "coming on and on, and they do read programs and announcement slides. They know what they want and how often they want it, and under a different system of production, booking and advertising one could be easily told by the box office. The manager would have a chance to pick at least a few of the pictures his audiences want, thus the exchange would know better what to buy and the manufacturer would have a better insight into what the public wants and more time to give it to them—in quality, not as some are now—in quantity.

Co-ahuer, everything, get together, co-operate, exchange and exhibit; get together understand each himself, and co-operate, concentrate and advertise, "all of you."

This is a long winded game and will take some men to do it on figures and figure, but it can be done, will have to be done later on, and you might just as well get started now as any time.

Accept the above at your own valuation, but accept it—and always all act upon it.

C. W. LAWRENCE

BIOGRAPH.

THE TWO PATHS.—Dawson and Nellie are dressmakers sewing in the same shop. Nellie wastes quite a few points the boss first observes her, and is angered by it. Dawson, realizing the situation, tries to help her out by every means in his power, but Nellie ignores him, but Thomas Manners is his persistent and encouraging friend. Dawson finally decides to let Nellie go, but Manners pleads for her, and finally succeeds in having a final trial. She, however, is so nervous that she is sure to fail, and the inevitable does. The manager of the establishment decides she is unfitted for the position and tells her so. Nellie leaves in disgust and goes home and tells her mother how unfair she was treated. Manners calls and learns of the occurrence and, after consoling Nellie, tells her to be ready at seven o'clock, as he will call for her and take her to a dance. Nellie does not want to go, but her mother persuades her that it will do her good. Manners is a handsome young man, and Nellie soon forgets her troubles in the pleasures of the dance. Manners is very attentive to her, and Nellie is very much pleased with him. Dawson, who has been watching Nellie, is disappointed in finding her with another man, and, after the dance, he calls on her and tells her that he loves her. Nellie tells him that she cannot love him, as she loves another man. Dawson, realizing that he has lost her, leaves in disgust. Manners calls on Nellie and tells her that he loves her, and asks her to be his wife. Nellie accepts him, and they are married. Dawson, who is still employed by the same firm, is sent to Manners' office on business, and, seeing Nellie, he realizes that he has lost the only woman he ever loved. He goes home and tells his mother that he is going to end his life. His mother begs him not to do so, but he tells her that he cannot live without Nellie. He writes a letter to Nellie telling her that he is going to commit suicide, and that he wishes her to be happy with Manners. He then takes a dose of poison and dies. Nellie receives the letter and tells Manners, who rushes to Dawson's home, but arrives too late to save him. Nellie and Manners are overcome with grief.

BIOGRAPH.

THE TWO PATHS.—Dawson and Nellie are dressmakers sewing in the same shop. Nellie wastes quite a few points the boss first observes her, and is angered by it. Dawson, realizing the situation, tries to help her out by every means in his power, but Nellie ignores him, but Thomas Manners is his persistent and encouraging friend. Dawson finally decides to let Nellie go, but Manners pleads for her, and finally succeeds in having a final trial. She, however, is so nervous that she is sure to fail, and the inevitable does. The manager of the establishment decides she is unfitted for the position and tells her so. Nellie leaves in disgust and goes home and tells her mother how unfair she was treated. Manners calls and learns of the occurrence and, after consoling Nellie, tells her to be ready at seven o'clock, as he will call for her and take her to a dance. Nellie does not want to go, but her mother persuades her that it will do her good. Manners is a handsome young man, and Nellie soon forgets her troubles in the pleasures of the dance. Manners is very attentive to her, and Nellie is very much pleased with him. Dawson, who has been watching Nellie, is disappointed in finding her with another man, and, after the dance, he calls on her and tells her that he loves her. Nellie tells him that she cannot love him, as she loves another man. Dawson, realizing that he has lost her, leaves in disgust. Manners calls on Nellie and tells her that he loves her, and asks her to be his wife. Nellie accepts him, and they are married. Dawson, who is still employed by the same firm, is sent to Manners' office on business, and, seeing Nellie, he realizes that he has lost the only woman he ever loved. He goes home and tells his mother that he is going to end his life. His mother begs him not to do so, but he tells her that he cannot live without Nellie. He writes a letter to Nellie telling her that he is going to commit suicide, and that he wishes her to be happy with Manners. He then takes a dose of poison and dies. Nellie receives the letter and tells Manners, who rushes to Dawson's home, but arrives too late to save him. Nellie and Manners are overcome with grief.

WHEN A MAN LOVES.—Mr. Bach, now a wealthy man, visits the scenes of his boyhood days in his native town and meets farmer Brown, his boyhood friend. Brown is the father of a very pretty daughter, Alice, who is the village coquette. Bach smiles with the artless little country lass, and secretly hopes to win her. Beside interesting him a load of coal is in the little village, the favored one being John Watson. John is a bit superior to the rest of the village youths, considering he sends novels and has a good line of persuasive talk with which to embellish his suit for Tessie's heart. And he is successful. Upon the eve of the solution of the writer swains, Now Tessie is of course pleased with the native lumberman, but in her smiles with the artless little country lass, put secretly hopes to win her. Tessie, however, has a load of coal captive has run and informed the other Sioux. They start in pursuit, while she hastens off to Bob and tells him her story. Bob attacks all the first Sioux, in time to grapple with the Mexican and after a struggle both fall over the cliff, but manage to hang on to a ledge. The cowboys then, after a grand ride through typical western country, come up. They throw a lasso under Bobs arm and draw him up, while the Mexican in the effort fails to the bottom of the cliff. Bob returns some to uncle Jack's ranch all is explained by the Indian girl and the picture ends with a pretty view of Bob and Gertie on their honeymoon.

AN INTRIGUE.—In Saxelli whose father had been shot for fighting against the Emperor carries her living by singing in the streets. Count de Hompain takes notice of her, and makes offers to aid him in his schemes of revenge upon Napoleon III. By his influence she attends a court ball, attracts the Emperor's notice, and by order of Eugenie, the son of the minister responsible for her father's death. She falls in love with the latter, and refuses to go on with the scheme. She is finally killed by a bullet from Favier who in his mask is fitting at the main who is his lover. It was the Emperor himself, and but for La Saxelli finding around him would have been entered his body. The piece is a careful study, and scrupulous regard to detail has been invoked.

LOVE UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—Young Harry Edgely sees one day that the large mansion next door has been let. An elderly gentleman and his daughter are seen moving in. Peeping through a hole in the wall in the garden he gets a view of the latter's face and is struck with her beauty. Climbing the wall he attracts her attention by throwing a flower at her and then a love letter and joins him. The girls father interferes with their love making and shows them a portion of the will by which he has left his fortune to his daughter only, provided that she does not marry until she is twenty-one. Harry and Patsy are not to be discouraged, and on the young lady's page to spend their time together, although frequently they have their fathers with them. Harry takes Patsy to the minister's and they get spliced. Returning to her father's house they are afraid to tell him of their marriage, but on noticing their confusion, invites Harry to stay to dinner. Then enters the dining-room and the light being turned on Harry finds his wife's uncle. Before that the two fathers know exactly all that had taken place. The girl's father had altered his will, when provided that in the event of his daughter marrying a man who loved her only for herself, his fortune was still to go to her.

KALEM.

THE BOLTED DOOR.—Elsa and Jack, both of humble means, became engaged. Learning of a chance for her lover's advancement, Elsa urges Jack, who is ambitious to make an attractive home for her, to talk to the employer and bids her goodbye for a short while. Six months go by and we find Jack still hustling but not yet in a position to make Elsa his wife. In the same time Jack visits his married sister and makes the acquaintance of her little baby girl Edith. As time goes on he loses miles of sleep for Elsa and becomes sufficiently prosperous and to name the day for their wedding and decides to act as a wedding patron of the place where she is employed. A few months later Jack's sister dies, leaving to his care little Edith, who proves a great source of wounded heart. Four years later Elsa and Jack meet as guests in the same household. The years have not been happy ones for Elsa and when she meets Jack the old love returns, but Jack, remembering she threw him over because of his lack of money, refuses to be friends and tells the case of his heart against her.

THE RUNAWAY ENGINE.—Allan Peters, just out of college, the son of a railroad president, sighs for fortune's smiles. His father's generosity suggests that as he has studied hard for several years a trip to Europe would be in order. Allan however, with his father's consent, goes to work and wants to begin at once. Further that he wants to learn the railroad business from the bottom up and asks for an opportunity to start as a brakeman. While following his vocation he meets the daughter of Silas Sharp, the contractor who is to lay a new eight kilometre-track connecting his mill and become mutually engaged and Allan endeavors on the former to get control of the necessary land. President Peters, the owners his refusal to sell and sends Allan to the scene where he is employed in an effort to secure him from doing to become a roundhouse. While the president is in bed-room he is aroused by the following message is flashed over the wire. "Homewood engine on fire mills all shipping. Send message." Allan at the station where Grace is employed as telegraph operator, the report is filled with consternation as soon learns the president's special is coming down the line flowing out in the cause he tries to find his father but failing to his offices she counts an engine uncoupled and drives it at terrific speed to the mill arriving in time to. With the wild engine comes he sight she must down her engine jumps for her life and almost the two engines to crash together. Then seeing the president's special from a head-on collision with the wild engine. The president's engineer leaps down the track, sees the situation and flings the train in a stop about opposite where Grace was grasped. The president and Hallowell rescue the unconscious lovers of the girl from the train rush to her assistance. She is safely restored to consciousness and the president gives his consent to her union with Allan. Approaching quickly the train the president realizing the situation assumes command of the engine and in her efforts to save his train quickly withdraws his engineer to his post of engagement.

LUBIN.

TAG DAY AT SILVER GULCH.—When the Rev. John Asser and his pastry daughter, Rose, arrived at Silver Gulch mining camp they were accorded a warm welcome by the miners. However, the minister and Rose were not discouraged. In the course of a few days a tent-church had been set up, but this didn't cause any falling off in attendance at the first chance subject. As the congregation didn't contribute enough, he decided to go to the congregation and began evening meetings outside of the school. Bill, one of the miners, decided to embrace religion, and was probably we think. It was determined to paint a church. A tag day was set aside when all the inhabitants would be called upon for contributions, subscribing being dispensed with as a tag after making his contribution. Bearing in mind this decision painted a sign, "Notice. We ain't goin' to have no church. Buy a tag and get plugged. The Silver Gulch Miners." Rose was much mystified because wearing a tag meant about the same as wearing a target. Her father explained it to her. Both disappointed and downcast. So on beside the first tag, tied it on pulled out his shooting irons, placed them on the table in full view and, before they knew it, the ungleaders covered with his revolvers. But the minister appeared and put a stop to Bill's game. Then he took off his coat and proceeded to give Hank the ring. Another, like Hank, of him pulled his gun. The ceremony Hank showed that he was a true sport. He and Bill sold the tags like hot cakes. If any man left the church without a tag he was quickly "persuaded" that he just couldn't live without one. Of course, Bill became the minister's son-in-law.

A MIX IN MASKS.—The Thompsons and their daughter, Nellie, had been invited to a masquerade party. The mother and father decided not to go, but had no objection to their daughter going with her friend Jack. Nellie and Jack decided to wear a Spanish costume. Just before starting for the party they came in to say goodbye to Nellie's parents. Now, Mr. Thompson loved a joke and no sooner saw the costume than he decided to play a little plan to his wife whereby they would have some fun. She agreed with great pleasure. In accordance with the plan Nellie and Jack changed of the young people's costumes. As they were about to leave the house Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were exact pictures of them after they were dressed in the Spanish costumes So, off they went to the party. When they took their seats to be seen by Jack and Nellie. Then, when Nellie was alone for a few moments her father joined her and of course she thought it was Jack. Then Jack met Nellie's mother in another room, and, of course, she thought it was Nellie. She proceeded to steal a kiss and, of course, the supposed Nellie objected. Then didn't "get very well with Jack and he started off in a huff. Here's where the quarrel. Meantime, the real Nellie was rather provoked because the supposed Jack got mad. She began to suspect that he didn't love her and all that sort of thing. Unless he telling want might have happened to him. Then she thought of the time the natural astonishment of both Jack and Nellie. Then all unmasked enjoyed a good laugh and the young folks had to make up. Of course

The editors of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD would like to hear from every exhibitor what they consider was the greatest picture they have shown during the year 1910.

They may qualify their opinions by citing the picture which received the most applause and also stating which picture seemed to create the most profound impression.

Applause alone should not be taken as the criterion of greatness, as some of the dramas of the year have been received with a silence which was equally appreciative if less demonstrative.

We would also like to hear from the exchange booking departments as to what particular film they had most recalls for. This information is not desired for to shed glory on any particular manufacturer, but to arrive at some idea as to what kind of subject is most conducive to the welfare of the business.

All letters will be held confidential unless permission is given to use the name of the writer.

LICENSED RELEASES

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 3—Waiter No. 5 (Dr.) 997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.) 998
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.) 993
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.) 998
Nov. 17—The Troublesome Baby (Com.) 492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.) 995
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.) 996
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.) 586
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.) 432
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.) 997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.) 997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.) 598
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables 416
Dec. 8—Hedged Jack, Jr. (Com.) 576
Dec. 12—The Golden Supper (Dr.) 998
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.) 998
Dec. 19—The Lesson (Dr.) 994
Dec. 22—White Roses (Dr.) 558
Dec. 25—The Benevolent Hebrew (Com.) 480
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.) 594
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts 682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.) 311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths (Dr.) 992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves (Dr.) 998

EDISON.

Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 15—Into the Jaws of Death (Dr.) 990
Nov. 16—The Stolen Claim (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker, the Doll, and the Devil (Com.) 990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.) 995
Nov. 23—Through the Clouds (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines 990
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.) 975
Dec. 2—The Unappreciated Note (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 6—The Whisking of Miss Langdon (Dr.) 595
Dec. 7—The Life of a Cowboy (Ind.) 440
Dec. 7—Amateur Night (Com.) 550
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—The Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.) 250
Dec. 13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.) 750
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.) 1000
Dec. 16—The Land Leaguers (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 20—The Police Force of New York City Scenic 995
Dec. 21—The Jokes they Played on Humptious (Com.) 990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—Fibro, the Fruit Girl (Dr.) 990
Dec. 30—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.) 990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Lady Burke (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 3—Some Goats, Sheep (Com.) 348
Jan. 6—Fire Dept. of New York City (Sc.) 1000
Jan. 6—A Western Night (Dr.) .....

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.) 378
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 22—That Popular Man (Com.) .....
Nov. 22—Hank and Hank vs. Sandalwick Mint (Com.) .....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds (Dr.) 998
Dec. 3—Uncle C. Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.) 1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.) 1000
Dec. 17—The Indistrict Messenger (Dr.) 997
Dec. 23—The Gopher Trail (Dr.) .....
Dec. 29—Hank and Hank (Com.) .....
Dec. 30—The Red Man's Revenge (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.) 1000
Dec. 31—A Gardens of the West (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 7—The Comic and the Cowboys (Com.) .....

KALEM CO.

Nov. 18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 25—The Romance of the Virgin (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 27—The Lords of the Harem (Dr.) 820
Nov. 30—Up the Hudson to Wayside Inn (Dr.) .....
Dec. 2—How Uncle Josiah Went (Dr.) .....
Dec. 7—Rescued (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—The Romance of Molly Pitcher (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 11—Sold (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.) 990
Dec. 23—The Little Scout (Dr.) 990
Dec. 25—When Lovers Part (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 30—Stingaree (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door (Dr.) 990
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine (Dr.) 990

LUBIN

Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (Dr.) 990
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Chum (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 14—The Secret Prisoner (Dr.) .....
Nov. 17—Duel in Front of Fudge (Com.) 990
Nov. 21—Cupid in the Canoe (Dr.) .....
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lost in Honey (Dr.) .....
Nov. 28—Sundown and Sunshine (Dr.) .....
Dec. 1—Spoon Sam (Com.) .....
Dec. 12—An Endless Lane (Dr.) 990
Dec. 15—The Musical Race (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—The Dead Ladies (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.) .....
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.) 980
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.) 990
Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy (Dr.) 980
Jan. 5—His Last Parade (Dr.) 990
Jan. 9—A Mix in Make (Com.) 990
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.) 935

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Sc.) 727
Nov. 19—Spanish 520
Nov. 22—Cast into the Flames (Dr.) 881
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.) 595
Nov. 25—Samson's Strength (Dr.) 519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince (Com.) 489
Nov. 29—The Hat Next Door (Com.) 722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on a Rising (Scenic) 243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.) 712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip (Com.) 273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.) 854
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.) 171
Dec. 6—The Revolt (Scenic) 943
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider (Com.) 279
Dec. 13—Mill Girls (Dr.) 677
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Bible) 965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.) 769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical) 220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.) 732
Dec. 24—The Shell Game (Com.) 279
Dec. 27—The Adventures (Dr.) 995
Dec. 27—Sunset in Venice (Scenic) 963
Jan. 3—The Artist's Fat Day (Dr.) 972
Jan. 7—The Woman Who (Com.) 945
Jan. 10—Cupid's Pranks (Com.) 758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Sardon (Sc.) 243

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.) 860
Nov. 19—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.) 142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.) 516
Nov. 26—Mirth (Com.) 420
Nov. 30—The Return of Midnight (Dr.) 624
Nov. 30—Rambles Among Castles (Scenic) 319
Dec. 7—Death Valley (Dr.) 992
Dec. 7—On the Mexican Border (Dr.) .....
Dec. 14—Scenes in Bruges (Scenic) .....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchmakers (Christmas) (Dr.) 749
Dec. 14—Scenes in Bruges (Scenic) 253
Dec. 21—The Terror of Hershey (Dr.) 676
Dec. 21—A Christmas Hour 332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.) 820
Dec. 28—Coming In. Duncanville, England .....
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair (Dr.) 978
Jan. 11—Western Arizona (Dr.) 670
Jan. 11—Wood Carving at Bruges (Ind.) 320

G. MELIES.

Nov. 16—A Mountain Wife (Dr.) 986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Wife (Dr.) 850
Nov. 24—The Convict and the Bachelor Girl (Com.) .....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.) .....
Dec. 8—Wind Goat Bear Learned (Dr.) .....
Dec. 15—Mother (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome (Dr.) 980
Dec. 29—On the Dell Grass Country (Dr.) 980
Jan. 5—The Wilderness (Dr.) 980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the 71 Ranch (Dr.) 980

PATHE.

Nov. 16—Her Lost Husband's Return (Dr.) 990
Nov. 17—In His Father's Absence (Com.) 544
Nov. 18—Tom Sawyer (Com.) 1000
Nov. 14—Hideout Negro (Com.) 550
Nov. 14—Cruelty and Kitty in Romance (Sc.) 491
Nov. 15—Bandit Bride .....
Nov. 17—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.) 980
Nov. 19—Got Rich Quick (Com.) 1000
Nov. 19—Hunting Lions in Tasmania (Scenic) 990
Nov. 21—The Executive Motor Car (Com.) 980
Nov. 21—May Goes Skating (Com.) 420
Nov. 24—The Lady Cursed (Dr.) 997
Nov. 25—Better Friendship (Com.) 980
Nov. 24—Sunshine in Paradise Park (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 26—The Bandit Bride 1000
Nov. 28—The Burning Island 541
Nov. 28—Rounding Among Ostrich Farms (Com.) 541
Nov. 28—Among the Ostrich Farms (Scenic) 541
Nov. 28—Pull Out (Sc.) 541
Nov. 28—Cutting the Mustard (Dr.) 998
Nov. 28—Carnival of Love, Princess in Tokio (Dr.) 990
Dec. 11—The Youth Still (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 2—The Misplaced Parchment (Dr.) .....
Dec. 2—Cupid's Ride (Sc.) .....
Dec. 5—Rambles in Normandy (Sc.) .....
Dec. 6—An Enemy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—The Bandit Bride (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—The Hermit's Daughter (Dr.) .....

SELIG.

Nov. 21—No Place Like Home (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—The Dad Rules (Dr.) .....
Nov. 24—The Mount Woman of Madison (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 28—The Count of 10,000 Dollars 1000
Nov. 28—The Scapegoat (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 1—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat (Dr.) .....
Dec. 5—In the Wilderness (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—Country Fair (Sc.) 1000
Dec. 19—Jack Dunn and the Circus (Mystic) 1000
Dec. 22—Operation in Pregnant (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 29—Jealousy and Treachery (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 2—The Agreement (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 5—Rainbow's Fortune (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 9—Sundown of the Past (Dr.) 1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 23—A Woman's Love (Dr.) .....
Dec. 2—Jack Dalton and Jim Sloan at Coney Island (Com.) 965
Dec. 5—The Governor's Wife (Dr.) 1004
Dec. 9—A Fair Trial Revealed (Com.) 996
Dec. 12—The Wood Gatherer Lord (Com.) 967
Dec. 15—The Naval Reserve's Honor (Dr.) 970
Dec. 16—The Love and the Maze (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—The Superintendent Motor Boat Race (Com.) .....
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.) .....
Dec. 23—The Light in the Window (Dr.) .....
Dec. 23—Love and Duty (Dr.) .....
Dec. 23—Jones and the Waif (Dr.) .....
Dec. 26—A Neighboring Rivalries (Dr.) 995
Dec. 30—The Mother Heart (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 30—Where the Waves Break (Com.) 987
Jan. 2—An Ad Is Paid to Love and War (Dr.) 970
Jan. 6—The Mystery of Mount Necklace (Dr.) .....
Jan. 6—Billy (Com.) 979
Jan. 7—The Girl Wales Jail (Dr.) 984

Among the Exhibitors

Onley, Ill.—Mr. George Sidley is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater in this city.

Greencastle, Penn.—Messrs. Phillips and Charles Sanderson are to operate a new moving picture show here.

Sioux City, Utah.—Martin Bros. of the Orpheum theater, Omaha, have leased the Auditorium here and will conduct moving pictures.

Modesto, Cal.—Mr. Swanson is making arrangements to open a moving picture and moving picture camera house in the building formerly occupied by the New Era.

Ida Grove, Iowa.—Messrs. Hall Bros. have purchased the moving picture theater in the Gaiety building here.

Pasco, Wash.—D. H. Rockwell is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Bountiful, Utah.—Mr. Hyrum Hess and Mr. Ed. H. Kinney are planning to erect a moving picture theater and operate it.

Beatrice, Neb.—Mr. Ed. Hall has purchased the moving picture machine formerly owned by Mr. Hall.

Castle, Ill.—Messrs. Smithson have purchased the moving picture theater of Mr. Schaefer in the Hynes Block.

Hynes Town.—Mr. Hynes will have opened a moving picture theater.

Wilcox Springs, Mo.—Mr. Evans formerly of Wilcox Springs, Mo., has opened a moving picture theater in Anderson, Mo.

Shenandoah, Penn.—Messrs. Hoffman and Hoffman have opened their moving picture theater.

Cleveland, O.—The moving picture theater formerly conducted by Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Vadie Assam has been opened.

New York City.—Among Vitagraphers are Commodore Blackton's New Motor Boat, Mr. Wm. Rock, Director of Publicity, Mr. Ralph Ince, Mr. Wm. Humphrey, Mr. Wm. Dunn, Mr. Wm. Shea, Mr. Wm. Ranous, Mr. Wm. Gillette, Mr. Wm. Bechtel, Mr. Wm. Kelly, Mr. Wm. Rowland, Mr. Wm. Mason, Mr. Wm. Wadsworth Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN.

THE RUMMAGE SALE—The routine opens with the maid assisting Mrs. Wealthy to don the steps with a carnival air. Arriving at the committee room of the benefit society, they find the ladies already busy at work. Mrs. Wealthy is assigned to a table, and the maid is left to wait on a group of customers. Among the latter is a young man who is attracted by the beauty of the maid. He buys a number of articles, and, after paying for them, he hands her a note. She reads it, and, after a moment's hesitation, she nods her head in the affirmative. The young man then leaves the room. Mrs. Wealthy, who has been watching the proceedings, calls the maid to her side and questions her as to the note. The maid tells her that the young man has asked her to meet him at the park gate at 8 o'clock that evening. Mrs. Wealthy tells her that she must not go, as it is not proper for her to make appointments with strangers. The maid promises to do so, but, on the first opportunity, she leaves the room and goes to the park gate. She finds that the young man has not arrived, and she waits for him. He soon appears, and they walk off arm in arm. Mrs. Wealthy, who has been watching the maid, follows them. She is astonished to see the maid walking off with the young man, and, hailing a passing cab, she jumps in and follows them. She is given a big surprise when they enter the home of the young man, for she recognizes him as her husband. She enters the house and demands an explanation. The wife of the latter explains to her that she and her husband have been married for a long time, but, owing to her husband's position, they have been compelled to keep their marriage a secret. She explains to her that she has been compelled to do this, as her husband's father has threatened to disinherit him if he should marry a poor girl. Mrs. Wealthy is overcome with grief when she learns that her husband has been deceiving her, and she leaves the house. Her husband follows her to the door and begs her to forgive him. She refuses to do so, and, calling a passing cab, she jumps in and drives away. The husband returns to the house and tells his wife that he has failed to win her forgiveness. The wife tells him that she will go to Mrs. Wealthy and plead with her. She leaves the house and goes to the home of Mrs. Wealthy. She finds the latter in a state of despair, and she tells her that she has come to plead with her to forgive her husband. She explains to her that she and her husband have been married for a long time, but that they have been compelled to keep their marriage a secret, owing to the fact that her husband's father has threatened to disinherit him if he should marry a poor girl. Mrs. Wealthy is overcome with grief when she learns that her husband has been deceiving her, and she refuses to forgive him. The wife then tells her that she has a little baby, and that she is very fond of it. She begs Mrs. Wealthy to forgive her husband, so that he may be able to see his baby. Mrs. Wealthy finally consents to do so, and the wife leaves the house and returns to her home. She tells her husband that Mrs. Wealthy has consented to forgive him, and that he may go to her home and see her. He leaves the house and goes to the home of Mrs. Wealthy. He finds her in a state of despair, and he begs her to forgive him. She refuses to do so, and, calling a passing cab, she jumps in and drives away. The husband returns to the house and tells his wife that Mrs. Wealthy has refused to forgive him. The wife tells him that she will go to Mrs. Wealthy and plead with her. She leaves the house and goes to the home of Mrs. Wealthy. She finds the latter in a state of despair, and she tells her that she has come to plead with her to forgive her husband. She explains to her that she and her husband have been married for a long time, but that they have been compelled to keep their marriage a secret, owing to the fact that her husband's father has threatened to disinherit him if he should marry a poor girl. Mrs. Wealthy is overcome with grief when she learns that her husband has been deceiving her, and she refuses to forgive him. She tells the wife low and when the young couple in the arrive at the railroad station, they find a crowd ahead of them and they are duly duped with according to the latest rules laid down for the accidental departure of bride and groom.

A year slips by and we find Tom wrapped up in business pursuits and careless of manner towards Mae. And Mae quietly grieves over his neglect.

Then a former sweetheart of Tom's, Belle Stuart, sends them an invitation to a last dance. Belle proceeds to monopolize Tom by her open disregard of poor Mae. Left all alone she sits and broods over her misfortune and as she meets the lonely gaze Claude Jones goes entertains her most pleasantly with his talk and his ability as a dancer.

Tom finally thinks of his wife and goes to whom he left her, but she has gone. He at last discovers her in the conservatory in conversation with the poet. It is his turn to feel jealous and he does so and going rudely over he compels Informs Mae that they must go home at once. Before they go, however, she invites Claude to call upon them.

Soon Claude accepts her invitation and calls, finding her alone. In the midst of their chat Tom arrives at home and orders Claude to vacate the premises at once. Tom and Mae leave them feel vanted, and it is a good one.

Tom then decides to keep close watch upon her and sets up a bell so that if will ring in his den every time the door opens. Well, it works all right, only he is kept busy rushing into the room enough to meet the maid or the postman of somebody other than Claude. He then gives up and after another interview with his wife, he secretly writes Claude a letter informing him that as he loves Mae and Mae loves him, that he, Tom will surrender all further claim upon her.

When Claude arrives he is received most cordially by Tom, who proceeds to pass out his blessings upon the pair and leaves the room. Mae is completely mystified until Claude shows her the letter and proceeds to press his suit. She takes sudden unawares, begs for time to think it all over and he goes out to purchase her some flowers.

Tom, seeing him leave, telephones to Belle and makes an appointment with her. Mae overhears him at the 'phone and breaks down completely, weeping as if her heart would break. Then Tom leaves the house.

Claude, shortly after, returns and attempts to present Mae with the flowers, but she has had enough of him already and ordering him from the house throws his bouquet after him. Tom's conscience will not permit him to keep his appointment with Belle and after wandering aimlessly about his club he returns home to find his little wife curled up in his den hugging his dressing gown, trying to forget her sorrow in slumber. Tom's heart is touched, his old love is reawakened and taking her in his arms she opens her eyes and realizing that all is well they forget all their former doubts and troubles in their present happiness.

LUX FILMS.

HOW THEY TRICKED FATHER—Jim is much in love with an old nation's daughter and thought the young lady is agreeable but her father is not, and tells Jim that he is not liberal enough to become his son-in-law. But the young people are not downhearted. The same night, when father is reading, Jim is surprised by a villainous-looking burglar, who ties him tightly to the couch and after threatening him shoots a ball out of the adjoining room by despoil it of its valuables. Hardly has he gone when a sad-looking gentleman enters and explains his mission and the gentleman dives after the burglar. The latter appears, welcomes the old man and then, asking of his wife discloses the fact that he is the husband of Jim's daughter. Jim is too much for father, and even though he discovers that he has been duped by the supposed burglar for his little deception he calls his daughter and prospective son-in-law in and falls over himself in the young man's arms, and he not only blesses the happy couple but causes him a pearl with the barrel of fame.

THE RIVAL ENGINE DRIVERS—Jim, a secret service driver by the way, is the inventor of the engine of a new kind of locomotive to the most from the railroad. His efforts is interrupted by the appearance of Jim's wife with a threat. This action has been observed by another driver who likes Jim's wife and who seeks both new men at their engines and frightens them the former out of the cabin's coal. Jim, thrown to the floor and the engine starts at a high speed. The fireman arrives and the fight between and the driver's successful. In two drivers is now alone to keep speeds and he assumes the role strangling throats. Regaining the cabin, he is once more in control. While they are demonstrating their skill the drivers' wives and the will look out together to the ground. The train approaches an open switch. A terrible collision occurs. Help is at hand and the fire is overhead when the bodies of the men are found locked in each other's arms.

NESTOR.

ELDA OF THE MOUNTAINS—Judge Stock well felt exceedingly pleased with himself. Judge Stanton's daughter Mildred had just accepted him, and the judge was not only the most influential man in the county, but likewise the wealthiest.

As for Elda Carter, the mountain girl, whom he had been seeking secretly to imagine he found Mildred would never meet her just as sweet as well. As Elda meandered her way among, Elda had followed him to the judge's house and upon seeing him embrace the fiancee demanded an explanation, which ended in her being ungently ejected by Mose Sutton.

Then Carter, father and son, had gone from to town, where Carter found Tom Blessing, lying in comfort and accumulating liquor in refreshings. Tom was a gay young fellow he found.

Elda, Tom soon discovered his charms appeal and subsequent rate on to the point that he fore appointed to meet her at the old mill. Carter and Tom beneath concealing some his bosom he hurried on his way to Elda's cabin. Finding Elda not at the appointed hour he became impatient and finally left a note for her, telling her that he would meet her at the old mill. Carter, who had followed Tom, found the note and read it, and, thinking that Elda was false, decided to punish her. Going to the mill he met Tom and, thinking him Elda, struck him down with a club. Tom, however, was not dead, but only stunned, and, recovering, he went to Elda's cabin, where he found her in a faint. Carter, who had followed him, entered the cabin and, thinking Elda was dead, fled. Tom, however, was not dead, but only stunned, and, recovering, he went to Elda's cabin, where he found her in a faint. Carter, who had followed him, entered the cabin and, thinking Elda was dead, fled.

AT CEDAR RIDGE—It was coming for on Francisco on her father's part so Dad declared that he would have none from marrying such disreputable a family and losing Frances. Dad was a man and Frances, consequently, would have her own way but Dad finally swore Miss. she had to go.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Handbook Containing Sketches and Photographs for Theatre Designers

The Decorators Supply Co

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL

The verdict of the entire was that Dad Nelson deserved to send his daughter away to school.

And so it was after Jack and Frances had made her the time of their lives they were forced to part for the present. Dad Nelson, however, was not to be outdone and he too arranged to have a good time. He and Mrs. Nelson, Jack and Frances all went to Chicago, where they had a delightful time. At New York they were met by Mr. Nelson, who had been left behind to look after the business. Then they all went to Niagara Falls, where they had a delightful time. At New York they were met by Mr. Nelson, who had been left behind to look after the business. Then they all went to Niagara Falls, where they had a delightful time.

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

THE PINKERTON MAN—[illegible] Boone [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] them, the detective locates his boss's house. Regis, who is a consumptive, recognizes the detective in the woods but avoids a scene as his wife telling her that she must be present advocate that the hostile accompanied by the discharged wife, and Rogers and Mrs. Regis had an hour of it and except it as evidence of his death. The following day, who has fallen in love with the widow, obtains for him. Rogers comes as to his house Mrs. Regis arrives, the detective goes. Mrs. Regis ask Mrs. Rogers to remain for dinner. Hidden among the trees is now known Rogers is about to score even for murdering her death stays his hand and the Pinkerton man is saved, leaving the widow with her three sons and a home.

BEAU NOT WANTED IN. Grimcot is a doctor, with a beautiful daughter Mabel, whose head he is constantly over in the village hall. Jack Zeno, the village dude, is also in love with Mabel. Mabel and Arthur Dale, the postmaster's son, are also in love, but Grimcot objects to the latter, and on one occasion he kissing and hugging Mabel, Arthur enters and takes up the cudgels and Arthur succeeds in having a husband to explain his presence in the house. Grimcot gets Arthur down and is about to administer a severe castigation when Mabel's father and Mabel's father, who is a friend of Mabel's father, who is also in love with Mabel, also has designs on her. He tries to make Mabel's father believe that Arthur is a bad man, and on one occasion he kissing and hugging Mabel, Arthur enters and takes up the cudgels and Arthur succeeds in having a husband to explain his presence in the house. Grimcot gets Arthur down and is about to administer a severe castigation when ceeding on his way. The wounded Count crawls to the house, climbs a balcony and in a fainting condition is discovered by the Governor's daughter, who assists him into the room. Footsteps are heard, and they have just time to conceal themselves as the spy and Governor enter the room. They draw the curtains, extinguish the lights, and proceed to develop the photographs. The Count, in the darkness, secures the photographs and escapes, thus thwarting the spy. War is declared between the two countries, and the Count, before leaving Russia, wishes to see the Governor's daughter. She meets him, but declares she loves her country more than she does him. He leaves disconsolately, and we next find him in the midst of a battle, where he is wounded, brought into a Russian hospital, he is tended by his sweetheart, and dies in her arms.

REVIER.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE.—George Granger, having run down a country maid with his auto, runs to her assistance happy to find her unhurt, though badly scared. The acquaintance develops into an elopement and subsequent marriage. After living two years in the happiness of their home, George is arrested on the street for a crime committed in his young days. Full of shame he sends a note to his wife telling her how unworthy he is and that he will never return. She knows nothing of his arrest, and being unable to account for his action, returns to her father's home and is forgiven. Jack, the neighbor's son, who is deeply in love with her, obtains a position as guard at the penitentiary close by. One day, while watching over a group of prisoners at work, he is overpowered and a wild dash for liberty ensues. All are recaptured but George who is followed by Jack. Mrs. Granger recognizes her fleeing husband and conceals him under the cover of a farm wagon, sending Jack on a wild goose chase up the road. Without much deliberation, she drives off and when out of sight of followers, George takes the reins and a ride is made for the Mexican border, the horses going at breakneck speed. Driving across the stream being impassible, the horses are unhitched and dodging the patrol, forced to carry their precious burdens to the other side and to safety.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS

Camden, N. J.—Mr. Abe Greenberg who controls a string of moving picture parlors throughout the country, will add another to his list. The one will be situated at 26th Broadway, which will seat about 500 patrons.

Baltimore, Md.—A handsome moving picture theater is being planned to be erected at Park avenue and Lexington street, which will run high-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

Darby, Penn.—Builders are estimating on plans for a motion picture theater to be erected on the property of Dr. Harrigan which will seat about 400 persons.

Scranton, Penn.—The Opera Amusement Company will open a new moving picture show in the Opera House here.

Passaic, N. J.—Proprietors of the new moving picture show house in Main street, estimate that the theater will be ready for business about January 1st.

Palmer, Mass.—The Building Inspector here has granted a permit to J. Sama for the erection of a moving picture theater.

Old Town, Me.—Mr. R. M. Campbell, manager of the Ellsworth Enterprise has taken a lease on the Arcade Theater here, and will convert it into a moving theater.

Rochester, N. H.—The Hartigan Block is being converted into a moving picture theater.

San Francisco, Calif.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at No. 906 North Gerrard street, which will be under the proprietorship of Mr. L. L. Bondell.

Columbus, Ohio.—The corner of Goodale and High streets is being converted into a moving picture theater.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The doors of the Crystal Theater have been thrown open to the public. All of the latest moving pictures will be projected here.

Findlay, Ohio.—Mr. W. T. Huber has purchased the New Royal Moving Picture Theater.

Portage, Wisc.—Messrs. Jidson & Evers are planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Delphos, Ohio.—H. H. Lampe is planning the opening of a new moving picture theater here.

Chicago, Ill.—B. Mark under the auspices of 207 East 31st street has opened a new moving picture theater at 3258 Lincoln avenue.

Sidney, Mobr.—Messrs. Yeager and Gruber have opened a high-class moving picture theater under the management of Mr. Ernest Bonnell.

Farmington, Ills.—Mr. Hagerman has opened the Hagerman Moving Picture Theater here.

Davenport, Iowa.—Mr. Charles Decker is planning a commodious theater to show moving pictures together here.

Holdale, Mich.—Lee Patterson's Moving Picture Theater here have opened their doors to the public.

Traverse City, Mich.—Lake Silver has established the Arcade Theater at Cheboygan and will conduct a moving picture show there.

West Hazleton, Penn.—W. Watson Lewis was in possession of the Dansmond Theater on Cedar Park, as reported last week.

Waterbury, Conn.—A new moving picture theater will soon be opened, which is known as the New Scenic. Buick street and Church street.

Doylestown, Penn.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for Doylestown. Hart Watson and Mr. Hagey are interested, as Mr. Hagey owns the building.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Spaulding Theater which is under the management of Messrs. Schwartz and Rothenberg, and the management of Messrs. Schwartz and Schwartz, will be ready for formal opening this week. The building which is one of many that has been converted into motion picture theaters of late, has been equipped with a Motiograph machine, compressor and complete booth equipment.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Riverside Theater, under the management of Mr. Henry Rinaldi, has installed for the purpose of showing moving pictures, a Motiograph machine and complete booth equipment.

Clarinda, Iowa.—J. Benjamin & Co. are about to open a high-class moving picture theater here.

Hondo, Texas.—Messrs. Vinson & Jennie have opened a high-class moving picture theater here.

New Haven, Conn.—A 1,000 seat vaudeville and moving picture theater on Dixwell avenue, between Hazelton Terrace and Dixwell avenue, will be opened by Mr. Hughes.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Henry Kraus will erect a new moving picture theater on Fond du Lac avenue.

Milwaukee, Wis.—J. Morris has secured a permit for the erection of a new motion picture theater at Howell and Lincoln avenues.

Columbia Film Co.

INDEPENDENT

We have withdrawn from the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and will therefore sell direct to the Exchanges.

TRAPPED

RELEASED DEC. 31st, 1910

A thrilling drama portraying an incident in the life of a band of moonshiners and full of action. Very strong in its interpretation. Acted and photographed perfectly, with the natural surroundings of the West. This is a picture of class and should be in the service of every Exchange. Notify us if your exchange cannot supply you with our Feature Releases.

Queen of the Prairies

RELEASED JAN. 7th, 1911

A drama of the plains depicting life in the South West in the early days—when woman, like man, was forced to contest every inch of the ground on which she stood. At a period and amid conditions which made real heroines of equal valor as the hero—a time when woman faced the hardships of the West displaying things which seem even beyond human endurance. Such a drama is our "Queen of the Prairies." In our heroine we present a woman of that period—daring, tactful, masterful—a veritable Queen and properly the soul of the Cowboy's heart. A story embodying every element of the drama—every element of the true Western life—Indians—Buffalo—cattle round up—Bucking Horses, etc.—a fact like kind which every live exhibitor wants and the public demand. A picture which will live because of its historical value.

The Columbia Film Co., 301 W. 37th St., New York

All Advertising Copy must be in hand not later than Wednesday Noon

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Dec. 12—The Rosemaye Song (Dr.)
Dec. 15—The Blinding Soul (Dr.)
Dec. 18—His Final Mistake (Dr.)
Dec. 21—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Bankrupt (Com.)
Dec. 25—Artful Kate (Dr.)
Dec. 27—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Miss Gun Takes a Vacation (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Trailmaker's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Awkward Reasoner (Dr.)
Jan. 12—Love's Lower Depths (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Renunciation (Com.)

ATLAS.

Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Avengers (Dr.)
Dec. 21—The Age of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Governor's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Stock Ride (Dr.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stock (Dr.)

CHAMPION

Nov. 28—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.) 950
Nov. 29—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.) 950
Dec. 1—Heroine of the Sea (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.) 950
Dec. 18—The Motive (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.) 950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.) 950
Jan. 11—1915's Wedding (Dr.) 950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.)
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—The Million Bid (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 24—The Cattleman's Peril (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Tragedy (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.) 445
Dec. 12—Our Dear American Cousins (Com.) 470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) 545
Dec. 19—The Masonite and Sovereigns (Dr.) 190
Dec. 26—The Lock Keeper (Dr.) 537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.) 280
Jan. 2—The Mystic Medium (Com.) 483
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.) 180
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.) 959

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Chanal Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 31—The Rainmaker (Dr.)
Jan. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)

IMP.

Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse 500
Dec. 19—The Student (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.) 995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.) 995
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.) 995
Jan. 5—Rowland (Dr.) 995
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.) 998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.) 965

LUX.

Dec. 16—How He Won (Com.) 344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.) 556
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.) 423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Power (Dr.) 492
Dec. 30—Andy Jolla's Portrait (Com.) 547
Dec. 30—The Writes a Story (Dr.) 389
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.) 498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.) 367

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
(Bison.)

Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.)
Dec. 6—A Snowy's Reward (Dr.)
Dec. 9—A Beast of Western Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.)
Dec. 20—Over the Banner's Daughter
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec. 27—Indian's Atonement 980
Jan. 3—Taming the Terror 980

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 15—The False Accusation
Dec. 17—The Mother's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists
Dec. 22—Who Were the Culprits? (Com.)
Dec. 24—Gregalissus Spoiled Foodshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Bandits 580
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls 590
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day 580

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 28—Caused Are Mercy (Dr.)
Nov. 28—Who Stole a Motor (Dr.)
Dec. 7—The Tell-Tale Portrait
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken (Dr.)
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner

Dec. 28—Grandfather's Pipe 580
Dec. 28—Dreams of the Engine Driver 590

NESTOR.

Nov. 16—The Rancheman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov. 23—A Deed to Believe 1000
Nov. 30—Valley Trails (Dr.)
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Dog Pirates (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 28—Ella of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 1—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Dispatch (Dr.)
Dec. 8—Beauty Not Wanted (Com.)
Dec. 8—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Dec. 10—The Deserted Amazing (Com.)
Dec. 10—A Lip to Husbands (Com.)
Jan. 14—Monte Cristo (Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Dec. 3—When Women Wills (Dr.)
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.)
Dec. 17—The Time Dark Lane
Dec. 24—Nightcap (Com.)
Dec. 31—A Sacrifice and Then (Dr.) 980

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute
Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.) 950
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.)

SOLAX COMPANY.

Dec. 16—Two Sisters
Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan. 6—Nightcap (Com.)
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 16—The Millionaire Miser (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 20—Looking Forward (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 25—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway 1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 30—The Diamond Thief (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers (Com.) 1000

YANKEE.

Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle John (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Galva, Ill.—L. G. Hutchinson is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Yellow Springs, Ohio.—Mr. Johnson has leased the Hilton building and will open a new moving picture theater here.

Longmont, Colo.—C. D. Chandler has purchased the Isis Theater here.

Columbia, S. C.—Dr. Fred P. Ellis has leased the Lyric Theater here and is now in charge.

Dayton, Ohio.—Stubert Brothers have decided to erect a million dollar theater here next spring.

San Diego, Cal.—John Fox Speckles will erect a large theater at the corner of D and First streets.

Exeter, Neb.—Hieberger & Backes have purchased the Soxine Yates moving picture theater here.

Jamestown, N. Dak.—The Orpheum Theater here, owned by W. W. Browne, was destroyed by fire.

Milwaukee, Wis.—O. Brown has completed arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Eleventh avenue.

Springfield, Mo.—A new moving picture theater is to be opened in the Second Commercial street. It is known as the Princess.

Aurora, Ill.—Frank Thielen has sold the Palace Moving Picture Theater here to Mr. Harpole.

Creighton, Nebr.—Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McDonald have opened the Vaudette Moving Picture Theater.

Springfield, Mass.—Joseph LaBroad has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new moving picture theater for Samuel H. Lyons.

St. Louis, Mo.—August A. Busch is planning the erection of a $50,000 moving picture theater at Vernedale and Virginia avenue.

Hancock, Mich.—W. H. Mason is having plans drawn for the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Stockton, Cal.—W. J. Carey and R. Musselman have opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Bell.

Bevier, Mo.—Ed. Wilson and Ray Brammer have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Monroe City, Mo.—R. A. Kirby has decided to open a new moving picture theater in Hannibal.

Centreville, Iowa.—O. E. Dickeson has purchased the Star Theater here from G. E. Morrow.

Lead, S. Dak.—C. S. Proteros and Frank Rainey have sold their interest in the Iris Theater here to O. Pappas.

Fort Scott, Kans.—Sheriff P. C. Hesser has purchased the Vaudette Moving Picture Theater here and will soon take possession.

Montgomery, Ind.—Wilkey & Bingham have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Auburn, Nebr.—S. W. Parmele and W. L. Rousfield have purchased the Ideal Theater here from Weckbach & Bennett.

Caney, Kans.—Russell Mahan has purchased the Elks Theater here.

Tiffin, Ohio.—W. L. Lonsberger has purchased the Lyric Theater here from Bristol & Rubber.

Dewitt, Nebr.—William Clark has sold his moving picture show here to M. Eddy.

Moline, Ill.—I. S. Cleaveland and W. J. Talty and F. L. Stanley have opened a moving picture theater here in the Masonic Temple.

Malvern, Iowa.—C. A. Platt has purchased the Midwest Electric Theater from E. C. Grasser.

Maquoketa, Iowa.—C. G. Roberts has sold the Pastime Theater here to Peter Broderson and Clyde Waverly.

Maquoketa, Iowa.—Prof. Hammel has bought the interest of the Cooper Jr., in the Lyric Moving Picture Theater here.

Osceola, Iowa.—L. J. Hopper, of Cedfax, has purchased the Majestic Moving Picture Theater here.

Portland, Ore.—The Coos Amusement Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500. The incorporators are F. L. Cooper, Katie Cooper and H. E. Schlesinger.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Edward A. Westcott has purchased the Bijou Theater here.

Reading, Pa.—Jacob Zerr has opened a new moving picture theater at 819 Penn street. It is known as the Crescent.

Marsilles, Ill.—E. F. Milburn has purchased the moving picture show on Main street and will call it the Ruby Place.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, January 2.

American—The Square and the Man (Dr.)
American—The Gay Widow's Visitors (Com.)
Eclair—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)..485
Eclair—The Haunted Marriage (Com.)..... 485
Imp—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)..... 995
Yankee—Mrs. Danver's Divorce

Tuesday, January 3.

Bison—(Title not given)
Powers—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Powers—Beauty Not Wanted (Com.)
Thanhouser—The Pasha's Daughter (Dr.)....1000

Wednesday, January 4.

Ambrosio—(Title not given)
Artigo—A Mix Up (Dr.)
Champion—Days of the Early West (Dr.)

Thursday, January 5.

American—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Imp—Rowland (Dr.)
Italia—(Title not given)

Friday, January 6.

Bison—(Title not given)
Lux—How He Won Father (Com.)..... 498
Lux—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)..... 367
Solax—The Nightcap (Com.)
Solax—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)

Saturday, January 7.

Columbia—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)
Great Northern—The Red Light (Dr.)
Italia—(Title not given)
Powers—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Reliance—(Title not given)

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 2.

Biograph—The Two Paths (Dr.) 992
Lubin—Art and Nature 959
Pathe—The Misplaced Petticoat (Dr.)
Pathe—Days Gone By Selig—The Argonauts (Dr.) 1000

Tuesday, January 3.

Edison—In the Days of Chivalry (Dr.)
Essanay—Aunt Jim's Spanish Lover (Dr.)....1000
Gaumont—The Artist's Pay Day (Dr.) 972
Vitagraph—All Is Fair in Love and War (Dr.) 973

Wednesday, January 4.

Edison—Sleep, Gentle Sleep (Com.)
Kalem—The Belted Bear (Dr.) 975
Pathe—The Cowboy Sheriff (Dr.)
Urban—A Lack of Hair (Dr.) 978

Thursday, January 5.

Biograph—When a Man Loves (Dr.) 998
Lubin—His Two Mothers 396
Lubin—A Mix in Masks (Com.) 990
Melies—The Chimney Sweep (Dr.) 980
Selig—Ramona's Father (Dr.) 1000

Friday, January 6.

Edison—Fire Dept. of New York City (Sc.)..
Edison—Mr. Jarr (Com.)
Pathe—An Intrigue (Dr.)
Kalem—The Runaway Engine (Dr.) 955
Vitagraph—The Misses Finch and Their Nephew. Bills (Com.) 979

Saturday, January 7.

Essanay—The Count and the Cowboys (Com.)..1000
Gaumont—The Woman Wills (Com.) 945
Pathe—Love Under Difficulties (Com.)
Pathe—The Passing of Count Falsted (Sc.)....
Vitagraph—The Old Water Jar (Dr.) 984

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.
2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW YEAR'S BARGAINS FOR EXCHANGES

LUX AMBROSIAS RALEIGH-ROBERTS
Italia CONES - Warwick

NEW FILM

Never Been Run

4c. per foot. Posters with some

WRITE FOR LISTS — QUICK

IMPORTER
care of M. P. World

AN INJUNCTION

should be served on manufacturers of "mucilage" film cement. EXHIBITORS AND OPERATORS: It will not be necessary for you to serve an injunction if you patch your films with Bull Dog Film Cement (the best N. I. film cement ever made).

Patches made with Bull Dog Cement never come apart. It does not thicken or deteriorate, no matter how long it stands.

Licensed Exhibitors: If your exchange will not supply you, send us $1.00 for 6 bottles of N. I. cement, prepaid.

Independent Exhibitors: We will send you 5 bottles inflammable and 1 bottle N. I. at the same price.

MANUFACTURED ONLY BY ONE DROP OIL CO.
4059 N. 47th Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

5c Show Souvenirs

IMPORTED CHINAWARE, Per 100	$3.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE, Per 100	5.00
TRICK MATCH BOX, Per Gross	.75
1911 AERIAL PLANS, Latest Novelty, Per Gro.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES, Per Gross	.75
JAPANESE TURTLE IN GLASS BOX, Per Gro.	.90
FANCY COLORED RETURN BALLS, Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR, Assrtd. Colors, Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY, Per Gro.	1.50
FRENCH LIP AIR WHISTLES, Per Gross	1.75
JAPANESE LUNCH TRAYS, Per 100	1.50
IMPORTED NOISE MAKERS, Per Gross	2.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS, Per Gross	1.25

Terms Cash Personal Checks must be Certified

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
641 and 643 Woodland Ave. Cleveland, Ohio

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
Cosmos Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue. NEW YORK CITY

PAT. APPLD FOR INDESTRUCTIBLE

Machines Overhauled
Improved Stars, Cams, Etc.
L. W. TAVIZZI
1012 N. Ashland Avenue
Chicago, Ill.

MANUFACTURERS---NOTICE!

I am now prepared to do special work on experimental, toy and other machines.
Guaranteed work at my own prices.
Interest work a specialty.
FRED. W. HOCHSTETTER
2726 W. Division St., Chicago, Ill.

LARGE, BEAUTIFUL ELECTRIC SIGN

(automatic) only used one month. In perfect condition. Cost $350. Will refuse no reasonable offer.
L. B. care Moving Picture World.

EXCHANGES!

Save time and money by having your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hochstetter process. Endorsed and recommended by leading exchanges.

We are now prepared to install renovating plants to exchanges at very reasonable rates.

Specimen work done at our plant at 60 cents a reel. Agents wanted.
Ortho Film Co., 2726 W. Division St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

DISSOLVING ERK-O-SCOPE A PERFECT STEREOPTICON

Has been used for two years by the most successful Moving Picture Theatres in the country.

It gives a brilliant and steady picture and is constructed on a scientific principle. Each glass slide is kept between heated surfaces, thus preventing any cracking. Any size slide can be used.

Price Complete with Rheostats, $95.00

We make other Lanterns, Lenses, from $30.00 up.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL COMPANY, 604 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.
Moving Picture Theatre Supplies

Handbook of Motion Picture Projection
By F. H. Richardson
Cloth, bound. $1.00. Postage free.

Send in Your Order Now for Managers' and Operators'

HANDBOOK

Price, $1.50, Postage Prepaid

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23d Street N. Y. CITY

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

(Chas. K. Harris, Publisher)

"Don't Give Me Diamonds"

all I want is a good Song Slide Service. We've got it, and you can get it, for the ridiculously low rate of

25c. a Set Per Week

Absolutely no charge made for time lost in transportation. Our method of shipping your week's supply in one consignment, should appeal to you for various reasons. Write and we'll tell you.

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
6th Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn Street Dept. I CHICAGO, ILL.

LUCIEN PRÉVOST

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Formerly Chief Designer of Pathé Frères

OFFICE ADDRESS 54 Rue Philippe de Gerard, Paris
WORKS : : 25 Bd de la Chapelle, Paris

Cameras
Perforating and Printing Machines (NEW PATTERNS)
Cleaning, Measuring and Joining Machines

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 Oxford

Ornamental :: Indestructible
Fire Resisting

THEATRE AND STAGE FRONTS
ARTISTIC CEILINGS

Designs Suitable to Any Building. Blue Prints, Suggestions and Estimates Free. Ask for Our Design Book M.

The Kanneberg Roofing and Ceiling Company, CANTON OHIO

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Parlor, first-class condition, doing a good business, very moderate expenses. Pennsylvania town of 8,000, about midway between Harrisburg and Williamsport. Fine opportunity. Address, Code, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 259. Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE OR FOR RENT—First-class Moving Picture House, seats 400, on the main street Connecticut town of 15,000. All ready for business. Price low. Good reason. PAUL RUSSO, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE—Fully equipped Vaudeville and Moving Picture Theater. Own electric light plant, inclined floor, 250 seats, long lease, wet city 70,000. Good reason. $1,800 for quick sale. Address OBA G. FAUCETT, General Delivery, Toledo, Ohio.

FOR SALE—Best ground floor Opera House in best live thousand town in Wisconsin. Moving pictures every night. No opposition. WM. L. JOHNSON, General Delivery, Green Bay, Wis.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY Moving picture operator and repair man; five years experience. Strictly sober and reliable. Address, HARRY APFELT, Au Sable, Mich.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Powers No. 5, like new. Supplies, repairing. THE R. CO., 536 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

FOR SALE—425 Folding Chairs, only been used three months, good as new, suitable for Moving Picture Halls. Best offer over $300 takes them. Address ROBERT MOHR, Bridgeton, N. J.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Position open for good Director, capable and experienced. Address ARTISTIC, care Moving Picture World.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—Address of Francis A. Powers, Director, formerly of Imp Company. Write quick, you may learn something to your advantage. Address Moving Picture World.

CHARLES E. FEIN announces that he has taken the management of the Penn Theater, Pennsylvania and Liberty Avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y.

START THE NEW YEAR
by Subscribing to
The MOVING PICTURE WORLD
$2.00 PER YEAR $2.00

"SILVERLIGHT"
ALUMINUM MOTION PICTURE CURTAIN
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Economy, Flexibility, Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular.
RALPH J. GOLSEN SUPPLY CO. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

ADVERTISING : SLIDES
ANNOUNCEMENT
Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street Chicago

More Money Every Month
You are in the theatre business to make all you can out of it—you are interested in anything that means larger profits. Our plan is just now getting money from home. Brings you a check every month, makes your theatre more popular and better patronized, gives you a better standing with the other business men in your town.
NO COST TO YOU
That's the beauty of it. You don't pay anything—don't increase your cost in any way—don't have to make a single change in your theatre, time, system, operation or anything else.
Hundreds of theatre owners are getting our checks every month—making more money than they could without our plan.
You need no one word on Paste this coupon on a postal card
mail it to us today
T. R. WOODBURN & CO
611 First National Bank Building Chicago
Name .....
Name of Theatre .....
Town ..... State .....

Moving Picture Supplies
Tickets, roll of 2,000 . $ .16
Bio Carbons 6x5-8 per 100 2.15
Electra Carbons 6x5-8 per 100 2.10
Announcement Slides, Col. .25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders .75
Imported Condensers . . .75
Rewinders Complete . . 3.50
Send for Descriptive Catalogue
American Moving Picture Supply Company
110 Fourth Ave. - New York City

United States Film Brokers and Importers
41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.
The largest dealers in first and second hand Moving Picture and Stereopticon Films in the United States.
SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records
EDISON and POWER'S MACHINE like new
All goods shipped subject to examination and part or whole returned at our expense if not entirely satisfactory.
Complete lists sent free upon request

FILMS FOR RENT
New Films High Class Service
The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It
Write Today for Terms
EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.
For Sale by Dealers.
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors
5,000 . . . . $1.25 20,000 . . . . $4.00 50,000 . . . . $7.50
10,000 . . . . $2.50 25,000 . . . . $5.50 100,000 . . . . $10.00
Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs Also seating for Outdoor Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture-show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester, Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS (V), Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one film Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 108 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

We have sold the Exclusive Rights for every State in the Union except Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi

"THE ONLY WESTERN FEATURE FILMS WORTH WHILE"

Testimonial Letters From Delighted Exhibitors Everywhere

"The Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration"

Held at Cheyenne, Wyoming
Reviewed and Participated in by Col. THEODORE ROOSEVELT —HAVE PROVEN THE—
BIG FEATURE FILM SENSATION OF PRESENT SEASON

Arrangements for Our Next Year's Feature Films are now engaging our attention and we wish to

QUICKLY DISPOSE OF THE STATE RIGHTS listed above, and will make you an acceptable price upon receipt of your wire or letter

DON'T MISS THIS LAST OPPORTUNITY

SPECIAL NOTICE

EXHIBITORS:—If you have not yet run this Great Money Getting Show in your Theatre, drop us a Card and we'll see

THAT YOU GET IT AT ONCE

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO

WE THE

EXTENDS BEST WISHES AND GREETINGS FOR A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

FILM CO UNITED

Independent Film Renters

Buying Output Sales Company

UNITED FILM COMPANY

ONE FIRST STREET
PHONES NINE EIGHT NINE

TROY, N. Y.

JUST HATCHED OUT

(Patent applied for)

Invaluable to Motion Picture Managers

The "TYPO-PAD"

For Displaying Advertisements, Announcements, Etc.

Make your own slides on the "TYPO-PAD," by the use of a typewriter, at the amazingly low cost of 2 cents each.

Write for free Sample and information

The AMERICAN TYPO-PAD COMPANY
RALEIGH, N. C.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES twothirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. HALLBERG 36 East 23d St. New York City

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhouser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange.

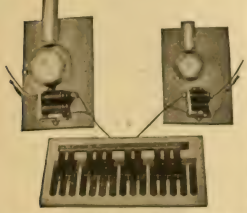
Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats	GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices	The Best in Seats

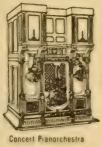
GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses—play from a keyboard as a solo instrument or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, supports and keyboards, $54.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments



Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert Rolled from solid leather, and will not stretch, shrink or break. Made in all sizes. Write for catalogue.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th. NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 42d (but R'way and 8th Ave.) CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave., PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut, ST. LOUIS, 932 Pine, CLEVELAND, 306 Prospect Ave. S. E., COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

UNIFORMS

FOR

USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.

We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready

The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

UNIFORMS AND CAPS

FOR

Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

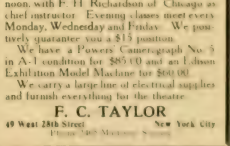
James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs — JUST OUT

Be My Sweetheart
I Get So Lonesome for You
I'm a Married Man
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place
The Vale of Dreams
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine
Dougherty.
In My Dreams of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From the Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.
Gee-Whiz, Sweety, I'm Stuck on You.
Cowboy.
That's When Life's One Grand Sweet Song.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City



Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameregraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything but the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 2405 Madison S.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Parts, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

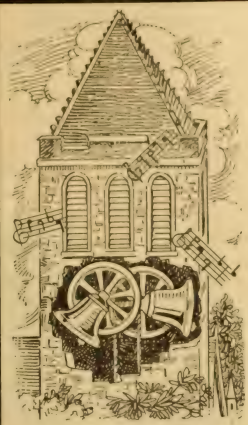
Moving Picture Pianists

Are you working for [illegible] Send for [illegible] Music [illegible] for [illegible]

THREE "E" EVENTS

A [illegible] pianist [illegible] pianists [illegible] $5.00.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1303 Sedgwick St. CHICAGO, ILL.



HOW THEY SOUND

OUR

Cathedral Chimes

are the finest Imitation of Church Bells in the World and are used in all the leading theatres.

The price of the 4-tube outfit Complete, as shown in cut, is $22.50

We will send anywhere on ten days' trial upon receipt of $2 to guarantee express charges.

We also have other chime outfits as follows: The one-tube set at $7:50; two-tube set, $12.50; three-tube set, $17.50; five-tube set, $27.50, any of which we will send out on same terms as above.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

HOW THEY LOOK

NOTE

With this set you can furnish sound effects for any picture in which a bell is used, from a door bell to church chimes.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theatres. It is very essential that the reproduction and natural effects be of the kind that can be depended upon. We have given practical study to overcome the defects that will arise in the exercise and handling of the picture. We also manufacture Thunder, Telephone Bells, Automobiles, Drums and Whistles.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Snare Drum 4 Snare Shell 3x14 $10.00 4 Snare Shell 3x15

Send Magic Knockout or Wonder in two-toned chamois tan Separation Angora on Snares. Gut Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial.

F. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F CLEVELAND, OHIO

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS

908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

Managers' and Operators' Handbook

.... BY ....

F. H. RICHARDSON

Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See?	20 ft.
Hand Colored - -	$3.00
Same Black and White) - -	2.00
Just a moment, Show only half over, 15 ft. Hand Colored -	2.00
(Same Black and White) -	1.50
Those who have seen the entire performance will kindly pass out, 20 ft. Hand Colored - -	3.00
(Same Black and White -	2.00
New Pictures every day, 10 ft. Hand Colored - - -	1.50
(Same Black and White) -	1.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order. Send us an order.

Your money back if you say so.

The F. A. Film Cement

IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion, is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.

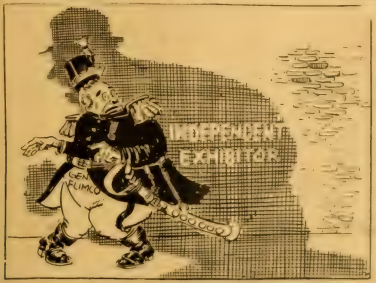
Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle - - - 25 cents

Six bottles by express - - $1.00

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO



The haunting shadow which is getting Gen. Flimco's goat is YOU.

Mr. Independent Exhibitor,—YOU and your determined stand against rotten "royalties" and fake protection-money. Now that you know your power, make the most of it. Wipe the general off the map, trade wherever you blamed please. Dare me to give you the best films and the best service in the world!

CARL LAEMMLE, President
Headquarters, 196, 198 Lake Street, CHICAGO

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc

was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand—gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2/3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make [illegible] Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Immediate Low Prices — Best Work — DON'T DELAY but write today.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

SEND IN YOUR ORDER NOW FOR MANAGERS' AND OPERATORS' HAND BOOK

Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

OBEY THE LAW

BUT, do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use Water and

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE
OZONE

[illegible] HYPOZONE

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,
2 Rector Street N. Y. CITY

The Mirror Screen IS THE Winner!

The Moving Picture Industry is on a solid basis; it is no longer a fad or a passing fancy. The "Soap Box" days of the picture theatres are past, and the manager that shows the best picture "wins out."
ARE YOU WINNING OUT?

The Mirror Screen Turns the Picture Theatre Into a Winner Every Time

Mr. W. W. Smith, proprietor and manager of the "Grand Theatre", Springfield, Mo., states that the great popularity of his theatre is due to the wonderful pictures he is able to show on his Mirror Screen.

Some of the "new releases" of Mirror Screens in the East:

Varieties Theatres, Third Avenue, New York City.
Dreamland Theatre, Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Amusement Theatre, Market Street, Newark, N. J.
Irving Theatre, Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Proctor's Bijou Dream, Newark, N. J.
Keystone Theatre, Summit Avenue, Hoboken, N. J.
Pastime Theatre, Easton, Pa.

SPECIAL NOTICE. Mr. Edward M. Henle has just purchased a large Mirror Screen for his new $10,000 Theatre Beautiful at Muscatine, Iowa, which opens January 1, 1913.

TAKE THIS TIP:—GET WISE BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR DOES

Motion Picture Screen Company

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

HARRY F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307—160 Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
358 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

F. B. BLOOMFIELD, Eastern Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building
DAYTON, OHIO

The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

IS THE

INDEPENDENT MARKET CONTROLLED BY A TRUST

too?

Ask your exchange for a "Revier Film" and if he can't supply it, ask him why?

Don't be bamboozled by the cry of independence and business freedom. If you are going to be independent, do it right, and demand Revier Films.

Not Sold Through Any Trust But Direct to Exchanges

The "Revier Co." has no affiliations nor secret agreements with any other manufacturer.

Competition is the Life of Trade

Trusts and combinations stifle competition.

Revier Films Are Independent

We are not afraid of competition on quality—that's the reason we are fighting for an open market. We want our films bought solely because of their quality.

We want every independent exhibitor to demand a "Revier Film" from their exchange. Take for instance our release of Jan. 4th, "For better or for Worse." Tell your exchange you "must" have this film, there is no earthly reason why he can't give it to you unless he is taking orders from "Trust No. 2."

Insist on this film and judge for yourself whether our claims of quality are honest or not.

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JAN. 4th

"For Better or for Worse"

Length approx. 950 ft.

A POWERFUL DRAMA

Showing

An Automobile Accident
The State Penitentary of Utah
Street Scenes of Salt Lake City
Exciting, reckless driving
State police searching with motor boat
Horses and riders swimming dangerous river
Magnificent natural scenery throughout

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11th

"The Goose Creek Claim"

Length approx. 950 ft.

A story of absorbing interest dealing with the rough and rugged miners as found in the West.

Beautiful 50 Colored Lithos

sold exclusively by

A. J. CLAPHAM

12 East 15th Street New York City

SOLD DIRECT TO EXCHANGES ONLY

Note:—My weekly next letter called "The Searchlight" throws light into dark corners, if you want to be posted on what's going on, send your name. It's free. A. J. CLAPHAM

THE
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

Powers Picture Plays

"THE BEST MADE"

Tuesday Split Reel for January 10

The District Attorney

A Comedy Drama

Full of wonders. Showing how a learned man decided which of two suitors deserved his daughter. Full of scenes that will tickle your audience.

2 on 1

A Tip To Husbands

A Comedy

The usual "Powers" kind, that make your audience "howl." This is the best we have ever made.

The scenes are novel and new.

THIS SPLIT MEANS PLEASED PATRONS

Saturday Feature, January 14th, 1911

MONTE CRISTO

ALEXANDER DUMAS' GREATEST NOVEL

The great feature we have been advising you to book in advance. Have you done it? If not, don't let your Exchange man have any peace of mind until he gives you the Date you can have it. Everyone Knows the Story!

Feature this "Powers" and watch your receipts triple!

209 LOBBY FRAMES SOLD LAST WEEK. HAVE YOU ONE?

Be sure and get our Complimentary Calendar, FREE! Like our Pictures, it's a "beaut!"

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

Vol. 8, No. 2 January 14, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

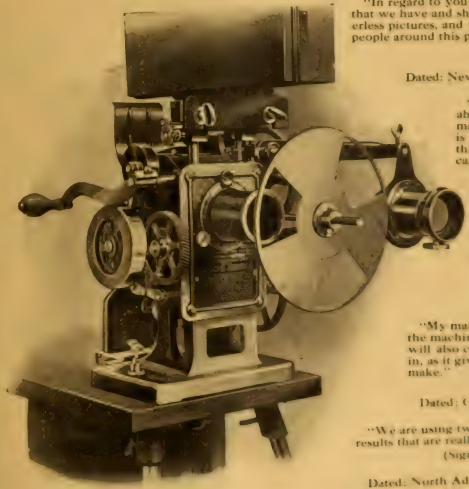
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

THE PERFECT MOTION PICTURE MACHINE



"In regard to your Power's No. 6 machine, can frankly say that we have and show the best, clearest and absolutely flickerless pictures, and that is more than any other picture house people around this part of the city can say."

(Signed) GUS. A. MILLER,
Mgr. & Prop. Lenox Theater.

Dated: New York, Dec. 22, 1910.

"I assure you that I am sincere in what I say about this No. 6, as it certainly has all other makes cheated to death in its projection and is absolutely noiseless and flickerless. I think it will wear longer, if properly taken care of, than any other machine."

(Signed) F. E. WHITMER,
Vaudette Theater.

Dated: Springfield, Ill., Dec. 21, 1910.

"I have used your No. 6 for the past six months and consider it the GREATEST machine on the market."

(Signed) H. LING,
Mgr. Ling & Ling Amusement Co.

Dated: Paullina, Ia., Dec. 21, 1910.

"My manager has two houses and he has changed the machine in his first house to a Power's, and he will also change to it soon in the one I am operating in, as it gives much better satisfaction than any other make."

(Signed) HARRY C. McADAMS, 6800 Woodlawn Avenue.

Dated: Chicago, Ill., Dec. 16, 1910.

"We are using two of your No. 6 heads and they are giving results that are really immense."

(Signed) B. M. TAYLOR, Lessee-Manager,
New Richmond Theater.

Dated: North Adams, Mass., Dec. 12, 1910.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE G DESCRIBING IT

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 Nassau Street New York, N. Y.

For thirteen years the leading manufacturers of motion picture machines

"The Vote That Counted," 1911's Best Reel, Out Friday, the 13th!

2-4-U

and GOOD ONES, TOO!

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, JAN. 17th

The Doings of a Deluded Dude!

BERTIE'S BRAINSTORM

was funny to see and you'll roar when it reaches your screen. Bertie was a foolish young fop (but then all fops are fools!) and the things he did to prove himself a wise man are just too ludicrous for anything! It all began in a surreptitious peep at a note addressed to his lady-love —a note which contains some slighting remarks about Bertie's rival—but which Bertie thinks are intended for himself. For Bertie was not only a fool, but a meddling one. He deserved his brainstorm! Why, the picture shows, along with the magnificent mess into which it got him. No. 177, Code Word, Storm.

Scene from "BERTIE'S BRAINSTORM"

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, JAN. 20th

Thanhouser HAD to "Classic" It!

The Old Curiosity Shop

By CHARLES DICKENS

The announcing of this for release will come as good news to every exhibitor who correctly estimates the popularity of Dickens' works. The Thanhouser producers have long had designs on the tale and just the other day, when conditions were best, they made it into a splendid moving picture. They waited until the best players in both Thanhouser acting companies were available, together with the best costumes and the best settings—in short they utilized the best of everything at the best time. The result will be appreciated by every lover of Dickens, every true admirer who wants the true Dickens Spirit in play and picture as well as story. No. 178. Code Word, Shop.

Is your exchange giving you "variety" or "The Old Curiosity Shop," "The Vote That Counted," and THE OTHER GREAT FRIDAY THANHOUSER RELEASES?

Scene from "THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP"

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) complete. Goes to you for $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's sake address ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

2-4-U

and GOOD ONES, TOO!

"The Vote That Counted," Sensation of Season, Out Friday, the 13th!

Resolved and Resolute

¶ That resolution you made to start the New Year with Independent Service was a good one, and that it was carried out by hundreds of Exhibitors is proven by the fact that our increase in orders for next week's deliveries is the largest weekly increase in the history of our Company. That every week, excepting two, since June 16th, 1910, has shown a weekly increase, proves conclusively that the public emphatically and resolutely demand our goods. We have doubled our total sales twice since last June.

If you haven't joined this happy, prosperous throng, resolve to do it today. Write us what class of Service you need and we shall connect you with an Exchange that can give you

OUR PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY
CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, January 10th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects

ALABAMA.
Dixie Film Co., 503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.
California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 514 South Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

CANADA.
Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

COLORADO.
W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.
Co-operative Film Exchange, Barclay Block, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 426 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.
Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.
Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 167 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 48 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 105 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA
Central Film Service Co., 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.
Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.
Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MARYLAND.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS
Boston Film Rental Co., 695 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MICHIGAN.
Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MINNESOTA.
Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MISSOURI
Ryan Film and Amusement Co., 1220 Grand Ave., Kansas city.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas city.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Laemmle Film Service, 1547 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE
Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
United Film Co., 1 Floyd St., Buffalo.
Victor Film Service, 49 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.
Empire Film Exchange, 106 East 14th St., City.
Grand Eastern Film Exchange, 23 East 14th St., city.
Hudson Film Exchange, 126 East 14th St., city.
Peerless Film Exchange, 81 Fifth Ave., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 East 14th Ave., City.

OHIO.
Capital Film Service Co., 422 North High St., Columbus.
Cincinnati Projecting Film Co., 109 Arcade Bldg., Cincinnati.
Cincinnati Film Exchange, 109 Arcade Bldg., Cincinnati.
Empire Film Exchange, 2nd Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Bessie Sts., Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA
United Motion Pictures Co., 113 Grand Ave., Oklahoma City.

OREGON
Inland Film Exchange, Selling Bldg., Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA
Empire Film Exchange, 126 South 4th St., Philadelphia.
Penn Film Exchange, 421 Penn Ave., Pittsburg.
Pennsylvania Film and Exhibitors Co., 44 North 10th St., Philadelphia.
Pittsburg Film Exchange, 421 Penn Ave., Pittsburg.

TEXAS.
Texas Film Exchange, 111 Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH.
Co-operative Film Exchange, 326 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON
Pacific Film Exchange, Colman Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN
Western Film Exchange, 409 Mitchell Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

He's An "Imp!"

She's An "Imp!"

Remember, Everybody!

The first "Imp" film with the popular "Little Mary" as leading lady, appears Monday, January 9th, and is entitled "Their First Misunderstanding." It is the first of a series of "Little Mary Imps" which you simply must have—every blessed one. The fact that the "Imp" is spending money like water to produce the best possible films does not do you an earthly bit of good unless you get "Imp" films. Get two a week or go to an exchange which will supply what you ask for! Remember!

Three More Imps!

On Monday, January 16th, we release "MELODY," one of our most excellent efforts. Make sure you receive it! Thursday, January 19th we release a split reel, the first half is "HIS FIRST PATIENT," a corking good doctor story. The second half is "THE REV. GOODLEIGH'S COURTSHIP," a howling comedy. Every subject named in this advertisement is high class and worthy of the name "Imp." If you don't get them all, start something!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st. St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

IT WOULD INTEREST YOU to visit my demonstrating room where I will gladly show you on a Mirror Screen the operation of picture machines for home or professional use.

Edison Projecting Kinetoscope

WITH OUTSIDE SHUTTER

THE MOST PERFECT MACHINE ON THE MARKET TO-DAY

ALL PARTS ON HAND

EXPERT REPAIR DEPARTMENT

Opaque and Combination Transparent and Opaque Post Card Projectors.

Lecturers' Wants Receive Special Attention.

HARRY A. MACKIE 853 Broadway, cor. 14th Street, New York.

EDEN MUSEE

First Public Exhibition in New York

KINEMACOLOR

(Moving Pictures in Nature's own colors)

Every Day at 3 to 4 and 9 to 10 P. M.

EDEN MUSEE

55 West 23rd Street NEW YORK CITY

THE BIO ARC SCREEN

Is the Greatest Convenience Ever Devised for the Operator.

It enables him to see at all times exactly what is going on in the arc without "squinting" through a peep-hole or straining his eyes.

You must see it to appreciate it.

During the past two months we have sold hundreds of "BIO" Arc Screens on the "money-back-if-you-want-it" plan---and not a single call for the money.

What better evidence could we give that every operator who sees it thinks it worth the money?

Send us a dollar today on suspicion.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT COMPANY

Largest Importers of Flame Arc Lamps and Carbons in America.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York. 58 Plymouth Court, Chicago. 15th and Pine Streets, St. Louis.
195 Fremont Street, San Francisco. 114 Huron Street, Milwaukee. 309 Carson Street, Pittsburg

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

Messrs. Exhibitors and Exchanges

BEGIN RIGHT NOW

AT THE FIRST OF THE YEAR AND INCLUDE THE LUX RELEASE IN YOUR WEEKLY PROGRAM BECAUSE

Lux Films are Leaders in Europe as well as in America

AND YOU WANT THE BEST EVERY WEEK

LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

GET LUX

Release, Friday, January 13th, 1911

Bill as a Jockey

Comedy — 465 Feet

That Is My Name

Comedy — 498 Feet

Bill, the little Lux comedian, excels himself in this screaming farce. If you want your audiences to laugh, get this without fail.

The ease with which a number of people bearing the same name can be found when there is a legacy involved, and the chase which ends the other half of this comedy reel tells its own story in an extremely interesting manner.

FILMS

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN

The Red Light

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 7)

A superb military drama from the time of the Russo-Japanese war. Exciting and thrilling scenes throughout. Photographic quality unsurpassed. LOSE NO TIME IN BOOKING THIS HEADLINER!

A Homeless Boy

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 14)

A well acted dramatic story full of pathos.

"Exhibitors make no mistake in demanding Great Northern films, as they can always be depended upon to lend tone to the program." —Moving Picture World.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Solax Company

MAKERS OF FINE FILMS

BEST FILM MADE

TINTED AND TONED THROUGHOUT

Scene from "A REPORTER'S ROMANCE"

PERFECT Photography

PERFECT PRODUCT

POWERFUL PLAYS

RELEASE JAN. 13th
The Girl and the Burglar
DRAMA

RELEASE JAN. 20th
A Reporter's Romance
DRAMA

RELEASE JAN. 27th
His Best Friend
DRAMA

147 Fourth Ave. Solax Company New York City

Champion Films

An Open-Mouthed Audience!

You will witness this, Mr. Exhibitor, when you have projected our EXCEPTIONALLY IMPRESSIVE picture Playlet

RELEASED JANUARY 18, 1911

"The Will of a Western Maid"

The Ah!'s and Oh!'s elicited will be your and our pleasure. The intended sacrifice of innocence for monetary benefit; the well-rounded conspiracy dramatically nipped by chilled steel faithfulness; and the young couple's victory over the miserly Uncle's greed, will satiate your desire for a CHAMPFILM of interest.

Scene from "The Will of a Western Maid"

Don't take our word for it, investigate for yourself. Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

See Release Dates for Champ Features

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at
Coytesville on the Hudson

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

ECLAIR FILMS

Of World-Wide Reputation!!!

Again we offer to all

EXHIBITORS & EXCHANGEMEN

an Exceptional Opportunity

TWO

Funnyfilms Eclair Funnyfilms

IN ONE REEL

Watch For Them!!!

For January 16th

"The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot"
478 FEET
A Laughable Tale of a Love-Sick Youth, Ludicrous as Only an "ECLAIR" Film can be!!

"My Wife's Hat"
482 FEET
An EXCEPTIONALLY Amusing Subject, Half Comic, Half Trick Film. Affords a Very Jolly Laugh All 'Round.

Demand "Eclair"—Do It Now!

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK - 31 East 27th Street
CHICAGO - 35 East Randolph Street

2

Of Your

BEST FRIENDS

Are

Quality

And

Prompt Service

We Have Them Both

Always at Your Disposal

THE CREAM of these Famous Makes to CHOOSE FROM:

AMBROSIO YANKEE
AMERICAN LUX
ATLAS POWERS
BISON RELIANCE
ECLAIR THANHOUSER
GREAT NORTHERN IMP

NESTOR

Have You Seen
Our Splendid Line of
POSTERS?
They are FREE with every reel.

WASHINGTON
PARAMOUNT FILM CO.

C. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

RESOLVE!

That you will be INDEPENDENT during 1911, will not patronize Trusts, big or little, and that you will use "REVIER FILMS."

You will then have a Happy Year.

Released Wednesday, Jan. 11

The Goose Creek Claim.

Length, approx., 975 feet

A story of absorbing interest dealing with the rough and rugged miners as found in the West. A great story and magnificent natural scenery.

Released Wednesday, Jan. 18

For the Child's Sake.

Drama, 500 feet.

"You Try It."

Comedy, 500 feet.

Two excellent films that will just make your business hum. Don't neglect to book these features in advance.

We furnish large artistic 5-colored posters.

Send [illegible] for

A. J. CLAPHAM,

12 East 15th Street, NEW YORK

FREE to the Trade, a weekly letter, "The Searchlight," with all the news. Write for it.

"ELECTRA"

ELECTRA
"PINK LABEL"
CARBONS

EXCELLO
"FLAME ARC"
CARBONS

WHITEST LIGHT LONGEST LIFE
HUGO REISINGER
Sole Importer
11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

CARBONS

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building
DAYTON, OHIO

The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

RELIEF

Look - Just Out - Read

SLIDENE

Should be in the office of every moving picture theatre. WHY? Because it is very simple to make neat, attractive announcement or advertising slides at a very small price with Slidene. One can of Slidene will make from two to three hundred slides.

PRICE $1.00

COLORS RED, GREEN, BLUE AND WHITE

Don't delay. Order today from your Film Exchange, or on the receipt of $1.00 we will send you the Slidene at once. GIVE IT A TRIAL. Full directions with each can of Slidene.

SLIDENE MFG. CO., 621 West 13th Street, Columbus, Neb.

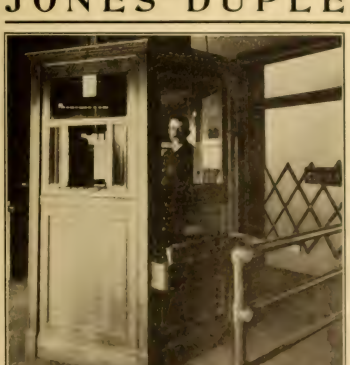
JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE



POSITIVELY

the only way to

CHECK YOUR PUBLIC

The Jones Check Gate has been in operation at different stations in the HUDSON TUNNELS, and found to give a perfect count, with a smooth and noiseless operation.

Many of the large Theatres in New York and elsewhere have installed THE JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE, and they have favorably satisfied those purchasers.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE MAN TO GET YOU ONE

Manufactured by JONES CHANGE REGISTER COMPANY, Inc., 18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

N O T I C E

OWING to pressure of work, we are reluctantly compelled to postpone our opening releases, "The Birth of the Gnomes," "Alice in Funnyland" and "Alice's New Year's Party" for a few days :: :: :: :: ::

In the meantime we are making more new Pictures and will be prepared to continue regular releases from the start :: :: :: :: ::

As we are not a member of the Sales Co., kindly address all communications to us direct, and send us your name now for Bulletin of the Gnomes :: :: :: :: :: ::

Gnome Motion Picture Co.

S. W. Cor. Park and Tremont Aves. NEW YORK CITY

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 JANUARY 14, 1911 No. 2

The Lay Press and the Picture

We are waiting patiently for the magazine article which is properly appreciative of the moving picture as a permanent and integral part of modern public entertainment. The average magazine writer seldom fails to get in a cheap sneer at the expense of the picture, while generally writing something otherwise readable about it. Munsey, not long ago, came out and called the pictures "shivery shadows." Pearson's, in its January 1911 number, heads a contribution by Mr. Richard Barry, "Moving Picture Bubble." He asks why moving pictures resemble a soap bubble; and calls them "as universal as froth and transparently unmoral." Yet, at the same time, he hands out a number of statistics as to the commercial aspect of the picture which clearly prove that, if it be a bubble, and if it be froth (and it is neither, we assert), it rests on a very sound financial business basis indeed. Of course, he cites several cases where boys and girls are alleged to have done wrong through the influence of the picture. From time to time we read of this kind of thing in the daily newspapers. It is time, we think, that newspaper sub-editors and magazine writers should show more intelligence in this matter and cease to make the picture a kind of excuse for all sorts of minor crimes. The weak-minded people, alleged or real, who go wrong by the agency of the picture, are just as likely to go wrong through any other agency, even a magazine. In the same number of "Pearson's" in which Mr. Barry writes, there is an article by Clara Laughlin, telling of the effort to save girls, which points out very clearly, though it is not the writer's intention, how a girl in a store, or in an office, may supplement her income by occasional wrong doing (not to quote the more ugly word used in the article referred to.) This lady is clearly well-meaning in her desire to save girls from ruin, but we question the wisdom of her somewhat disconcerting particularity. It is not nice to be told that many girls give their spare hours to vice. "The sight to do ill deeds, makes ill deeds done." We think that such an unpleasant topic as this, could have been handled with more discretion. Incidentally, the authoress throws a slur upon the picture house. On the whole, therefore, in the January "Pearson's" the picture comes off pretty badly. In one article it is a kind of bubble, and in the other, is hinted that the picture house and the picture are possible dangers to the morals of maids-of-all-work.

Like a false report of Mark Twain's death, this sort of thing is of course "greatly exaggerated." Ample evidence can be deduced that even a church or a chapel is occasionally used as a place of assignation. But no doubt Mr. Barry and Miss Laughlin would hesitate to specifically condemn churches and chapels on that account. Evil exists everywhere, but we think that the picture is burdened with rather more than its deserved quantity of original sin.

Last week in our introductory article, we pointed out that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD stood for the qualitative progress of the picture. It would gratify us if we read in the magazines and newspapers a little more critical writing of a constructive rather than a destructive nature. Clearly, if it be the case as this writer, Mr. Barry, says, that 5,000,000 Americans look at pictures daily, there must be "something in the picture" — something in it of a nature rather more solid and lasting than a bubble. Bubbles burst and disappear. So far from the picture being a bubble and likely to burst, the evidence at the moment of writing points to the inference that it is assured of considerable longevity. That being the case, we think these magazine writers could write just as attractive articles and make just as much money by giving us something of a novelty in the way of constructive criticism and appreciation. Let them tell us how they think the picture house can be improved; how the pictures can be improved; what the public want, or should have, or should be led to accept. Let them educate the public into the acceptance of the good, the artistic, and the beautiful. Let them point out to the public the educational, scientific, industrial and other merits of the picture. In other words, let them do the picture justice. Then we shall hope to read no more about "bubbles" or dangers to the morals of maids-of-all-work. Both Mr. Barry and Miss Laughlin, we think, are unfortunate in their viewpoints. Their slurs upon the picture cannot possibly do good to anybody or anything. On the other hand, if they would get down to something more appreciative of the picture, their readers would be less likely to regard it as a thing of doubtful value and esteem.

Measurement of Lenses.

Focal lengths of lenses are expressed in various ways in the optical trade. Among the moving picture fraternity, projection lenses are commonly designated by the "back focus," this term being used to designate the distance measured from the rear surface of the glass at the back of the lens to a surface on which parallel rays striking on the front of the lens are brought to a focus. This practice of designating lenses by the "back focus" is to be regretted, as the back focus of a lens is not a true index of the size of the picture that will be obtainable from the lens under any given circumstance. Two lenses of the same back focus, or back focal length, may produce pictures of quite different sizes when all other conditions are the same. A much better way by which to designate a projection lens is by what is known among opticians as the equivalent focus. By this term we mean the focal length of a single lens which will produce a picture of the same size as that produced by the projection lens under any given conditions. That is to say, the equivalent focus, or equivalent focal length, of a projection lens is the distance equivalent to the distance from the optical center of a single double convex lens to the surface perpendicular to the optical axis of that lens in which parallel rays passing through the lens would be brought to a focus. For practical lens testing, it is usually safe enough to consider a point midway between the front surface of the front lens combination and the rear surface of the rear lens combination as the optical center of a combination lens, and, by holding the lens in front of a screen and focusing parallel rays on the screen, it is easy to determine approximately the equivalent focus of the lens by measuring from the screen on which the rays are focused to a point midway between the lens combinations as above described.

With reference to condensing lenses, the ordinary designation of a condensing lens as a 6½" or 7½" lens is somewhat misleading. These terms do not usually designate lenses by the focal length at all, but merely the diameter of the circle to which the convex surface of the condensing lens is ground. Thus, a 6½" condensing lens is ordinarily one whose convex surface is ground to a circle 6½" in diameter, while the flatter 7½" lens is one whose convex surface is ground to a circle 7½" in diameter. Thus, the larger the number designating the lens, the flatter the lens and the larger the circle to which its convex surface is ground. The actual focal lengths of condensing lenses would not be indicated by the usual numbers employed in designating, as the refractive index of a piece of glass depends upon its chemical composition and condensing lenses made of different kinds of glass and having exactly the same curvature would have different focal lengths, because the refractive indices of the different kinds of glass are not identical. This, however, is not a matter of serious import, as condensing lenses are not used for the purpose of forming images, but merely to condense the light used for projection, and in the practical use of condensing lenses it is a matter of very little or no significance whether the focal lengths of the lenses used are exactly known. A condenser system having a total focal length of 3½" will give substantially the same results as a condenser system the focal length of which is 3¾" or 3¼".

To determine the approximate focal length of an ordinary plano convex condenser, an image of any bright object, such as a window, at a distance of 15 feet or more from the condensing lens, may be formed on a sheet of paper or wall, holding either side of the lens toward the object to be focused, and the distance from the nearest point on the lens to the image is the approximate focal length of the lens. Ordinarily, it will be found most convenient to hold the convex surface of the lens toward the object and the flat side toward the surface on which the image is formed. As it is difficult to form a perfectly clear image with a condensing lens, the measurement of the focal length thus obtained would be approximate only.

Keith and Proctor and the Picture

Valuable Appreciation and Progress

A few weeks ago we published a short interview with Mrs. Clement, the manageress of the B. F. Keith Bijou Dream, at Boston, in which we told the reader that this lady, who exercises such excellent influence in the amusement field, was laudably anxious to present the picture in its most dignified aspects to her audiences, and we mentioned the success that was rewarding her efforts. The theater she controls is associated with the personality of Mr. B. F. Keith, who is also, we are glad to learn, prominent in his advocacy of the picture, as a beautiful means of interesting and entertaining the large public that visits his theaters.

For some time we have been desirous of ascertaining the attitude of the responsible heads of the Keith & Proctor circuit in New York City, towards the picture. All sorts of rumors have been prevalent that in the six New York and Jersey City theaters under their control, the picture was being relegated to an inferior position: that, in other words, the great houses on Fourteenth street, Twenty-third street, Fifty-eighth street and 125th street and in Jersey City, had ceased to be picture houses, and were to be entirely given over in future to vaudeville, or at least primarily. Within the last few days we were happy to have had a long and interesting interview with Mr. U. G. Blackford, who is in virtual, if not supreme, control of the Keith & Proctor New York Circuit. Contemporaneously with this interview, the announcement was made that Mr. Rothapfel had been engaged to supervise the lighting of the Keith & Proctor theaters with a view to the adequate representation of the picture in those houses, while not fatally diminishing the illumination in the auditoria.

It is no exaggeration to say that the entertainment system in vogue at the Keith & Proctor houses mentioned has undergone a total revolution. Each house within the last few months, viz: during the time that Mr. Blackford has had charge, has been thoroughly swept and garnished. The administrative staffs of them have been thoroughly reorganized; unsuitable vaudeville acts have been eliminated; well acted and staged one-act plays here and there introduced. In one instance, that of the Bijou Dream, prices of admission have been raised. Generally speaking, the whole tone of the entertainment has been marvelously lifted, as we saw for ourselves last week, when we spent two afternoons respectively at the Harlem Opera House and the Bijou Dream on Fourteenth street, studying those parts of the entertainment which did not embrace the picture.

The Keith & Proctor vaudeville and dramatic entertainments at their New York houses touch, at this moment, the highest level of excellence. Then again, song slides and the accompanying songs have been banished. It was Mr. Blackford's opinion that while the slides were often of high pictorial quality, that the songs themselves were of indifferent quality, indifferently rendered by indifferent singers; and that, broadly speaking, this part of the entertainment was not worthy of Keith & Proctor audiences. So the song slide; the "songs" and their "singers" have been abolished.

Now, as to the lecturing end of matters. Incompetent lecturers have been removed, and in their place, educated lecturers, familiar with the subjects about which they discourse, have been put on at the Keith & Proctor houses,—a reform which the MOVING PICTRE WORLD has long advocated. We have over and over pointed out that most of the lecturers heard at these houses were not sufficiently well educated to undertake the difficult and delicate duty of addressing an intelligent public.

But, with regard to the picture and the manner of its presentation: It was long recognized that the manner in which the picture had been presented at the Keith & Proctor houses hardly reached the ideal. Indifferent operators often showed the pictures indifferently. The booths were not properly and safely placed in the various theaters. Alteration has led to improvement in this respect. It has also been sought to obtain the services of the most competent operators, who have perfect command of their machines, and who are capable of presenting an evenly illuminated, steady, picture to the audiences. This much needed reform has been carried out.

It has been so thoroughly carried out that, both at the Harlem Opera House and at the Bijou Dream on Fourteenth street, on the occasion of our recent special visits, we were delighted with the manner in which the pictures were shown on the screen. There was practically no flickering; good even illumination; no jumping, breaks, or pauses. The projection was accomplished at a proper speed; far different from the somewhat haphazard state of things which prevailed before Mr. Blackford took charge.

We are pleased to learn from this, and from Mr. Blackford's own personal assurance, that so far from Keith & Proctor being desirous of turning down the picture, they, on the contrary, are more than ever convinced of the value of the picture as a drawing card at their houses. In fact, when we hinted that Keith & Proctor's recent apparent total conversion to vaudeville indicated the imminent removal of the picture from their houses, we were met by a smile from Mr. Blackford. Said he: "I like the picture; my patrons like the picture and so long as these conditions prevail the picture will always be given a prominent place in our houses."

Some time ago, it is true, the Keith & Proctor houses in this city were primarily picture houses. They are so yet. But competition in the vaudeville field has obliged Keith & Proctor to respond with the presentation of increased vaudeville acts of a high class quality. This, however, does not lessen the interests of Keith & Proctor in the picture which is shown on the whole just as much in their houses, now, as formerly. We are happy to be the means of removing some erroneous conceptions which have existed on this point.

We congratulate Keith & Proctor on the increased high tone of their vaudeville performances. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is not a vaudeville publication. It is no part of our business to devote special attention to it. But, the latter, whenever it is used in conjunction with, or as a supplement to the moving picture, and is of good quality, we are happy to applaud, because we think that in special cases, such as the Keith & Proctor system, vaudeville and the picture need not be antagonistic. Months ago we printed an article in these pages in which we pointed out how indifferent vaudeville vitiated the picture; it had an unfavorable reaction upon it. But if both vaudeville and picture are both good, neither, in our opinion, suffers. There are theaters in which the picture can stand entirely by itself. There are many theaters right here in New York City, where it can only form part of an entertainment, but there is no reason why, when it does so, that it should not be presented in such a thorough manner that it may in no way interest and please an audience, just as much as does vaudeville. In fact, high class vaudeville and high class pictures constitute, to our minds, an almost ideal kind of cheap entertainment for the multitude.

There is a disposition on the part of many people in the vaudeville field to kill the picture. One very prominent vaudeville magnate in New York City, is said to openly express his intention of doing so. We think this pessimistic attitude towards the picture is short sighted, and likely to be unprofitable. Probably the Keith & Proctor attitude, as defined to us by Mr. Blackford, is the best attitude for the vaudeville promoter to assume. The public clearly want the picture. They want it subjectively good; clean, wholesome, and interesting; and they also want it efficiently projected, so that it shall not appear to be useless an admirable but stupid means to be used in order to get a right to be, namely an integral part of a high class entertainment.

If in the vaudeville field there were more intelligent appreciators of the picture, like Mr. Blackford, responsible for these entertainments, the picture, we are convinced, would still further progress in public esteem. Our attitude in this matter is simple and reasonable. We think in effect, that the picture is its own best advocate wherever it is shown, provided that it is properly shown, and given as much care in its presentation as a high class play or vaudeville act. The trouble, hitherto, in vaudeville houses has been that the picture has been regarded as a filler in competent hands, and therefore has not been justly treated in the manner of its presentation to the public.

ECLAIR PHOTOGRAPHY.

If the Biograph have made a name for their glorious Swig for Western films, Ambrosio for spectacular productions, Essanay for comedies, Gaumont for their Biblical productions, etc., the Eclair people have made a name for the excellence of their photography.

I have been treated to a private exhibition of three new Eclair productions to be released in the very near future and it is impossible to say if the photography of the comedy "Guy, Guy Let Us Be Married" is better than the photography of the drama "Cain," or of the historical film of "King Philip and the Templars." The Eclair photographers have certainly mastered the art. It seems that before they start the crank of the camera they study every detail of light, so as to bring out these wonderful effects. Their work is not the black and white outline drawing, it is as the full toned oil painting in comparison.

No matter where the Eclair folks place their camera, let it be in the studio, in the open air or in the woods, they know how to obtain figures in full relief, faces are well illuminated showing every expression.

One of the most beautiful scenes in "Cain" represents a stream of water flowing through some dense woods. The light is so good that practically every branch, not to say every leaf, is seen in relief; nothing that a picture full of depth. When the guilty man appears on the banks of the stream of water, he sees a most beautiful and artistic vision of his victim rising from the water then slowly dropping back in the water and swelling away.

The different hunting scenes of King Philip in the productions of the "Templars" are beautiful scenic views and here again although the hunting parts transpire in the woods, the leaves are as clear and full of expression as if taken in a studio. In the film called "Cain" there is another splendid specimen of the photographic art, when the rays of a lamp are so well marked on the wall. In the production of "Guy, Guy, Let Us Be Married" the leaves screen fine light effects, specially in the last scene. The room is darkened, while through the door are the country fields in a full sunshine. Add to this the most natural acting and correct settings and the Independents have done and only good to be thrown in every theater of the country, but to be repeated and repeated again.

All the criticisms made of late against poor and cheap comedies, films are not worth paying when the comedy will have a chance to pass upon the above named productions.

F. M. E.

Los Angeles ordinance against fast films will be tested in the appellate court. Jos. J. Jeffries will appear as a witness.

German Army will use moving pictures of maneuvers and battle scenes as a means of stimulating patriotism.

Mr. Frank Howard, manager of the Kalem Company, is home on a few days' vacation from the Coast. He will leave for Jacksonville, Fla., on Saturday, where the Kalem Company is making its usual winter trip to the South, accompanied by Mrs. Howard.

The Tragedy of Comedy

Curious, isn't it? Well, they are curious films which suggested it. Comedies without a laugh, farces which make the tears come, alleged funniments which leave an audience cold, disgusted or untouched, laughs which the producer and scenario author alone have enjoyed, but which never "get over" from the screen.

The public taste for comedy is highly developed. That is, the public wants to laugh. It tries hard to laugh when it is supposed to. It will chuckle at most anything besides a murder or the spectacle of the loving son beating his bedridden mother to death. It doesn't take much to make a moving picture audience explode—only something really funny!

Only something really funny!

But the "only something really funny" is hard, hard, hard to get, seemingly, and the substitutes therefore, so easy to find, so riotously, uproarious in scenario form, so deliciously ridiculous in imagination, that every week we find "screaming comedies," "films with a laugh in every picture" and such other mis-announcements by the dozen. Then, when we pay our little five cents and go into the darkened hall with the idea of pulling our lips out of the frown left there by the last "funny" film, we see some such pitiful attempts to amuse as might get smiles from a professional laugher, but from no one else.

Time was when any procession of people running across the screen, after anything, was funny. But "the chase" is about done as a laugh maker. Then came the procession—not a chase, since they do not run, but a gradually increasing crowd of people, all following something—anything. This, too, has become unnatural (which it always was), and is dying out. Also the accidents—the people falling down, or being doused, or getting run over or running into something—how sickeningly often are we asked to laugh at some mishap to some poor mortal. But real comedy? How rare it is!

Nor are the offenders the little, the unknown, the struggling producers. They all offend, at times. So great and so successful a firm as Pathe puts out some of the prettiest—and some of the worst—comedies one can want to see or flee. Yes, coming right down to cases in a minute. Attracted by the name Pathe, which usually means "well done," the present scribe wandered into a "photoplayhouse" (horrific name this, not to say horrendous)! yesterday, and sat interestedly through "One on Max." Interested, because from the beginning things happened in so unhuman, unnatural and peculiar a manner that one couldn't help wanting to know what the deuce was coming next.

Now, the present scribe is not French, has never been in France and couldn't pretend to say anything about the French character. He hardly imagines that this is a sample of French humor, but if it is—God pity the French!

Max is invited to a party. His boots are tight. He puts on slippers and goes to a shoe store to get a pair of easy shoes. So far, so good. While there, he attempts to flirt with the lady clerk—possibly daughter of the shoe merchant. Shoe merchant is incensed and determines on revenge. So he fastens a pair of roller skates to a pair of shoes, which he is morally sure will fit Max, and puts them on. Max, with that complacency of the moving picture actor (who is listening with all his ears to the stage manager, bellowing at him "now look at the girl—don't notice the skates—you don't know there are skates on those shoes"), doesn't see the skates or feel them or know anything about them. Perfectly natural—is it not? It is NOT. Then the merchant propels Max into the street, where he tumbles about in a really artistic manner. It never occurs to Max to try to take off the skates, or to go to another shoe store and get other shoes, or to take off these shoes, or to call a policeman. No, indeed!

His one idea is to get to that party. This he does, with the aid of a cabman. It never occurs to the cabby, either, to help him off with his shoes. And, more and more interesting, when Max comes into the room where the party is being held, it never occurs to him to explain, to ask for help, or to excuse his actions. Mamma, Papa and young Mam'zelle never notice Max is three inches taller than usual—why should they? It would just mean a line from the stage manager! No one thinks anything of his sudden down-sittings and cautious uprisings, nor does Max attempt to sit still. Clearly unable to walk, he must try to waltz with a lady, just the same. Entirely plausible, ridiculously funny and openly hilarious, is it not? It is—NOT!

Finally he falls and smashes things—they try to put him out, thinking him drunk—still unable to see those roller skates—until Max, in despair, tells them he has on rollers. Then they all see them at once, and try to drag them off him. Finally a servant suggests untying the shoes, and all is well with Max, who dances in his stocking feet to the end of the party!

Ugh! And that is a Pathe film, if you please!

Now, Pathe Freres, the present scribe admires you a lot! He likes your attention to detail, your often exquisitely beautiful surroundings and backgrounds, and your always capable companies. But he sees what he sees and says what he thinks, and if "Max" is an imposition on the public, your "Jinks Would Be An Acrobat" is a crime. There is nothing funny about Jinks. No human being could, would, should or might, get so excited over the picture of a man standing on his hands, that he would try to do it all over the street! Nor, if he did try, would he last long out of jail. But while everyone chases Jinks, no one catches him—he has always plenty of time to stand up on his hands and knock over everything knockable. It not only isn't funny, but it isn't even near-funny, except that a responsible, level-headed, wealthy, able firm like Pathe should fall for it.

Nor is Pathe a unique offender. Our own beloved Essanay sometimes slips up on comedy. "Hank and Lank" may, at times, make some people laugh, but their recent baby-tending exploit wouldn't make a gibbering idiot crack a smile, let alone a cold motion picture audience. Why will producers base playlets on mother's handing their babies to strange men to hold, while they go shopping? And what function does Lank's two-inches-long-nose play? And what sort of fathers are the personal acquaintances of the Essanay people, that they would leave a baby in the charge of an obvious bum, while, for a whole hour, they enjoy themselves in a saloon? Comedy based on improbabilities is farce, but farce must be possible to be funny—all the premises here are impossible of belief—therefore, the result is about on a par with the forced funniments of the average comic Sunday Supplement—one of the saddest sights there is!

When they turn their attention to "serious" comedy, they do better, all these producers, yet it is still Essanay who makes a fatal mistake in "Papa's First Outing." They have a good idea in the meek, little, well beloved father, who goes alone for his vacation, is suspected by his wife, tracked by a woman detective, who manufactures evidence against him by flirting with him. But the lack of attention to details has spoiled a good idea. Wives do not, normally, get suspicions of their husbands because they read of another man's frailty, nor do they discuss infidelities in the presence of half a dozen children, nor do children, who obviously adore their father, take turns in beating him without understanding why! Had the reason for the suspicion been more reasonable, and the ending more probable, Essanay would, in the humble opinion of the present scribe, have arrived with a comedy fully as good, of its kind, as a Hoyt farce is of its kind.

Selig, in "Caught In The Rain," has argued that what makes a good farce on the stage ought to make a good one on the screen. Fatal error! It doesn't. "Caught In The Rain" has

In this film, then, you see a series of interesting processes conducted in the laboratory by expert hands. First of all the water is examined under the microscope. Then, you have shown a series of enlarged images of the small objects which exist in the water. And how fearful and wonderful these little things look!

so involved a plot, one so hard to follow by the average but over-intelligent audience, and one which moves so rapidly, that the good points are lost in obscurity. The play is well conceived, reasonably well acted—although Robert, as usual with young villains, entirely overdoes the gesturing and facial expressions—and ought to, seemingly, be successful, yet on three occasions which the present scribe took to see this "mirth producer" he heard never a laugh or titter, save at the one scene where the Judge gets soaking wet—the scene which gives the play its name, and which, if it is the only laugh-winner in the whole thousand feet, might as well be shown by itself and same time!

Well, tell us of a good comedy.!

I wish I could. As I look back over those I have seen in the past year or so, they are few and far between. One, among all others, stands out pre-eminent. I don't know its name or its maker—I do know that I saw it half a dozen times, and that every time the audience not only laughed, but roared, cheered, and clapped.

It was the story of the servant, the secretary and the daughter of the house, who, unknown to each other and to the theater-hating minister, head of the house, steal off to the play. The play is a melodrama, of the most melo character. The film alternately shows the play, a capital satire on the travelling tank drama, and the pit, dress circle and gallery of the house, with daughter and escort, secretary and escort, and cook and escort, all enjoying the play

The facial expression of the cook was enough to bring down the house—the tank drama—particularly where the hero spent five minutes gesticulating to high heaven of what he was going to do before he finally plunged in to rescue the drowning heroine come sees, now where this pause and gesture habit comes from in the M. P. actors),'and the climax of the film when all three parties meet and swear eternal secrecy, was really immense—a thing which can be stated without fear of contradiction because the fun produced the laughs. I have never heard more laughter from a moving picture audience over any film therefore, as strongly as I can put it, this was a real comedy, a real treatment, a real laugh producer. It isn't all this because I liked it—but because it made everyone laugh!

That is the first and last test. Comedies which produce no result are not funny. Comedies which make people laugh and laugh hard, are good. Wits, with all the good points, people, are cleverness or prodigacts, there are not more of them, less of these tragic attempts; further, deponent sayeth not. A la Hashimura Togo, I pause for a reply. C. H. CLAUDY

Multi-focal Cameras

One of our European contemporaries publishes the cut of a moving picture camera which, in so far as we can charge our memory, is somewhat of a novelty. It is a small hand camera, or in other words, it admits of some slight variation of the focus of the objective, whereby the size of parts of an image may be increased or diminished at will. The simple optics of the moving picture camera are seldom understood even by those who by courtesy are called cameramen. We have met many of these cameramen. The day before yesterday they were probably acting as railroad porters or property men at a theater. This is no exaggeration. We have actually met cameramen in the employ of both licensed and Independent manufacturers who, not long ago, were filling these positions.

And again it is only a few months ago since one of the leading lights on the Independent side of the moving picture making industry, begged us to explain to him for the benefit of his help, the difference between a short focus and a long focus lens. But enough on this point. This multi-focal camera, which is of German make, has, on its front, a revolving lens board, carrying two or three extra simple lenses. By revolving the board, and bringing one of the objectives in a specific relation to the objective in the camera, you alter the equivalent focal length of the fixed lens. You may either slightly shorten it, or you may slightly lengthen it. The result is, as a side reflection will show, that a given set remains over the same part of the picture itself, because this does not vary, but over contiguous parts of the picture. For example: Suppose you were taking a distant group. Well, by removing this lens you can slightly lengthen the focus and thus will give you the figures slightly larger than you would get them by the unassisted eye of the camera.

We do not know whether this idea is in use to any extent, but we think it of sufficient importance to draw attention to it. Of course in taking ordinary still photographs you can apply something like the same principle. Taylor, Taylor & Hobson, well-known photographic opticians, supply a lens, the front combination of which may be drawn farther away from the back combination. The result is to lengthen the focus and consequently to give some slight magnification of the image.

On former occasions we have referred to the adaptation of the tele-photographic principle to the moving picture camera. This principle would enable you to take enlarged images of distant objects. Let us put an explanation in as simple language as we can. Supposing you are photographing a group of performers at a great distance from the camera. With a view of normal focus, that is, 2½ inches approximately, these performers would be mere specks in the negative, but by adopting the tele-photographic principle, that is, adding a magnifying element to the lens, you would get the images of the distant performers much larger on the negative and you this would get a correspondingly increased degree of enlargement on the screen.

As we have said over and over again, the moving picture camera has many points where it can be improved. Any certainly this conspicuously applies to the lens end of the instrument. In the first place, it can be made to avail itself of the tele-photographic principle, that is, the enlarging image of distant objects at our operation, and secondly it can be used for multi-focal purposes, that is, for taking parts of the images of subjects comparatively near the camera. It all comes to this: that optical science is fully capable of making the moving picture easier to differentiate the size of images in the picture and to increase or diminish the included angle of view at will. The cameras to which we have referred to—made by Ernemann & Company, of Dresden, Germany.

FLORENCE TURNER IN NOTABLE GALLERY

The Newspaper Enterprise Association, a feature syndicate, which by the way is among the moving pictures established in its early birthday leaders which has had to date eight national figures receive selections and portrait a set of Miss Florence Turner of the Vitagraph Company, selected on January 9th. Morgan of the assortment of fifty or more well chosen sets of many personalities well known in the moving picture field. Not all of these had their way into print however, despite the fact that they are really fine and large moving pictures have an extremely popular regard the industry, due to the necessarily small amount of advertising done. —J. H. M.

PICTURES HOLIDAY PROGRAM FEATURES

Saved before in the Mississippi Valley especially in Illinois has there been such a use of moving pictures and stereopticon views in Christmas entertainments by Sunday schools as in 1911. Of course the general utility of the moving picture machine has not become so popular as the stereopticon, but the Pathe "Passion Play" film was the feature in many cities. As an example of the popularity of slides showing the activity at times they were the leading number in many entertainments in Springfield. —J. H. M.

HAWAIIAN EDUCATOR PRAISES FILMS

Moving pictures are the greatest things ever invented for visual demonstration," said Professor William Atherton Bryan, professor of zoology at College of Hawaii, recently at Milwaukee, "because they have come to stay. Their educational value is much to be commended. They add wonderfully to impressing upon an audience the meaning of a certain subject as be presented." Professor Bryan illustrates a lecture with films showing native Hawaii —J. H. M.

Patents Company vs. Independent Manufacturers

Judge Lacombe Grants Preliminary Injunctions

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY.

MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Lacombe, C. J.

This is an application for preliminary injunction under Reissue Patent No. 12,037 to Thomas A. Edison for a kinetoscope, which was sustained and its claims construed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in this circuit in Edison vs. Am. Mutoscope & B. Co. 151 F. R. 771. An earlier decision of that court discussed the original patent, 114 F. R. 926. Nothing that was said in either of these opinions need be repeated here: it is assumed that they will be consulted. They describe the device of the patent and analyzed the claims so fully, illustrating the decision by describing the cameras which were held, the one to infringe, the other not to, that it seems not difficult to apply the principles of the decision to the Gaumont and Champion-Gaumont cameras now before the court. The differences between these two alleged infringing cameras are unimportant, defendant apparently does not contend otherwise, therefore this discussion will be confined to the Champion-Gaumont type, of which an operative camera has been submitted for inspection. The film moving mechanism of both, however, is so well shown in the drawing and blue print, filed with the papers that their operation may be easily understood. The film passes from the delivery roll to a delivery wheel whose sprockets engage positively with holes in the sides of the film, this wheel revolves, not intermittently, but continuously, and in operation there is always a loop or slack part of the film between it and the film guide. In consequence the delivery wheel does not itself advance the film through the guide. In the Mutoscope case it was held that these circumstances did not negative infringement. The film passes through the guide, around a cam eccentrically mounted on a continuously moving wheel, to the take-up reel where it engages with sprockets, the latter reel revolving continuously The operation is as follows: The device being at rest, there is the loop or slack above the guide entirely free to be drawn down through the guide the same as in the Biograph and in the Warwick cameras, which were considered in the Mutoscope case. In the latter instrument this slack was pulled through by two friction rollers revolving continuously, the movement of the film being intermittently checked by a so-called tension leaf. "The engagement with the film was wholly frictional;—no such interlocking as will hold the film firmly advancing it with mathematical accuracy—there was the possibility of slip." In the Warwick the film was pulled through by a bifurcated fork which engaged with holes and advanced the film mathematically a certain distance and then disengaged: the court of appeals held that the bifurcated fork was a fair equivalent of the wheel with sprockets. In the Champion-Gaumont when at rest the film is stretched taut between the guide and the take-up sprocket wheel resting snugly against the cam. We may assume that at that time the outer edge of the cam is on the side of the wheel furthest away from the cam. Its position is not essential, substantially the same cycle of movement may be worked out if it be in the reverse position. The machine being started, what happens in a given space of time? The moving sprocket wheel revolves through a predetermined arc and, carrying the film on its sprockets, advances the film a predetermined distance. During the same time the outer edge of the eccentric cam is brought into engagement with the taut film and, revolving, pushes the distance predetermined by the amount of the cam's eccentricity. The film thus pushed out cannot come from the side of the take-up wheel where it is held firmly on sprockets, it can readily come and does come out of the film-guide, the slack above the guide allowing it to move easily forward. As the revolving eccentric cam recedes to the inner side of its wheel axis, it leaves the film which it has pushed out, and for a brief interval there is no movement of the film out of the guide, because the cam is no longer pushing on it, and the sprocket wheel cannot pull on it till it has first taken up slack. During that period the film is at rest for receiving impressions from the lens.

Defendant contends that this operation of advancing the film is wholly frictional, that there is every possibility to slip and that the spacing cannot be mathematically accurate. This contention is not found persuasive. There is friction between the cam and the film, but it is very different from the action of two rollers whose frictional contact alone gives a grip and produces a pull. One end of the film (the part on the sprocket wheel) is firmly held, it cannot slip back, and in reality it is this which causes it to advance when the cam pushes it: it must advance or break. I find it impossible from a study of the drawings or from a manipulation of the exhibit to see any possibility of slip. Why the apparatus should not be mathematically accurate is not apparent. The arc through which the sprocket wheel will move in a given time is predetermined, the equivalent in linear movement of the film is known. The additional length of film which will be hauled out of the guide to accommodate the eccentric cam is also predetermined by the measure of the cam's eccentricity. The total distance that the film will advance past the lens, being the sum of these two predetermined items, is itself predetermined. The period of rest may also be predetermined, it would seem with mathematical accuracy. It is the time necessary for a sprocket wheel, of a given diameter revolving at a given speed, to reel up the amount of film required to accommodate a protruding cam, the extent of whose eccentricity is accurately known.

The conclusion is reached that the Champion-Gaumont and the Gaumont machines infringe. It is conceded that the Pathe machine, one of which is owned by defendant, also infringes This and its Champion-Gaumont may, as suggested, be impounded in the custody of defendant's counsel until final hearing.

Preliminary injunction may issue.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

YANKEE FILM COMPANY.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

WILLIAM STEINER AND OTHER

MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Lacombe, C. J.

The Defense of failure to disclaim as to claim 4 was disposed of in decision on the demurrer.

The defense of prior invention of Freise-Green, now presented for the first time after the patent has been for several years in litigation and long since sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals, is one to be passed upon at final hearing.

The defense that the suit against the Mutoscope Company, in which the Circuit Court of Appeals sustained the validity of the patent, was a collusive one must also be reserved for final hearing.

As to infringement. Defendants have been engaged in one way or another in having moving pictures taken by two different cameras or in selling or leasing the reproduction of exposures thereon. Apparently, on their own admissions, they were satisfied with the statements of the persons taking the pictures that the machines did not infringe; they took no steps to assure themselves that these statements were correct. It was so easy to demonstrate non-infringement by showing either that the film moved continuously, or that the lens (or lenses) moved—a demonstration which might have been made to the court, if not to the adversary—that the failure to do so arouses suspicion. Undoubtedly the detectives who testify for complainant were able to give but a hasty glance at the interior on the two occasions when the covering cloth was disarranged, but the affidavit of the defendant Henkel, in connection with the other testimony, seems to indicate sufficiently to make out a prima facie case that these two cameras are really of the Gaumont or so-called "beater" type, which have been held to infringe in Motion Picture Patents Company vs. The Champion Film Company recently decided.

Injunction may be taken against all the defendants.

NOTICE.

The new Western offices of the Moving Picture World, Rooms 307-309, Post Building, 160 Washington street, Chicago, are now ready to receive World readers visiting Chicago. Mr. John M. Bradlet, Western representative of the World, will extend to every one a cordial welcome. They will find a complete file of manufacturers' catalogues and a bureau of information on films, theater construction, materials and supplies. They will also find desks and stationery for their correspondence, the services of a lady stenographer and a polite messenger boy to act as their guide or go their errands. We invite every exhibitor or person interested in motion pictures to make our Western office their headquarters when visiting Chicago.

Old Riegel Dry Goods Store, at 333 Market street, Philadelphia, will be remodeled into a picture theater. The alterations to be made will cost $30,000. Mr. Albionia Whartenby will be the big noise.

Buffalo Exhibitors have turned condemnation into praise by their aid in the Red Cross tuberculosis campaign. Tuberculosis day at the picture houses exceeded all expectations, and the managers have more than regained a public confidence that was waning under the bitter attacks of press and clergy.

CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE, ETC.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company are very busy with orders for their automatic musical instruments, and by the numerous photos they are receiving daily from all over the country I could see that their musical instruments were getting very popular.

The Magnetic Film Service Company have sold to the General Film Company, and if the Magnetic Film Service is merged with the Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company in one office of the General Film Company, our friend Mr. Dresner might have to look for another job, and this we would greatly regret, as Mr. Dresner is very popular in Cincinnati.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company are reporting good business and see a great future for the Independent side. Messrs. Jackson and McMahan were busy mailing souvenir slides to their patrons as a Christmas greeting.

The Plaster Ornamental Company, of Cincinnati, the builders of the new Alhambra Theater, certainly deserve patronage, as the Alhambra, the new theater of Messrs. Jackson & McMahan, is unique in design and of pure Moorish style.

In Indianapolis I found the Leedy Manufacturing Company moving into their new building; they report good business, and by their orders I could see that moving picture managers are fast adopting the idea of better music for the picture and sound effects.

The Central service Film Company has started business at 119 Illinois Street, Indianapolis, as a first-class Independent exchange. The manager reports that the prospects are very good; in fact, the demands for a good Independent service have been coming so fast that he is compelled to increase his purchasing money.

Terre Haute, Ind., is doing a good business. Messrs Brentlinger and English, the owners of three moving picture theaters, are doing so well that they had a cash offer of $10,000 for their Elk Theater and have decided to accept same, as the deal will allow them to develop new ideas in the motion picture field.

The "Savoy," the second house of Terre Haute, is commanding a good patronage with the Mirror Screen.

Evansville, Ind., has a number of nice theaters and, according to the exhibitors, they are doing a good business and are satisfied with their lot. If it was not for a bad fire that destroyed one of the best cigar factories of the country, putting out of work a large number of help, the business would still be better with the moving picture theaters. I must again state that the operators of Evansville know their business and we seldom find a city offering such good projection, clear, sharp, well-lighted pictures. Many of the so-called experienced operators of the big cities should visit Evansville to learn how to trim their carbons, regulate their light and lenses and also how to turn the crank. The exhibitors of Evansville do not believe in running a full reel in 7 or 10 minutes. In all the places visited, the music was good and well timed with the pictures, except at the Lyric, where they have no other music than a self-playing piano to play during the intermission. The manager of the Lyric does not seem to believe in music, but he lectures while the picture is on the screen. He does not give a complete lecture, but reads the sub-titles and lectures on the most important points.

The Riverside Theatorium, although a small house, is known as the huose with the "Mirror Screen" and is running first-class Independent films. Mr. W. Huddy, the proprietor of the Theatorium, has started to renovate his house, and his plans are to follow the advice of our Construction Page using somber colors. Mr. Huddy hopes to secure a lease on the next building and, if successful, he will double his seating capacity.

Mr. Huddy is not the only one to see a good future for motion pictures in Evansville, as Mr. Brennan, of the Colonial, has secured a lot on a corner of the main street and will start on February the erection of a new theater to seat 600 persons. Mr. Brennan claims that the exhibitors have to deal with a very broadminded building inspector, a man that uses some common sense, not one of those fellows prejudiced against motion pictures.

The Colonial has an arrangement of poster frames on the walls of the lobby to advertise the coming features. The Main, like the Colonial, have a rather short throw, as they project their pictures from booths built in the ceiling, half way of the auditorium.

At the Lyric I found the wall papers of the Robert Graves Company, of New York, imitation columns, statues, etc.

The only discordant note in Evansville is the Orpheum, where they show three reels of rather old films and five vaudeville acts, worse than cheap vaudeville, as the acts are from local amateurs. It is useless to say that the patronage of the Orpheum is not the class of persons visiting the Colonial, the Main, the Theatorium, etc.

Notwithstanding the efforts made by certain people to try to ruin the popularity of the Mozart Picture Works, this popularity is stronger than ever and at Rossville, Ind., at the Forrest Theater, they gave a special matinee to give me a chance to judge of their excellent projection. I say "excellent" projection and it must be so when we consider that Mr. Forrest can pack his house every night (about 900 seats) in a small town of 3,000 inhabitants. No vaudeville, no long programs, no special inducements except good pictures shown in the very best manner by a conscientious operator, who has been with Mr. Forrest for the last three years. The music is rendered by one of the Wurlitzer automatic musical instruments.

I visited most New York, Chicago and even Philadelphia with its fine theaters, were not the pictures nicely mounted and shown in the best manner. In large cities the exhibitors are victims to the contagious run for money, and while they are trying to find a way to beat their competitor and make money at what they can without any thought of the manner or the nature of cinematography, they seem to have lost sight of the real.

I had to visit Louisville, Ky., to find practically the result of my dreams. In Louisville the good houses have an understanding between themselves to change their programs on Sunday a week, and they claim that when they have a good show their receipts are better on the second and third day than on the first day. These houses have a ten cent admission and they manage to get the dimes as easily as Chicago gets the nickels. This will surprise many readers to know that a town with a reputation of having meals, clothing, etc., cheaper than Chicago, can ask and obtain a ten cent admission for what the Windy City asks five cents.

These Louisville houses have still more good qualities. One of them is to show the best obtainable pictures and shun all vaudeville. The second point is a general craze for good music. The reader can easily understand my joy at finding such good conditions in Louisville, and what I saw seems to prove that the exhibitor reads and goes by the Motion Picture Programs Weekly. We have fought cheap vaudeville to the bitter end, we have waged such a hot war that even other publications that at one time had encouraged cheap vaudeville acts as a good thing to digest motion pictures, have abandoned their foolish notion and are now advocating pictures alone. We have frozen out accompanists and had ragtime music. We have fought against the foolish daily change of program and our efforts have not been in vain.

It would have been good for all the exhibitors and readers who claim that of late the Selig Polyscope Company has been falling in the producing line to see at the Orpheum of Louisville, The Courtship of Miles Standish, Selig. Although "The Count" may show what Mr. Selig has been giving us for the last three and four months, it is not yet the perfection of old days; but as shown at the Orpheum, the oldest critic would have been too much captured by the excellent music and the most remarkable effects to find any flaw in the film. It was a revelation of what good music can do to enhance the beauty of a picture and of how some appropriate music can give life to the picture. The next Louisville theaters have excellent orchestras of from four to five pieces.

J. M. B.

Milwaukee Journal gave a New Year's dinner and moving picture show to over one thousand waifs.

A New Year's Dinner to all their employees was given at Lawrence, Mass., by Messrs. T. F. Tousey and N. J. Demontal, proprietors of the New Nickel and Premier theaters, of Lawrence, and the Academy of Music Lawell. Sixty guests were served.

F. C. Dufour, of Moline Ill. has been granted a license to conduct a motion picture show in the Crowder Building, Tenth street, Silvis, Ill.

The Carragien Amusement Company, of St. Louis, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 full paid, to general business in films and motion picture machines. The incorporators are James B. Carragien, Thomas C. Montgomery and John H. Bougher.

From a letter just received from Mr. F. A. Tipton, associated with Mr. T. T. Lux, exhibiting the moving pictures of the Buffalo Bill Wild West and Lawrence Hill Far East Show, we note these two gentlemen are meeting with unexpected success throughout the south states of Pennsylvania. Mr. Tipton is working the western half, leaving the eastern section to Mr. Lux. From Mr. Craft, general manager of the company in New York, we learn that an extra set of pictures has been ordered by both Pennsylvania representatives, the Western man having to have his next set for a certain date to work in advance of the regular booking price of such pictures.

From George Murphy of East Ninth street we have received a copy of the 1911 issue of the British Journal Photographic Almanac. This is a book of over 1,400 pages, devoted to information of use to photographers in their daily work. It contains all the latest development formulae and a record of recent progress in photography. Those of our readers who are interested in practical photographic work will find this reference book of great assistance to them.

It was my pleasure to see Pathe's "Il Trovatore" picture, which is scheduled for release the 27th of January. In dramatic structure it adheres closely to the libretto made familiar through Verdi's music, and any one familiar with that opera should be able to give a fair melodic setting to the picture after looking at it once. However, the manufacturers have provided a piano part for this release (arranged especially from Verdi's opera), which insures correct musical accompaniment. Such enterprise on their part deserves encouragement on ours and I hope this venture will prove successful enough to induce them to repeat the experiment in future pictures. While I have not seen their music as yet, it seems to me that a selection from "Il Trovatore," long enough to play through a full reel is a good piece of property to have in your library just on general principles, and the small price they ask makes it a good investment even if you don't happen to get the picture.

"The Stranger" (Kalem) has a predominating theme running through. Some simple andante (I should prefer a major key) like "Angel's Serenade" or "Romance from L'Eclaire." Open and close with this and run in wherever the old man dominates the scene. Fill in ad lib.

E. A. Dunn, Spokane, Wash., quotes a hypothetical cowboy picture to illustrate a point. A man murders and rides away, a witness rides to notify the sheriff who gathers a posse and rides first to the scene of the crime, then in pursuit of the criminal. He says: "I would start melodramatic music when the fight begins and keep it up until the fugitive is captured. Some claim that a galop during the running of the horses would be correct. I think not. Do we tally? Just as soon as you break from the melodramatic to the galop the interest is lost.

(I agree with you in that anything calculated to break the tension when the tension should be sustained is wrong. But pictures vary. I have seen pictures containing scenes similar to above, where music agitato started softly, worked up to forte at same time increasing tempo till it melted into a galop ff and furioso. This run into a heavy hurry without a break and was worked p and f according to action. The effect was good in my opinion; it depends somewhat on the galop played, too. C. E. S.) He further says: "I do not use a scrap of music on the piano when I am at work, as I do not come on till 2 o'clock and the show opens at 10 o. so I have ample time to prepare my program beforehand. I have the few sheets of music I am to use set on the piano and after a few times over I have them memorized and lay them aside. I compose as I go along and fake as well, using quite a few popular and sentimental songs. I may be playing a waltz and switch into "Cubanola Glide" in waltz time, or from "Dixie" into a schottische or any popular song. What do you thing of the idea?" (I believe you are following the usual procedure which so many pianists are using satisfactorily. It isn't always what we play so much as how we play it. C. E. S.)

I wish I could quote brother Dunn's letter in full, for it is interesting as well as lengthy, but here is another excerpt: "The picture house is no place for a pipe organ, one reason being that it cannot be placed alongside the piano. When you are following a picture and a church scene appears you have to stop the piano and walk over to the organ, and the minute you stop the piano your picture loses interest. I have worked in houses where pipe and cabinet organs were used and I prefer the cabinet." (How about this, you organ players?)

G. H. Hummel, Chicago, writes: "I am reading constantly your articles 'music for the Picture' and must say it is a great help to the man or woman on the keyboard. I am a pianist myself, and have been connected with the moving picture theaters for the past three years. My experience is that of nine out of ten piano players don't know how to play for a picture. It may be of interest to you to know, and to the benefit of others, how I play a drama, for instance. First of all I read all the stories of moving pictures, and make it my business to see them before they are shown at the theater where I am employed. But there, when playing the pictures myself, I follow the rules laid down by the great R. Wagner in his splendid music dramas, by using the leading motives of the "Nibelungen Ring," "Tristan und Isolde," etc. I attach a certain theme to each person in the picture and work them out, in whatever form the occasion may call for, not forgetting to use popular strains if necessary. I played in a good many theaters and hold quite a reputation for playing. Trusting you enjoy reading these few lines. I wish you all the success and look forward to further articles on the music question with great interest."

A few suggestions are appended.

"The Wise Druggist" (Imp.)

Bright, snappy comedy. Can use lively music throughout or work up as follows:

1. Lively march till husband meets wife, then
2. "I'm glad I'm married" till he leaves her,
3. Same as 1 till she leaves after finding letter, then
4. "Some of these Days" (chorus only) till train passes,
5. Grotesque allegretto ("Teddy Bears Picnic" or "Bugville Parade"),
6. When she is about to take the poison, very doleful funeral music till he answers telephone, then
7. Same as 5 till druggist shows him the sugar,
8. Lively 1/orte 1 till he reenters her room, then keep it down piano till he is about to take the "poison."
9. Change to hurry. Begin it softly and swell; fortissimo at finish. Can change to lively at finish with good effect.

"A Sacrifice and Then" (Reliance):

1. Heavy Hurry for battle through five scenes,
2. Change to plaintive till "Two Years Later," then
3. Neutral ("Laces and Graces" or something light and pretty.)
4. Till office scene, change to semi-mysterious. (Andantino in Raymond Overture will answer) till sub-title cue.
5. "And save his friend" plaintive till church scene.
6. Repeat 4 till change of scene, then
7. Repeat 5 till "Keep faith in him, he loves you," then
8. Light agitato, till change.
9. Repeat 4 till "The embezzlement discovered," then
10. Agitato till two women enter, then
11. Plaintive till change of scene,
12. Bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" till change of scene, then "Hearts and Flowers" or other pathetic till close.

AUTOMATIC SPECIAL MUSIC.

Natrona, Pa., Jan. 3, 1911.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—I received the letter of Mr. Chas. Powell, of Redkey, Ind., regarding special roll music to be played on player-pianos for each reel.

I think the idea is excellent, if only feasible. Just think how much the effect of each picture would be increased were we able to play just the right music at all times. I really think that if the making of a master roll would only cost so as you stated that the thing can be done, for I am certain that if the exhibitors would be assured of a roll of appropriate music for each reel of film they would lose no time in installing player-pianos in their theaters. The exchanges could purchase two or three rolls with each reel and rent it to exhibitors the same as films, and I am sure every exhibitor would be willing to pay a good price for the use of same. Also, a good deal of the managers' trouble would be eliminated as the self-player would not ask so many times "off," nor would they get sick every time they had been out all night.

Please give this matter some of your valuable space, and try to get manufacturers interested, and if the thing can be done they should get busy at once, as in my opinion this would be the greatest improvement of moving pictures in a year's time. Very truly yours,

JOHN HAFNER, manager,
Dreamland Theater.

Information Wanted.—A reader wants to know who made the film illustrating Gary, Ind., and its mills about a year ago, also who made or who can furnish a film called "Making Steel," made, he believes, at the Krupp plant in Germany.

The Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania has been formed in Philadelphia. The officers are: Walter Stuempfig, president; J. V. Redmond, vice-president; Chas. Stengel, second vice-president; John W. Donnelly, treasurer; Charles F. Kelley, secretary. The object of the association is to protect the rights and influence favorable legislation on behalf of its members.

Lamp Troubles.—New York City submits the following: "I use a Powers No. 5 lamp, and economizer; 110-volt current. The thumb screws which hold the lugs to the carbon arms burn off almost every week. How can I prevent it? The lamp gets grounded very often, requiring that mica insulation be renewed almost every other week. We do not show on Sunday. When I finish the show Saturday night, and leave the lamp in good working order, operating-room locked, how can it get grounded all by itself, so that it will not light up on Monday? Does cold have any effect on it? Where can I get powdered graphite? Montgomery & Company, 105 Fulton street, do not handle it in cans or otherwise. Can I use flake mica instead?"

Unquestionably the reason the thumb screws burn off is because the lug does not make good contact. Use a file and see to it that the lug makes good contact with the metal of the lamp arm; also that the thumb screw clamps the lug down tight. There must be something radically wrong with the insulation of your lamp. We would suggest that you take it to the Powers factory, No. 20 Jacob street, or to the Powers office, 115 Nassau street, have them examine it. No, cold would have no effect whatever on the lamp or its insulation. Better change the lock on your operating-room, I think. I have again called up the Montgomery Company and heard their instruction on that graphite matter. You go down again and you will be able to get 1-lb. cans of powdered graphite. The manager of the sales department assured me he would put in an order for some immediately. You can get powedered graphite there now. You cannot use flake graphite.

* * *

Curtain Coating.—Mr. P. B. Blend, Detroit, Mich., writes as follows: "Although myself and several other exhibitors of this city have experimented with different paint preparations for the screen, we have not reached satisfactory results. Will you be so kind as to give me the formula of what you consider the best preparation for coating a screen?"

I have said a number of times, friend Blend, that I consider plain white, good grade, bed sheeting, as about as good a curtain as one can have outside of possibly the very expensive patent screens. For a curtain coating other than metallic, I would recommend English Whiting (procurable of wholesale druggists), to which is added sufficient white fish glue to prevent its rubbing off too easily. also there might be added just the least little bit of ultramarine or Prussian blue, preferably the former. Mix it just as you would kalsomine. For a metallic coating, I would refer you to the recipe given in another part of this week's Department. Should you try this latter recipe I would like very much to have you report regarding it. On page 1546, December 31st issue, you will also find directions for preparing a metallic surface curtain. Also under heading "Various Things," this week, another formula is offered. I cannot vouch for these various curtain coating formulas, and would suggest that a small screen be covered first, say, one 4 ft. square, and you can thus form a pretty good idea of what the result will be.

* * *

Operators' Positions.—I am in receipt of a great many letters from operators in and around New York city and in various parts of the country as far off as Chicago, asking me to secure them positions. Let me say right now, that all applications of this sort, to receive any attention what ever, absolutely must be accompanied by conclusive proof of the excellence of the applicant's past record in projection. I cannot, and will not, recommend operators unless I have very good reason to believe that they not only possess knowledge sufficient to be able to make good, but that they are the kind of men who will apply that knowledge. The old adage has it, that the best proof of the pudding is the eating thereof, and by that token the best proof of the operator's ability is the record of his past performance. I can place some good men at fairly good salaries, but I have first got to be shown that they are good men.

* * *

Curtain Coating.—From a Pennsylvania exhibitor in whose judgment I have confidence comes the following letter: "Have noted a number of references regarding the use of the aluminum screen, and invariably they speak of fresh marks showing in the picture. I was under the impression, and am inclining a presume by which the feature was successfully obviated. You may publish the process with the assurance that it makes a screen superior to bleached sheeting, white or blue coating, and even a plastered wall. We have used all those, and find the screen prepared in this manner to be way ahead of anything we ever saw. We have read your Handbook, and consider it a valuable fund of information; it certainly supplies a long-felt want. There is little required of the operator which may not be found in this excellent little work. I have noted at all times the complaint of broken condensers. Since the condenser breakage is directly due to the heat of the lamp, my cure is to fit the machine with condensers permitting the lamp to set back as far from the film as possible. Since doing this we have not broken a condenser, a pretty good record for nine months we think. We would for certain reasons, prefer that neither our name nor the name of the town be published. The certain coating is as follows:

Take a piece of unbleached sheeting, at least two feet larger in each direction than the required size of the screen. This sheeting must be stretched upon a frame so that it does not touch at any point except the edges. Next a coat of glue size is applied thoroughly, when this has dried somewhat, a coat of flat white paint is applied. Next a size consisting of a half pound of white lead, mixed with a half gallon of a good rubbing varnish, is applied. When the paint has dried, the screen may be covered with the size. About twelve hours later, when the size is beginning to set, and is just tacky, the aluminum powder is rubbed in. A ball of cotton is tied up in a soft piece of cloth, such as an old napkin or piece of tablecloth. The powder may be poured out into a shallow pasteboard box, the cotton ball may be dipped into the aluminum powder and applied to the screen with a circular motion. When it is entirely covered, the operation may be repeated as it does not seem to cover entirely at the first application. There will be no brush marks showing as the marks of the brush in the varnish size are covered by the aluminum. Because of the fact that the exposed surface is entirely metallic the screen is much more brilliant than where the aluminum is mixed with the liquid.

NOTE.—The glue size referred to above is the ordinary paper hangers' size made by dissolving one pound of ground glue in a bucket of water.

We are certainly obliged to you for the curtain coating formula, and regret that you do not allow us to give you credit by publishing your name. You will of course realize that a condenser breakage is a big factor. Local leaks undoubtedly have gone the air farther back, but you thereby lose an added percentage of the light. The farther back the arc is the less of its light strikes the face of the arc in a condenser and the more is wasted on the interior front wall of the lamp-house. We are of course glad that you are pleased with the Handbook.

* * *

Noisy Lamp.—Saratoga Springs, N. Y., writes: "I have operated for three long years with only four broken condensers in my arcade, and one part of these was broken by accident. You will therefore see I have only had three pairs of condensers in three years. My present condensers have been in the lamp-house eighteen months and are, barring accident, good for as many months more. The whole secret of it is, I rule the edges down until they are one eighth inch smaller in diameter than the holder, which allows for expansion. I am convinced that the best carbons, Sunbeam, and have had no trouble of any kind, but my lamp has a very kind hum to it. Could you advise me how to put a stop to the noise? I am using a Fort Wayne compensarc, 60 amperes at the arc. No. 6 wires between compensarc and lamp. When I run on generator current it doesn't make any noise."

Your record of condenser breakage is certainly phenomenal, but it is not to be altogether credited to the fine even fit of the condensers, though, of course, that is of importance.

Thousands of modern lamp-houses are so arranged that there is nothing at all binding the lenses, yet they break. As to the noise in your lamp, it is due to the alternations of the current, which, under the heavy amperage, causes the carbons to vibrate. Possibly, also, some of the vibration is in the core of the compensare In fact, very likely a portion of the fault lies there. You cannot eliminate the noise entirely with any of the current transformers It is very seldom that you find a lamp and transformer that are perfectly quiet under a flow of 60 amperes at the arc. If the noise is excessive, I would suggest that you take the matter up with the Fort Wayne Electric Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., manufacturers of the compensare.

* * *

Modern Equipment.—Madera, Calif., orders a Handbook and says: "We have a pretty good show. I have been to 'Frisco, but saw no better pictures than we have here. We have a mercury arc rectifier, up-to-date machines and a radio screen."

That is the way I like to hear folks talk—good pictures, modern equipment, excellent projection. That's what spells success.

* * *

Magazine Light.—R. W. Middlecamp, Princeton, N. J., sends a sketch, and describes at some length a light he has installed near the lower magazine. I cannot quite understand from the sketch submitted just how Princeton has his lamp connected up, but the idea is good. It can be worked out in a number of different ways. Briefly it is as follows: To install a 2-c.p. incandescent light under the baseboard of the machine in such position that it will illuminate the magazine, the lamp being so installed that the opening of the magazine door will automatically light it, while the closing of the door breaks the circuit and extinguishes it. The idea is good, and I think almost any of our friends can work it out successfully without sketches. We are obliged to Princeton for the idea.

* * *

Several Things.—From Wm. E. May, Bartlesville, Okla., comes the following: "I am going to describe a few kinks I have attached to my Edison projection machine. I spaced the brass ears on the upper film guard with a rubber roller, taken from an old gate. I replaced brass rollers on top of gate with one piece steel roller low in the center. I placed a steel oil-tight grease box around the star and cam and chain on lower film guard so that I can have a loop large enough to put your head in, and cut the gate and put in a new bracket for lower guide roller so that it will fit over grease box. I now have my star packed in vaseline. I put a three-wing shutter in front of the lens, the same being 5¾ inches in diameter. The shutter is connected to the gearing by a universal joint. I grooved the fly-wheel and use round belt and motor with belt tightener to regulate belt when framing. There is only one crank turner in Bartlesville; all the rest use motors."

In addition, Mr. May makes several sketches and describes, at considerable length his method of attaching the three-wing shutter. I think, however, the description, even with the aid of the sketches would be very difficult to follow. I would rather suggest that Mr. May, at his convenience, send photographs, together with description. I am particularly interested in his method of attaching a grease box to the Edison Geneva. Most certainly the stunts he is performing with that machine would indicate our good friend, May, to be a man of ideas and ingenuity.

Tension Equalizer.—Mr. C. M. Roselle, Rosedale, Miss., who first brought up the matter of a tension equalizer, writes in part as follows: "It seems most of the men want an automatic equalizer. As we have so many things to adjust, another one doesn't make much difference. I, therefore, sketch out an idea which will apply to the Motiograph, at least, and probably could be made to apply to other machines."

The sketch is unnecessary. Neighbor Roselle's idea is to attach a very long-stemmed adjusting screw in such a way that the belt tightener of the Motiograph can be raised or lowered while running, thus loosening or tightening the belt. The top of the set screw comes up high enough, of course, so that it can be readily reached by the operator. The idea is all right, but I think it can be done better in other ways. Also, I think that it ought to be done as far as possible, either automatically or semi-automatically. Nevertheless, we are obliged to you for submitting your idea, since, no doubt, through a gathering together and examination of many ideas the final solution of the practical and satisfactory tension equalizer will be found.

* * *

Interchanging Parts.—Pennsylvania (name of town suppressed by request), sends the following: "We have two Powers No. 5 machine heads and one old Lubin. We purchased a new star wheel and cam for the Lubin, but never used them. Will they fit on the Powers No. 5? I expect to open a new theater and there is a mirror 8 ft. by 10 ft. for sale: Would it give the same result as a mirror screen? Should the eccentric bushing in the Powers fit tight in the frame?"

The Lubin parts will not fit the Powers machine and it would not be advisable to try to make them fit. The eccentric bushings should fit snugly in the holes in the frame, but not so tight but what they may be readily turned with a screwdriver. No, a mirror will not give you the same result as the mirror screen, but all the same, I wish I had the opportunity to do some experimenting with that mirror; and here is what I would do: I would first coat half of the mirror with a tolerably thin solution of kalsomine. I would then apply glue to the other half and cover the glue thinly with white smalts or "flock," or a very fine, perfectly white sand. I would then try it out and see what the result would be. Maybe it would not be satisfactory at all, but I have got an idea that it would work, and that the light passing through the thin coating being reflected back from the quicksilver at the back of the glass, would very materially brighten the screen, at the same time preventing the dazzling reflections which is the main fault of present reflecting or semi-reflecting screens. If that didn't work out to suit me, I would then wash the mirror off and get some very thin white bed-sheeting, stretch it tightly over the glass, and try it out. Again, maybe it would not show up any better than the ordinary cloth screen, but I believe it would. But, again answering your question, the mirror alone would not do at all, unless you could arrange with the mirror screen people to prepare its surface.

* * *

Troubles.—Glenwood Springs, Colo., orders a Handbook, and writes in about as follows: "The studying of the Department for the past eight months has made a real operator of me. I am now running an old Selig Polyscope; though we expect to put in a Motiograph in about a month. The town has a population of 2,000; two shows, one trust and one independent. I was with the trust house until recently, when I had trouble with the manager. When I told him that a $12 operator was by no means supposed to be a janitor, there were fireworks, and I 'got mine.' I believe it is up to the operator to deliver projection which will get the business, if he wants to remain in the game. I will send in some more ideas from time to time. I wish you a prosperous and happy New Year. This comes from one who will remain your friend and student always.

I am, indeed, surprised that any manager in the mountains should have the petrified nerve to expect a man to work for $12 a week and act as janitor into the bargain. We will be glad to receive the ideas and we trust that you will win out in the fight, for I have no sympathy with any man who wants his operator to work for $12 a week.

* * *

The Lens Problem.—Two weeks ago I asked if a 40-ft. picture could be projected on a 50-ft. throw. Up to date, only two replies have been received, one of which said it could be done, and the other said that it could not. The latter is correct. Just a little figuring will show that to do this would require a lens of less than 1½-inches E. F., and the use of such a lens in a M. P. machine would, for several reasons, be impracticable, not to say impossible; moreover, the lens curvature would be such as would preclude sharp definition. Space forbids extended explanation this week.

* * *

Figuring Resistance.—Taunton, Mass., orders a Handbook, and asks some questions concerning resistance. He will find his questions answered in the Handbook. I would also refer him to "Resistance," page 23, January 7th issue. If what he wishes is not contained either in the Handbook or in the article referred to, Taunton will please communicate further.

* * *

Tension.—Ardmore, Okla., writes: "This is my first letter, though I am a constant reader of the Department, and think it is great. If my tension is a little too tight or too loose, I use castor oil, and it makes it just right. If you get too much oil, a little rosin will fix it. Don't you think Mr. Hoffman ought to have put in what the 'public wants Santa Claus to bring them' in his cartoon?"

Many thanks for the castor oil hint, friend Ardmore, though I cannot remember that I ever thanked my grandmother for that article when she fed it to me with a spoon. Your suggestion as regards friend Hoffman's cartoon is quite apropo. He might have labeled their wish, "Good Projection."

Transformer Troubles.—S. J. Gillman, Dundee, Mich., writes: "We are using a 133-cycle compensarc. Our local lighting company is installing a new 60-cycle dynamo, voltage (110) will remain the same. Can we use the 133-cycle compensarc on 60-cycle current?"

You cannot use the 133-cycle compensarc on 60-cycle current, friend Gillman. You will have to use rheostats temporarily, while you send your compensarc to the factory to be rewound, or else get them to send you a 60-cycle compensarc, you to return the other one.

* * *

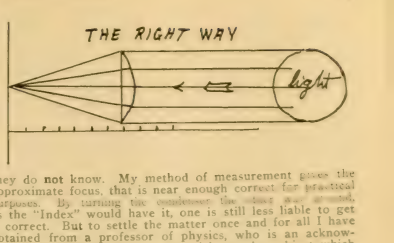
Fire Scare Advertising.—Mr. E. A. Thompson, manager Lyric Theater, Richland Center, Wis., sends in a local newspaper clipping, asking my opinion regarding the same. The clipping is a write-up of Mr. Thompson's competitor, the Orpheum Theater, of Richland Center. The whole write-up deals with the safety of the Orpheum Theater as regards fire. I do not think Neighbor Thompson, your competitor exercised very good judgment in allowing such a write-up to appear in the local paper. Of course, it is his privilege to call attention in any way he sees fit to the safety of his theater. He is also privileged to claim that it is the only safe theater on the face of the earth, if he wants to. It is not, however, good policy to intimate in public print that there is danger of fire in moving picture theaters. In that, your competitor certainly displayed bad judgment, or at least I think he did. As a matter of fact, the danger from fire in moving picture theaters is almost a joke. To cite a concrete illustration, Chicago has aproximately 600 places where moving picture films are shown. These theaters have been in existence a number of years, and I can count on the fingers of one hand the people who have been in any degree injured through fires in Chicago moving picture theaters. Moreover, such injury as the four or five people received was trivial, except one man, an operator, who was very badly burned and, if I remember rightly, died from the effects. What is true of Chicago is true in almost equal proportion of other cities. I, therefore, say that the danger of fire in moving picture theaters is almost a legitimate matter for jest. Articles similar to the clipping only serve to deceive the public into a belief that there is imminent fire danger in moving picture theaters.

Wants Position.—Mr. J. W. Matthews, manager Amusu Theater, Eufaula, Ala., writes: "Received Handbook o.k. and am delighted with it, as I have also been with the Trouble Department. I use a spoke jointer for sharpening carbons instead of a rasp. I have had two years' experience managing theaters and own a Viascope special machine and compensarc all in good condition. I wish to make a change. I will not work on Sunday."

Any one desiring to engage Friend Matthews can communicate directly with him. I fear, however, the refusal to work Sunday will operate against him.

Measuring Lenses.—New York City comes to the defense of the editor as follows: "Dear Mr. Richardson: In the last number of the 'Film Index' a correction of the directions you gave in your Handbook for measuring condensing lenses was made. The gentleman in the 'Index' says the convex side must be towards the wall. In this he is very much mistaken. The rays of the lens is that point at which the rays, after passing the lens, converge (as in the case of the front condensing lens), or from which they diverge (as in the case of the back lens). In both cases is the focus on the flat side of the lens and must, therefore, be so measured. It is thereby not necessary that the source of light be 25 feet away, as was advised in the 'Index,' but it is necessary that the rays of light strike the lens in a parallel direction. The best way is to use a lantern wrapped in brown paper, in which is a hole 4½ inches in diameter. Now, as to the other question which was up some time ago about putting both of the conden-sing lenses with the convex side away from the light. If the flat surface of the plano-convex lens faces the incident, parallel rays, the whole of the required deviation must be produced at the second (convex) surface. If the convex surface faces the parallel rays both surfaces produce nearly equal deviations and the spherical aberration will be a minimum. The convex surface should, therefore, always be toward that side on which the rays are the more nearly parallel to the axis. When an arc is very near the condensers, then are the rays between the two condensing lenses very divergent and, therefore, more nearly parallel to the axis in front of it. And that is the reason why, under some conditions, the light is better when the front condenser is with the convex surface toward the sheet. The back condenser must always be with the flat side towards the lamp."

Well, New York, when the "Index" started in to "correct" our errors they only succeeded in displaying how much they do not know. My method of measurement gives the approximate focus, that is near enough correct for practical purposes. By turning the condenser the rays are moved, as the "Index" would have it, one is still less liable to get it correct. But to settle the matter once and for all I have obtained from a professor of physics, who is an acknowledged authority on lenses, an article on the subject which will be found on another page.



Reflecting the Arc.—Mr. Harry Cluster, Baltimore, Md., contributes the following: "Enclosed sketch illustrates the manner in which I reflect the carbon tips to a spot directly over the look-out hole in the front operating room wall. By this means I am always enabled to see exactly how the carbons are burning, also condition of the crater, without eye strain. Beside the ruby glass in lamp house door I place a small bit of mirror held in frame 5, the frame being attached to the lamp house door, as shown. By means of the flexibility of the strip of metal holding the mirror frame I am enabled to bend the mirror into such position as will cause the carbon tips, shining through the ruby glass of the lamp house door onto the mirror, to be reflected to spot 4 just above the look-out hole, as shown. I have a copy of your Handbook, which I purchased from the Consolidated Amusement Company. I consider it the best investment I ever made. Any operator having one of your books and studying the same will receive compound interest on his investment in the way of knowledge of projection."

H CLUSTER BALTIMORE MD.
1 LAMPHOUSE DOOR SHOWING MIRROR IN PLACE AND REFLECTING CARBON TIPS ON SPOT 4 ON WALL 2, JUST ABOVE LOOKOUT HOLE 3.
5 SHOWS MIRROR 7 LAID ON FRAME 5 READY TO HAVE FLANGES 6-6-6-6 BENT OVER TO CLAMP IT IN PLACE

The sketch shows neighbor Cluster's idea clearly. I have seen something similar before, though it was not carried to the point of reflecting the crater on the operating room wall. Operators can easily construct this device, which may be attached to the lamp house door by means of a small stove bolt. There is no manner of doubt as regards its utility, particularly when one is using A. C. with consequent necessity for very close carbon adjustment. Your kind words regarding Handbook are appreciated. I note that you are a member of Local Union No. 181 I. A. T. S. E. and I sincerely trust that that organization is making progress, though reports from Baltimore have not heretofore been of the most encouraging kind.

Insurance Company.—Palestine, Tex. (O. A. Engelbrecht, one of the proprietors of the Gem Theater) writes: "Enclosed find money order for Handbook. Will you kindly inform me as to whether or not there is any fire insurance company which insures moving picture theaters?"

I believe friend Engelbrecht that any insurance company will insure a moving picture theater, provided high enough rate be paid, but aside from this I am informed that the Home and the Williamsbridge Fire Insurance Companies, New York City, both make a sort of specialty of insurance of moving picture theaters. You might write them and see what they will do in the matter.

Operator Wanted. Kentucky (name of town suppressed by request), writes as follows: "Enclosed find check for Motion Picture Handbook. We have had trouble with our operators ever since we started in business, three years ago. Have tried out a number who were supposed to be the best in the city, and find them to be either incompetent or careless. We show 6 go to 10:30 week days, and 1:30 to 11:30 Sundays. We make our own current with motor generator set. The price we pay for this work is $18 per week, with $2 extra for each special matinee. In the event we desire to make a change of operators in the future we would like to know if you can send us a man who is careful and competent. He must understand electricity and the operation of a motor and generator. He would be necessary to have him transferred to the local union."

I have published this letter, not for the reason that I think it probable that a really first-class man can be obtained for $18 per week. Kentucky must understand that although the hours are short, still the operator cannot work evenings, seven days in the week, and follow any other vocation. In other words, he must depend upon operating for his daily bread. A first-class operator, one who understands projection thoroughly and who is at the same time careful and painstaking, can seldom be procured for $18 per week, but, nevertheless, I believe it might be well for operators who are in position to prove their competency and reliability, and who are not particular in what portion of the country they work, to send me their names and addresses. Calls of this kind are not infrequent, and some of them pay fairly well—one last week paid $25. Bear this fact in mind, however, that it will be a waste of energy to send me your name unless you send with it competent proof of your ability, plus reliability. By "ability," I mean ability to project an A No. 1, first-class picture. I want only the names of men who can qualify to take really good positions. Satisfy me that you can and will make good, and I believe I can place a few of you at least in good houses at reasonably good salaries.

* * *

Various Things.—Kansas (name of town suppressed), writes: "Enclosed find money order for which you may make me a Christmas gift of your Handbook. I have received innumerable valuable suggestions from the Department, and have followed them to the advantage of the picture on screen. Concerning our theater: The house seats 900. We have a sloping floor, a feature only one or two theaters this part of the country possess. Our screen is a heavy plaster frame, coated with several applications of a certain varnish mixed with aluminum. Suffice to say that several men who are in the picture business have mistaken it for a mirror when viewing the projection. Any brother operator wishing the receipt for making the screen may have it by addressing me through the Department. I lay claim to the distinction of getting the best picture in this part of the valley. My light is produced by sensible and studied manipulation of the carbons. My Motiograph machine does the rest. My carbons are always burned at an angle of about 135 deg., the crater consequently facing the condensers, which makes all possible light available. Once each week we go over all connections to be sure they are clean and tight. On re-wind table we have installed a heavy piece of glass over a square hole with a light underneath. I make my own film cement. I am trying to eliminate a 'drag' (flashes of white into the dark parts of the picture); it only extends two or three inches, but worries me. My machine recently came back from the factory where some new parts were put on, including new shutter. When it returned, the 'drag' was there. If the masking blades on the shutter were made any wider the flicker would be too heavy. As it is, they do not quite cover the aperture plate during the movement of the film."

Your plant, Kansas, seems to be an excellent one. As regards the shutter trouble, the white streaks referred to are properly called, "travel ghost." The Motiograph machine is, or was, made with two widths of shutter blades. While at the factory it was undoubtedly equipped with the narrower blades. You can take the travel ghost out by a very careful setting of the narrow shutters, but you will have to get it very exact. The Enterprise Optical Company will send you an instruction book with full directions for setting the Motiograph shutter. Follow them carefully, and you will, I believe, have no serious trouble in eliminating travel ghost.

* * *

Wide Picture.—Princeton, N. J., writes: "As regards the 35-ft. picture on a 50-ft. throw, there is one machine, at least, namely, the Viascope, with which it could not be done, due to the fact that the title would come in contact with the bevel gears on the shutter shaft. My opinion is, that Rock Island could not possibly get that size picture on a 50-ft. throw. In a recent issue of the World a certain party said he would put his machine in charge of an experienced man, not a cheap $15 a week boy. Take it from me, Mr. Richardson, you will find that there are just as good operators among the young men as among the older ones. I would like to know what is the trouble that I must keep a ghost in my picture to keep a sharp focus. I am obliged to keep my field twice the dimensions it should be. I presume the fault lies in my condensing lens. As regards a lamp under a glass set in rewinding tableboard, will say that I have found a mirror to give good results."

As regards the wide picture, you will see my answer on that proposition elsewhere. As to the relative desirability and capability of young men as compared with older ones, I would not care to enter into any argument on that point. Suffice to say that the young men will receive just as much credit and praise at my hands as will older ones, provided they demonstrate their ability to "deliver the goods" on the screen, and in addition prove themselves reliable. Those are the only two things that really count. As to the ghost in your picture, you will have to be a little more definite before I can answer intelligently. By "field," I presume you mean the spot of light on the gate. Give me the focal length of the lenses you are using, distance of condenser from film, size of picture and length of throw, and I can form an opinion as to what is the matter.

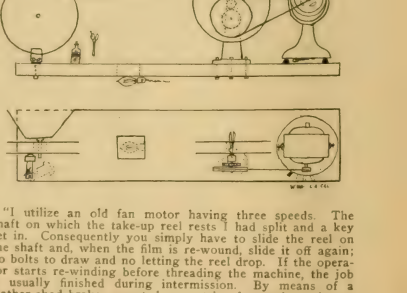
* * *

Double Convex Lens.—Mr. John Neil, East Stroudsburg, Pa., sends in the following: "I have been studying the condenser problem and have done considerable experimenting. I find that with the Powers No. 6 machine, two 8-inch focus French condensers, beveled on both sides, will produce the best picture. They make the picture look more natural than any condenser I have yet found. I would like to have your opinion on the matter. Enclosed find money order for $1.50 for your cloth-bound Handbook."

If you mean that you are using two double convex lenses for condensing, I could not even make an intelligent guess as to what the result would be. I never used that kind myself. Will you kindly inform us as to where you got these lenses, what their price is, and describe as nearly as possible the improvement in projection you have accomplished by their use?

* * *

An Excellent Rewinder.—Mr. Wm. H. Hepburn, manager Automatic Theater, Los Angeles, Calif., writes: "Have noted your reply to my letter on patches, December 3d issue, and thank you for suggestion as to framing while threading. In the same issue, page 1286, I note sketch of a rewinding device; also what you say as regards operator rewinding while running the machine. I agree with you, though I must say my operator has to do it, and that is the general rule out here. I think, however, I have a dandy rewinder, as shown in the accompanying sketch.



"I utilize an old fan motor having three speeds. The shaft on which the take-up reel rests I had split and a key set in. Consequently you simply have to slide the reel on the shaft and, when the film is re-wound, slide it off again; no bolts to draw and no letting the reel drop. If the operator starts re-winding before threading the machine, the job is usually finished during intermission. By means of a leather-shod brake, mounted on a strip of strap iron, the re-winding may be done while operating, with but very little attention. This is my own rig-up when I was operating, evolved for the reason that I found re-winding by hand kept my attention away from the more important work of good projection. I wish you a very merry Christmas and a prosperous and happy New Year."

We are indebted to Los Angeles for the excellent sketch. Rewinders should always be fitted with a motor, and where such an excellent device as is here shown is available, I shall withdraw a large part of my objection to rewinding while operating. It would be a very easy matter to add an automatic circuit breaker, held up by the film between the two reels, which would drop when the film pulled off the empty reel, and stop the motor; thus the operator would merely set the thing going, and that would be all there would be to it. You can come across with all the ideas of that kind you want to, friend Hepburn, and they will receive space.

* * *

Troubles Galore.—From Northwest New York comes the following wail of woe: "I have the advantage of hundreds of operators, in that I have met the editor of the World's Trouble Department (though he has no doubt forgotten me), said Department, by the way, having helped me out more than once. It is especially read each week. You have often remarked in the World that a good operator would not work for low wages, or if he was called upon to rewind, call for films, or if his manager made him run his machine at excessive speed, he would refuse. Now, I claim to be a good operator, not from a spirit of egotism, mind you—but a man knows what he can do—and besides my manager have always said my work was first class in every particular. Now, Mr. Richardson, suppose I am working in a theater for $15 per week for seven days, running 20 to 24 reels during the day and 10 to 12 illustrated songs and a spotlight occasionally, and in addition to this get my films from the depot, trim two flaming arcs outside, put up posters, etc., and some mornings put in three hours shifting scenery—no overtime ever paid—and supposing I ask for a raise and do not get it? It means quit; and for a man far from home being out of work in the middle of winter is no cinch. Nor does it follow that a good operator need never be idle. I can point to one house in Chicago fifteen months—the same old story—$15 all the time. Why was this? Yellow shadows and ghosts never showed in my pictures more than three times in the entire daily run of eight hours. Is this encouraging to an operator who makes his manager's interests his own?"

And so the letter continues at some length. I think the brother is mistaken in his assertions. What I said was, that I myself would not do certain things, and I promptly quit more than one job when called upon to do them. It doesn't follow, however, that I expect everyone else to pursue the same line of conduct. It does follow, however, that so long as operators allow managers to dictate to them at what speed they shall run their machines and insist on their getting films and doing errand boy work, just that long operators will have to do these things.

* * *

Machine Trouble.—From Louisville, Ky., comes a letter setting forth in emphatic, not to say lurid language, the grievance of the Broadway Amusement Company against a certain make of projector. The grievance seems well founded. I took the letter over to the head of the New York end of the concern, and much to my astonishment he declined to read it, saying he did not read long letters. He also informed me that he had himself received a letter from the same company, voicing the same complaint, and that he had not read it and did not intend to, as it was too long. I didn't know whether to laugh or swear. The situation really had an element of comedy to it. The company had sold the Broadway Amusement Company a machine. The machine had not given satisfaction, and the company was so deeply interested in that fact that they would not take the trouble to read a couple of pages of typewritten matter to discover what was wrong, or what the grievance seemed to be. On discovering this attitude I promptly passed the matter up. It is within the range of possibilities that the machine was not handled intelligently, and that the trouble arose through that fact. I do not think, however, that this is the case. The manager of the company asserted that the trouble arose through the fact that operators were not familiar with that make of machine. It occurs to me that if these people wish to sell their product, it is very much up to them to issue competent and practical instructions to operators covering the manipulation of their appliances. This is by no means the only complaint of this kind I have on file concerning the machine in question.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

The Beverly, Mass., aldermen have recently voted to grant a permit for the building of a moving picture theater on the site of the Bostonian building, on Cabot street, providing the theater management will build a brick arch wall between the theater and the Burkman block.

Mayor Brooks, of Cambridge, Mass., held a hearing recently upon the petition of M. E. Flattery and H. D. Campbell, for a license to maintain a theater in Central Square. Prominent members of Cambridge appeared in favor of the license, while the clergy were opposed to the latter. The latter stated that the theaters are bad for the community, and, in this particular case, the proposed theater is within a quarter of a mile of all churches represented at the hearing. Mayor Brooks has taken the matter under advisement. Among those in favor of the license were W. L. Davis, treasurer of the Central Trust Company, and H. M. Mowry, editor of the Cambridge Sentinel. Some of those who spoke in opposition were the Rev. J. L. Campbell, Jesse Harrell, W. H. MacFarlane, S. W. Stone and other prominent church men of Cambridge.

The Broadway Theater, Somerville, Mass., has passed under the new management of H. F. Johnson. Moving pictures and vaudeville are the attractions, with a ten cent admission rate.

The Star Theater, Newport, R. I., has undergone a change of management, and the house will hereafter be erected by Mr. J. A. Breault. Mr. Breault is an old time theatrical man, and has a successful record behind him. (H. S. S.)

BOSTON.

A local moving picture theater supplied as usual extensive order for the Biograph, and skipped "The Two Paths." The interesting part of it is that this house has never before since its inception, missed exhibiting the Biograph films. "Just a bit suggestive," was the reason offered by the manager for his action.

"Pathé Frères." "Il Travatore" was given an advance exhibition at the General Film Company, in order that the exhibitors might decide whether or not they would wish to exhibit the film. The reel made a good impression on the managers, and quite a number spoke for it. Music to go with the opera was also on exhibition at 50 cents a copy.

The Premier Theater has again advanced its admission price to 10 cents. When the Globe Theater leaves the "beat," and takes unto itself moving pictures, the Premier promptly goes 5 cents. Upon the theater's return to regular attractions the Premier factor will be the recent admission rates again.

A local house running no vaudeville and not subsisting on the face, advertises in this way: "We cater to lovers of moving pictures and illustrated songs. No vaudeville in any form whatever. No rough patrons, disgusted with cheap vaudeville seen in some of our local houses, will find the seats with interest."

The closing of the Liberty Theater, Lynn, given over by the Automatic Vaudeville Company of New York City, has made some changes in their managerial appointments. Mr. Sam La Vangie, formerly assistant manager of the Theater Comique, Scollay Square, is now manager of the Premier, Washington street. Mr. Wolfe, formerly of the Premier, has been placed in charge of the Comique, now moving pictures alone. Mr. H. H. Woolfolk now is in charge of the Premier, vaudeville alone. (H. S. S.)

Eastern Moving Picture World.

Here [illegible] notice in the Boston issue of the Moving Picture World you state that I have found a new way to reduce expenses by omitting illustrated songs and using advertising slides in their place. And now, boys, I really do not want to be misunderstood, and I will mention something so you shall not be misinformed and I am sure you will do exactly true. The Savoy program consists of two reels of carefully selected films, including comedy, scenic, industrial, educational and dramatic subjects, also two sets of slides and two sets of travelogues. The slides are all of my own make and are put on at the Savoy by me. Previous to the management of the present [illegible] now we have only one set of illustrated songs. I beg the second for said reasons since the opening of the theater.

Now let some of the wise ones figure this out. I've been in the moving business twenty-four years and this new schedule has got me. If anyone desires any explanations I shall be pleased to refer them to the proprietor. It isn't the amount one spends, it's the amount of good hard cash one takes home that counts.

Yours very sincerely,
"Say, O. Innocent Abe Savoy Theater."

P. S.—The two films from the same

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

While in the Queen city my attention was called some months to a moving picture theater, "The Royal," a very expensive proposition entirely out of proportion and of rather poor taste.

The two side columns are a monstrosity, they are heavy enough to support a Chicago skyscraper, while they are out of proportion in a two-story building. The top is also too heavy even for the big size of the columns, and the crowning butterfly is another monstrosity; in other words, the excellent design of said butterfly is lost in the out-of-proportion effect. Everything is too heavy, too rich in ornaments and the ticket box, intended for a beautiful girl cashier, has been called by many persons a splendid specimen of a mausoleum. The decorations have been overdone and the looks of the Royal Theater looks to me something like the chadeliers of the Pennsylvania Capitol, where the members of the building commission sold the chandeliers at so much per pound and, to sell more pounds of bronze to the State of Pennsylvania, they made such heavy chandeliers.

UNIFORMED ATTENDANTS AT THE ROYAL

One redeeming feature at the Royal Theater of Cincinnati is the neat appearance of the attendants. In winter they are well uniformed and in summer time they are provided with very neat and tasty white duck uniforms with caps to match.

The front is a mass of plaster ornaments piled on top of each other, as a child would try to build a house with his blocks without respect to architectural beauty. The quantity is there, but the quality is missing and while the decorators make money in selling the quantity, they lose their reputation by overlooking the quality.

The new theater of Messrs. McMahon & Jackson, "The Alhambra," is still admired by every one as a specimen of pure Moorish decorations. The Alhambra was designed and constructed by the Plaster Ornamental Company of Cincinnati.

The "Grayce," a new theater on Fountain Square, Cincinnati, is decorated with much taste and has the posters framed in the side doors of the lobby.

On this question of posters we must admit that New York and some other Eastern cities are a disgrace to the motion pictures. In the Western cities, with rare exceptions, the exhibitors make it a point to give a neat appearance to their lobbies. While they believe in the efficiency of good posters, they claim that too many posters are as bad as none at all. When the Eastern exhibitor wants to exhibit too many posters, he cannot afford to purchase a frame and an easel for each sheet and, to satisfy his bad taste of a vulgar display of posters, he nails them on his walls or hang them from any corner. The Western exhibitor, on the contrary, spends money to frame his posters and, by giving a decent appearance to his lobby, he gets the nickels.

You cannot impress the public that you show good and clean pictures when you decorate your lobby with unframed and cheap looking posters. This style of advertising was good in the past when the pictures were shown only in small houses and when the audiences were of the low class. To-day things have changed, the dirty little dumps, with small seating capacity and poor ventilation are fast passing away to make room for large, palatial houses, and the moment that the exhibitors called the attention of the public to a much better class of houses, a new class of spectators appeared and are now eager for motion pictures. Why destroy this good effect on the business in general by returning to the disgraceful advertising methods of the side show.

The Orpheum (Louisville) is big, and, like the Majestic, has a high arched lobby, handsomely decorated and lighted. The balcony giving in the lobby and the other wall ornaments are of plastic relief work, painted in different old bronze colors. The night illumination of the Orpheum is the best in Louisville. The auditorium is very high, with an arched ceiling, and decorated with much taste. The incline is such as to command a good view from every seat. The only objection to this house is the illuminated dial of a clock sticking above the screen; perhaps a good thing to remind the spectators of some engagements; but, as many others, this dial is too much like a full moon shining in the eye and spoiling the effect of the picture.

The Casino, also a ten cent house, has a very tasteful lobby, but the interior needs an entire remodeling. Two heavy columns cut the view from too many seats. As the house is very wide, they have too large a screen for the place, the said screen nearly touching the ceiling. The walls are properly decorated in somber colors, but the ceiling is too white and, with a screen reaching so high, the light of the projection reflects on the white color of the ceiling and injures the picture. While the projection is very sharp and clear, the light is not always very even.

The Columbia has also a pretty attractive small lobby. The floor is not inclined, but if the chairs are on the same level, the little man behind a big merry widow hat can see something for the fact that the screen is very high. This seems to be a prevailing feature in this section of the country of keeping the screen several feet higher than in other theaters and it is not a bad feature, as a view can be obtained from every seat and a more direct projection from the booth. The only exception is, as already stated, the Casino, and in such case it is excusable, as the house is very wide.

The Victoria, a five cent house, is not for a daily change nor for cheap vaudeville. At five cents the management cannot have a complete orchestra, but if this orchestra is composed of a single pianist, we must render him justice in stating that he is a talented musician and he knows how to accompany the pictures. At the Victoria the chairs are on the same level, with a high screen.

* * *

I am sorry that the snowstorm and very disagreeable weather kept me from visiting other houses, but, on the other hand, I gathered enough valuable facts to prove that if the exhibitors of other towns want to drop vaudeville, adopt good music and return to the idea of only two changes per week, they can prosper like the Louisville theaters.

* * *

A sure sign that the enterprising exhibitor is ready to do anything to improve the appearance of his place is the great number of orders placed with the Newman Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, for their brass poster frames and easels. Mr. Newman informed us that he would follow the suggestion contained in the Construction Page of December 24th of Poster Frames for the walls of the lobby, to advertise the program of the week.

To close this question of posters, I will call the attention to the disgraceful poster display of a Cincinnati theater. At the time of my visit, the Orpheum Theater, a small house on West Fifth Street, was a sore spot on this shopping thoroughfare. In my opinion this particular theater should be closed, as it is one of the houses doing its best to get the clergy and the newspapers excited against motion pictures. They had in their lobby a big poster fully 4 x 6 feet depicting "White Caps Whipping a Negro." Other posters, 2 x 6 feet, also showing ugly White Cap scenes were displayed on the sides of the lobby, and still other smaller posters of the same nature were hanging from every available corner. The manager, not satisfied with such a morbid exhibition, added signs in big blue letters, reading "Sensation in Moving Pictures." Can we blame the pulpit and the newspapers for their attitude against motion pictures when we are exposed daily to such an exhibition of posters.

We must render justice to the good taste of the other Cincinnati theaters for not copying the poor policy of their competitor, the "Orpheum." We wish also that New York exhibitors would realize that they cannot expect a better class of patronage unless they show more decency in their advertising methods. J. M. B.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

Picture shows are not a nuisance, decided Judge Halsey, of the circuit court, at Milwaukee, Wis., who refused to grant an injunction asked by Anthony Czechorski and others, against Konstanty Wasniewski, who declared the erection of a building for a photoplay theater would ultimately mean noisy crowds, distracting music and lessened property values.

Muran & Hilbe are giving a picture show, two nights each week, at Princeville, Ill.

Charles Derr, formerly operator for the Star, Dixon and Family theaters, at Dixon, has opened the Rose Theater, in the Moss Building, First street, Dixon, Ill.

H. V. Alford, of Bradley, Ill., has purchased the Scenic Theater, at Bradley, of Frank Miller.

The city council of Albia, Iowa, has passed an ordinance prohibiting moving picture shows on Sunday. The picture men declare they have as much right to open on Sunday as bakeries, candy and cigar stores.

"The program is generally worth the money and a little more," says the Arcola Record-Herald of the Olympia Theater.

Red and green is the color scheme of the new Star photoplay theater, at Lincoln, Ill., which has been opened under the management of Eiler Jones.

Picture shows are used by Colonel Dunn, a representative of the government bureau, which desires the safe transportation of explosives, in delivering his illustrated lecture on the proper method of handling cars.

J. C. Weber, manager of the Bijou Theater, at Jacksonville, Ill., was given an indeterminate sentence of from one to twenty years for setting fire to the Airdome, of which he was also proprietor.

Attaches of the Bijou and Nickel Bijou Theaters, at Decatur, Ill., were recently entertained by Mrs. Clara Siegfried, who has assumed the management of the Plymouth, at Minneapolis, Minn., recently purchased by her husband, A. Siegfried.

"Dreamland," a touring car sent out from Kewanee, has been touring Southern Missouri, giving one- and two-night stands of picture shows. Some time will be spent in Arkansas, and the trip will end in Texas. In the party are: Mrs. Chris Taylor and son, Walter; William Wind and William Avery, of Kewanee.

Moline's new picture house, at Sixth avenue and Fifteenth street, has been named The Mirror, a prize of $5 has been awarded to Miss Bernice Oppenheimer, in a contest. A mirror screen is a feature.

Rivalry between the royal and family theaters, at La Salle, Ill., has been ended, the managers holding a conference and agreeing to secure film service that would not conflict, and give the public assurance of exclusive shows in either place. The tendency deplored in the World columns to try and put the other fellow out of business is waning. In Springfield, Ill., there has been a readjustment of film service which, in a measure, allows the devotee to visit the different houses and not see the same picture over and over. Formerly the mad desire for "early stuff," which means more to the exhibitor than to the patron, caused the same posters in several lobbies simultaneously. The effort at harmony appears not only more profitable in reducing expenses, but the public, apparently, is as well pleased.

Fred Beck, the baseball tenor, began December 25th, with a week at the Colonial, in Springfield, Ill., a run of several weeks over the Colonial Moving Picture Theater circuit. Beck carries his own song slides and was to the operator who mars them with thumb prints or drops them. The cracked and spotted slide has hurt the vocal end of the theater, as his bright pictures were welcomed by all patrons of the Colonial. Incidentally, under the new management of H. H. Tuggle, this syndicate house has taken on signs of life. Consequently, business is better. The projection, which was annoying upon a recent visit, was perceptibly improved, and the licensed film service is, as before, up to the standard.

"Every now and then you get a picture you hate to keep one day. What about the change daily then?" is the query of W. W. Watts, of the Vaudette and Savoy, Springfield, Ill. Not that he is opposed to doing away with the change daily, but wants to look at it from all angles.

Vernon Seaver, the Peoria, Ill., building assessment magnate, has leased the Comstock properties opposite the Masonic Temple, in that city, and later, it is said, will build another small theater.

The Atlas, under the management of James C. Fleming, has been opened on Third street, in Milwaukee, Wis. Balcony and main floor will seat 1,000 in comfortable opera chairs.

Edward Stadler has purchased the interest of his partner, Emil Henry, of La Salle, Ill., in the Princess Theater, at Peru, Ill. Mr. Henry will continue to operate the Lyric, in La Salle.

Manager Russ Blair, of the Princess, Hobart, Ind., loaned his place for an hour the day before Christmas to an attorney of that city who entertained all the children he could.

"We Don't Go to Supper," is the manner in which the Colonial Theater, Ill., suggests that the evening business is desired. — J. H. M.

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

BOMBASTICITY

Is Twin Brother To

ELASTICITY

We have nothing in common with either twin.
We state facts and firmly abide by them.

"SLEEPY HOLLOW"

For Release Wednesday, Jan. 11th, 1911. A Dream-Picture 905 Feet Short

EXHIBITORS:

NOW that you have resolved to stay in business and to do more than a thriving business, it behooves you to stick to this resolution, and stick fast. Nestor Films will not only help you to stick, but will also lift you up to the highest pinnacle of Mount Prosperity.

Just keep up your unflagging demand for ONE NESTOR A WEEK, making sure that you always get it. Of course, you know that WEDNESDAY is NESTOR'S RELEASE DAY; and if you insist on getting all NESTORS as soon as they are released, you'll encounter no stormy seas in your sail to success—nay, we'll guarantee that you won't even see the suspicion of a ripple.

If you have not yet started getting NESTOR FILMS, start now, remembering that "IF IT'S A NESTOR, IT'S NOT ONLY GOOD BUT BETTER THAN THE BEST."

Scene from "Sleepy Hollow"

"SLEEPY HOLLOW"

has been simply and truthfully announced as a picture of a dream and a dream of a picture—it is even more—it is a truly great picture—the equal and, in story, the superior of that amazing creation of ours, "AT CEDAR RIDGE."

The acting and the story will stir and thrill the onlooker in spite of himself. The scenery, marvelously beautiful, and the photography, clear and perfect, are a source of genuine delight. If pages were to be written about this dazzling film nothing more laudatory could be said than that it is better than the best.

Order it Now! Get it as soon as you have read the synopsis on page 100.

You can get NESTOR FILMS at any of the wide-awake Exchanges. If you are dealing with a sluggish one you'll have to rough-house pretty lively in order to get SLEEPY HOLLOW.

For Bulletins, synopsis, etc., Write to "Nestorlist 1006" 147 Fourth Ave., N. Y. DAVID HORSLEY, German

R FILMS

Surpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

EUREKA!!!

All The Exchanges Given Here Below

HAVE FOUND

That to Reap the Harvest One Must Buy

NESTOR FILMS

For Release Wednesday Jan. 18th

"Their New Minister"

A whole reel of real fun

Don't Miss That One Nestor a Week

EXCHANGES BUYING NESTOR FILMS

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
Bijou Film and Amusement Co	1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
Capitol Film Exchange	422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
Central Film Service Co	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Chicago Film Exchange	48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.,	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O.
	315 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Consolidated Amusement Co	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Eagle Film Exchange	43 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Empire Film Exchange	150 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Dixie Film Co	503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.
Gaumont Co	Montreal, Que.
Globe Film Service Co	107 E. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Green Film Exch. (Inc.)	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	413 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1317 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Paramount Film Co	428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	34 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co	723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	301 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
United Film Co	Troy, N. Y.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Company	108 E. 4th Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

For Release Wednesday Jan. 25th,

"The Man In 23"

A Excruciatingly Funny Film

Don't Miss That One Nestor a Week

NESTOR FILMS ARE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

vings Bank Building, 4th Ave. and 14th St., New York

More Scientific Films Desired.

Microscopic subjects on the moving picture screen are, or at any rate were, rarely to the general. I think I am right in saying that Mr. Charles Urban, in conjunction with Mr. Martin Duncan of London, was the first to show enlarged moving pictures of microscopic objects to a popular audience. The experiment was only partially successful. The Alhambra Music Hall, London, was the scene of the exhibition. One of the films represented cheesemites. When the cheese mite is enlarged on the screen, he is by no means an agreeable looking person. The result was that the Alhambra audiences—audiences resembling those which gathr at Mr. Hammerstein's vaudeville house—did not like these somewhat gruesome moving pictures of a substance which they ate. So these, and similar microscopic films shown on the screen in 1903, only met with partial success. Urban and Duncan were before their time.

* * *

But moving pictures of microscopic objects were bound, in the nature of things, to win general acceptance before long. I understand that Pathe, in their Paris factory, have a department especially designed for the production of moving pictures of objects invisible to the naked eye, which are of scientific, general or popular interest. I saw one of these pictures the other day in the Pathe projection room on Twenty-fifth street, and it interested me so much that I made a note to give this film place On The Screen, which I do here this very week.

* * *

The film is entitled "Boil Your Water." It illustrates, first of all, the abstraction of some water from a pond. Every microscopist knows that pond water, though apparently clear and pure, is full of small living organisms which, when magnified in the water, give the liquid a truly forbidding aspect. You do not care to drink the stuff, unboiled.

* * *

They are almost human in their actions. They live, move and have their being much in the same manner as human beings. They eat, gather and fore-gather, multiply, and, generally speaking, live a life of ceaseless activity and movement.

* * *

Of course, they have a beauty all their own, but you need be a microscopist to appreciate them. I have dabbled a little in microscopy, and so can appreciate the delicacy and difficulty of this work. From the living organisms we pass in the Pathe picture to the dead organisms. The water is boiled, and then you perceive that it is full of an inert mass of dead matter. The organisms have been killed by boiling. Then comes the third stage in the treatment of the water. The dead organisms are filtered off and the final part of the picture shows the scientist, who has conducted the experiments, treating himself to a glass of purified clear water. The work is absolutely being carried out by competent hands and the result is that by the aid of the subtitles, a perfectly clear and interesting object lesson in the value of the microscope in purifying our food is given. Thus the moving picture may be said in this example to be both entertaining and instructive.

* * *

Pathe, I believe, have a series of these microscopic subjects. They will probably have a very favorable reception at the hands of moving picture audiences. More favorable than they would have had some eight or ten years ago when I saw the Urban-Duncan film, because people at large have now grown accustomed to looking for such subjects as this on the screen as an occasional relief to the monotony of the Western drama. The film makers have only commenced to touch the possibilities of the scientific applications of the moving picture. Few of us, I imagine, who go to a moving picture theatre, would be pleased with a programme made up entirely of microscopic subjects or scientific subjects of another kind, but, generally speaking, I think we could do with more. The microscope covers an enormous field in revealing to our eyes the wonders of minute animate or inanimate life. Ally the microscope with the moving picture camera, and you have the same minute world moving on the screen. The work is difficult and delicate, but it is always appreciated whenever shown and pays for itself, if only by way of advertising.

* * *

I said this was a Pathe picture. I want to hold up this fact as a lesson to the independent film manufacturers. As I am writing this article I turn over the page of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD which contains a list of the Independent releases for the last month. Would you believe it, these releases only contain a single subject at all deserving of being called scientific. This is a Solax film entitled "Salmon Fishing in Canada." If the Independent manufacturers, both singly or as a body, want to strengthen their hold upon the exhibitors and the public, let some of them get down to the making of a few microscopic subjects. Or if the use of the microscope in conjunction with the moving picture camera is beyond them, let them at least give us more scenics.

* * *

I started out to commend this very fine Pathe film because it deserves it. As I am writing this page, the temptation to say to the other manufacturers, and particularly the independent manufacturers, "go and do likewise" is strong upon me. I doubt very much whether the independent programme, which consists chiefly of dramatic and comedy subjects, will long continue to please the public, unless it is diversified in some way or other. Scientific subjects would diversify it. So would scenic subjects; so would industrial subjects. All these things are conspicuously absent at this moment from the independent programme. Let me give another illustration. In the independent programme for the week ending January the 7th there is no industrial subject, and only one scenic. In the licensed programme there are three scenics. Neither, it will be seen, contains either a scientific or an industrial subject. So that both sides of the business are, it is evident, lacking in this respect.

FLICKERS.

The light is always good on an operator's dime novel.

* * *

Dr. Cook has made arrangements to pose for moving pictures. Whether real Eskimos and gum drops will be used is not known, but then, the Doc was never strong on that veracity stuff.

* * *

Among the Christian martyrs is to be included the Youngstown, Ohio, manager, who was arrested and fined for not making ladies remove their hats.

* * *

A Reading, Pa., justice condemns moving pictures as a peril to every boy and girl. A Brooklyn justice provides refreshments, toys and moving pictures as a treat to 800 poor children. We allow the reader one guess as to which of these two learned gentlemen wears his heart in the right place.

* * *

The Mayor of Painesville, Ohio, is legally supposed to be languishing in jail. He was "pinched" by the prosecuting attorney for exhibiting the Passion Play on Sunday. When politicians fall out, honest men get their dues.

* * *

We have been reading several long-winded, dreary "addresses" on moving pictures. We would print them, but what's the use? The only leg they have to stand on is the darkened auditorium. Light up, brothers, and end this agitation. It will help the usher too. It works both ways.

* * *

A test for moving picture "cuss words" was made upon two Columbus deaf mutes, without success. They must have been swearing in Gaelic, or the committee would never have failed to bring in a true bill.

"MORAL LESSONS" ON THE SCREEN

TWO RECENT EXAMPLES ANALYZED

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

THE TWO PATHS—(Biograph).

On account of the Biblical quotations used as a foundation for its sub-titles, together with the evident moral lesson this film is intended to teach, it must be classed as a religious play.

On this account it must be approached with the question: "Does it fulfil the good purpose which is presumably sought for it?" It is not difficult to answer that it cannot do so because of its strained manufactured crudities. In the moral and religious world the "Two Paths" may be compared with the street evangelist, a mna who on account of an "experience" feels called upon to be a teacher of others. Equipped with a few Bible texts, some tragic or extreme stories, the nature of which are often more revolting than convincing; lacking education, logic or power, he fancies himself a capable guide, little realizing that he is of no value to anyone unless perchance someone lower in the moral scale than he himself had been. The "Two Paths" may fill just such a condition and can only occupy such a similar place. The writer of "Two Paths" has failed to recognize the fact that people are neither warned or convinced by revolting conditions; it is universally conceded by religious and moral authorities that when such conditions are presented to the average and normal mind they are met with a defensive barrier named "such a thing could never happen to me." Again the author is in error when he depicts such a violent entrance upon the "wrong path" as that shown in this instance; does he not know that young people DRIFT into sin and that they do not JUMP in after the manner he depicts in this scene. No one ever heard of anyone being shown a Bachanalian feast and invited to take a plunge, it is questionable even if the devil would advocate such a course.

Allurements and enticements, seductive and deceptive methods are the weapons of the enemy of souls; it is such as these portrayed in life to-day that should be interwoven in any subject intended to be a helpful warning to the innocent and the unwary; an orgie would be repulsive to any but a degenerate mind, and for the writer of "Two Paths" to place young women generally on the verge of readiness to take a leap when it is shown them is an insult to the tenderness of the refined feminine mind.

Again, the undisguised Mephistophalianism of the tempter is doubly wrong in that no tempter would so openly disclose himself and no such vaunted temptation would succeed. The author of the play seems cognizant of this weakness, for under the title of the "Two Paths" he adds the suggestion of "symbolism" in an evident attempt to cover the failure of the production. Apart from the symbolic suggestion of the satanic features of the tempter the whole play is as devoid of "symbolism" as it is lacking in truthfulness to the actual, possible and natural. The portrayal of the "right path" is exceedingly weak and uninviting; here was the author's strong opportunity for a bright picture instead of the labored struggle represented, there was certainly nothing to make the "right path" positively attractive except the absence of sin and sorrow. A great opportunity is lost here, that it is lost is a positive proof of the consistent weakness of the whole conception.

Viewed as a whole "Two Paths" can never serve the purpose the author would have it believed he desired, the writer of this review could not advise anyone to see it, either as a lesson or a warning; judged positively it cannot do good judged negatively it may prove harmful, as its teachings are like those of the deformed character preaching to others out of an evil experience. Nobility of thought, loftiness of purpose, purity of language and eloquence of virtue, are the essential qualifications of true preaching, whether in word or picture, and because these are lacking to "Two Paths" it fails in its mission.

THE PREACHER'S WIFE—(Vitagraph).

Although "The Preacher's Wife" is not a religious play, yet because it concerned a religious teacher, it was only natural that the writer, who is anxiously watching all such productions, should desire to see and study this recent Vitagraph production. Concerning the ability of those who take part and the artistic nature of the production little need be said, as the quality of the Vitagraph work is well and thoroughly known; the sentiment, exactness or inexactness of the conception of the writer of the play is also the subject of the writer of this review. It is universally conceded that the impression produced by a play, as by a speech, are those which first hold the mind when the end is reached, it is here the pent-up feelings are released in just such a truthful manner as the subject may have secured; hence, the applause, the sanction, the approval or disapproval, praise, either full or stinted, or perhaps criticism. "The Preacher's Wife" produces no emphatic experience, it evokes no applause (perhaps this is not expected), neither does it elicit praise (this may have been expected), one just feels like saying: "Well, I don't think much of the preacher," in a tone of dissatisfaction with him as he appears as here presented. As the "Preacher" is the chief character in the play any dissatisfaction with him must be applicable to the whole, for the success of the whole is what he makes it. As a preacher himself, the writer of this article must take up one of two positions, he must either approve or disapprove the "Preacher;" and, as he cannot approve, he must disapprove, and declare in so doing, that this disapproval is not merited by the average preacher, but by the strained and extreme conception in the mind of the writer of this play which can only have a tendency to bring contempt upon preachers if such a character as the "Preacher" were true to life, as happily it is not. This lack of life truthfulness arouses the suspicion that a true portrayal was not sought, but a strained one for some purpose not revealed, but certainly not creditable to the minister, one calculated to cause them to be pleased by a mild kind of sanctimonious burlesque of either their love-making or married life. This also leads to the natural sequence of such a play, that if it falls foul of the ideal in the preacher it must also do so in the case of the wife; as while it is possible that such an experience may have come in days gone by to a preacher's wife, "The Preacher's Wife" is not a fair representation of either the probable attitude of either preacher or wife. To be just to the writer of this play, it will be fair to say that his conclusions, so far as the wife is concerned, may be true, if he intends it to be understood that the "Preacher," evidently a man nearing the forties, married a mere short-skirted girl in her teens such a difference in years is reprehensible, and would produce friction in any walk of life. For a minister to be represented as falling in love with one, who to him is a mere child, simply because she has "sparkling eyes" is a slight upon the solid characteristics of a man who is supposed to be a student of human nature as well as a teacher. When read, the extreme puritanical ideas imposed upon the preacher are not only too extreme, but place him in a bad light, as a man of almost unconvertable temper, in a way that holds him up to the scorn and ridicule of the beholders, so that if, unfortunately, anyone imagined that the character was true to life, it would only tend to bring both the minister and the religion he taught in deserved contempt.

Because the young wife is reading a novel the preacher is represented as shocked, and with angry countenance rebukes her, and with another action throws the book in the fire, again, when she attempts to wear a pretty hat not satisfied with an unnecessary rebuke of her vanity, he crushes it and hurls it through the window. Such violent outrages are an outrage upon religion, if true, and an insult to the ministry, is not true, the portrayal of such puritanicalism and bad temper is an obscene imputation on preachers of the present time at any rate. One bright spot in the young wife's emotions of a young lover, although one troubled at the impulsiveness of her actions in the weakness of temptation, that the sweetheart was good. Returning to her home, her father's wrath against the preacher is lessened under the circumstances, but there is a satiric sarcasm in his denunciation of the minister as "leaving his wife's soul while saving his own, playing him in the false role of a sanctimonious villain." A happy reunion of the wife and the preacher, who asks for mutual wives pardon (presumably for his severity), and winning her love they supposedly live happily together. It is to be regretted that the play is cast in such a mould, in every sense the author has sought to produce painful extremes which gave an untrue color to the whole, leaving no wise reflections to follow, so at the end of the play one feels neither pleasure, sympathy or satisfaction.

The writer would welcome a recast of such a subject entirely true to life as the result then might be full of moral truth and useful example.

LICENSED.

"A Family of Vegetarians" (Lubin).—A comedy based upon the fad of a family to live without meat. A young man pretends to be a vegetarian to win the daughter and she pretends to be a vegetarian to please him. After the wedding they meet in a restaurant, where they are both devouring meat as though famished. The girl's father comes to visit them and smelling meat broil on the table begins to eat. Then comes the denouement, and all admitting they like meat, the enforced practice of vegetarianism is at an end. In places the fun is both fast and furious, and in the attempts to keep the knowledge of actual likes from each other much interesting comedy develops.

"The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg" (Kalem).—A war story representing the exploits of the now well-known girl spy in destroying a Union ammunition wagon. She forges an order and gets inside the Union lines and succeeds in disposing of the wagon so as to take his place. Then, she uses a stick of dynamite to explode the powder wagon. This is a good war story, but the producers have made one serious mistake. Dynamite was not used for such purposes as early as the Civil War. It was used during the Spanish War, but it did not come into use for blasting or other similar work until 1867. It will be seen that in this instance the explosive material is an anachronism which rather disturbs the unity of events. The setting of the picture is excellent and the photography is all that could be desired. There is a succession of thrills which will satisfy the most obdurate audience.

"Running Away From a Fortune" (Pathe).—A comedy which represents Denny, the man named in a will as heir to $10,000, beating it when a dog runs toward him carrying the will rolled up like a stick of dynamite in his mouth. There are interesting collisions and an eventual capture. But while it lasts it keeps the audience laughing.

"The American Fleet in French Waters" (Pathe).—A short picture showing characteristic scenes when the American fleet visited French waters. They are seen steaming up toward Cherbourg, and then comes the landing. The photography is excellent and the picturesque features of the scenes are well produced.

"In Full Cry" (Pathe).—An interesting picture of a stag hunt in France, representing picturesque scenery and offering an attractive picture of the way a stag hunt appears. After the killing the entire party goes for the hunt dinner to one of the most beautiful castles of Old France.

"A Mexican Romance" (Urban).—The story of a girl who pined away and failed to recover from an injury when her lover was forbidden the house. The doctor divining the cause of her continued illness, succeeds in inducing her father to allow her lover to return. Then recovery is rapid. The dramatic features are wanting, but perhaps the film will please.

"A Coaching Trip in Devonshire, England" (Urban).—An attractive outdoor picture, giving a good idea of the type of scenery in Devonshire, together with views of the buildings and other interesting features. The trip is so well photographed and appears so natural that one almost feels as though he was there, actually going over the ground.

"His Wife's Sweethearts" (Biograph).—Tells how a husband was deceived by his wife in wearing his wife's new fur coat and hat, and the difficulties he encountered before he discovered his mistake. He got two black eyes, a much bedraggled suit, was arrested as a burglar, and had to send for his wife to identify him to get him out of the police station. It has some funny situations and numerous funny suggestions based upon mistaken identity.

"After the Ball" (Biograph).—A humorous story, dealing with the adventures of a gentleman who over-stayed his allotted time at a masque ball, and dreaded to return home and face his wife. Ringing two friends into the scheme to help him out, it starts well, but miscarries. Happily, the curtains falls before the fearful punishment of the unfortunate individual is inflicted upon him.

"The Blue Horse Mine" (Lubin).—An excellent picture, telling the story of a Western mine, an Eastern man, and a girl and an Indian who ran a race and won $20,000 with which the mine was developed. Upon this hung the success of the young man's love affairs. Eventually everything came out right. The Indian ran the race, the money was put into the mine, and the rich pay dirt that came out disposed the girl's father in favor of the young man, and all ended well with the Indian as a partner in the business. Without any particular dramatic merit, the picture is pleasing because it tells a pleasant story in a snappy way, and leaves the audience with an impression that the world is a pretty good place after all.

"In the Tall Grass Country" (Melies).—A lively story of Texas, involving jealousy which arose from a misunderstanding and almost separated a girl and her lover. The representation of prairie life is extremely realistic, and the flight of the frightened Eastern girl is thrilling. Then comes the introduction as the young man's sister and the girl falls into his arms, ashamed and embarrassed by her silliness in not investigating before accepting a gossip's assertions.

"Justinian and Theodora" (Selig).—While this is an excellent reproduction of a Roman scene and with Roman characters well represented, it will be likely to fall flat in many places because few understand what it means. The scene of the escape of Justinian from the Goths is sensational, and will perhaps save the picture. The stories connected with those ancient parties make interesting pictures if they are understood, but it requires a knowledge of ancient history to make them intelligible, whether they represent actual characters or are made up to illustrate some story or poem.

"The Romance of Hefty Burke" (Edison).—The love story of a big, honest East Riverman, who nearly loses his sweetheart because he listens to a proposition from a South American revolutionist who has a handsome daughter. His jealous rival carries the news of the meeting to the girl; but the difficulty is straightened out, though the girl, in her anger, nearly spoils the chances of the revolutionist getting away with his cargo of contraband articles. Hefty and his sweet heart make up, and apparently life is in a fair way to run smoothly with them afterward. Perhaps the principal interest in this picture will be the different types of individuals which are all characteristic of the water front of New York.

"The Stranger" (Kalem).—A poetic picture, representing happiness in the guise of an old man going about from place to place where he is needed. His work in a typical home of discontent is shown, and after accomplishing what he was supposed to do he is shown making his way onward into the night.

"Catalan, the Minstrel" (Pathe).—A beautifully colored film telling the story of a minstrel, so famous that a king asked of his queen that he might be sent for a time to his dominions. The queen does so, entrusting a quantity of princess perfume to him to present to the king. He is stopped by the king's teachers and murdered. The perfume leads to the identification of the murderers, to whom swift punishment is meted out. The pictorial work is exceptionally good, while the acting is in harmony with the subject.

"Carnival of Japanese Firemen" (Pathe).—The principal interest lies in the fact that the picture clearly depicts the difference between the customs among firemen in Japan as compared with those at home.

"Crazy Apples" (Vitagraph).—A laughable picture, telling the story of the love affairs of two country people, with a stern, objecting father to add spice to the occasion. When the young man is compelled to doff his trousers, the queer actions lead to the impression that he is insane, and he is hurried away to an asylum. The girl soon follows, then both escape. This relieves the farmer's mind since he had begun to think his apples were the cause of the sudden outbursts of insanity, when as a matter of fact the loss of a pair of trousers was the real cause. The situations are comical and the acting is quite in keeping with the spirit of the theme.

"A Gambler of the West" (Essanay).—A live Western story, which will interest chiefly by its faithful reproduction of a typical Western gambling den. Indeed, it would be

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

WESTERN DRAMA: AMERICAN FILMS

An Arizona Romance

Release Monday, January 9th

A dramatic Western release with the Arizona Desert as a background.
AN INNOVATION IN WESTERN FILMS.

COMEDY. (SPLIT REEL)

Lucy's Lover. The Borrowed Flat

Release Thursday, January 12th

Two on one reel, and both funny as—well, they're a "screech."

COMEDY. [SPLIT REEL]

The Battered Bridegrooms. A Dental Disaster

Release Monday, January 16th

Two more on one reel. Both funny as they can be made. Real laugh-makers.

WESTERN DRAMA The Bonanza King Release Thursday, January 19th

A Feature—a sensation—a treat and a surprise. A film you'll repeat and repeat. A film that will make for us a reputation for drama.

FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE!!! GET THEM! GET THEM!!

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS—ALL

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE ONLY BIG SUCCESS

among motion picture machines is the

MOTIOGRAPH

and you can't show the best pictures without it.

The quality of pictures will increase your patronage

Get a MOTIOGRAPH

The wearing qualities will save repair bills and breakdowns

It will encourage your operator to use a Motiograph, because it is so simple, accessible, and durable. Remember the Motiograph is not an experiment—it has proven what it can do. Send for catalog

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 501-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, U.S.A.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agent, 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City
EDWARD H. KEMP, Agent, 883 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.
J. F. BROCKLISS, Agent, London, Paris and Berlin

difficult to suggest anything seen in one of those dens which has been omitted. The story is of an old man and his daughter, he so addicted to gambling that they are penniless. Because of her beauty and her pleadings the gambler gives back the money the old man has lost and thereforth refuses to allow him to play in his place. Later he assists in preventing the old man from gambling elsewhere. Through the influence of the girl the gambler reforms and a wedding is the inference at the close of the picture. A Western picture quite out of the ordinary and filled with typical life scenes among the gamblers of that still misunderstood region beyond the great river

"The Doctor's Secretary" (Gaumont).—It seems a pity to see good material and excellent photography wasted upon such a story as this, which is merely a repetition of the oft-told tale that old age and youth are not proper mates. The novelty, if such it may be called, lies in the fact that the girl persistently refuses the old suitor and eventually marries his young nephew. Then the old gentleman contents himself with having the young people near him.

"The Yaqui Girl" (Pathe).—A Western drama by the American company, presenting the tragic results of the jealousy of a Yaqui girl for a young Mexican, which leads to her killing him. The staging and costuming are all good, but the story itself is one of the oft-repeated ones, worked out with a different background and costuming. Jealousy is the same. Its results are the same, regardless of where they are seen, or who exhibits them. It is not above the ordinary in any degree.

"Where the Wind Blows" (Vitagraph).—The story of a young man who goes to sea, is shipwrecked and returns long after to find that his sweetheart has gone. He discovers her by means of a dog he gave her, who leads him to her home. The story is well told, the acting is good and some of the scenic effects are above the average. The acting of the dog in leading the young man to the home of her mistress is excellent.

"The Two Paths" (Biograph).—Whether a theater is a desirable place in which to preach a sermon on morality is still an open question. If the regular stage can preach it without offense perhaps the silent drama can be invoked as effectively. At any rate the Biograph company has produced a sermon in this picture, representing the results of the two paths taken by two girls, one downward and the other upward. One leads to death and eternal damnation, as the books have it, while the other "shineth more and more unto the perfect day." The picture is graphic, but is somewhat depressing in its influence and in drawing.

"Art and the Legacy" (Lubin).—A comedy representing the way two young people practiced what they called art. The girl receiving a legacy determined to buy one of the young man's pictures for $200, which she did, the dealer receiving fifty per cent. of the proceeds of the sale as his commission. The sales continued, one buying the other's pictures with the proceeds received from the dealer until they chance to meet in the store and the legacy has dwindled to $6.50. Just then the man receives a telegram from his father, offering him a position in his steel mills at $5,000 a year. He accepts, saying that he will start the next day, bringing his wife. The picture is filled with interesting and lively comedy and will please any audience. It tells its story simply and without unnecessary complications.

"The Misplaced Petticoat" (Pathe).—A comedy representing what happened to a man when he arrived home and his wife found a petticoat in his grip, which the servants at a hotel had placed there because he did not tip them. The complications are increased when the wife goes to a lawyer to sue for a divorce and the lawyer's wife enters and claims the petticoat. It takes a journey to the hotel and the confession of the servants to clear matters up. Meanwhile some amusing scenes have developed.

"Dutch Kids" (Pathe).—A pretty scenic picture, giving views in Holland and showing the characteristics of the "kids" very graphically.

"The Argonauts" (Selig).—A story of the gold region, presenting a girl going with her brother dressed in boy's clothes, fainting when her brother is wounded in a pistol duel over a card game, and the discovery of her sex which follows. Ultimately the difficulties are all made smooth and the gambler who shot her brother reforms, finally marrying the girl. What is better, they all strike pay dirt and presumably become wealthy in the mines. The interest in the picture will lie principally in the reproduction of the life of that region. It is as nearly perfect as it can be made now.

"In the Days of Chivalry" (Edison).—A story of love and lovers taken from the quaint verses which tell of Accausin and Nicolette. Probably not many who will see the film have read the verses, but the picture has the merit of being interesting without a knowledge of the poem. It is one of those love tales in which, first the father of the young man, a duke, objects to his son's marriage and imprisons the girl. She escapes, and the young man searches for her, exacting a promise from his father that he may wed the girl of his choice if he wins the next battle. He wins, but the father still objects, and the young man runs away during his betrothal. The girl, a princess in her own right, now encounters her share of difficulty, her father having ideas about her marriage which do not coincide with her's. She runs away, disguised as a harper, making her way back to find her lover, now the reigning duke in place of his father. They are married and the love tale ends in consummation. The setting is very elaborate, and the pageant of dukes and earls, and knights and ladies, which move across the screen are all interesting, appealing strongly to the imagination and presenting a picture difficult to surpass in its beauty and completeness. Many of the scenes are artistically conceived and carried out, and the entire picture will attract attention because it is above the ordinary, possessing qualities which go far to refute the many criticisms of motion pictures and their weakness. It will take rank among the best films of the month.

"The Redeemed Criminal" (Essanay).—Two criminals working together, one is caught and sent to prison for a long term, but despite all the efforts of officers, he refuses to disclose the name of his pal. The latter reforms, and when his former accomplice is released, has become a minister, and holds a high place in society. The released convict begins his depredations again and breaks into the home of the fiancee of the clergyman's son. Then he carries the jewels to the minister and goes him to place them in his safe. There the son finds them, and is with difficulty convinced that the clergyman is not the thief. The minister don's his burglar's garb and returns the jewels, and when his former partner in crime returns for them, reads him such a lesson that he reforms. The interest is not in the drama, since the dramatic strength is insignificant, but a story is told in such a direct way that its complications are not difficult to understand. The audience can follow the plot easily, and see it unfold without an elaborate effort of the imagination. Further, the characters do what almost any one would under similar conditions. The picture will please wherever it is presented.

"The Artist's Pay Day" (Gaumont).—A comedy presenting an artist in difficulties. During his absence a robber enters his studio, and before he goes is compelled to pay the artist's many bills to avoid discovery. The artist, failing to secure the money, arrives home disappointed and is agreeably surprised to find the receipted bills in his coat pocket.

"All is Fair in Love and War" (Vitagraph).—A comedy showing how some mad-cap young people played a trick on a maiden lady and a bachelor, sending different letters to each one, appointing a different trysting place. The rain comes down, they both take cold and all is over between them henceforth and forever.

"Sleep, Gentle Sleep" (Edison).—A bright comedy, presenting the case of a young married man who desires to go to a smoker, and his wife who is determined he shall not. She puts sleeping powders in his wine and he, to get away, puts the same powder in her tea. Result: Both fall fast asleep. A tramp steals in, sees both asleep, drinks more of the wine and falls asleep too. There they are found by the maid in the morning. The closing scene is a scurry to get a policeman there to take the tramp away and wake the two young people. The laugh begins in the first scene and continues to the end.

"The Bolted Door" (Kalem).—A threadbare story of unrequited love, representing a young woman tiring of waiting for her lover to become sufficiently prosperous to marry her, which causes her to marry an other, but more prosperous suitor. She discovers her mistake too late. Sometime afterward they meet at a hotel, and she attempts to renew the intimacy, but he, realizing that she had no use for him before he had money, bolts the door of his heart against her.

"The Cowboy's Innocence" (Pathe).—A drama by the American Company, with the scene laid in the West, where Mexicans place cards upon the persons of others and then accuse them of cheating. There is an Indian girl in the story who sees what has been done, but is unsuccessful in reaching her destination because of the fact that she is bound fast by the Mexican. She gnaws through the ropes, however, and succeeds in getting information to the young man's sweetheart, and the other cowboys go on a long chase after the Mexican and the young man, reaching them just as they fall over a cliff in a life and death struggle. They reach the edge of the cliff. The young man is saved by a lasso, but the Mexican plunges to the bottom. Then comes reconciliation, and all the good things which usually accompany it. The ride by the cowboys is too long. The time and the distance supposed to be traveled do not add to the realism. The scene where the Indian girl gnaws the ropes is effective and somewhat novel. The rest is the same as the usual Western picture.

"A Lock of Hair" (Urban).—A woman follows the suggestions of an anonymous letter and finds a lock of hair in her husband's pocketbook. A violent quarrel ensues, but a little child stops all trouble by declaring that it is a lock of her own hair, placed there as a surprise. She really does substitute one of her own. The perpetrator of the outrage calls just as this discovery is made, and slinks away realizing that he has failed in his purpose to make trouble. The acting of the child and her quick wit in substituting one of her locks for the other is the feature of the film.

INDEPENDENT.

"The Outcast's Salvation" (Atlas).—A strongly religious story, representing how a young man sunk to the depths is rescued by a mission worker and eventually finds his mother, whom he supposed he killed in a drunken brawl. There is much of human pathos in the picture, and it presents a phase of life unfamiliar to dwellers outside the large cities, but those whose home is there will recognize it only too well. The agony of the boy is a bit over acted and melodramatic, but it is stirring and therefore holds the interest of the audience.

"The Golden Gates" (Champion).—The story of a boy and girl separated when children, meeting again after years in a Western ranch house, where they fall in love, but a locket reveals the identity of the girl and the attraction is understood. The picture presents a possibility, though perhaps in not many instances does it occur.

"Unreasonable Jealousy" (Imp).—A wife jealous of her husband's profession and his numerous patients which take him from her. She meets an actor and they go to supper together. The doctor is informed and goes to the cafe, where he sees them together. Upon the arrival at home he begins to upbraid her and she, pleased at having aroused his jealousy, leaves him and goes to her room. Later the doctor is called to attend the actor, whose skull is fractured, and refuses, but relenting, he performs the operation, which saves the man's life. The wife learning of it understands the man's nobility of soul, asks and is forgiven her foolish escapade. It is a story of the eternal triangle, worked out with a new setting. The world is full of them, but not all are exhibited to the passers.

"The Squaw and the Man" (American).—A Western drama, presenting some new and interesting features of life in that section of the country and affording opportunity for some lively work on the part of the actors. The story is well told, presenting the charcteristics of Indians clearly and developing some interesting situations as it proceeds. It is the story of a man and woman, told in a new way and with a different setting, a story as old as life and equally as incomprehensible and difficult.

"An Indian's Elopement" (Bison).—Much difficulty is caused in the Indian camp when Blue Feather makes known her love for White Bear, though her father wants to give her hand to Gray Wolf, who offers to buy her with costly presents. Then comes an exciting elopement, chase and capture, but before the sentence upon them can be executed they are rescued by a missionary. The battle between the rivals is an extremely exciting and realistic scene. When the disappointed suitor wants his presents back and doesn't get them a bit of savage comedy is shown. The entire picture is a good study of Indian life and represents some of the best features in that direction this company has sent out in some time.

"The Rustic" (Itala).—A drama which has for its central character a rustic who displays some remarkably good qualities. The photography would be difficult to equal, while the acting is as good as it could be. The strong cast performs its work to perfection. The picture will attract unusual attention from the motion picture loving public.

"Taming the Terror" (Bison).—A Western picture, representing a bad man who is bad more from uncontrolled and exuberant spirits than because of innate ugliness. Warned by the sheriff to refrain from creating a disturbance he is quiet for a time, but ultimately becomes involved in a quarrel with a gambler who cheats at cards. Without knowing it the sheriff pursues him, but upon learning the cause of the trouble allows him to go. The bad man has been effectually tamed, however, and upon marrying becomes a very inoffensive Bill. The picture is interesting, inasmuch as it presents some phases of Western character which are typical and afford opportunity for those unfamiliar with such individuals to become acquainted with types that are fast passing away.

"Drama of the Engineer" (Ambrosio).—A jailer is saved from financial difficulties by an engineer. Later the engineer mistakes signals, causing a railroad wreck, for which he is imprisoned. His wife falls sick and his daughter writes him a pathetic letter. Upon showing this to the jailer he is permitted to go for the night, and reaches home in time to hold his wife in his arms as she dies. There is much of pathos in the picture, and for that reason it is dramatically strong, while the story it tells is sufficiently powerful to hold the attention of the audience. The acting is quite up to the sentiment of the story, while the photography is as clear and strong as any film this firm has released in months.

"Grandfather's Pipe" (Ambrosio).—A comedy depicting the results when a youngster experiments with his grandfather's pipe. The sweet smoke is fun, but the illness which follows is anything but funny for the unfortunate boy.

"Aunt Julia's Portrait" (Lux).—Everybody objected to the good aunt's portrait, even the horse joining in the protest and exhibiting his objections in a way that was unmistakable. The different objections and the way they are reproduced constitute the fun in the picture.

"Sunshine After Storm" (Williamson).—The old story told over again of the country girl who is lured to the city by a false offer of marriage and discovers too late that she has loved not wisely, but too well. Leaving her lover, she walks the streets in despair until taken in hand by a Salvation Army lassie. Next she goes on board an emigrant ship, but is wrecked and is washed ashore at her old home, where her former lover receives her with open arms, and the sun breaks through the clouds. The photography of most of this picture cannot be too highly commended. It is clear and of perfect tone. The shipwreck scene reproduces lightning very vividly. And the ocean views where the wreckage is drifting over the waters near shore is realistic. The acting in most instances is good, though occasionally it weakens and doesn't appear up to the standard required by the picture or its sentiment. As a whole, however, it is a remarkably fine film and deserves a long run.

"Tim Writes a Poem" (Lux).—He believes he is afflicted with the divine afflatus, and he exercises it. But the results are somewhat disastrous and extremely disconcerting. The audience will reward your presentation of this reel with a vociferous laugh from the beginning to end and liberal applause at the close.

"Mrs. Richard Dare" (Solax).—A lively comedy based upon the fact that owing to events over which he had no control a young husband sent a girl friend to impersonate his wife in meeting his millionaire uncle. The wife ret rus in time to discover the note and she goes too. It is not necessary to describe the mixup that follows, or how it was finally straightened out. It is funny, and the humor is of the subtle sort, which takes hold without the audience really knowing when it happens.

"Hypnotized" (Thanhouser).—The tale of how a traveling hypnotist takes advantage of a young girl and so influences her that she goes away with him. Her lover follows, shows up the fakir and rescues the girl despite all opposition. It is a good story, well told and the audience seems intensely interested in it.

"A Jealous Wife's New Year Day" (Itala).—A comedy that raises more than one scream before it is finished. It depicts the woes of matrimony when jealousy takes possession. The wife's experience upon this New Year Day will afford an opportunity for a good many people to have a hearty laugh at her expense and the expense of her unfortunate husband.

"Norwegian Waterfalls" (Itala).—A beautifully tinted subject which illustrates very graphically some of the most striking falls in Norway. The falls themselves and their surroundings are reproduced as truthfully as it is possible to do with the camera. Often the operator makes mistakes in his viewpoint and again in his exposures, but in this instance he has successfully accomplished what has been recognized as difficult. The picture is what it purports to be, an artistic reproduction of waterfalls as they actually appear in nature.

"A Daughter of Virginia" (Pathe).—A stirring story of war times in the Old Dominion, a tale which will make good audience sit with bated breath if they are like the one we were the picture was seen. It contains some striking war scenes and there is a dramatic quality to it which it would be difficult to surpass. The story is told with a directness which makes it convincing, while the acting is quite in sympathy with the subject. At the young man prompts a war are these, something which is far from pleasant. In truth, it would be hard to show at a time which would be likely to keep an audience interested better than this one.

"A Sacrifice—and Then" (Solax).—A story of friendship. Two men go to war together and one rescues the other when badly wounded. Years after, employed in the same office he chose his gratitude by saving over the girl he is to marry begged the friend will marry her and save himself the consequences of embezzling from her father. He doesn't do it, however. The embezzlement is discovered just as the wedding nears. The confession dies on his room of heart disease as the police come to arrest him. This is an ambitious subject, worked out with care. It opens with a battle scene which is much too realistic for the peace of mind of the audience. The rescue is thrilling and admirably managed. The succeeding scenes in the business offices at the reception and the wedding are good photographed. The acting is quite satisfactory, save the photographer of the prisoner, probably the director failed to do his work properly. This could be remedied by re-photographing the scenes. Probably nothing else would do. The last or death scene is one of the most striking in months. It is a firelight scene, and is an artistic triumph. No piece of actual firelight was ever more natural, and it emphasizes the death of the embezzler and loyal friend, a strange psychological combination. It is strongly dramatic in its simplicity and its suggestion. It could not be improved. With the middle scenes of this picture re-photographed to make them clear it would be one of the masterpieces of the closing year.

"Elda of the Mountains" (Nestor).—A story of a coward who leaves a simple country girl who loves him devoted and wins the daughter of the wealthy man of the country. But the country girl appears and the craven loses both. The dramatic quality of the picture is strong. The man's cowardice is admirably done and the wrath of the girl's people at his abominable conduct makes an impressive scene. The setting is in the mountains, and very, while the photographer has done his part satisfactorily.

"The Great Medal Contest" (Eclair).—A comedy representing the hunt of Mr. Penniless for a medal which carried with it a prize of a large sum to the lucky finder. His efforts are so vigorous that he is arrested and confined in jail for disturbing the peace. There he finds the medal squeezed into his clothes and is able to claim the princely reward.

"A Well-matched Marriage" (Edair).—The story of a young man who is compelled to marry, by his uncle, in order to be sure of obtaining money. Accordingly, he, being slight in build, seeks out and marries the smallest woman in a museum. Later the uncle visits them and is charmed with the one who, only one year old is much larger than his father. Realizing that money is a prime necessity in such a business he leaves them the contents of his well-filled pocketbook.

"The Wise Druggist" (Imp).—A woman, becoming jealous of her husband and, failing to listen to reason, determines to commit suicide. She tries different methods, but decides upon poison. Going to the druggist, she asks for a quantity. He gives her sugar. Then having made her preparations and trapping to bathe in the water, she drinks the poison, covering the joke the husband sees it so much he is pleased. And when the friend returns to claim the overcoat in which were the letters that caused the difficulty they assure themselves by bribing him with it. The joke is amusing and contains a number of unique trick funny scenes.

"Mrs. Danver's Divorce" (Yankee).—A graphic story of a young husband, his mother's influence and his refusing to an explanation. This causes the divorce and the loneliness of the wife and herself. Ultimately he learns the truth, however, and attempts to seek reconciliation with the divorced woman, but she leaves to his explanation and tells him never to come near her again. The next day the papers announce the marriage of the former Mrs. Danver to a friend of the family. The man who caused the trouble remembers when too late that he has only himself to blame for whatever has happened to him.

"Mrs. Gaylife's Visitors" (Amerian).—A lively comedy representing the difficulties into which a woman was plunged by some her maid decided to get married and sent one of her customers pictures instead of her own. Mrs. Gaylife was horror a little involved because she had a friend come in to help her while the time away while her husband was absent. When the time of marriage most sees the face of the maid he makes a getaway that would do credit to anyone. The maid arrives at some particular destination. The one in a hurry to arrive at some particular destination. The film contains much of fun and numerous comedy situations, which are not of the chase or trick variety. The situations is amusing, too, but there is plenty of logical fun in the piece.

"Beaux Not Wanted" (Pathe).—A comedy, representing two young men, friends, being in love with the same girl, whose father is a decided objector to beaux. Dick hits upon a scheme and Arthur meditates on hugging and kissing the girl. Her father discovers them, and Arthur is obliged to feign toothache to explain his presence in the house. Consequence the unfortunate gets the dentist extracts all of Arthur's front teeth. It is amusing when the girl sees her toothless sweetheart. And to make his cup all the more bitter, Dick makes away the girl. It is lively and a funny film.

"The Pinkerton Man" (Pathe).—A detective story which represents the Pinkerton man as falling in love with the woman whom he suspects is the widow of the criminal he was after, but who left every evidence of having committed suicide by drowning. The pursuit of his man returning after six months to get his wife. The husband meanwhile has reformed and would have shot the detective from under the table only he dropped dead before he could do it. Sadly the detective leaves the widow and returns to the East. Not much action, but the story is told correctly in a way that makes it understood and therefore interesting.

"The Pasha's Daughter" (Thanhouser).—An American young man in trouble is assisted by the daughter of the Pasha to escape to a woman's distress from the Turkish dominions. He urges her to go with him, but she refuses. They exchange tokens. Some months afterward a handsome girl appears at his home, whom he does not know, but when she enters it lower part of the face is concealed by the veil. She tells him that she has decided to be an American bride in addition to being a Pasha's daughter. The scenic effects are interesting and the story is lively enough to keep the audience wondering what the end will be.

"A Straw Ride" (Artist).—There is something that will make people in many audiences turn back to their younger days when they went to barn dances or singing schools. There is the straw ride as natural as it was years ago, and there is the old country barn, quite as natural as the ride. Of course, complications arise, they nearly always did at straw rides and in this instance there is difficulty because one young man's best girl went out with another. It leads to a fight in which Arthur is shot. Oh, well, what's the use? You know the rest, only you can't appreciate how natural it is, and what a thrilling feeling it engenders until you see it and watch that ending with its consummation of all the hopes of the two young people. It is a most drawing-room, on the lines that grasp and holds one so that you can't take your eyes from the screen. Then when you see it you will realize what a homely subject of this character is capable of doing to an audience. The producer deserves congratulations for hitting upon such a good subject, and then bringing it out so satisfactorily.

"Days of the Early West" (Champion).—Here is a thriller. The company going across the plains in quite the old way; the usual incidents of a settlement and the construction of a cabin, the Indian attack and the brave defense, the sending of a dog for aid, which arrives just in time to drive the Indians away before the burning cabin falls to upon the inmates. It is no doubt true that those who see this film will look upon a reasonably accurate representation of many things which actually occurred. Not always, only but many times. The story of another pan one settlement is summed up in this film. The shooting has been done with ability and with understanding of the scenes which will touch to the interest. In truth, the interest was exacted upon the women and of tragedy. Only the faithful dog stands between the settlers and certain annihilation. The mechanical work has been well done. The entire picture is realistic and holds the interest closely to the end.

"Trapped" (Columbia).—A story of moonshining in the West with the exciting moments which often accompany that illicit business certainly represented and worked out. The scenic effects have been developed with care and with due regard to the unity of the story, while the exciting scenes represent climaxes which hold the interest of the audience at a high pitch.

"The Scarecrow" (First National).—An interesting story of a tramp finding a pocketbook, hiding it in the pocket of a scarecrow and when caught and searched allowed to depart for the want of evidence. Through a strange coincidence, the man who lost the pocketbook is obliged to borrow from the scarecrow and finds the lost wallet in the coat pocket. A smart detective then takes the place of the scarecrow and when the tramp returns for his booty he is easily captured. The story is worked out ingeniously and is interesting above the average.

"Bear Hunting" (Great Northern).—A short, snappy comedy which laughably depicts the adventures of a gentleman upon this dangerous quest. The fun is continuous and the laughing never ceases.

NOTES OF THE LOS ANGELES STUDIOS.

By Richard V. Spencer.

Imp Coming?—Mr. Turpin, representative of the Independent Moving Picture Company of America, was in the city recently on business. While here he talked with local directors. Local studio gossip is to the effect that Mr. Turpin is looking over the ground and sizing up the climate, preparatory to establishing a Los Angeles Studio for the Imp Company.

Selig.—The Selig Company spent a merry Christmas. The day brought with it an agreeable surprise in the shape of a carload of presents, presented by Mr. Francis Boggs, the director, to the individual members of the company.

Bison.—The Bison Company, on a recent trip to Santa Monica Canyon, a rugged, picturesque canyon, specially adapted for taking Indian pictures, ran out of rations and were forced to kill and eat their pig mascot, "Bill." For the week following "Bill" appeared frequently on the menu card.

Mr. P. C. Hartigan, formerly of Kalem and Vitagraph Stock, has retired from the Bison Company and will leave shortly for New York.

Mr. H. Ryan Conway, whose photograph appears herewith, is a member of the Bison Stock Company. Mr. Conway's early dramatic training was acquired with the Morgan Stock Company, Rock Island, Illinois, where he commenced his dramatic career as a utility man, returning in two years to be the featured leading man, winning popularity at every turn. Among his many successes in stock may be mentioned: "Sir Richard Kato" in "The Case of Rebellious Susan;" "Launcelot" in "Merely Mary Ann," the name part in "Sherlock Holmes;" "Col. Bonham," in "Arizona," and "Checkers" in the play of that name, and many others. Mr. Conway's introduction to the Coast was as "Frank Fuller" in "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," a role for which he gained much praise, and which led to his joining the Bison Stock Company last May, since which time he has appeared in many leads. Mr. Conway, as will be seen from his photograph, is still a very young man, which fact, in addition to his finished acting, horsemanship, and handsome stage presence, have endeared him to lovers of Western films.

Among the Los Angeles Exhibitors.

W. R. Gruber and E. A. Fischer, owners of a chain of moving picture theaters in the Middle West and on the Coast, have purchased the lease of the American Moving Picture Theater, of South Broadway, and signed a lease with the owners of the property for a five year term. The lease was purchased for $15,000, and the rental is said to be $2000. This gives the syndicate a Los Angeles theater in addition to three others scattered through Southern California that have been acquired during the past month, the other three being the Unique, of San Bernardino; the Pickwick, of San Diego, and the Fisher Theater, of Pasadena. Plans for another new theater in Los Angeles are now in preparation.

R. W. Woodley, former proprietor of the Optic Theater, of South Broadway, has completed negotiations with the owners of the property at 332 South Main street, a theater to be erected for him with a seating capacity of 900. The rental consideration will amount to about $40,000. The theater will be of excellent design and of first-class appointments.

Kaiser, Sturm & Hughes, proprietors of the Liberty Theater, have begun the construction of their second theater at the Plaza. The theater when finished will be first class and will involve in its construction all the latest innovations and improvements in moving picture theater construction.

A RIPPLE FROM THE SPRINGFIELD "SUN."

When you throw a stone into a still pond it makes a splash and then you can see ripples radiating, one after the other, into the distance as far as the eye can reach. We have been comparing this little phenomenon recently with the editorial business in general throughout America. For instance, let a large metropolitan daily come forward with an attack upon any institution, whether it be moving pictures or any thing else, it makes no difference, and directly it is copied all through the land in more or less modified form by many, many sheets and papers of all kinds and conditions.

This is brought to our minds directly in poring over the clippings which reach us through many sources. We have particularly in mind the case of a young New York boy who was arrested for burglary, and confessed all, ere positively attributing his downfall to moving pictures. The New York World took up the case, and used this instance as the basis of a bitter crusade against moving pictures. For our own peace of mind we investigated the case and found that the boy had a long prison record, but that was no difference to the New York World. It is needless to say, the crusade was echoed and re-echoed from Maine to California. It started a country-wide censorship movement which resulted in nothing, of course; but, at the same time it was like the stone cast in the water, it produced the ripples that radiated far and wide. The most surprising part of us of all this rippling across the country, is the lack of editorial energy throughout the land. In most cases the same editorials come back to us through other papers absolutely verbatim, without the least effort to change except to cut down in some instances for lack of space.

One of our subscribers, Mr. W. J. Youth, of Springfield, Ohio, sends us a large clipping from a New Yorker in "The Springfield Sun." It is an article by a certain Charles S. Kay, labeled: "Some New Views of a Familiar Subject." They do not tell us who Mr. Charles S. Kay is—he may be a leading educator or he may be a common hack writer as far as anyone can learn. From the very start the article betrays lack of knowledge of the subject. Instead of giving any "new views of a familiar subject," the gentleman quotes from other people always, and never uses his own knowledge at first hand. It is plain to be seen that his editorial is a ripple, a ripple caused by the splash of an unfortunate article that recently appeared in Pearson's Magazine.

With the contents of that article we care not to mention to deal. It is the usual thing in the way of destructive picture criticism. We simply wish to call the attention of the editors of the Springfield Sun to the fact that they should not fall for such stuff, which is only reflected glory from some other defunct.

We have very pleasant recollections of the Springfield Sun. The last time we were in the office it was conducted by a very pleasant young gentleman whose name was Howard Earth. We have certain fears that Howard is no longer with the paper for if he was we know his sentiments towards the showman's profession in general would have prevented such an article getting through without a blue one of the blue pencil. We suspect the Springfield Sun's article to come rippling back to us through a hundred lesser sheets, verbatim. Verily, a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

—H. E. HOLMES.

For the convenience of such commuters and shoppers, one may happen in the neighborhood of the new Pennsylvania Terminal, Thirty-second to Thirty-fourth streets will be found a new and cozy theater, with a seating capacity of 350 exhibiting pictures only and known as The Valencia Theater. The very central location chosen by the Wonder Amusement Company, and the other advantages offered for 10 cents, is continuous at a high tension. Two new Standard Americus moving picture machines, with motors in the hands of a competent operator, occupy the projection room.

SWEAR WORDS IN THE FILMS!

Profanity in the films? Then it's a real case of "where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

* * *

Of course, it was the villain who swore. It could not have been the golden-haired hero.

* * *

We venture now to prophesy that that Cleveland "squawk," about "cuss words" in the silent drama, will spell the rout of the Enemies of the Picture. Give them enough rope and they will hang themselves.

REPARTEE MILD, SAYS THIS MUTE.

Inspired by the round-robin of stories declaring that mutes were reading "cuss" words upon the lips of moving picture actors, a reporter on the Fort Worth, Texas, Record, purports to have taken a lip-reader and attended the exhibition of a train-robbery film. When the bandit shoved the gun under the engineer's nose, the bold bad man is declared to have said: "Give that quarter I let you have last week." And the engineer replied: "Oh, for the love of Mike, can't you forget a nickel now and then?" After a hobo appeared upon the scene, the bandit censured him with: "You've got that wig on hind-side in front." This brought the rejoinder: "I couldn't find the tramp, and had to use the Marc Antony wig." Whereat the engineer remarked: "Julius Caesar." The station agent's daughter coupled her entrance with the following caution to the engineer hero: "Now, Bob, don't squeeze me so hard in this picture." —F. H. M.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Montreal Exhibitors are fighting, tooth and nail, in the courts, against the $500 license. They have been at it a year already, and it begins to look as though their determination will win the day.

Owosso, Mich., exhibitors have decided to make war on the church members and delegates from the women's societies which recently tried to close the theaters on Sunday. Petitions to the council to leave the theaters unmolested Sundays are being circulated through the factories and largely signed. The theater men say that if they are compelled to close their doors, so will the news stands, drug stores, restaurants and confectionery stores.

Moving Pictures in Berlin.—The cinematograph theaters, which are springing up in Berlin and other German cities, are a sociological blessing. Countless thousands who were in the habit of wasting their time, money and substance in beer gardens and cafes are now attracted to the moving picture shows.

From the N. Y. World.—More than two hundred thousand people in New York see moving picture shows every day. The placing of these of the masses of the people on a higher educational and moral plane has been followed by an increasing patronage.

New York State Law against admitting children under 16 is to be put to the test of the courts. Max Rabenovitch, ticket-taker of an Albany theater, was arrested for violation, found guilty and fined $100. Fine was not paid; bail was renewed, and the case carried to a higher court.

Milwaukee, Wis., has a U. S. mail horse that takes a peep at moving pictures whenever he stops near a picture show.

Lady in Williamsport, Pa., has a dog that is very fond of moving pictures, especially when other dogs are on the screen.

Letters to the Editor

CONCERNING SCENARIOS.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—I see that the editor of the licensed trade circular is out with his little hammer again, and seeks to curry favor with his employers by taking exception to the remarks made by a World correspondent on scenarios. All his arguments can be turned against the supporters of the sheet he pretends to edit, for it is well known, and many of the licensed manufacturers have admitted it themselves, that many of their late productions are inferior to what they did twelve and eighteen months ago. He knows it, or, if he is new in the game, he ought to be informed, and when he tries to tell the exhibitor that the current productions are superior he merely undermines the business, as exhibitors know better and will not invest in new theaters unless they can be assured of a more plentiful supply of really good subjects. People living in glass houses should not throw stones, not even mud, and I leave it to the intelligent exhibitor if I am not right in my contentions.

As to the scenario, he shows his unfitness to even pass an opinion on the subject, when he says that a scenario can be written in three hours! Yes, after seeing some of the pictures on the screen we can well understand that; but the writer who furnishes original subjects, and outlines the scenes and details, cannot do it in three hours or even three days. As to the prices paid, I have the proofs to show that $5 is a common figure, some get $10, and rarely is $25 paid. He is talking at random when he says that licensed manufacturers pay from $25 to $35 for scenarios written in three hours. If such was the case, a man of his fervid imagination would quit the editorship of a house organ and make over $100 a day by nine hours' work. —J. M. B.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

, Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 30, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—We have organized in Philadelphia the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of seeing that no laws are passed which may prove detrimental to our rights and interests, and to see that some of our present laws are changed or new ones passed which will prove beneficial to our undertaking. The membership fee has been placed at $5, and monthly dues of about $3. We would like to hear from other exhibitors' associations throughout the country as to what amount of dues are found necessary to cover the running expenses of such an association and also exchange views with the secretary of such as to subjects of mutual interest which might be brought up before the meetings. Yours very truly,

CHARLES F. KELLY, Secretary,
Thirteenth st. and Germantown ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

New York Lawyer, 7 Years' practice, with previous experience as accountant, Commercial Correspondent and Salesman, seeks position as office Manager or traveling Representative for a Film Exchange or Film Manufacturer. Am now an Exhibitor, and can intelligently discuss Films and Service. Position desired is one offering fair remuneration, and in which intrgnity, education and good address are essential.
B. A. L., Station E. Brooklyn, N. Y.

SLIDE ARTIST
Announcement & Advertising Slides

Can Cartoon any song, or prepare copy for classy ad. My Slides are repeaters. References with sample work furnished reliable party. Address,

NED CLEAVELAND, Cartoonist
WASHINGTON C. H., OHIO

RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, THE REPRESENTATIVE TRADE PAPER. $2.00 PER YEAR.

BIOGRAPH

THE MIDNIGHT MARAUDER.—Mr. Blowhard is forever throwing bouquets at himself as to his bravery and as a member of the "Gimlet Club" he would have been awarded medals. On this particular evening he is boasting of his wonderful prowess to a party of friends, stating that he is afraid of nothing—human or beast. He goes so far as to tell them that the bearskin rug adorning his room is a trophy of a bear hunt when he subdued and killed the mighty brute with no other weapons than his strong arms and hands. They for politeness sake pretend to believe him, and he becomes as cheery as a blower pigeon. That night there calls a burglar on an expedition of pilferage. He is a tangling affair and overturns some article of furniture at every step. The noise arouses the Blowhards and he has a chance to prove his mettle. Well, it was a case of one trying to get away from the other, and in the mixup they fall out of the window with Blowhard uppermost, thereby saving him bodily injury. The burglar is taken into custody by the policeman on the beat. At first glance in the morning, paper you would assume Blowhard a hero, but that "but" is the second line of the heading which gives the credit where it is due.

HELP WANTED.—Don't pull a bluff, for it may be exiled and there is no more uncomfortable feeling than after having a bluff called. Of course Jack was in dire distress when he made a desperate appeal to his uncle for money. On account of his reckless habits Jack's allowance from his uncle is cut off. His pleas for restitution have been received with a deaf ear by the latter, until he is forced to resort to some extreme measure in order to make his uncle loosen up. A great idea strikes him and he at once proceeds to put it into effect by writing the following letter: "Dear Uncle: If you have cut off my allowance I face starvation. Unless we can make peace before eight o'clock I shall commit suicide and the family name will be disgraced." When he receives this letter while he is superintending the decoration of the dining room and preparations for his daughter's birthday party, and in his excitement he forgets it. Meanwhile, the clock's hands are moving slowly but surely toward the fatal hour, while Jack is preparing for his fake shuffle. After he considers hanging, but that don't seem dignified, poison would be better, but he finds a bottle labeled "Poison" with water which would make a fine cocktail. Still suicide don't come. Of course, we see the reason. It is 8.30 when he remembers the time, and after reading the letter, makes a mad dash for the telephone booths, only to discover, with aid of the doctor, the long face is perpetrated by the latter giving him financial help, hands him the "Help Wanted" page of the morning paper.

THE BARBER.—Tony, the barber, on his way to the shop meets little Alice, the newsgirl, who runs a stand on a neighboring corner. He at once becomes smitten and pulls out nothing else. Later they are betrothed and little Alice Tordini has made a good catch. However, clouds gather when Alice's sister Florence, who is a vaudeville artist, returns from her road tour with her affianced, Bobby Blair. For the moment Tony sees Florence he transfers his affections to her. Poor Alice becomes aware of the wanding of Tony's love for her and the latter also falls when on the night of the Barbers' Ball Tony escorts Florence home. After a few passionate romantic reasons that life without Tony is impossible so she is about to emulate the heroine of a novel and has landing by taking poison. Her unendurable existence with a pistol when Mack enters, but the bullet also intended for her own love-torn head passes through Mack's hat, causing him stiff. Recovering himself, he wants to know the cause of this attempt at self-destruction and Alice tells him in detail of the inconstancy of Florence and Tony. At first Mack is wild with rage for a second thought he realizes that Florence is not worth worrying over as far as he is concerned, and confesses Alice of love for Tony, so then and there a new vaudeville team is formed, with prospects of something even more serious. Mack invites Alice to go to the theatre with him, which invitation she most willingly accepts. At last all the two couples have met and for a moment it looks as if there is going to be something doing. However, the ruffled condition of the situation is smoothed out and each seems to be satisfied with the change of hearts and the quartette find significance in the dancing master's call "Hands all around." Change your partners. Hence it is once certain that Alice and Mack the celebrated vaudeville team will each delight the hearts of the vaudeville fans, while Tony will father and shave to maintain a home for the extravaudeville artist Florence.

EDISON.

A FAMILY OF VEGETARIANS.—This is the story of Mr. Brown, a vegetarian and Mr. Jenkins, a meat eater. Mr. Brown has a marriageable daughter who rather likes meat but does not dare to express her desire. Mr. Jenkins pretends to be a vegetarian in order to win the heart and hand of the daughter. The young people marry. Becoming very hungry after a brief honeymoon they order chicken prepared in the usual old home style, each pretending and wishing as to the best manner to please as asked for satisfy the craving in himself or herself and each other. Together they stage a delicious meal of chicken, and a laughable time ensues when they discover the deception and inconsistency from so long a continuance, both vowing never more from hunger to have an affair between the helpless young people about such things. Same calling hand evidences ongoing at

The following day Mr. Brown for staunch vegetarian, in a "row" for his meat and daughter and son-in-law. It so happens that he finds himself alone at the dining room table, and partakes of the same tempting fare to try just a little. He finds it so palatable that he helps himself to a second portion, and so on, until there is a ravenous appetite. The family catching him in the act of eating meat, forgive him unanimously as well as most laughable, his base excuse being of to avoid and how that they seem to understand much relief they all agree to sit down to their first square meal.

THE ROMANCE OF HEFTY BURKE.—Hefty Burke is a big-hearted, sturdy boatman of the East Side of New York City. He falls in love with Maude Casey, proposes to and is accepted by her over a boat given by the Salem Tailors, the "Big" Marks, a rough sort of a character who is a sailor boarding house runner, has aspirations for Maude's hand but is refused by her also of Hefty. He shows this when he discovers the reciprocation of Hefty's affection by Maude at the ball.

All goes well with Hefty's love affair until one day he is bowling in the alley when he comes to see a girl fall from the rail of a freight steamer in the harbor and quickly dives to her rescue. This fracas about an acquaintance of Maude's disrupts the engagement between Hefty and Maude Casey. The day after the rescue Hefty sees fit to call at the freight boat and inquire for the health of the Senorita, who it turns out is the daughter of a prominent Revolutionist, who is taking a cargo of ammunition to South America to help the rebels against the government of Equador. This accounts for the secrecy with which the sailors are lowering into the hatchway fully on the deck Hefty once again and discloses the fact that its contents are rifles.

Hefty and the others at the boarding-house, including Maude, are invited by the Senorita to them to the effect that a vessel then loading for South American ports is suspected of carrying contraband and that the immediate object is that this is the vessel in question, but is too big hearted and generous to accept the five hundred dollars reward offered for giving information obtained in such a way, and pledges secrecy. The Senor, after the fashion of his race, decides to join the party in the fight for freedom, promising him high rank in the army and perhaps the hand of his own fair daughter.

The meeting between the Senor, his daughter and Hefty at the home of the former, at which latter hears an appointment made for the next evening. This news he immediately imparts to Maude Casey who tells the Senorita that she knows that Hefty and the Senorita are together, writes Marks but a few paltry dollars now in sight, but five thousand dollars reward. Hefty, however, though tempted is loyal to Maude, and if he has followed himself he is attracted by the dreamy eyes of the Spanish girl, he quickly pulls himself together and refuses the offer.

Maude next day, just before the time for the ship's sailing, receives a characteristically blank letter from Marks telling her that he has happened overcome by remorse she rushes to his boarding house and tells him of the disclosure she made to Hefty and the plot to capture the ship. He intercepts Marks just as he is about to inform the harbor police and forces him to accompany him in a taxi-cab to where the Senorita is in such a way that Marks is unable to give the information. Hefty is introduced by the count and Marks, in fact it becomes necessary for Hefty to administer a knockout blow during the entertainment. This is accomplished and the ship sails safely sailing. Hefty forgives Maude and we see them good friends at the finish, much to Marks' discomfiture.

ESSANAY.

THE COUNT AND THE COWBOYS.—Count Alpheus Louis Dupre, a typical European specimen in the little town of Hardpan up the stage coach and is introduced to the people of the town with a letter of introduction from his father's friend in the East. The same reads: "Friend Hawkins: This is introduced to you by count Dupre, who comes to your town to look over mining properties where you have given us such good advice. Jack Dupre."

The count looks the part. He is tall and looks distinguished as he is. He is well dressed and stylish and proves immediately a source of great wonder to the gaping cowboys who help him out of the stage coach. Hawkins, the postmaster, presents his letter to the town keeper, who sees a good possibility for the union and fame of his towns, by introducing a real nobleman, supposing the count is given the freedom of the city and told to make himself at home.

It is not long after the count has fairly established himself at the tavern, surrounded by cowpunchers, that some uncouth attack during which one of the cowboys draws a gun. The Count remonstrates with the cowboy and gives an exhibition of his skill with the pistol. Soon the cowpunchers lost the French Count boys, much to the amusement of the crowd and especially to the newspaper men entered the tavern's chamber, startled a moment with the count's sword and pistol, but on being introduced they treat the matter with a handshake for the count. Shortly a cowboy rides up with a telegram addressed to the postmaster, in characteristic of the count, who begs to transfer himself a moment, a telegram, stating that the mine is a valuable one and that the count is a real nobleman.

The cowboys are fascinated and the shower falls upon the count for entertaining them. Once gone, one as I do not wish to be found dead or buried with the seventeen that I will tomorrow. Signed Alkali Ike, Rough Rider, Hardpan.

The meeting of the boys arrives and with his servants the Count repairs to the field to witness and the unexpected arrives Alkali and the cowboy doubters of course this part of the program and Alkali produces a bottle of whiskey, and the Count witnesses with every screwing awe as Alkali finishes his six consecutive hors d'a combat. He is the town hero of the hour, who, having to desire to throw away his life, turns and runs with great haste down the road to catch the stage which is just leaving the town. The cowboys who have enjoyed the spectacle, watch after him holding their sides with laughter. Pershaps on the rear of the stage the Count thanks Heaven for sparing his life and makes a solemn vow that he will never again explain Fredrick duelling to Western cowboys.

THE REDEEMED CRIMINAL.—Spike Hennessy, cracksman and his pal, Kid Carson, blow the safe of The Continental Trust Co. and just as about to pack up the loot when they are discovered by the night watchman, Hennessy, with his powerful physique, grapples with the officer, and gives the Kid his chance to escape. Hennessy knocks the watchman unconscious, but is captured by several police officers who have come in answer to the police alarm.

Hennessy is committed to The Third Degree but, although the police are morally certain that he had an accomplice, they cannot force a confession from him, and he will not reveal the identity of his pal. He is sentenced to twenty years, and while in the cell is maddening that he was alone on the job.

Carson reforms and later becomes a minister of the gospel, striving to atone for his past misdeeds by living an upright life and working for the good of his fellow men. He is married and has a grown son, who is in love with Margaret Fairfield, a young society woman.

Hennessy released from prison returns to his old and evil ways, and proves that his hand has not lost its cunning by cracking the safe of the Fairfield mansion, looting it of the family jewels, one of the stolen pieces being the Fairfield necklace, a valuable string of pearls.

Detectives immediately conclude that the work was Hennessy's and start on a close pursuit of him, when he takes refuge in the home of his former pal, now the Rev. Doctor Carson. Circumstances point strongly to the fact that Hennessy swings open the door of the small safe, places the diamonds within, and locks it, demanding that the minister conceal them from the police. When the officers arrive Carson represents to them that Hennessy is his brother, and Spike escapes, telling his former pal that he will return for the loot.

Carson's son finds the jewels in the safe and it is with difficulty that the father convinces the boy that he is not the thief. Carson determined that Hennessy shall not regain possession of the jewels resolves to return them to their owner in the same manner in which they were taken and attired in his old burglar's garb, goes to the Fairfield mansion, breaks in, opens the safe and replaces the jewels.

The next morning the police is encircled by reading that the Fairfield house and safe mysteriously opened. Hennessy, who is a constant reader, and discovers the treasure of the various tells Carson that he has read the story of the robbery and that he has learned that the safe in the story's last theft, so amazing does he appear with him, that Carson is forced to confess that Hennessy's passages his word to inform and send an upright life.

Carson's success runs a position, aiding his friends as a guarantee to the as and as the package is taken to the Fairfield mansion, Carson is expected either and a man of famous receiving a vast sum for the has locked thereon.

GAUMONT.

THE ARTIST'S PAY DAY.—A young art student by painting in his studio, is annoyed by his landlady's servant who calls for the rent. As the student has no money he tells the servant to tell the landlady to call again. In the next scene the landlady is seen in the studio, where she receives some very encouraging words from the painter, who tells her that he has sold his picture and gives her the money. She is delighted and gives him a receipt.

My dear Simon:

This is to acknowledge with no Miss Mcmeeie of the Varieties will accept her portrait. We will settle the terms at our next meeting.

Yours sincerely,

HENRY.

Her ruben craving became a passion and he made the desired portrait but before leaving, he woke the young lady to replace her jewels, saying it was so much warmer. Immediately the lady opened the drawer where she kept them for the night, was quite there in the pocket.

At four o'clock the bell rangs the mondaine rose from his couch, the perfect gentleman that he is, he thought pays the bad with the bad, so money without delaying the door and in quick steps up his sketching, but soon, another pressure on the bell, another collector, our painter pays the bill. Then his progress to the Bois for a walk, but the situation is accepted immediately.

On there way out, they meet with the third collector, he got rid of him, he began again with the lady's money.

Then the painter comes back rather depressed because he did not sell his pictures. He is first astonished and then overjoyed to find his bills receipted in his pockets.

THE WOMAN WINS—Miss Catherine's neighbor is an old bachelor named Durand, who raves without due day. Bertha and Alice, Catherine's friends while playing ball in the garden, are misdirected throw, the ball went into the bachelor's garden.

They went to recover the ball, but when entering the garden, the owner rebukes them in a most unsightly manner and goes so far that in his anger he stumbles and breaks his leg.

In spite of himself, Catherine and her nieces carry him in and send for Catherine's doctor to attend him. When he gets up they bring him a lot of dainties and cook delicious dishes for him.

Gradually Durand becomes interested, loses his stupid taste and falls in love with catherine. Finally he makes up his mind that he has to be his wife, but at the last moment his heart fails him. Catherine then retires, leaving him alone with Alice. Alice whispers in his ears, gives a message for her aunt. She bursts into laughter and runs to a distance to finish her laughter.

Durand regrets his action and takes his hat and goes home, giving up the project. Catherine, informed of his intentions, encouraged his proposal of marriage.

MELIES.

THE OWNER OF THE "L. L." RANCH.—Lorna is a woman and she is in all business when it comes to running the "L. L." Ranch and she has a good outline in Sandy Jeff, "Sandy" who work for her, especially "Jeff," her foreman, who gives her a hand. She evidently appreciates their services and thinks Jeff a handy and pleasant fellow to have around, her "Runs" are the best in Texas.

There is a question of title to her land, finally the Supreme Court decides against her and she is obliged to leave the ranch. Her lawyer, Sir Reginald Coutts-Harcourt, in whose favor the decision rendered, visits the ranch to inform Lorna and meets with the dislike of the cowpunchers, who despise him as much on Lorna's account as for himself.

Lorna gives him respectful attention but repulses all his familiarities as she explains to him the boundaries of the place she personally owns and stock. After routing things over to him she buys a smaller bunch and starts in business again with fresh hope and ambition.

Sir Reginal has very little use for a ranch and places it on sale with the real estate agent to whom he gives full power of attorney to dispose of it. Little thinking that Jeff, who has suddenly come into possession of money through the sale of a mine in which he had half interest, would be the buyer. Sir Reginal is glad to get rid of Jeff returns the compliment and takes great pleasure in greeting square with his lordship through the floor of the "L. L." ranch.

The ultimate success and Jeff has his sweet revenge. Sir Reginal in the meanwhile decide to leave a "mockin party" by hanging "Reggie." Lorna notices Jeff by messenger of the doings of the boys and sends him a deed of purchase and hastens to the "L. L." Ranch, where he finds Sir Reggie with a rope around his neck and his hands tied with the boys not to do anything rash.

Jeff pulls off his boots, tells the boys to stand back shows Sir Reginald his deed to the place and orders him to make himself scarce as soon as possible.

The ranchers wave their hats and cheer when they know that Jeff owns the ranch. Jeff's joint partnership with Lorna who agrees to become his helper for life.

PATHE FRERES.

THE EVILS OF BETTING.—Miss Norton is engaged to Herbert Parrell, a man of excellent disposition, but with a fatal weakness for gamble. He receives a reliable tip to put all he has on a horse. Miss Norton's aunt that afternoon, he is tempted to enter Mrs Norton's home unseen and to take a roll of bills from her desk, thinking that he can repay it after the race. Alas, It is beaten, and the theft discovered. Parrell had dropped his pocketbook when entering the house, and confronted with it, he cannot but confess his guilt. Bitter, indeed, for he knows that from henceforth he and Elsa must be strangers.

THE TWIN CINDERELLAS.—Jeanette Nailly, in the exuberance of her joy at the wedding of her friend, rushes off her worshipper and throws an idea for happy departing couple. Other Suzette, Jeanette's friend finds it and taking it to the Place Saying gets it in his locker for safe keeping. Hardly has he done so when Officer Sang comes over another pretty little slipper in the locker. The latter has been lost by an actress in leaving the stage door and when she discovers she has lost it begs to inquire for erstwhile owner to see if her passion. Detective Renard is assigned to the case but it is baffling until upon going with Smith he call on Jeanette what should he see but the missing slipper. Of course it is not the one he wants but he doesn't know that. Jeanette is arrested, Gaston, Jeanette's fiancee is accused of the theft. Sergeant Doyle, officers Smith and Sweet all get mixed in an uproarious funny situation. Finally Gaston finds the right purchaser of the shoe and finds out for yourself whose foot the slippers fitted.

SO NEAR BUT NOT QUITE.—A thief is wanted in the police. He knows it, reads it and sees the cop does likewise. He runs both experts on the wave. Pedestrians are knocked down and trodden on, vehicles, other most wonderful tricks are performed. Finally the policeman is knocked over by an automobile. The thief re-appears on the station house and is rewarded for his services.

THE BATTLE AT REDWOOD.—The Indian agent at Redwood sells his entire commissariat to a enterprising settler, who sells it to settlers. It has been a hard year and the Indians have been unspeakably cruel to the white man's encroachment. Many are starving. Grey Elk, a Cheyenne, is saved from starvation through the kindness of Prudence, the daughter of Hiram Brent, of the Mission House. When the Sioux find that they have been swindled, their scalp has agreed not to take up tomahawks. Prudence hails the long line of settlers. The Indians pursue them and the settlers make every effort to escape but always are the prairie schooners up in a circle and make a last stand. Hope is gone, when a detachment of cavalry is commanded by Grey Elk, Captain Cheveriere, and the rule of battle changes and the Indians are put to rout. The battle scene is a thrilling wagons, the cavalry charge, all are thrilling.

SELIG.

THE ARGONAUTS.—In a lonely spot near the grave of their mother, Bob and Betty ramble in silence with each other over the loss of the one near friend they had in the world. Bob in their little home Bob reads an article in the paper about the wild excitement in the Sierras over gold and makes up his mind to go. Betty decides to don baby clothes and go too.

They leave on the same steamer that Steamer in San Francisco bay, being watched by gamblers who lay in wait for a prospective victim to board the ship. Bob goes with little brother Betty. Betty are enjoying the breezes of the deck they are approached by two gamblers, who and shakes, and proceed to the bar room for a drink, much to the displeasure of Betty, who only escaped the same fate by the timely arrival and suspicion or discovery that she was Bobs sister and not his brother. A card game is proposed, and two fellows are taken into the gamblers, a marked deck is used. The game ends in Bob losing a considerable sum of gold. Disgusting gamblers, Betty flaunts in the excitement and in their effort to revive her James Wallis, waiter, in the employ of the ship's company her sex and summons one of the ship's matrons to care for her. Bobby found dressed and found his way to the steerage where he finds Betty is Bob's sister. As she appears in girl's attire she is surprised to find her brother a girl. The cards are thrown away and he decides upon a better life.

The arrival at the camp the stage offers and their departure on the last leg of their journey. arriving at the end of their long search for gold is on to earned. At last they succeed in locating a find on Rocky Hill where operations are begun and Bob quickly stakes out a claim. Many of our male friends opens into love and Wadsworth seems the coolest of Bob to win Betty. Some exciting beautiful story of love and romance delightfully pictured in scene grandeur of the mines.

THE RUSTLERS.—On a big ranch in the west where cattle thieves are numerous the foreman, whose men are wont to regard life from a far different point of view than residents of the east, old Jim Cambe had brought up his family. The eldest sister and brother were sent away to a city school and given an education in the city the experience is for good, but not so the boy. He has contracted expensive habits and his money soon gives out and he returns.

The opening of the story shows the boy on his return home to the ranch falling in with a rough crowd of punches he is soon started on a career of reckless gambling and brawling, ripening in the vicinity is a band of horse rustlers whose the ranch owners are trying to run down and exterminate.

Bob is not bad at heart, but finding himself deprived of money with which to gamble, he is easily persuaded to join forces with this desperate gang. Hardly realizing the enormity of his crime, after a particularly successful raid, he is engaged with his companions in his usual pastime of gambling when the gang is suddenly surrounded by a posse and quickly captured.

Knowing for the first time his awful position, he makes a dash for liberty, in which he is disarmed wounded. The final scene at home and the grief of his stricken parents, ends this story.

JUSTINIAN AND THEODORA.—Justinian's life is saved and his heart is lost to Theodora. Theodora, the gladiator vows to devote his life to Theodora's service. The reign of Emperor Justin is a constitutes one as to precipitate his nephew, Justinian into the throne. Prince Rendiad, who had lived and hoped in vain for been the throne and the hand of Theodora. He is banished by the court feud and the Empress's guards decoys vengeance upon Justinian and the banished Prince's followers. Theodora is a prisoner also with weeks in in a short time taken prisoner by Rendiad. King of the Goths. When he is held a captive in the Gothic court. A year later he received a scroll from Theodora, saying he must be released or she will die. Justinian is released is in open rebellion and Emperor Justin dying of his sovereignal escape from the Gothic prison and rejoins his forces. Theodora, that Times will save the gladiators and proclaim her queen. He arrives before the emperor also defeats the Goths and is crowned king by his uncle Justin.

URBAN ECLIPSE.

A LOCK OF HAIR.—A false friend of the hero has a lock of hair taken from his head. Shortly after he dies easily acquainted in a saga, the traitor posts to bring about suspicion between the two prospective husband. Then he has a lady to give him a lock of her hair this he places in his friend's pocket and sends an anonymous letter to the husband that Lena will come her husband's pocketbook if she wants to know the truth. The result is a violent quarrel between husband and wife and the latter is banished from sheep by their neighborhood. Ships downstairs, finds the pocketbook, sets out and finds the anonymous note and bag of hair.

A way out suggests itself to her. She substitutes one of her own tresses and in the meantime with engaging innocence, lets it be known that the lock is hers and that she gave it to the perfect to look as a surprise for father. The closes of distrust roll away, and the villain, of whose acquaintance the husband promptly terminates, and his plot has failed and circles away shamefacedly, his comrade's reproaches in his ears.

VITAGRAPH.

ALL IS FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR.—Two jealous ladies, sisters, keep a private school and have troubles of them own in teaching the young ideas how to shoot. Miss Mattie, mistress of Latin is full of mischief and comes under the especial notice and correction of Letitia, the young lady of the mathematics. Letitia has an evident grudge against her young niece.

Mattie makes up her mind to get even with her horrid aunt for the chastisement she has suffered and communicates her intention to her young playmates, who enter into the plan heartily. Letitia's suspicions are aroused by Mattie's conceit and she young with the plan and sends the following note to her lover, Letitia in the name of a spruce old bachelor who in turn much smitten with the charms of the young lady in charge of the old Bach. by whom the school teacher has a speaking regard, these letters are for a meeting and Letitia has additional gifts of different shoes for the treat.

Hiram Brent, Letitia all dressed in her best to meet her gay old admirer at the stile, that's what the letter said. He is not there, she is the only one there. Soon the boys pass their game. She can wait no longer. She won't. He is a fine detective. In this case plays himself and he has a case so well worked out in his mind are the thoughts running through her mind.

While she is waiting the boys are doing likewise in the grove the ram, dampens his ardor and penetrates his traumatic joints until he appears at the rendezvous a thoroughly and disappointed condition of mind.

Mattie succeeds her revenge and we do too, when we see Letitia sick in bed with a heavy cold and the old beau seeking his feet and imploring a not allowed. She repents the success of their trick to Johnny and he is so pleased as she is. The plot thickens. Here comes Letitia from one direction and the old suitor from the opposite direction. They meet, look daggers at each other and retire with as little pass by. Mattie and Johnny perform a war dance as they laugh and shout Revenge.

THE MISSES FINCH AND THEIR NEPHEW, BILLY want Thanksgiving dinner to their guests and count them: Prescott, Prudence, Patience and Patience old maids, every one, old enough to know better, but they don't. Each one is trying to be done, there's an obvious reason, and invite no foreign interference. They have a brother Ned, who was a bright and clever son whom he decides to send to his sisters for a two weeks' visit.

He comes and he makes things lively for his four fussy old aunts. He puts vinegar in their tea, puts them with a pin at the table and keeps them guessing all the time. They are funny, finicky freaks of femininity that furnish a heap of fun and amusement for their nephew and everyone who sees them.

The suddenly quartette take Billy out for a quiet row and he conspires with the jolly old tar at the oars by rocking the boat and give the "girls" a scare. They are panic-stricken, overturn the boat and are soon floundering and sputtering about in the water.

They are rescued by a crew from a motor boat laying nearby, taken on board, comfortably tucked in the berths and served with hot broth while their clothes are hung on the yacht's railing to dry. Billy gets into a man's size suit of clothes, sees the belongings of his aunts, and dumps them overboard.

The ladies are in a pretty mess. It is getting dark and they are obliged to put on male clothing and don the loose fit coats and bonnets like a barge-rade party. Hold your sides and let her titter, the shapes, forms, figures of these four animated racks are enough to convulse a statue into fits of laughter.

THE OLD WATER JAR.—"Pau Puck" an old Indian, views with pride his handiwork on the old water jar, recounting some of the startling events of his past life, and these afford him his only diversion, for he is shunned by his people, even the little children avoid him and his heart seems to be embittered against all mankind.

While studying the pictures on the jar, he suddenly realizes that he is a bad Indian and as he finishes each picture and the scene is enacted in his own mind, his conscience troubles him and he tries to cut out the visions from his mind's eye.

First he beholds himself gambling with a fellow brave and losing his squaw and kids, the next picture he sees himself playing false to an Indian maiden. He looks upon the third picture where he sells rum to a soldier, then he beholds himself killing an innocent child in the attack on a family of pioneer immigrants, he tries to flee from the consciousness of this horrible deed, covers the old water jar with his blanket and completely prays to the Great Spirit for forgiveness and feels the tender influence of the divine breath of pardon.

Filled with inspiration he takes up the old water jar and paints in the last panel, a picture of the squaw and papoose, the Great Spirit above and admiringly he gazes intently on this, his final record and his masterpiece. Weak in body, strong in spirit and regarded in such high estimate of supplication, but falls dying into the arms of a brother, surrounded by his people. A smilingly he bids adieu of the world and Spirit beckoning him to the "happy hunting grounds."

DOCTOR CUPID.—Love! What a wonderful thing is love. Cupid is a specialist in aiding lovers to the altar of fame and matrimony. Harlan falls in love with Percy Primrose, a young poet. Papa Linton says: "Wait on the poetry part and keep the muse out of the family." He will not father-in-law a sentimental versifyer.

After an interview with Percy and she cannot be comforted, falls into a decline and looks very ill. Her father is anxious about her and hastens to see the physician. Percy's case suits the doctor in advance of the father, however, and tells him all about Allen's attempt to win his love for her. The old doctor is a friend of the young people and arranges to help them.

When the father calls, the doctor plays sickness and sends Percy disguised as "Doctor Cupid," to attend the young lady's case. Dr. Cupid comes to see Allen, and after making himself known she immediately begins to improve. "Marvelous!" cries the father. Dr. Cupid calls the next day and Mr. Linton notices the doctor and his daughter are seen fond of each other.

The next morning when Dr. Cupid asks Mr. Linton for his daughter and gains his consent to their marriage then removes his wig and reveals Cupid Primrose, the poet.

The deed is done, papa cannot go back on his word and Percy wins Allen as his inspiration and poetry of life.

KALEM.

FOR THE LOVE OF AN ENEMY.—A federal spy operating within the Confederate lines, meets Hallie Osborne, a fair Southern girl, with whom he falls in love. The Spy enters into the social life. At a garden party he again meets Hallie and they become more acquainted and during their acquaintance drops into love. Hallie is rescued from the spy into the Confederate camp where he obtains needed information. Suspicion however has become directed towards him and on his attempt to locate the camp where the spy is discovered by one of the pickets and captured. He, however makes a logical explanation of his presence in the camp and is allowed to depart. As he is leaving the spy unconsciously gives a negligee salute and the commander looks after him with a worried look on his face and a feeling that he is not what he claims to be. Hallie is soon notified of military inadequacies and told that her lover is suspected of being a spy. She indignantly denies the accusation and proposes that she will wring a confession from him and, if guilty, give him over to the military authorities but resolves to forgive that even if guilty, she will aid him to escape. With this resolve in mind she goes out to find the spy. In the meantime the spy's room has been searched and incriminating evidence found and his capture ordered. Hallie meets her sweetheart and tells him of the suspicions pointed towards him and asks if he is a federal spy. He admits his identity, but declares that he is innocent and Hallie determines to aid him to escape and suggests a plan. He rises unseen and the spy by swimming under water reaches the soldier's. She knows been sent to conceal him and assures his wife that he is not there. At the end of the war he returns to claim her as his bride.

THE HEART OF AN INDIAN MOTHER.—An Indian traveler passing through a section of the country recently settled by white pioneers stops for a few moments with Bright Eyes, an Indian squaw, asks for a drink of water for her pony and while the squaw is away for the water drinks is supplied by a little white child, a good act that is finally well remembered. This wandering band of Indians decided to chase these pioneers from the settlers gain a view to attacking them and robbing them of some favorable time when the settlement is unprotected. The two squaws call Big Arm from his duties of watching the ponies belong by the father and mother of the little child who had furnished Bright Eyes' child with a drink a few days before. Big Arm and Bright Eyes is touched by the white child and one expresses the Indian idea. She tells the setting to take for and decides to desert after find binding Bright Eyes' companion Shoe Foot, so she cannot escape and warn the Indians. The settler shoots the nearby ranchmen and they start out to inter cept the Indians. The Indians, however, have reached the settlement and have captured Bright Eyes, with the only gun in the house puts up a strong defense but on being touched by the flag of truce with the mother and child retire to an inner room praying they may hold out until the arrival of aid which they know is approaching. Bright Eyes save the capture of the children defenders and the destruction of the house.

ROBBIE AND THE REDSKINS.—Mischievous Robbie causes the family considerable and little amount of confusion. One night on the return home of Robbie's father he calls his attention to the old grandfather clock standing in the corner of the living-room. The clock has stopped. Father takes out the key and winds up the clock, Robbie then decides that it will be a longer job than he cares to tackle at that time, they are laid aside. Next morning the neighbor comes in to borrow the news of a sick cow. Robbie's parents go over to the neighbor's cabin in an effort to give aid, leaving the house and the girl alone. While Robbie's father is in an adjoining room the young elf crawls into the clock case and standing in the corner of the nicely settled in the clock when a band of marauding Indians burst in the door. During the excitement Robbie has climbed from the clock to the pantry. Robbie's sister, who had been hiding behind the clock case and seeing the Indians leaving all the while keeping as quiet as a mouse in the clock, until the Indians all leaving passed into an adjoining room. Robbie seeing the door open out of the clock and listens the door looking them in, then taking up his position at the clock to watch developments. In the meantime Robbie's sister has secured aid and a cold raise to the cabin is made to save the day. Just as the rescue party rides up the Indians break down the door and are given a hot reception. Robbie is found safe and secure and declared the hero of the day.

HER CHUM'S BROTHER.—Elise and her roommate Martha, were chums at the young ladies' school. Martha had stripped the walls of college banners during the last days of the term and carefully lays in the top of her trunk a picture of her chum Elise. While unpacking at on Martha's arrival home Pascale, her brother, calls for a visit and sees her prize picture of Elise and immediately becomes fond of her. Elise and Martha are of mixed-bean match-maker, and pleased at her brother's attraction toward her picture, writes him asking him to call on Elise. She is interested for his orange grove and suggests that he take a letter from her recommending him as a capable man for the position. Pascale quickly grasps the opportunity and proceeds to Florida. Elise's father gives him employment. Meeting Elise, Pascale finds her more captivating than her picture. Elise, on her part, is unconscious of Pascale's love. Martha arrives and on meeting guesses that he is not chum's brother and seeing him on her father's farm, concludes that he keeps him at arm's length. Pascale loses no opportunity to show his love for Elise. Elise realizing she is falling in love with an employee of the plantation, goes to her father and asks him to send her away, suggesting that she be allowed to visit her mother's relatives in Europe. In order to be rid of Martha's home Elise tells her secret. Martha telegraphs Pascale to come home at once. He is overjoyed at the news and is allowed to depart. The young man loses no time but quickly follows and presents his suit to a successful ending.

LUBIN

THE WIDOW'S CHOICE.—Handi and Jack Manning are rivals for the hand of Mrs. Daniels' foreland a handsome widow. John Manning, their father was an elderly widower who hadn't studied on a woman for many years. One day he received a letter from his boss telling him to report at the office immediately prepared for a business trip which would take him from home for at least a month. When Handi heard of these orders, he was naturally elated because Jack's absence would give him a good opportunity to have the final say in the widow's hand. But the returning boss's last word was as he was received a message from the boss ordering him to immediately his business. Pacifying that absence was unnecessary, the modern writer from some point that they are in a country requiring their former occupation. Now the modern widow finds a dilemma. The latter was unaware of the true state as he had at Grandpa's and left for the city. Jack's boss had gone. Home was nothing to remind the lad so he saw the widow. He looked over the front parlor and back and when Father came looking was found on a sofa. At the same time the bedridden widow received a letter from Jack. He called again the next evening had on the meantime he had visited a tailor and looked at least twelve years younger. Handi's plight quickly after that and he saw Father Harold and Jack initiated their business trip they found the fair widow was their stepmother.

Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN

THE SQUAW AND THE MAN.—A young soldier shields his fiancee's father from the charge of treason and is dismissed from the army. Disgraced and out of the service of the army, Somerville leaves his family and goes to the west. Here he meets and his sweetheart and goes West on a search for Nora Meadow on searching he discovers one day he comes upon a squaw and papoose lying beside a stream of pretty water, with no game within their reach. The squaw is dying. He rescues the girl to the house and takes her back to her people. The girl is the daughter of the chief of the tribe. Nora is deserted by her lover and in a dazed on old medicine man and a squaw to nurse her some to recover. Somerville is made a captive. The ex-soldier experiences the greed and treasures the girl.

They are married and after a year a baby is born. Six years pass, six years of joy for the squaw and the man, and then comes a message from the East. Nora is dead. Her father has been discovered and the mystery and assessment are cleared. Somerville leaves his wife and child make assemble. The squaw and the child presents him to his duty in the West but it is with the looking that he decides to return to his East-ern girl. The mother offers to take the half-breed child back but to eliminate pain and the ex-soldier consents to leave the child with her.

The shock of losing her child is too great for the Indian girl and she dies. Left to the choice between the white man and his happiness she kills herself. The man looks her lying as he finds each her and gathering up his gifts, he leaves over her with his heart broken.

MRS GAYLIFE'S VISITORS.—Mr. Johnson decides that he ought to marry. Decides to count on and to make love to Mrs. Gaylife, who is a Swedish girl in a town not far from his home. He assumes the manner of a bashful suitor and a photograph of himself and presents it to her. Mrs. Gaylife is pleased with the gift and is not averse to being Strong lovers, but only for a short time. Mr. Johnson's bashful lady admirer, fearful to spoil her chances of marriage decides not to send one of her number but one of her mistress instead. She assumes the name and makes her way a visit to Stonia.

Meanwhile the lady of the house Mrs. Gaylife has been influenced by a woman friend that has been studied music. Mrs. Gaylife intends not to be bashful during her visit and to make love to the another. Imagine her surprise when a pleasant evening together. She has arrived to pay the gentleman a visit. Mrs. Gaylife is not pleased at the turn of affairs. Mr. Johnson's lover arrives also in order that the secret see her face, which is unknown to all of the house and plans with her accomplice to spoil the affair. Confusion is brought about by the arrival of Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Gaylife tells Mrs. Johnson she is the friend of Mrs. Gaylife and that she has come to the visit. Mrs. Johnson is not at all pleased at the entire. They are supposing a quiet evening alone but find a visitor. Mrs. Johnson is not pleased with the situation. Mrs. Gaylife tells her good reason to go and Mrs. Johnson leaves the house in a huff. Mr. Johnson is left alone with the two women. Mr. Gaylife comes in from the store and the women are introduced. Mr. Gaylife is not pleased with the situation. Mr. Johnson is not pleased with the situation. Mrs. Gaylife is not pleased with the situation. Mrs

BISON.

IN THE HEART OF THE SIERRAS.—Sagebrushland Molly meets the return of the bullets on the Kaw Pay Wagon while her sweetheart, Sergt. Wade, and his troopers are besieged by Indians from the Utah reservation placed in their final at the towers. The redskins are thwarted in their plot, and Molly receives a graceful forgiveness of Wade for her unreasoning jealousy and quarrel with him that morning.

A SAVAGE GIRL'S DEVOTION.—Chained to the cliff by an iron collar, a beautiful young maiden, for treachery, Black Eagle dies of starvation while Silver Moon for love of whom he owns the life-long enemy of his tribe, by the pleadings of Brown Fox and becomes his bride.

POWERS.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY.—A district Attorney has a pretty daughter with two suitors, Arthur and Jack, both of whom have invited her to a ball, but she refuses to accept the invitation who writes the best rhymed invitation. Her father is to decide. The District Attorney, alone in his library, is visited by an Italian carrying a satchel and a note which informs him that unless he writes a note for the release of an Italian criminal, a dynamite machine in the satchel will explode within fifteen minutes and kill him. The District Attorney is in a terrible situation and dare not call for help. Meanwhile the two boys have finished their verses and have brought them to him to get a decision. The old gentleman yells "Dynamite," and Arthur proves a coward and scoots out. The Italian quickly and calmly seizes the bag and throws it out of the window, where it explodes. The Italian is captured, Arthur is kicked out and Jack wins the girl.

A TIP TO HUSBANDS.—Tom Harris wants to go to a poker party given by his friend Billings, but Mrs. Harris objects to his going out. Tom works up an excuse, planning to write a note and say that he is sick and asking Harris to visit him. Wifey consents but is suspicious and as midnight arrives she gets suspicious and goes after Tom. Warned of her approach, Tom goes through the window and away by means of the fire escape. Wifey enters and raises Cain with Billings and then starts back home in an auto mobile. The auto breaks down and Mrs. Harris has to walk home. Meanwhile Tom has reached home, gone into bed and pretended sickness and enters an hour later. Tom pretends terribly mad at his wife's being out so late at night alone but he rejoices when Wifey promises never again to interfere with his plans.

MONTE CRISTO.—Story opens with Edmund Dantes landing from his ship. Then follow his greeting of his father, his love scene with Mercedes in which Fernand's jealousy is aroused, the conspiracy of Danglars and Fernand and the betrothal of the latter to Mercedes to turn from his sweetheart's side by the soldiers who arrest him. We see Dantes in prison breaking through the wall, his meeting with the Abbe Faria, then the death of the Abbe who gives to Dantes the secret of the treasure buried on the Isle of Monte Cristo. Dantes escapes in the bag which contains the Abbe's dead body, his discovering the treasure at Monte Cristo in a grotto. In a magnificent ballroom scene Dantes meets Fernand and Mercedes and his wife, the latter formerly his first lover. The duel with Albert who is saved by his mother. Mercedes, the arrest of Fernand through Monte Cristo's offer and Fernand's death in prison. Danglars as the Abbe of Busoni, after making himself bankrupt, tortures him for starvation until he gives up a million for food and goes out a broken man.

RELIANCE.

AS THE MASTER ORDERS.—Brownell a wealthy young man marries a beautiful girl. Miss Jennings a dashing artist who loved Brownell is passed by. Brownell's wife constantly quarrels arranges to leave her portrait painted in order to present it to her husband on a birthday gift. While she is posing Miss Jennings tells Brownell his wife is carrying on a clandestine love affair with Jack, the artist and that this is the third moment in his studio. Brownell goes to the studio but Miss Jennings has preceded him and when the enraged husband finds Jack and his wife explanation of her presence cause is made ridiculous by the loss of the portrait. Brownell refuses to believe it and goes for a divorce. A pathetic counterscene scene is shown as the husband is granted a decree. The broken-hearted wife seeks refuge in a monastery. Some time later Miss Jennings has a gathering of artists in her apartments and one of the girls rummaging about finds the stolen portrait and shows it to Jackson. A dramatic situation ensues and Jackson hurries to Brownell with the evidence of his wife's innocence. Brownell rushes to the monastery and is granted an audience with his ex-wife by the kindly monk. She is induced to reject his pleading for a reconciliation and the kindly priest gently points their ways and again makes them man and wife.

REVIER.

THE GOOSECREEK CLAIM.—John Price, an old miner and his daughter Tessie run upon a rich claim and in their panning for the precious metal he shoot resulting in his injury. Drawing a map of the surroundings on the bunkhouse floor he directions they pick up and start for home. Investing from the bunkhouse road they become lost and returning upon the camp of two prospectors one a Canadian named Pierre and the other Dan Dawson. Pierre's companion dies and as assistance is noticeable Jim Dawson offers his partnership to the tramping old man. On departing the bunkhouse with the map he dropped and Pierre finding it sends his fellow prospectors name and follows Jim Dawson and Tessie. Dawson sees the girl is left alone a moment, but his advances are repelled. The bunkhouse is shown her whereabouts she or the claim. Jim has overpowered and taken possession. Bound and gagged, she is absolutely within his power. Finding however, that freed long enough to eat she seizes a fire brand and burning her captor across the eyes, temporarily blinding him makes her escape. Pursuit follows however, and she is overtaken on the cliff in the meantime Jim has ventured and finding the map missing, releases his steps to the camp of those that befriended him and learns of the stand of the claim. Pierre has left the hunt. They come upon the scene just as the villain reaches the brink of the precipice, which surprised the girl. A leap on the part of Dan in the bottomless ravine and the restoration of the girl to her father.

SOLAX.

THE GIRL AND THE BURGLAR.—Bert King, a young New York business man, is visiting the family of his fiancee and during the temporary absence of his departure he takes Ruth for a sleigh ride, during the course of which a necklace which she has borrowed from Mrs. Graves is broken. Ruth asks Bert to take the necklace to the city and have it repaired, which he does.

We next find Bert in the jewelry store admiring the skilful manner in which the jeweler has completed the task and after lighting a cigar, and putting the necklace in his pocket, he steps into the next room; slipping the necklace into the pocket of his smoking jacket, he takes a last puff of his cigar and is off. Enter the burglar in active operation. The burglar is none other than Gentleman Jack, a renowned society crook whose acquaintance we have been privileged for some time. He is taken unawares, and Gentleman Jim cowered while he telephones for the police.

Gentleman Jack takes advantage of an opportunity, and while the jeweler is engaged in the telephone causes which results in the tables being turned. Gentleman Jack is now the master but as a result of a blow delivered by him Bert is in a dazed condition and in absolute ignorance of his whereabouts. The keen witted burglar realizes the situation, and he again is given the chance to frustrate his old time enemy, the police. Upon their arrival he leads them to believe that Bert is the burglar, and gives him into their custody.

In the meantime Ruth has received a note from her lover, and is forced to believe that he has proven false. She receives an invitation from her friend, Mrs. Graves, to go to the Grand Opera to be her father and mother she decides to visit the Opera. Here Ruth is surrounded by their circle of society acquaintances and there meets Gentleman Jack, who is successfully masquerading as a society man. Gentleman Jack, the young woman's beauty, Jack determines to win her love. He showers her with his attentions, and finally presents her with a diamond necklace of exquisite design, imagining as being the one given her by Bert.

Amazed, uneasy and wildly excited, Ruth discusses to her friend, Mrs. Graves, the conditions of the necklace. They appeal to the jeweler of Police to offer a solution of the problem. As a result of this Bert is honorably released.

Bert, who has been languishing in a prison cell, and whose identity has been a mystery to the police, appears on the scene of the opera house, and Gentleman Jack gets his just deserts.

THANHOUSER.

EVERYBODY SAVES FATHER.—Jennie Gear is one of the fortunate individuals who leave an overcrowded city for the land of promise. Her father believes that in the country he will be able to find work, and all else will follow. When she finds four of them sardines for the hotel piazza, he orders them home and sternly reproves his daughter.

One of the quarantine boats is seized with a certain kind of contagious disease, and they are ordered to the island. Here they are met by Jennie's old time sweetheart John, who is a daring quarantine officer, and a romance ensues.

Unfortunately for John, his dual is heard by cowardly gambler to have a rendezvous upon John, and save the old man himself. Henry in turn, seizes on George, and vows a lynch.

Just as the two succeeds beyond his fondest expectations, until the next train on the list bears in. The palm of victory seems to rest with Henry on may with the launch, and Gear is calling that he should marry his daughter. But Jennie spurns entertaining a man whom she had known has life saved, and with approval that Jennie is getting married to Bill the only man who did not lose time trying to put up a job on the old man.

THE ONLY GIRL IN CAMP.—The Girl," daughter of Prospector Gates, is the only woman in a mining camp. The Miners are well fixed, and three villains decide to rob them by stratagem. So two visit the camp, and Bill, the leader introducing himself as Prof. Watson, announces that he will deliver a free lecture on a sacred subject. Beautiful girl indeed, but this case the lures all the miners into the Town Hall and, aided by his pals, he robs them of their "virtue" items.

The girl's father and sweetheart attend the lecture, but the girl is worried. It strikes her that there is something wrong about the entire affair. She goes to investigate, and finds that the prisoners are bound and helpless and knows that there are no men in the camp to notify, as they are all at the lecture. The Girl also realizes that alone she is no match for the three armed men.

Suddenly she thinks of her father's bear traps. She hastens home, gets them, and spreads them out on the steps of the Town Hall. The robbers back out, unaware of the meaning of the spectacle. They step into the bear traps and are easily captured through the wit of "The only girl in camp."

THE VOTE THAT COUNTS.—State Senator Jack Dare, one of the reform members of the Legislature, starts for the state capital to attend an important session that night. That he took the midnight train from his home city is clearly proven, for his aged mother was a passenger on it, and the conductor and porter will certain that he retired for the night in Lower 9. In the morning however, Dare is not in empty although some of his garments are found there. The case puzzles the railroad officials and the police, and Violet Gordon, a fair detective, undertakes to herself.

She learns from the conductor and porter, who had happened to spend the night awake in opposite ends of the car, that the senator did not go by there. Consequently he must have left the window as his means of egress, and she knows that he must have gone that way.

Violet discovers that Dare is a heavy supporter of a bill that a powerful lobby is trying to defeat. The fight is on the floor of the deciding session.

Dare cannot be bribed, so his opponents spirit him away in a novel fashion. But the girl finds where he is imprisoned, and, in the fight through he is much injured. He reaches his seat in time to cast the needed vote, and astound and defeat the lobby.

IMP.

MELODY.—Old Dan Burns, a poor but clever violinist, has to make ends meet as he can. He is compelled to repair musical instruments for his daily bread, while his wife and daughter take in sewing. As a last resort he goes to the extremity of pawning his old friend and comrade, his violin.

Robert Hart and his wife have a little girl Ella, of whom they are anxious to make a violinist and they engage Dan as her teacher as a noted instructor. Prof. Dupre. Dupre is too high-strung and particular to teach children and accusing Ella of being dull and careless, Hart puts him off and discontinues the lessons.

It so happens that Burns' wife and daughter are doing some sewing for Mrs. Hart and old Dan goes to deliver some of it and is paid for it. After the errand he returns with the money, but insists upon his getting his violin out of pawn and he goes to the shop to regain it. The pawnbroker tells him that the instrument for the interest and has not enough money and consequently cannot have it. Dan returns home, terribly disappointed and begs permission to play upon it one last time before he loses it forever.

The pawnbroker gruffly consents and Dan begins playing, putting his whole soul into the music, he has entirely forgotten his own woes in the pleasure on the street stop and listen to them, a tramp and accordion becoming especially affected, one of the latter arrested is Robert Hart, who stands outside the pawnshop enchanted by the melody.

The influence of the music even steals over the pawnbroker who stops his work to listen. When Dan finishes playing and returns the violin, the pawnbroker hands it back to him and even refuses to accept the money and the old man goes off jubilant.

Outside he is met by Hart, who has been struck by the idea that Dan will make a capital teacher for little Ella and he takes him home with him. Dan and Ella become close friends at once and Dan's wife and daughter profit by the change of her a most promising scholar, much to the delight of Mr. and Mrs. Hart.

HIS FIRST PATIENT.—Dr. Dick Ainsworth, has been made a member of a hospital staff. He meets and falls in love with Frankie Jones, one of the nurses. Dick proposes to her, is accepted and decides to marry her at once. But, he has been largely dependent for his support upon his father, who considers he had better obtain the pa

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue : : CHICAGO, ILL.

ternal blessing upon his matrimonial alliance, so escorts his intended to his father's office and after introducing her, he introduces the subject of his marriage.

When Mr. Ainsworth learns the nature of his son's intentions he puts his foot down good and hard. The couple take their departure in a very unhappy frame of mind. But after their return to the hospital the spirit of rebellion rises in Dr. Dick's bosom and he telephones his father that he is going to marry Miss Jones anyway. His parent, of course, receives this message in no very gentle frame of mind and starts for the hospital at high speed.

In the meantime, a terrible railroad accident has occurred and all of the medical staff, with the exception of Dr. Dick, are hurriedly summoned to the scene of the disaster.

Mr. Ainsworth, in rushing up to the entrance of the hospital, slips, falls and breaks his leg. He is carried inside, unconscious from pain and is duly operated upon by his son, assisted by Miss Jones and other attendants.

Mr. Ainsworth, having recovered consciousness, and hearing their commendations upon the surgical work on his case, asks to see the surgeon who performed the operation. They send for Dr. Dick who immediately appears and when he is introduced as the clever young man who did the work, the old man's heart is filled with thanksgiving at having such a gifted son who is, evidently, so well equipped with money-getting ability and Dick, of course is rewarded by receiving the long-sought paternal blessing.

THE REV. GOODLEIGH'S COURTSHIP.—Arthur Ames and Cora Rogers are sweethearts, but her family will not allow any of her young friends to enter their house.

Cora is told that she is expected to marry the son of old friends of her parents, the Rev. Harold Goodleigh. He arrives and is at once shown up to his room by the butler. Realizing that his clothes need pressing he sends the man out with them, arraying himself in a blanket taken from his bed.

The butler, passing the disconsolate young couple on their way to the street, Arthur spies the clothes and is seized by a sudden idea, which he hastens to explain to the butler. The butler escorts him to another room in the house, where Arthur sacrifices his lovely mustache and clothes himself in the clerical garments of his rival and coming down stairs, surprises Cora by his daring nature of his ruse. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers have never met either Arthur or the Rev. Goodleigh and so, when Arthur is introduced by Cora as the reverend suitor for her hand, they suspect nothing and Arthur goes in to the family dinner, which he gets through with very nicely.

In the meantime, the Rev. Goodleigh, attired in his blanket, is having a mournful wait.

Then a new element is injected into the plot. "Mad Harry," a lunatic from a neighboring asylum makes his escape. Now, Harry imagines he is an Indian chief and proceeds to decorate himself with feathers from the tail of a turkey hanging outside of a butcher shop, and with a horse blanket and hatchet, which he takes from a hardware store.

Running swiftly down the street, he comes to the Rogers' home and climbing up he pries open the window of the room which contains the Rev. Goodleigh and springing in upon the terrified clergyman, he compels him to join in a war dance. The reverend gentleman finally breaks away and rushes out of the room into the street closely pursued by Harry. Harry, getting confused, runs into the midst of the Rogers family and soon has them all busily dancing in a circle, he dashing everywhere, merely brandishing the hatchet, now harmless.

The Rev. Goodleigh, clad in his primitive garments, breathlessly meets the keeper, who is seeking Harry, and leads him to the house. But before the keeper can overtake the lunatic-man, who arrives at the height of the war dance, is compelled to join in it. The keeper arrives, Harry peacefully surrenders to him and quiet is restored.

Then explanations follow as to who is who and Arthur is duly unmasked as a bogus minister. But nothing daunted, he puts in his claim for Cora's hand and after strenuous pleading on the part of the young lovers he is finally accepted as the son-in-law that he is to be. And the Rev. Goodleigh's sad but exciting courtship is over.

CHAMPION.

WHY HE WENT WEST.—Franklin Cross cannot conceive that the introduction of his cousin, Charles Hoskins to his fiancee Miss Dick Allen would result in anything more serious than a slight acquaintanceship.

With the dawning of Christmas day, Franklin is frozen with horror to discover his fiancee with Hoskins in his customarily tormented, close embrace. Unseen by any one, he conveys across his card his wishes for a merry X-mas, and packing his belongings, leaves for the West.

Installed at Plentiful Ranch, he meets the charming daughter of Squire Tucker, establishes his position as a favorite, and is well liked all round. It is now Christmas Day, one year later, which finds him in the midst of a hilarious dinner with the boys in the bunk house, but heavy recollections of the past restrain him from entering into the jollity.

Already in love with him, the squire's daughter now enters with her father to distribute gifts, and Franklin becomes the recipient of her photo, inscribed "with love." Noting, however, the jeweler's box in his hand, and instinctively feeling that his thoughts are of another, she attempts to regain the photo.

Regarding of his absence, his erstwhile fiancee institutes a search and succeeds in locating him at the ranch. Her appearance is simultaneous with Mabel's request for the return of her photo, and whilst Franklin conjectures the situation both women survey each other, with full knowledge of their future at stake, and then earnestly appeal to the man.

He chooses the new and younger love however, and broken-hearted with her loss, the unfortunate one embraces her successful rival.

LUX.

THAT IS MY NAME.—A humorous skit showing how easy it is to find a number of people bearing the same name. We learn also some of the nefarious powers of money and how impossible to find that one lady entirely conceives her sight when learning that she is heiress to a considerable fortune.

BILL AS A JOCKEY.—Bill's uncle leaves him as a legacy a celebrated race horse on condition that Bill never leave the horse. A competing uncle leaves him as his legacy Bill's fiancee, who has difficulty in reuniting his son. After many beneficential attempts the pleasure arise failure is promoted. He then comes upon a scheme to promise to his wife who naturally objects to having a fiancee with the appearance. Bill rises to the occasion feeds the animal with his own dinner and takes particular care that it shall never have time. Later Bill enters the race and is triumphant. The unsuccessful jockey admires to be sure and win. This he does, amid the acclamations of the crowd and Bill literally throws himself at his wife's feet. A lady, indeed, requests Bill to call some time the following afternoon. Bill does that very slightly but the lady attempts subjects to marking him with the noble animal as an audience, and so Bill is forced to hand the animal out of the house. Upon this little expedition he is met by his enraged spouse, who explicates her opinion of such conduct in terms much better imagined than described. Bill seeks refuge upon the back of the gallant charger, but is finally run to earth by his wife and he promises to be good in the future.

NESTOR.

SLEEPY HOLLOW.—It's said "There's no true love without jealousy," yet Henry Faber overstepped the mark in this direction, and although less was the most devoted of suitors, there was in every man upon which her glance fell a jealous rival.

Jack Wilson, the amateur photographer, stopped at their cabin for a glass of water, and merely because Dan had him a pleasant good day, Henry was vexed. Indeed, that evening when Jack again stopped that way and showed the little wife a few prints of her estate Henry displayed his displeasure in no uncertain manner, and soon as she would let us, declined to stay to supper, but instead took sweets down to a friend.

As to his blame he seemed his wife went to the door, was unfortunate enough to see Jack and Ruth actually standing on the gate, and still softer pressed the latter's hand with an ardent look. Henry was not slow to see to the big buck, where he found her dressed in the arms of Jack Wilson.

Her scolding rudiment raised his gall and fired, but it was Dan was disgusted, so allowing the woman to escape, he left. Still he continued to be jealous, although after all such was there were Dan's intentions, but as he was a single man and Ruth was married, Dan's friendship and he had become intimate, the latter naturally came there for the occasions of Dan's visits.

[illegible] Dan [illegible] Ruth [illegible] Henry [illegible] Dan [illegible] Ruth [illegible] Dan [illegible] Ruth [illegible] Dan [illegible] Ruth offer a jersey from the cuts where the best race goes.

There are good views of a face grimacing with excitement and tension, happy as the thought clarifies; they are caught here from every angle; the delicate cameo has frequently and finally secured emphasis. Motion and assessment gains solemn strength in several notable scenes; there are two well-executed "close-ups" of the jockey, Wallace Reid, and Wallace Reid's face and the race scenes which he appeared are well selected because they keep the eyes Wallace Reid.

He developed a talent for some very good facial of scenes in his latest study. So he went on with the race and managed to his senses to the exception of the finish, when he forgot that his old mallet was very low and expected to die. The message came when he was unnecessarily overwatching his friends as a differing info but his senses were not dulled to lapse sufficiently that he failed to realize that he was in a tight him in the face. In spite of extraction from his companions he crashed from the place and finally reached safety, bloodied and bruised. Here a great deal more to the scene when the film must fail for lack of space to this week's booklet, nevertheless the photographic quality is the same as has been seen again and goes to the credit of the girl who was discovered in Biograph. Nothing has been done since of his arrival since. From the old courting days were retained and you can guess what followed.

RETURNED TO THE FOLD.—We have constructed perhaps the most realistic fight picture ever seen in a film. Not only were the seating facilities faithfully copied but the pulpit, choir loft, glass, were perfectly reconstructed, be sides we went to the expense of introducing a real, full-time pipe organ in the scene. This latter was covered in our studio, the scenes for which numbered many wagons and then erected by the organ builders. It is needless to add that this item in settings represented a cost equal to the entire expense involved in producing a complete film of the average importance.

While particular stress is laid on the above mentioned scene, the production as a whole is novel throughout when you consider the vast variety of musical scenes and situations it contains. In fact we have made "Returned to the Fold" more as an advertising film, to show what we are capable of, than anything else.

Of course the story is pleasing with real heart-interest and literally teems with sentiment. The sort of plot with homeless waifs and lover and women in its unfolding. Nor have we sacrificed dramatic situations for sentiment in the production as there are many of the most powerful moments in the story and these have been transferred to intelligent action by a thoroughly competent cast of experienced people.

ECLAIR.

THE JEALOUSY OF SOSTHENES RAMULOT.—Sosthenes Ramulot, a young student of unfortunately falls in love with pretty little Daisy, who does not return his affection, being betrothed to a young officer in the army. Sosthenes refuses to listen to reason and persists in annoying little Daisy with demonstrations of his affection. At last Daisy grows angry, and in order to free herself from the young man's disagreeable attentions informs her fiance of the whole affair. Being curious to know what kind of a person his rival be, the young officer pays a visit to the Chemistry of Sosthenes, under the pretense of buying something or other. Sosthenes recognizes the officer, and in a fit of jealousy sells his rival a poison instead of a harmless potion, thinking in this way to rid himself of the man who is loved by the girl he adores.

The moment the young officer has departed Sosthenes is seized with a panic of fear, most disturbing to behold, and to confirm his gravest misgivings, he is shortly summoned to the home of his beloved Daisy. Troublingly he responds to the call, and quaking with fear presents himself at the home of little Daisy, where he is received with great secrecy, and invited to come and behold his luscious victims. Sosthenes is overcome with mental agony.

However, the officer has discovered the base deed of his rival and, of course, no harm has been done; thus have summoned poor Sosthenes, both in order to teach him a lesson, and also to relieve his fear which these miracles he has been suffering and to reassure him. Sosthenes is more than happy when he discovers that his fears are groundless, and in the effervescence of the relief from suspense he announces to assess the Englists Governess for whom of fear to and so love and all ends well.

MY WIFE'S HAT.—Mrs. Durand is furious—Her husband has failed her and she will be late for the Opera Party. She asks her husband to go and get another hat for her. Mr. Durand is unwilling but finally gives in and starts off to purchase a new hat for the dinner party.

He soon finds that the buying of the hat is the somewhat portion of his trouble. It is the getting of it home that proves to be the great concern. The taxi seems to be the longest for every obstacle on the street and every scurrying pedestrian. At last, almost too late to dress, Sam would not recognize the hat. Mrs. Durand's reception is not encouraging as it might be. Happily for Mr. D. he convinces the other that he will make over the hat and by degrees to its astonished wife the wonderful act of which he is master, and under his clever magic the hat is a revelation as turned into a marvelous work of fashion. Needless to say that the baby's mood is somewhat changed and her thanks to her dear husband are most effusive.

GREAT NORTHERN.

A HOMELESS BOY.—In a little seacoast village an artist is painting a picturesque cottage, before which a widow and her little son are working. A few years later the mother dies, and the boy is taken charge of by a fisherman, who shamefully ill-treats him. The boy runs away, and in dire straits, breaks into a large house, hoping to find some food. In one of the rooms he is fascinated by a picture with a familiar scene. Before the home of his boyhood he sees a picture of his mother and himself. As he looks, the artist enters and grasps the intruder by the arm. The boy relates his story and the artist generously adopts him as his son.

ATLAS.

A CITY WOLF.—The story itself is most interesting because it deals with the struggles of a pure girl, the daughter of a Frenchcanadian trapper against the wiles of a city libertine who would ruin her. Local color is added to the narrative by the introduction of many characters familiar to those who have visited the "Big Moose" region, such as Tom Bryant, who runs the "Baxter House" and is noted for his generosity and big heart.

Jean, the rough guide with a smooth and untroubled conscience and many others who might be found among the simple, rugged mountain folk, one of the most powerful and lasting lessons ever conveyed to moving picture film is "A City Wolf." A score which runs the entire gamut of human emotions, literally digging down to your very soul. Besides it has scenic features of surpassing beauty many scenes being photographed for the first time at heavy outlay and no little risk of life and limb. Deer hunting in the Adirondacks is shown in all its natural realism while the interior settings built in our own workshops, faithfully depict the trapper's cabin, the mountain hotel and other inside scenes necessary to the story with minute attention to details.

The editors of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD would like to hear from every exhibitor what they consider was the greatest picture they have shown during the year 1910.

They may qualify their opinions by citing the picture which received the most applause and also stating which picture seemed to create the most profound impression.

Applause alone should not be taken as the criterion of greatness, as some of the dramas of the year have been received with a silence which was equally appreciative if less demonstrative.

We would also like to hear from the exchange booking departments as to what particular film they had most recalls for. This information is not desired for to shed glory on any particular manufacturer, but to arrive at some idea as to what kind of subject is most conducive to the welfare of the business.

All letters will be held confidential unless permission is given to use the name of the writer.

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred
This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.
UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

LICENSED RELEASES

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 3—Waiter No. 5 (Dr.).....997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.).....996
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.).....998
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.).....998
Nov. 17—The Troublesome Baby (Com.).....492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.).....505
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.)996
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.).....503
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.)...432
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.).....997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.).....997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.).....998
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables.....999
Dec. 8—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.).....576
Dec. 12—The Golden Supper (Dr.).....998
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.).....998
Dec. 19—The Lesson (Dr.).....994
Dec. 22—White Roses (Dr.).....558
Dec. 22—The Reversion of an Heiress (Com.)..431
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.).....994
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts.....
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.).....311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths (Dr.).....992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves (Dr.).....958
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Dr.).....996
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Com.).....592
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.).....995

EDISON.

Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—In the Valley of Death (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Stolen Claim (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker; the Doll; and the Devil (Com.).....990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.)....995
Nov. 23—Through the Toods (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines.....995
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Love and the Woman (Dr.).....976
Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.)..995
Dec. 7—The Life of Salmon Gulch (Ind.).....999
Dec. 7—Amateur Night (Com.).....550
Dec. 9—The Indian's Bride (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.)..250
Dec. 13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.).....750
Dec. 14—Pipe is Plug (Com.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Police Force of New York City Scenic.....995
Dec. 21—The Joke they Played on Bumptious (Com.).....990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 27—Flora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—A Medley of Vegetarians (Com.)....999
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)..1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep (Com.).....
Jan. 6—Fire Dept. of New York City (Sc.)....
Jan. 6—A Western Night (Dr.).....446
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Scenic).....
Jan. 13—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.).....
Jan. 13—The Link That Held (Dr.).....

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.).....578
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.).....960
Nov. 22—That Popular Tune (Com.).....
Nov. 22—Hank and Lank (as Sandwich Men) (Com.).....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 29—The Fiat Binds (Dr.).....950
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.).....950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com).....1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.).....597
Dec. 20—The Greater Call (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank (Com.).....
Dec. 24—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift (Dr.)1000
Dec. 27—Girls Will be Boys (Com.).....1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys (Com.)....1000

KALEM CO.

Nov. 15—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Rose of the Virgin (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Touch of a Child's Hand (Dr.)...970
Nov. 30—Up the Hill to Westminster (Dr.)..1025
Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Release of Molly Finney (Dr.)....1007
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.).....955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.).....
Dec. 21—The Little Stepwoman Maiden (Dr.)...985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part (Dr.).....963
Dec. 28—The Girl Before Vicksburg (Dr.)....
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.).....1005
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door (Dr.).....975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Eaglet (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—For Love of An Enemy (Dr.).....995
Jan. 13—The Heart of An Indian Mother (Dr.)1000

LUBIN.

Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (Dr.)..550
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.).....450
Nov. 14—The Street Preacher (Dr.).....999
Nov. 17—Right in Front of Father (Com.)....999
Nov. 21—Caught by the Cameron (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (Dr.)..
Nov. 28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Spooky Sam (Com.).....
Dec. 12—An Editor's Love (Dr.).....999
Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—The Dead Letter (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—An Americus Count (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.).....980
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.).....990
Jan. 2—Art and the Liquor Habit (Dr.).....990
Jan. 5—His Last Parade (Dr.).....990
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....990
Jan. 9—Ray Bar at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....985
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....
Jan. 16—Will O' the Wisp (Com.).....715
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revo-lution (Sc.).....727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty 230
Nov. 20—Her Into the Flames (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal (Dr.).....519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince (Com.)..489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door (Com.).....732
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone (Scenic).....743
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nance's Wedding Trip (Com.).....273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.).....171
Dec. 10—The Result (Dr.).....940
Dec. 10—The Phantom Rider (Com.).....229
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.).....676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Bibli-cal).....965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)..
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.).....732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel (Biblical).....259
Dec. 27—The Two Actresses (Dr.).....995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.).....981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Ideal (Dr.).....973
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins (Com.).....945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.).....758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Caledon (Sc.).....243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.).....958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.).....867
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Scenic).....168

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.).....850
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.).....142
Nov. 20—The Stronger (Dr.).....941
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic).....450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight (Dr.).....634
Nov. 30—Through Ceylon (Scenic).....319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Collgny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 8—On the Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Dec. —Reggie's Engagement (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.).....749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.).....253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.).....651
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt 332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.).....650
Dec. 28—Conching in Devonshire, England (Scenic).....348
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair (Dr.).....978
Jan. 11—Wanted (Dr.).....670
Jan. 11—Wood Carving at Brienz (Ind.).....329

G. MELIES.

Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.).....986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.).....950
Nov. 24—The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Old Nurse's Gal (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome (Dr.).....980
Dec. 29—In the Full Grass Country (Dr.).....
Jan. 5—The Crimson Sears (Dr.).....970
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)

PATHE.

Dec. 10—Her First Husband's Return (Dr.)....990
Dec. 12—In Her Father's Absence (Com.).....
Dec. 17—Old Heidelberg 387
Dec. 14—Holmes' Xmas (Com.).....550
Dec. 19—Lost in the Brussels Sewers (Sc.)....
Dec. 24—Christmas Eve (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—Little Snowdrop 1000
Dec. 27—Saved by Loving Providence (Dr.)....985
Dec. 29—Art Through Quirks (Dr.).....787
Jan. 2—Sunshine in Poverty Row (Dr.).....
Jan. 5—The Abandoned Officer 844
Jan. 9—Sweets of the Past (Dr.).....
Jan. 9—Reading Aloud From a Fortune (Com.)..540
Jan. 12—The Adventures Fleet in French Waters 125
Jan. 16—In Full Cry (Sc.).....
Jan. 16—Calabar, the Minstrel (Dr.).....748
Jan. 19—Carnival of Japanese Blossoms in Tokio (Sc.).....294
Jan. 21—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—The Mysterious Portrait (Dr.).....
Jan. 26—The Mandarin's Son .....
Jan. 30—Cupid's Dream .....
Jan. 30—Cupid's Dream .....
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Sweetheart (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—An Unhappy Day .....
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties (Com.).....
Jan. 7—The Funeral of Queen Victoria (Sc.)..
Jan. 9—The Rajah and the Rose .....
Jan. 9—The Last Days of Old Mexico (Scenic)..
Jan. 11—The Two Brothers (Dr.).....
Jan. 12—Poor Jones Tames a Bear (Com.).....
Jan. 13—Sir Noel Has Designs .....
Jan. 15—Mary is Always Married (Com.).....
Jan. 14—The Battle at Kernstock (Dr.).....

SELIG.

Nov. 21—No Home Like Home (Com.).....
Nov. 21—The Dam Builders .....
Nov. 24—The Many Ways of Wedded Life (Dr.)1000
Nov. 28—The Sequel of Rosita (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Sweetheart (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Witches of Mt. Creek Flat (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—A Thief of the Sea (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Cupid's Pranks (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—Jonah Jumps and the Cherub Mystical1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fortune (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—Her Rescuers (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—Justifying and Theodora (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 2—The Aristocrats 1000
Jan. 5—Mary Jane's Pa (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 8—Scenes of the Past (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 12—The Indian Runner (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 15—.....

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—Jack Tar and Jim Salmon Cross Island (Com.).....951
Nov. 3—The Farmer's Wife (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 6—A Little Runaway (Com.).....956
Nov. 9—A Western Love Spell (Com.).....927
Nov. 10—The Lonely Scientist's Home (Dr.)....978
Nov. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Lost Watch (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Educational Motor Boat Race (Sc.).....
Nov. 17—A Hole Mother (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—The Light in the Window (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....
Nov. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.).....980
Nov. 30—Cruby Angles (Com.).....
Dec. 3—Where the Waters Meet (Com.).....987
Dec. 3—All is Fair in Love and War (Dr.)....
Jan. 7—The Vagabond Queen and Their Nephew (Com.).....
Jan. 7—The Water Jar (Dr.).....984
Jan. 10—Rocky Ground (Dr.).....987
Jan. 10—Wanda Talbot (Dr.).....
Jan. 14—Caught on Hook (Dr.).....975

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS

Monday, January 9.

Biograph—The Indian Heritage (Dr.).....
Edison—The Duel in Silver Gulch (Dr.).....
Pathe—The Path of Intrigue (Dr.).....
Pathe—In the Land of Fire and Snow (Sc.).....
Selig—Shadows of the Past (Dr.).....

Tuesday, January 10

Edison—The End of Paradise (Dr.).....
Essanay—Under the Greenwood Tree (Dr.).....
Gaumont—A Cook's Tour (Sc.).....
Gaumont—Hunting Wild Animals in Africa (Sc.)
Vitagraph—Dr. Cupid (Com.).....

Wednesday, January 11

Edison—The Home of the Seal (Sc.).....
Edison—The Cowboy's Romance (Dr.).....
Edison—The Lion at Liberty (Dr.).....
Kalem—The Indian Runner (Dr.).....
Pathe—Lord Roberts Tea in Kent (Com.).....
Urban—Wedding Customs in Japan (Sc.).....
Urban—Wild Animals at Home (Sc.).....

Thursday, January 12

Biograph—The Cowboy Necklace (Com.).....
Essanay—The Wooing Thus (Dr.).....
Essanay—By Wireless (Com.).....
Kalem—The Indian Mother (Dr.).....
Lubin—Lucky Jim and the Ghost (Com.).....
Selig—The Royal Immigrant (Dr.).....

Friday, January 13

Edison—The Lion Tamer (Dr.).....
Edison—A Near Sea Nymph (Com.).....
Edison—Through Fire and Water (Dr.).....
Gaumont—Lucky Jim and the Ghost (Com.).....
Urban—Rose of the Alhambra (Dr.).....
Vitagraph—Wanda Talbot (Dr.).....

Saturday, January 14

Biograph—.....
Essanay—.....
Gaumont—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.).....
Pathe—How Smith an Husband Got (Com.).....
Vitagraph—Caught on Hook (Dr.).....

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Dec. 12—The Rummage Sale (Com.)
Dec. 15—The Binding Shot (Dr.)
Dec. 18—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.)
Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
Dec. 22—A Prominence Passed (Com.)
Dec. 26—Gillies (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Cook Life's Visions (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Arizona Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 12—Love's Laugh (Com.)
Jan. 12—The Borrowed Flat (Com.)
Jan. 16—The Rejected Bridegroom (Com.) 525
Jan. 19—Buried Treasure (Com.) 950
Jan. 19—The Romance King (Dr.) 980

ATLAS.

Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dr.)
Dec. 21—The Axe of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Spare Rib (Com.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—A City Waif (Dr.)

BISON.

Jan. 3—In the Heart of the Sierras (Dr.) 980
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion (Dr.) 980

CHAMPION.

Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.) 950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.) 950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.) 950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.) 950
Jan. 4—Pluck of the Irish Lad (Dr.) 950
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.) 950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.) 950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.) 950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.) 950
Jan. 4—Pluck of the Irish Lad (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.) 950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 28—In the Web (Dr.)
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 26—Cowboy Coach Tom (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Dec. 12—The Bowling Game (Com.) 445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) 470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) 545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Stereopics (Dr.) 450
Dec. 26—Look Keeper (Dr.) 537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.) 485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.) 480
Jan. 9—Michaela's Portrait (Dr.) 520
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Sostienes Ranulot (Com.) 478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.) 482

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Second Temple of Assakips (Sc.)
Dec. 10—The Powder (Dr.)
Dec. 10—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Pickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Neighbor of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 24—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)

IMP.

Dec. 12—Pacific Mail (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—Clever Rose 500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Youth Boss
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.) 995
Dec. 29—Responsible Brothers (Dr.)
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.) 995
Jan. 5—Rewards (Dr.) 500
Jan. 5—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.) 998
Jan. 12—The Tramps Staff (Dr.) 995
Jan. 15—The First Patient (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodlogs's Courtship (Dr.) 500
Jan. 26—Melody 995

LUX.

Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.) 344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Topic (Dr.) 550
Dec. 23—Still Pluess Roads (Com.) 420
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Bower (Com.) 492
Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.) 547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.) 373
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.) 458
Jan. 6—The Rival Music Princess (Dr.) 567
Jan. 13—Bill As A Jockey (Com.) 465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.) 458

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
"Bison."

Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.)
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.)
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Cattle Rustler's Daughter
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec. 27—An Indian's Elopement 1000
Dec. 30—Taming the Terror 1000

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 15—The False Accusation
Dec. 17—The Mother's Stendon (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec. 24—Grandmother Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Result 980
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls 500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day 500
Jan. 3—Asbestos Emeralds 980
Jan. 7—Foolshead As Inspector of Hygiene (Com.) 980

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 23—Gounod Ave Maria (Dr.)
Nov. 28—The Jailer's Daughter (Dr.)
Dec. 7—The Tell-Tale Portrait
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part.
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenes
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner
Dec. 21—Trilby Swindleham As a Policeman (Com.) 500
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition (Dr.) 500
Jan. 28—Grandfather's Pipe 500
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver 500

NESTOR.

Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov. 25—A Deal in Indians 1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.)
Dec. 2—The Conquering Hero (Dr.)
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 26—Ride of the Mounties (Dr.)
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sheep vs. Hollow (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man In 25

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan. 2—The Fugitives (Dr.)
Jan. 3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan. 3—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 10—The District Attorney (Dr.)
Jan. 10—A Tip to Husbands (Com.)
Jan. 14—Auntie Chess (Dr.)
Jan. 17—A Mountain Love Story (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Dec. 3—When Woman Wills (Dr.)
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.)
Dec. 15—Fido (Dr.)
Dec. 24—The Refuge
Dec. 31—A Sacrifice—and Then (Dr.) 900
Jan. 7—The Wife's Order (Dr.) 900
Jan. 11—The Hour of Fate (Dr.) 900

REVIER.

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—Insubordination Remembered by the Ute (Dr.) 950
Jan. 4—For Life Or Worse (Dr.)
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.)
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.) 500
Jan. 18—You Tell It (Com.)

SOLAX COMPANY.

Dec. 16—Two Suits
Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec. 30—The Redeed Dove (Com.)
Jan. 6—The Negative (Com.)
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—His Face Friend (Dr.)

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 20—Looking Backward (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—The Year of Wakefield (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 3—Mrs. Frisbie's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers (Com.) 1000
Jan. 10—Inventor Saves Father (Com.)
Jan. 13—Mother Gold (Com.)
Jan. 17—The Very Last Coppers (Dr.) 1000

YANKEE

Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Word of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Jan. 2—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Royal Wardrobe (Dr.)
Jan. 9—Miss Dancer's Divorce
Jan. 13—Jerry's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned To The Fold (Dr.)

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, January 9.

American Lucy's Lover (Com.)
American—The Borrowed Flat (Com.)
Belasco—Mother's Portrait (Dr.) 980
Imp—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.) 998
Yankee—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)

Tuesday, January 10.

Bison—(Title Not Given)
Powers—The Faithful Attorney (Dr.)
Powers—A Tip to Husbands (Com.)
Thanhouser—Dora and Sally Nan's Father (Com.)
Thanhouser—The Only Girl In Camp (Com.)

Wednesday, January 11.

Ambrosio—(Title Not Given)
Atlas—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Champion—Bill's Widow (Dr.) 950

Thursday, January 12.

American—Jones's Lover (Com.)
American—The Borrowed Flat (Com.)
Imp—The Empty Shell (Dr.) 955
Rex—(Title Not Given)

Friday, January 13.

Bison—(Title Not Given)
Lux—Bill As a Jockey (Com.) 465
Lux—That Is My Name (Com.) 458
Solax—The Girl and The Burglar (Dr.)

Saturday, January 14.

Columbia—(Title Not Given)
Great Northern—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Powers—Monte Cristo (Dr.)
Powers—Monte Cristo (Dr.)
Reliance—(Title Not Given)

Among the Exhibitors

Youngstown, Ohio.—Paul Fitch and Walter Hamlets have sold the Bijou theatorium to Robbins Bros.

Texarkana, Texas.—W. C. Hardin is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Wilbur Seeley is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Minot, N. Dak.—H. H. Emerson is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Eureka Valley Improvement Association is making arrangements to open the new Castro Theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Milwaukee Amusement Company has opened a new theater at Third and Lloyd avenues.

Delphos, Ohio.—H. H. Lampe is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show on Main street.

Hartford, Mich.—Will Lay has purchased the Gem theater. Theater in the Conklin Building, from Hotchkiss & Brown.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Western Moving Picture Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are A. P. Melrose, J. A. Johnson and J. A. Anderson.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Ben Harris has completed arrangements for the erection of a new theater here.

Onley, Ill.—Mr. George Selley, is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Greencastle, Penn.—Edgar Phillips and Charles Kauffman have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Sioux City, Utah.—Martin Beck, of the Orpheum Circuit, is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Modesto, Calif.—Mr. Stevenson is making arrangements to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here. It will be known as the New Bonnheim.

Ida Grove, Iowa.—Peterson and Frahm, have opened a new moving picture theater in the Gottlieg Block.

Pasco, Wash.—D. H. Rockwell is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Bountiful, Utah.—A stock company, headed by Dr. B. L. Rossiter, is planning to erect a high-class new moving picture and vaudeville theater here.

Beatrice, Nebr.—Mr. Glenn has opened a new moving picture and vaudeville theater here which will be known as the Star Theatre.

Cairo, Ill.—Messrs. Stone Brothers have purchased the Bijou Moving Picture Theater, to be known as the Star Theater.

Hynes, Iowa.—Mr. Frank West has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Willow Springs, Mo.—Mr. Frank Bassett is planning to open a new picture palace here.

Ansonia, Conn.—The Star Motion Picture Theater, on Bank street, has closed its doors.

Sheridan, Wyo.—Kerrigan Brothers, who have leased the Star Theater here, are having their theater remodeled and enlarged.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater is being planned to be erected on Cedar Avenue, near East 34th Street, for the Zeidler Amusement Company.

New York City.—Jerry McCauley's old Cremorne Mission House at No. 194 West Thirty-second Street is being converted into a high-grade moving picture and vaudeville theater, which will be under the proprietorship of the Specialty Amusement Company.

FILMS FOR RENT

We ship on rental basis anywhere. Special care taken of Foreign trade. We can furnish you with any grade service you desire. We can also sell you films, any age, any make, at reasonable prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

ACME FILM CO., Inc., 12 E. 15th Street, New York

Mr. J. A. BROSIUS, 124 Clinton Street, Johnstown, Pa.

Flimco's Droll Trick

Old Gen. Flimco, the village skeezix, has just pulled one of his drollest tricks. He fined "his" Memphis office $500 for releasing a film before release date, the money being paid in spot cash by the manager of that office, so I am told. This wouldn't be so funny except for the fact that when Old Gen. Flimco "bought" his adopted offices, he didn't pay all in cash, but mostly in paper and promises. Wouldn't it be a delicious trick if he would pay for all of his adopted offices in fines!!! I'd feel sorry for Flimco's poor victims if it hadn't been for the fact that I gave them public warning long before they consented to become victims. To exhibitors I say this: Avoiding trickery is not the only reason why you ought to become Independent, by a long shot. The best reason for asserting your Independence is that by doing so you'll get a blamed sight better program of films than you ever got in all your born days. But you won't get it unless you patronize an Independent exchange which is buying all the good Independent stuff and not "junking." To be dead certain you are in the right pew, hook up with me. Buy your Powers, Edison and Motiograph machines of me. Buy all your accessories of me. Get your films from me. In other words, PLAY SAFE!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:

196-198 Lake Street CHICAGO

Other Offices: OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders

German Savings Bank Building

147 Fourth Avenue. NEW YORK CITY

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Pictures two-thirds on their electric light bills and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week. Well, don't miss it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas cheerfully given. Low Prices on Best Work on DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

I am Sacrificing the following complete outfit:
1 Complete brand new Moving Picture Machine
Mechanism used light for projection
1 Extra Head, also brand new.
1 Set of Moving Picture lenses, 6 sizes.
1 Set of Stereopticon lenses, 4 sizes.
All Repair parts.
1 Sheet, brand new, large.
500 Carbons 5/8 x 6.
100,000 Tickets.
1000 feet of cable.
Passion Play, Pathe, Hand Colored, 3100 feet.
16 Reels of films guaranteed first class condition
Western Dramas, Comedies, Scenics.
1 Lot of Posters.
6 Sets of very late Song slides with Music.
1 Set Travelogue Slides New York.
1 Lot Announcement slides.
Everything packed in special trunks. Wire or write quick.
$575
this is the biggest bargain ever offered.
B. SPITZ. 147 Fourth Ave., Room 116, NEW YORK

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR
FILM PERFORATING DIES
When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.
THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

Slides & Films for Rent
"IN DAYS OF YORE"
they used broken and incomplete song sets, but that day is long past. Our sets are so complete, and music in nice condition, that you will think you are receiving your slides direct from the manufacturers. Our rate is 25c a set per week, including sheet music. Your week's supply in one consignment and absolutely no charge made for time lost in transit.
The Largest Slide Exchange in the World
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
6th floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

SONG SLIDES
LIDE
Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable
Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For
Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 1143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.
SONG SLIDES

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England
The House of Quality and Satisfaction
MR. EXHIBITOR:
If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 Oxford

Three Important Announcements About
GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENSES

¶ A complete stock is now carried by Nicholas Power Company, 115-117 Nassau Street, New York, and they will fill all orders as promptly and carefully as ourselves.
¶ We are furnishing all the special Lenses used by the Rothapfel Photoplane system of daylight projection now being installed in Keith's entire circuit of theatres.
¶ Our lenses may be ordered from all branches of the General Film Company, and every leading Film Exchange.
We guarantee absolute satisfaction
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY
808 CLINTON AVENUE, SOUTH ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

WANTED TO BUY—Large motion picture theater, New York City or near vicinity, seating 500 to 2,000. Payment part cash, part real estate. Address Business, care Moving Picture World.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—In Mass. City of 15,000. Seating capacity 700. Playing pictures and vaudeville and stocks. Average weekly profit since September, $125. Must sell at once. Fine opening for hustlers. Address Photoplay, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Moving picture theater and outfit. Good location and business. Address CON GMINER, 517 West Fulton St., Waupaca, Wis.

FOR SALE OR FOR RENT—First-class Moving Picture House, seats 400, on the main street Connecticut town of 14,000. All ready for business. Price low. Good reason. PAUL BUSSO, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE—Powers No. 5, like new. Supplies, repairing. THE B. CO., 396 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 279, Washington, D. C.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

AERO-RIDE—(Patent pending.) Reproducing all motions of an aeroplane. Designed for moving picture theaters, summer resorts, all places of amusement. Machines and territorial rights for sale. W. G. MAYFIELD, 1105 World Building, N. Y. C.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MECHANICAL ELECTRICIAN.—of ten years' practical experience in the moving picture business desires position to install, repair and operate the electrical and mechanical equipments of a moving picture studio, as exchange, or as cameraman. Address D. S., care of Moving Picture World.

AT LIBERTY—First-class operator; five years' experience, strictly sober and reliable; best of references. Address W. O. PAUL, 545 North Main St., Danville, Va.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Complete moving picture theater outfit, including three hundred opera chairs. Must be in good condition. Address J. C., care Moving Picture World.

START THE NEW YEAR
by Subscribing to
The MOVING PICTURE WORLD
$2.00 PER YEAR $2.00

"SILVERLIGHT"
ALUMINUM MOTION PICTURE CURTAIN
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Economy, Flexibility, Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular.
RALPH J. GOLSEN SUPPLY CO. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street Chicago

More Money Every Month
You are in the theatre business to make and you can cut out it—you are interested in anything that means larger profits. Our plan is just like getting money from home. Brings you a check every month, makes your theatre more popular and better patronized, gives you a better standing with the other business men in your town.
NO COST TO YOU
That's the beauty of it. You don't buy anything—don't continue your card in any way—don't have to make a single change in your theatre, film supply, operator or anything else.
Hundreds of theatre owners are getting our checks every month—making more money than they could without our plan.
You need us—we need you.
Paste this coupon on a postal card
mail it to us today
T. R. WOODBURN & CO.
611 First National Bank Building. Chicago
Name .....
Name of Theatre .....
Town ..... State .....

Moving Picture Supplies
Tickets, roll of 2,000 . $ .16
Bio Carbons 6x5-8 per 100 2.15
Electra Carbons 6x5-8 per 100 2.10
Announcement Slides, Col. .25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders .75
Imported Condensers . . .75
Rewinders Complete . . 3.50
Send for Descriptive Catalogue
American Moving Picture Supply Company
110 Fourth Ave. - New York City

United States Film Brokers and Importers
41 Union Square West Broadway and 17th St. NEW YORK CITY
The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.
SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records
EDISON and POWER'S MACHINE
like new
All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.
Complete lists sent free upon request

FILMS FOR RENT
New Films High Class Service
The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It
Write Today for Terms
EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.
For Sale by Dealers
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.
MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS
564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS
The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors
5,000 . . . . $1.25 20,000 . . . . $4.00 50,000 . . . . $7.50
10,000 . . . . $2.50 26,000 . . . . $5.50 100,000 . . . . $10.00
Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc In sections if wanted

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office; 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office; 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture-show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO. Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

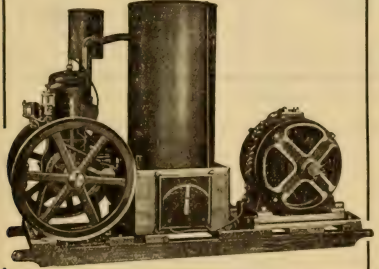
The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Electric Light Plant Complete
$210.35



Larger Plants at Proportionately Low Prices.

Including the celebrated DETROIT KEROSENE ENGINE and DYNAMO OF SUFFICIENT CAPACITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR YOUR ARC AND 10-16 c. p. TUNGSTEN LAMPS for illumination.

Total cost of operation from 5 to 25 cents per day. Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a ten-year old child.

CAN MAKE IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, 406 Bellevue Avenue, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

USE AN ATTRACTIVE

PROGRAM SHEET

FOR YOUR LOBBY

Program Sheets - 10c. Size, 36x62
Film Title Strips - 2c. Size, 5x27
For All Assn. Releases.
A. B. C. and All Other Makes of Posters, 10c.

T. H. PLAMPIN
105 EAST 14th ST., NEW YORK
Top Floor, Rooms 6, 7, 8 and 9

JUST HATCHED OUT

(Patent applied for.)

Invaluable to Motion Picture Managers

The "TYPO-PAD"

For Displaying Advertisements, Announcements, Etc.

Make your own slides on the "TYPO-PAD," by the use of a typewriter, at the amazingly low cost of 2 cents each.

Write for free Sample and information

The AMERICAN TYPO-PAD COMPANY
RALEIGH, N. C.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric light and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. HALLBERG 36 East 23d St. New York City

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhouser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange.

Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
743 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses; play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic. Including resonators, magnets and keyboards, $75.00

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

Concert-Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and produce your favorite selections.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the F. P. Entertainment with musical instruments. Write for free book "Unique Catalogue," showing the only complete line of coin-piano-orchestras from a small coin-operated piano to an elaborate orchestration representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 51 E. Main.

UNIFORMS
FOR
USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.

We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready
The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

UNIFORMS AND CAPS
FOR
Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

NEW SLIDES
For the following Songs — JUST OUT

Moonlight Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart Knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams.
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From the Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou.
Take Me Back ToDear Old Dixie
Put Your Arms Around Me Winter.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

EXCHANGES!

Save time and money by having your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hochstetter process. Endorsed and recommended by leading exchanges.

We are now prepared to install renovating plants in exchanges at very reasonable rates.

Specimen work done at our plant at 60 cents a reel. Agents wanted.

Ortho Film Co., 2726 W. Division St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

"Rex"
Learn to say it.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

[illegible]

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St. CHICAGO, ILL.

DON'T WORRY

I CAN POSITIVELY IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES BY SUPPLYING YOU WITH AN OPERATOR WHO KNOWS HOW
THE SECRET HAS ONLY BEEN KNOWN A FEW WEEKS AND MY OPERATORS ARE THE ONLY ONES WHO KNOW IT
TEL 1405 MAD. SQ.

F. C. TAYLOR.

49 WEST 28TH ST N.Y.C.

(10 YEARS IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS MEANS SOMETHING)

OUR

Musical Electrical Bells

(which are played from a Key-board, the bells being mounted in various parts of the house) have been a great success all over the country and no Picture-house is complete without a set of them, We can supply 25 Bells, 2 octaves chromatic, C to C, correctly tuned to your Piano, complete with Resonators, Keyboard, Magnets, and boards, complete ready to install for $75.00.

The above is a special offer and holds good for a limited time only, so ORDER NOW and be the first in your locality.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 to 3810 North Clark Street

CHICAGO, U. S. A.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theatres it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3x 4 / $10.00 / Size Shell 3x15

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb screw rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Skunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. CLEVELAND, OHIO

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS

908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

Managers' and Operators' Handbook

.... BY ....

F. H. RICHARDSON

Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See? Hand Colored	20 ft. $3.00
(Same Black and White)	2.00
Just a moment; Show only half over. 15 ft. Hand Colored	2.00
(Same Black and White)	1.50
Those who have seen the entire performance will kindly pass out, 20 ft. Hand Colored	3.00
(Same Black and White	2.00
New Pictures every day, 10 ft. Hand Colored	1.50
(Same Black and White)	1.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order. Send us an order. Your money back if you say so.

The F. A. Film Cement

IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others. Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle	25 cents
Six bottles by express	$1.00

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

NEW YEAR'S BARGAINS FOR EXCHANGES

AMBROSIO CINES ITALIA
LUX RALEIGH-ROBERTS WARWICK

NEW FILM

Never Been Run

4c. per foot. Posters with some

WRITE FOR LISTS — QUICK

IMPORTER
care of M. P. World

OBEY THE LAW

BUT, do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use Water and

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE

OZONE (oxygen) the modern scientific germicide. Test how the gas; it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE for use with atomizer 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at One Cent per gallon. Let us demonstrate.

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,
2 Rector Street Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

ISSUED MONDAY, JAN. 16
The Folks Back Home
FRIDAY, JAN. 20
Returned to the Fold

YANKEE FILMS
344 East 32d Street New York

OLD STYLE — PAT. APP'D FOR — INDESTRUCTIBLE — NEW STYLE

Two Pin Machines Changed to One Pin
Improved Easy Running, Long Wearing Cams, Stars, Etc., Etc.
E. W. LAVEZZI,
3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

COMING WED. JAN. 18
Big Story of the Adirondacks
A City Wolf
Elegant Posters
Bulletins Mailed

Atlas Film Co. 10 E. 15th St. New York

SEND IN YOUR ORDER NOW FOR MANAGERS' AND OPERATORS' HAND BOOK
Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

THE "STANDARD"
The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

Owing to the enormous demand for the "STANDARD" and our inability to keep up with the orders, we are compelled to advance the price to $225.00.

All orders received on or before February 1st, 1911, will be filled at our present list price, $170.00.

The Standard is the only machine passed by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters on which a motor is used.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET NEW YORK CITY

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made

Most Attractive Designs

PERMANENTLY NOISELESS

There Are Reasons

Write for Catalog V

American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK

BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

Want Chairs Quick?

Stafford chairs excell all others. We use no three-ply veneers. Why? Not good enough! Five p'y is best, and that is why we use them.

Chairs like cut IN STOCK and GUARANTEED

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.

CHICAGO ILLINOIS

MANUFACTURERS---NOTICE!

I am now prepared to do special work on exposures, negatives, and developing.

Guaranteed work is my own process.

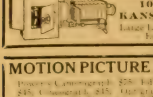
Interior work a specialty.

FRED. W. HOCHSTETTER

2726 W. Division St., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS

1028 Main St.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Large line of Edison Goods

Established 1896

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

Power's Cameragraph No. 1 at $75. Power's Cameragraph No. 2 for $45. Cameragraph No. 3 at $75. Cameragraph No. 4 for $45. Model 5 Cameragraph $85. Powers Model 6 Mechanism $95. Standard Edison Model B with Mantz shutter $125. MACHINES WANTED

Send for Supplement 33 of Bargains

HARBACH & CO.

809 FILBERT STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

STEEL BOOTHS

Sectional or ready

APPROVED BY UNDERWRITERS

Write for quotations

S. B. LELAND

MONTPELIER, VT.

SCENERY

The BEST on Earth for the Money

DAVIS SCENIC CO.

Corry, Pa.

JANUARY FILM EXCHANGE

Send for our list of used moving picture machines and films. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices.

REPRODUCTION JOHNSON-JEFFRIES FIGHT. Complete, $125.00

ORIGINAL WOLGAST-NELSON FIGHT. Complete, $350.00

ORIGINAL NELSON-GANS FIGHT. Complete, $350.00

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City

TO THE TRADE

I CARRY A STOCK OF INDEPENDENT FILMS, BOTH AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN MAKES, ALSO ASSOCIATION FILMS, BOTH OF WHICH ARE IN EXCELLENT SHAPE. BANNERS AND POSTERS FREE. TOM BIBLE.

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE

1325 Arch Street

PHILADELPHIA, - - - PA.

BELL 'PHONE, - WALNUT 402.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels of film, $8, $10 and $15; song sets, $1; odd slides, $c.; Lubin machine, $60; Motiograph, $125; new Edison, Power's machines, $100. Moving picture theatres cheap. For Rent—6,000 ft. film, $6; 12,000 ft. $12; up-to-date film, all in one shipment. Will buy film, machines, Passion Play.

P. DAVIS Watertown, Wis.

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.

Rooms 523-4

225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

EXCHANGES NOTICE

I can supply you with posters for past releases. Independent or trust; any quantity you want. 10c. each. Thus are the regular posters for the re leases. REMITTANCE WITH ORDER. SEND SENT C. O. D.

A. J. CLAPHAM

12 East 15th Street New York

"Rex"

Learn to say it.

To the Trade

I have a large stock of Association and Independent films. My stock is in good condition, and if I am misrepresenting you are invited to my exchange :-: :-: :-:

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE

1325 Arch Street Philadelphia

TOM BIBLE

EXHIBITORS

BEWARE!

DON'T run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition. We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and films come out as good as new. We have several openings for very late service, and if you are interested write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Nelson-Gans Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knights Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City

JANUARY FILM BARGAINS

Send for our list of used moving picture machines and films. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices.

REPRODUCTION JOHNSON-JEFFRIES FIGHT. Complete, $125.00

ORIGINAL WOLGAST-NELSON FIGHT. Complete, $350.00

ORIGINAL NELSON-GANS FIGHT. Complete, $350.00

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City

ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
1 CENT EACH

Up-to-date theaters use them for announcing future programmes, for song chorus slides when the chorus slide is missing, for business advertising slides—in fact, for anything you desire to say to the audience. They are written on colored gelatin with a pen and ink or typewriter. They look well. Anyone can make them. Takes three minutes to make a slide. For three dollars ($3.00) cash with order, I send by express (charges not prepaid) as follows: 24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. E. H. RICHARDSON, No. 6 Bradhurst Avenue, New York City.

Powers Picture Plays

TUESDAY AND SATURDAY
YOU NEED BOTH

The Tuesday Split Reel for January 17, 1911

A Montana Love Story

A Western Comedy

A true to life Western Story that will make your Patrons Howl. Full of action—Scenes and happenings that will make you glad you saw this Hit.

2 on 1

Lovers Trials

A Comedy Scream

Showing how Mabel's Father is foiled and at last is tickled that Fred wins her hand. A unique comedy that will stand repeating.

Exhibitors throughout the country have been requesting us to make More Comedy. Here they are—Don't miss these.

2 on 1

The Saturday Feature, January 21st, 1911

A NOBLE HEART

A DRAMA

A heart touching story showing the sacrifice of a "Noble hearted" woman for another of her sex, and how she made two hearts "Beat as one". This is Real Drama with enough Comedy to make them a long to be remembered story.

Have You Featured Monte Cristo For Profits Sake?

Do So—The Greatest Hit of the Year.

A Few Display Frames with REAL PHOTOS left at $5.00.

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

Advertising Slides

If handled right you can make your rent money out of advertising slides. We make them for every line of business from 50 cents up.

"Campaign Slides are Vote Getters" Slide with candidate's picture and announcement 50 cents.

FRKER BROS. OPTICAL COMPANY
604 Oliver Street St. Louis
Moving Picture Theatre Supply House

TO OPERATORS AND OTHERS

Send for free sample bottle of "Stikwik Cement" to WASTE UTILIZATION CO.

227-229 East 150th St. New York

We also have large stock of blank leader

"Rex"

Learn to say it.

5c Show Souvenirs

Terms Cash Personal Checks must be Certified

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,

All Advertising Copy must be in hand not later than Wednesday Noon

TALK-FEST

Sauer-Kraut is bully,
Kartoffel 'dat is fine;
Let us sell you a "Mirror Screen,"
You can eat 'em all the time.

(Or porterhouse, tenderloin with mushrooms, if you had rather.)

REASON: The "MIRROR SCREEN" gets the money. Everybody talks about it. Just get your patrons to talk, the rest is SO EASY. What's that? Talk is cheap? Well, that is right; then use lots of talk. Get your patrons talking about the "MIRROR SCREEN" you are going to install. Then when you put it in, they will talk some more. ALWAYS HAS BEEN THAT WAY.

When the "MIRROR SCREEN" is installed, the picture will talk for you. We know what we are talking about.

Were you ever out with a friend and you had a hard time finding something to make conversation? The next time, tell him about the "MIRROR SCREEN." IT IS WONDERFUL. I could talk to you myself for a year about the "MIRROR SCREEN" and then just get a good start.

Fearing you will not listen for that length of time, or to all of this, I kindly ask you to send me your order by return mail.

Address:

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA.

F. P. BLOOMFIELD, Muncie, Ind. (General Agent.)
FRANK MANNING, 355 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. (Eastern Agent.)
H. F. BRYAN, 307 Post Bldg., 160 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. (General Agent.)
CHARLES BOWDEN, Muncie, Ind. (Western Agent.)
A. E. COFFIN, 55 Rutland Square, Boston, Mass. (New England Agent.)

P. S.—WE ARE SELLING MORE "MIRROR SCREENS" TO EXHIBITORS WHO HAVE TRIED ALL THE IMITATIONS AND "DOPE" CURTAINS (OLD EXPERIENCED SHOWMEN) THAN THOSE WHO HAVE NOT EXPERIMENTED. THE REASON IS OBVIOUS. THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST AND LASTS FOREVER.

Vol. 8, No. 3 January 21, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

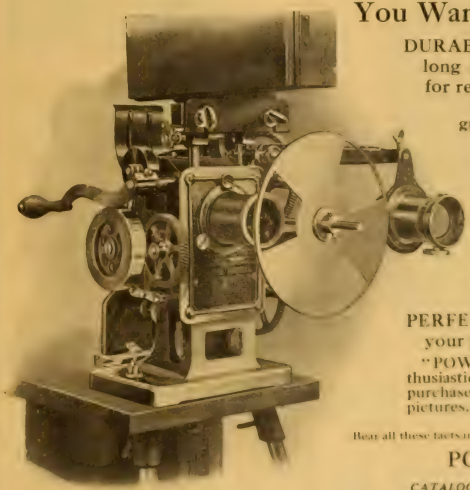
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

MR. EXHIBITOR:—Let us tell you why YOU should purchase

Power's Cameragraph No. 6



You Want—

DURABILITY, so that you will get long service and have no expense for repairs.

"POWER'S No. 6" is absolutely guaranteed for one year.

RELIABILITY, so you won't have to stop your show to tinker with your machine.

"POWER'S No. 6" has few things to adjust and is more massive in construction than any other machine in America.

PERFECT PICTURES to please your patrons.

"POWER'S No. 6" has received the enthusiastic endorsement of over a thousand purchasers in the past year for its splendid pictures.

Bear all these facts in mind when you buy and insist on having

POWER'S No. 6

CATALOG G TELLS ALL ABOUT IT

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

HAD "The Vote That Counted," 1911's Best Reel, Out Friday, the 13th?

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, JAN. 24th

A Study in Pathos

When Love Was Blind

is one of those reels that makes our advertising department gasp in despair, for fear that it can't be adequately described. On the screen, at the first-print inspection, appears a wondrous, thrilling story—so true to life, so realistic—that it leaves even the jaded film-workers speechless. And the ad. man must go below and write WHY it dazed and dazzled that first-print audience! Very often he can. But at other times he can't! This is one of those times! So he'd like you TO SEE THE PICTURE for the reason he's unable to give.

Scene from "WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND"

No. 179—Code Word, Blind.

Scene from "PROMPT PAYMENT"

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, JAN. 27th

A Celebrated "Thanhouser 2-In-1"

Prompt Payment

will bring prompt laught from your patrons—the best kind of payment you can get. For when patrons laugh they feel kindly toward you and your house and it's even likely they'll tell their friends about the funny film they saw there. ENCOURAGE YOUR AUDIENCE TO SMILE. And do it with "Prompt Payment." It cinches your success.

AND ON THE SAME REEL

Stealing A Ride

is a pretty little story of a pair of lost children, a sort of "Babes-in-the-Woods" modernized. The youngsters who go astray are two as loveable children as ever appeared in the pictures, and your women patrons' hearts will go right out to 'em. No. 180. Code Word, Payride.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to EDITOR, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) complete, GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's sake address ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

GETTING "The Old Curiosity Shop," Dickens' Gem, Out Friday, the 20th?

PROGRESS

IN the year 1910 we succeeded in splitting the business of the country between the trust and ourselves on a 50 per cent. basis.

At the beginning of 1910 this was thought an impossibility. In one more year, with your help, we will take another 50 per cent. out of the business they have remaining, or we will have an open market — they selling to our exchanges and we selling to theirs.

You may formerly have used Independent service and found it unsatisfactory. We are positive you would NOT find such the case NOW, especially if you take service from an exchange that is buying our entire output.

The next time a solicitor from an independent exchange approaches you, open up to him, tell him what has been your experience with independent service and what you must have to keep your people coming. If he is connected with a "live one" he will surely be able to give you a satisfactory service.

We suggest, also, that you write us, telling us your troubles. We may be able to offer at least one valuable suggestion.

OUR PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

IMP NEWS

Here is the final scene in the splendid Imp release of Monday, January 23rd, entitled "The Dream." It tells the story of a young husband who grows weary of his sweet little wife until he has a dream which brings him to his senses. The dream is mighty well conceived and excellently well executed. Imps are getting better and better every week. You ought to have every blessed Imp that is released. The only way to get them is to keep everlastingly at your exchange till you win out! Don't be satisfied with asking your exchange once or twice. Do it every week, the same as we keep ding-donging away at you!

And here's one of the several thrilling scenes in our Imp release of Thursday, January 26th, entitled "Phone 1707 Chester." The wife unexpectedly walks into a banquet room just when her husband is drinking a toast out of a woman's slipper. This is followed by a novel situation in a Turkish bath establishment. The whole film tells a great story, points a good moral and has a happy ending. Begin to demand it today. And keep it up!

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America
CARL LAEMMLE, Pres.
102 WEST 101st STREET, NEW YORK

All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

FIRST AID TO THE OPERATOR

MACKIE'S REPAIR SHOP AND SALESROOM

New Model

Edison Projecting Kinetoscope

WITH OUTSIDE SHUTTER

THE MOST PERFECT MACHINE ON THE MARKET TO-DAY

ALL PARTS ON HAND

Opaque and Combination Transparent and Opaque Post Card Projectors.

Lecturers' Wants Receive Special Attention.

HARRY A. MACKIE 853 Broadway, cor. 14th Street, New York.

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

Messrs. EXHIBITORS:

Here is what one exhibitor writes:

"The LUX productions are excellent. They are a joy."

If YOU are not getting LUX you should try them and YOU will say the same. Insist on LUX in your weekly program and if you have any difficulty in getting them kindly write us at once.

Lux Films are Leaders in Europe as well as in America

LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

GET LUX

Release, January 20th, 1911:

A Dreadful Dilemma

Drama 586 Feet

His Faithful Furniture

Comedy 360 Feet

A more powerful dramatic situation was never shown on your screen. The emotional acting in it will produce a tense feeling in your audiences that will require the relaxation afforded by the exceedingly amusing and clever trick comedy that follows.

Write us at once if you cannot get this reel

FILMS

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

THE BIO ARC SCREEN

Is the Greatest Convenience Ever Devised for the Operator.

It enables him to see at all times exactly what is going on in the arc without "squinting" through a peep-hole or straining his eyes.

You must see it to appreciate it.

During the past two months we have sold hundreds of "BIO" Arc Screens on the "money-back-if-you-want-it" plan—and not a single call for the money.

What better evidence could we give that every operator who sees it thinks it worth the money?

Send us a dollar today on suspicion.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT COMPANY

Largest Importers of Flame Arc Lamps and Carbons in America.

80 Cortlandt Street, New York. 58 Plymouth Court, Chicago. 15th and Pine Streets, St. Louis.
198 Fremont Street, San Francisco. 114 Huron Street, Milwaukee. 939 Carson Street, Pittsburg.

"Arco=B"
Biograph Carbons

Manufactured Expressly for Motion Picture Machines

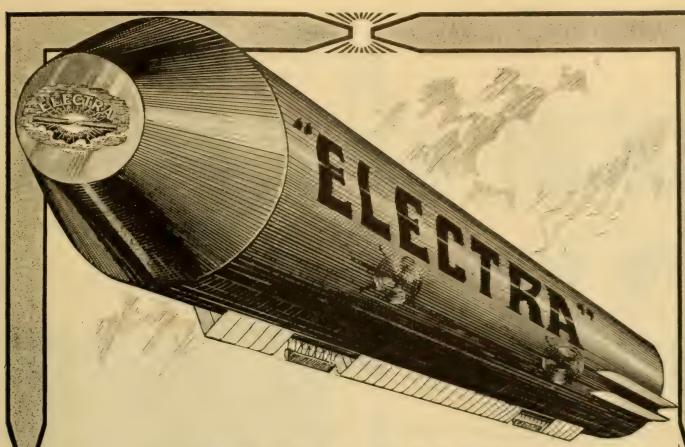
Long Burning at High Amperage, Brilliant and Steady Light

None Genuine Unless Stamped "Arco=B"

WRITE FOR PRICES BEFORE ORDERING ELSEWHERE

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Sole Importers

232-234 Greenwich Street, New York



HIGH QUALITY
ELECTRA (PINK LABEL) CARBONS

Are noted the world over, that is the reason they are being used by most operators.

They do equally well under all conditions.

Specify them and insist on this trade mark.

ELECTRA

TRADE MARK

Hugo Reisinger

Sole Importer

11 Broadway, New York

WE ARE neither

THE BIGGEST

nor the smallest

FILM RENTER

in the world; but we strike that happy medium, which gives you

A COMPLETE PROGRAM of the best and most popular pictures made, selected from the pick of

INDEPENDENT MAKES

WASHINGTON

PARAMOUNT FILM COMPANY

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W.

Washington, D. C.

Champion Films

Champ, Champ, Champ, the public's calling,
Unto the THEATRES everywhere.
Will YOU hearken to the cry and INCREASE
YOUR box receipts,
Just by changing to a CHAMP exhibitor?

You will only begin to realize results with the untailing use of Champs. Start realizing now.

RELEASED JANUARY 25th, 1911

"Why He Went West"

Because we have beautifully enacted here the changing situations brought about by the changing heart affairs of a woman, is his reason. But the consummation of her frivolity results in her undoing. You will therefore UNDOUBTEDLY admire the lesson herein pictured to such a depth as to render the film untiring.

Scene from "Why He Went West"

Don't forget CHAMPS on Wednesday

Don't take our word for it, investigate for yourself Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

See Release Dates for Champ Features

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at
Coytesville on the Hudson

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASES OF JANUARY 23rd (Split Reel)

Painless Extraction 508 feet

A clever comic dealing with the ever popular subject of Painless Dentistry. A laugh all through.

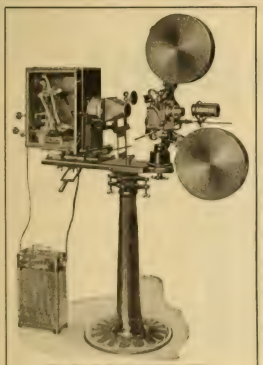
Kill the Fly 442 feet

Choleric Colonel's Adventure with a Fly.

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.



The No. 9 Motiograph No. 10001

New Year's Announcement

ONE HUNDRED MOTIOGRAPHS and more if needed for the

New England Trade

The Machine with a record. The Machine that has made good in every regard

THE MOTIOGRAPH THE BEST

Did we hesitate? No! We have watched and—we have learned. We have learned that there is ONLY ONE BEST

The MOTIOGRAPH M. P. Machine

Now Listen to Our Proposition

THROUGH a special arrangement with the manufacturers they have placed at our disposal for thirty days the two most efficient demonstrators in their employ, Mr. Swett and Mr. Clark.

We are PREPARED to DEMONSTRATE to the exhibitors in the New England States that the Motiograph is not only the best motion picture machine, but the machine of the future.

2½ per cent more illumination assuring. Better and brighter pictures, ease of operation, accessibility of every part and screw, built for the hard, heavy grind in successful theatres. STEADY, FLICKERLESS, MONEY DRAWING PICTURES.

Something different. Something better. Something Permanent. Something To Be Proud of.

YOU may spend vacation to take the demonstration to your home.

REMEMBER: We have these two demonstrators for only Thirty Days. COME IN TODAY. DROP IN A LINE. Telephone and we will come. Don't wait until they have gone—you may be too late.

BOSTON FILM RENTAL COMPANY, No. 1015 Washington Street BOSTON, MASS.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., 389 Main St PROVIDENCE, R. I., Care Meade Bldg PORTLAND, MAINE, 547A Congress St

GREAT NORTHERN

The Trunk Mystery Detective

A Homeless Boy

(RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 14)

A well acted dramatic production.

The Trunk Mystery

(RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 21)

A sensational and intensely interesting story of impersonation to secure an inheritance. The fraud is brought to light by a clever detective, who will win the admiration of every spectator. Get busy at once in getting a booking of this big feature.

"Exhibitors make no mistake in demanding Great Northern films, as they can always be depended upon to lend tone to the program."—Moving Picture World.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Solax Company

MAKERS OF FINE FILMS

BEST FILM MADE

NITTED AND TONED THROUGHOUT

Scene from "HIS BEST FRIEND"

PERFECT Photography

PERFECT PRODUCT

POWERFUL PLAYS

RELEASE JAN. 20th
A Reporter's Romance
DRAMA

RELEASE JAN. 27th
His Best Friend
DRAMA

RELEASE FEB. 3d
Ring of Love
COMEDY

147 Fourth Ave. Solax Company New York City

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 JANUARY 21, 1911 No. 3

The editors of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD would like to hear from every exhibitor what they consider was the greatest picture they have shown during the year 1910.

They may qualify their opinions by citing the picture which received the most applause and also stating which picture seemed to create the most profound impression.

Applause alone should not be taken as the criterion of greatness, as some of the dramas of the year have been received with a silence which was equally appreciative if less demonstrative.

* * *

We would also like to hear from the exchange booking departments as to what particular film they had most recalls for. This information is not desired for to shed glory on any particular manufacturer, but to arrive at some idea as to what kind of subject is most conducive to the welfare of the business.

All letters will be held confidential unless permission is given to use the name of the writer.

THE FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION of Moving Picture Exhibitors, which we have before intimated will be held during the summer of this year, is creating considerable interest. Several have raised objections to the proposed place, Atlantic City, as it is not central. (We have other reasons why some other city should be selected.) Among the suggestions received so far are Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Buffalo. No doubt Chicago is a most desirable center for a national convention. So is Detroit. So is Buffalo, with Niagara Falls as an attraction. Exhibitors should discuss this at their meetings and send in their votes for a meeting place to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Wherever the meeting is held it will necessitate a theater for demonstrative purposes and lectures. Suppose Chicago is decided upon, we have no doubt that Messrs. Jones, Linick & Schaefer would give up the Orpheum for the purpose if reimbursed for the usual gate receipts.

But the first thing to be decided is — Where will the First National Convention of Motion Picture Exhibitors be held?

* * *

Considerable space is used in these pages each week to give the stories of the films. It has been suggested that perhaps this space could be filled with matter of more interest to the general reader. We would like to hear from a few exhibitors as to whether the manufacturers' bulletins fulfil their requirements or do they value this department in their trade paper.

KINEMACOLOR is soon to receive an impetus in this country. The Kinemacolor Company of America, in whose factory at Allentown, Pa., the projecting machines are being made, inform us that in three months or less these will be ready for the market and that the machine will also be adapted to run the regular black and white subjects. Comment has been made in certain quarters that at the recent Kinemacolor exhibitions no other films have been shown than those included in the first demonstration at Madison Square Garden in 1908. There's a reason. The parent company did not propose to have the value of their films lessened by premature release until ready to exploit them throughout the country. But the Kinemacolor producers have not been idle. Before us, as we write, lies a list of over one hundred subjects, mostly full reels, embracing scenic, scientific, dramatic and comedy subjects. A stock company of twenty-five people are now turning out drama and comedy subjects at Nice, France, and a large studio was acquired near London, England, on January 1st. In addition to this, Kinemacolor photographers are at present at work in the Canadian Northwest, in Africa, and in the Orient.

* * *

Within the past two weeks a million dollar corporation has been formed to exploit Kinemacolor and monochrome pictures in this country as soon as the machines are ready for delivery. This company has absorbed the original Kinemacolor Company of America and also acquired the patent rights. We are not at liberty to disclose the names of any of the stockholders in the Kinemacolor Corporation at present. When we do the moving picture world will gasp with astonishment

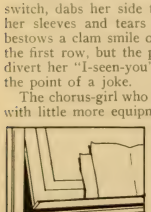
* * *

Charles Urban arrived in New York on January 1 and sailed again for London on Wednesday last, after having signed the papers which launched the big corporation.

On another page will be found an order by Judge Lacombe, enjoining the Yankee and Atlas Film Companies from using the Gaumont cameras or modifications thereof, also from vending any films made on such infringing cameras. The learned judge, however, exempts a camera put in evidence by the Yankee and Atlas people, referred to as the Wagner camera. Therefore these companies are rejoicing that they are enabled to conduct their business without molestation. Stock in the Wagner camera has gone up by leaps and bounds within the past few days, notwithstanding the fact that still another patentee claims that it infringes his rights.

Civilization is not a crab, but theatrical managers walk sideways if not backwards when they allow their musicians to play the wrong accompaniment to the right composition whether of song or picture. O, what a noise when the lights are turned low and Lily Limpwrist takes her place at the usual instrument of torture! With a self-conscious smirk she gives a poke to her back switch, dabs her side teasers with both patties, rolls up her sleeves and tears off "That Yiddisher Rag." She bestows a clam smile on the box-of-candy young man in the first row, but the presentation on the screen fails to divert her "I-seen-you" glances any more than if it was the point of a joke.

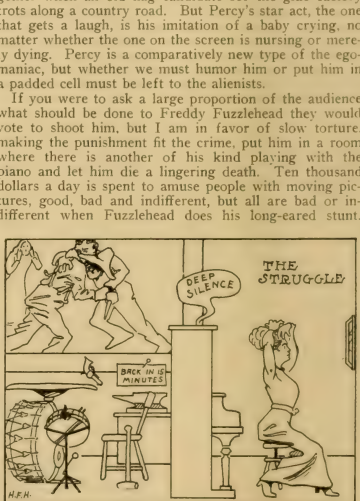
The chorus-girl who attempts to pose as a prima-donna with little more equipment than a tuft of bleached hair, a pair of high-heeled slippers and a cigarette voice can be tolerated, we often endure the howling and screeching of a Tommy trying to sing "Come into the garden Maud," but when Lily Limpwrist assails our unprotected organs of hearing with her loony repertoire it seems a shame to throw away ten cents on such a performance, to say nothing of the time wasted. We sit patiently through the act of an imported star, who commends to our attention the interesting intelligence "Me Rag, moy Bess usedter droive em cryzy at the Croiterion," we submit to the inanities of the chin-whiskered, pillow-paunched Dutch comedian, who says: "Vot it is, is it? Ask me," and we even tolerate the Irish comedian, shaved yesterday, who looks like an undertaker out-of-a-job when he wails in a hold-over voice: "Where thuh dear-ol Sha-hamrock gurrows," but there is a limit.



Lily is all right at home, when her mother importunes her to "play something and don't wait to be teased," or still better as a summer-eve girl on a Coney-Island boat, but no man will ever marry a girl who plays a dance while the pictured man is in a death struggle; she would probably be at one when the real one was in trouble. The girl of sympathy will play music in accord with the pictured story, the girl of ambition will try to improve the quality of her work, the girl of sense will try to improve the quality of the performance, draw patronage instead of driving it away, benefit the management, and show to others who are looking for pianists that she is not a fat-wit but a woman of ideas and good taste.

The performance of Lily Limpwrist is a poetic dream compared to the diabolical dipso-mania of Freddy Fuzzlehead and Percy Peashaker when they cut loose between the "vodeveal" acts. Gee! Non compos mentis and le diable au corps for theirs and a free pass to Matteawan for what they have done to kill the box-office receipts at moving-picture shows. Percy is really a wonder. When there is water in the picture it goes to Percy's cerebrum. If there is a lake shown on the screen, no matter if it is a mile away, calm or stormy, he shakes his box of peas so that we may know that it is principally made of water. Realism becomes intense when a vessel appears and Percy blows a whistle "Oo-Oo" to enforce the fact that it is a steamer and not a full-rigged ship. "Bow-wow" indicates that we are looking at a dog and not a door-mat, "Honk-honk" gives one a thrilling remembrance of crossing Broadway after the theatre with fifty cow-boy taxis in full pursuit, and he is a master of such startling effects as clapping two blocks of wood together when an old nag candidate for the glue factory trots along a country road. But Percy's star act, the one that gets a laugh, is his imitation of a baby crying, no matter whether the one on the screen is nursing or merely dying. Percy is a comparatively new type of the egomaniac, but whether we must humor him or put him in a padded cell must be left to the alienists.

If you were to ask a large proportion of the audience what should be done to Freddy Fuzzlehead they would vote to shoot him, but I am in favor of slow torture, making the punishment fit the crime, put him in a room where there is another of his kind playing with the piano and let him die a lingering death. Ten thousand dollars a day is spent to amuse people with moving pictures, good, bad and indifferent, but all are bad or indifferent when Fuzzlehead does his long-eared stunt.



Ten millions of people pay their nickles and dimes to see the moving pictures, and these shock-headed kleptopianoacs steal their pleasure away in order to practice the accompaniment for the song-and-dance comedians, those who come on the sage and say "I will now sing you a little ballad entitled 'Show you are a clod-hopper by keeping time with your feet.'" The same comedian who gets no applause from the long-suffering audience and asks if they are hand-cuffed, or says to the piano man, sotto voce, "Did y'ever s-see sucha lotta dubs?" The hall-room lobster on the stage is "great" to Fuzzlehead, the boob action exactly suits the boob at the piano, the moving pictures are rot, he could do better himself if he had time, but he would say the same thing if he was shown the treasures of the Louvre or the Palace of Luxembourg. Ten thousand dollars a day is spent to produce the moving pictures, and it would be impossible to say how much more to keep going the ten thousand motion-picture theatres throughout the country. These pictures are not all masterpieces, many of them are very crude, but the whole art is in a primitive state, is constantly improving, and the exhibitions are kept alive by their production. People go every day to see the pictures, once in a while for the variety entertainment, and it is not only asinine but unbusiness-like to lower the grade of musical accompaniment when the lights are turned down. Inappropriate music may "do" for an unintelligent part of the audience, but what is the use of driving away the intelligent portion? All other parts of the theatrical working force move in harmony, like the wheels of a clock, but these fatheads against the stage apron are like the clock alarm that goes off when you don't need it and never when you do. Attention of managers to the comfort of patrons would help matters some, and little higher salaries would help a great deal to get suitable music. Better music means better patronage and more of it, and superior patronage means a demand for superior photoplays. Suitable music is an essential. If the drummer can not be taught to subordinate his morbid craving for attention to the general effect, cut him out altogether and pay more for a pianist who can improvise softly during scenes of pathos or utilize operatic selections for the dramatic effects.

PATHOS

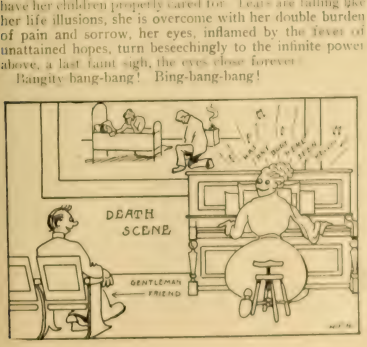
Bangity-bang-bang. Bing-bang-bang.

Desperate Desmond has got Claude Eclaire in a tight place, but no matter, the "rag" is on, "hit it up."

Bangity-bang-bang! Bing-bang-bang!

There is a tender-hearted mother dying in the little play, the world around her is subdued and silent, her face is pale, her frame attenuated, her respiration is heavy with sighs of sorrow and unsatisfied desire to have her children properly cared for. Tears are falling like her life illusions, she is overcome with her double burden of pain and sorrow, her eyes, inflamed by the fever of unattained hopes, turn beseechingly to the infinite power above, a last faint sigh, the eyes close forever.

Bangity-bang-bang! Bing-bang-bang!



THE REFLEX PRINCIPLE IN THE MOVING PICTURE CAMERA.

In a recent article on the multi-focal camera, we outlined not the advantages which this form of camera has in practical work. The multi-focal camera, in point of fact, allows of the use of three lenses of varying foci. These lenses are attached to a turn-table on the front of the camera. All that is required to alter the lense, at which the picture can be taken, is to revolve this board. Then, the lens of the desired focal power is in position. In the matter of the rapid action so essential that the moving picture camera was susceptible of improvement in many respects.

We may perceive that there is on the English market a moving picture camera known as the "N. S." Reflex. This we believe has been invented by Mr. A. S. Newman, the well-known moving picture camera expert, and is made by Newman and Sinclair, London.

This camera has several novel points in which we believe many of our readers will be interested. It claims, for the first time, to introduce the reflex principle, which permits of exact focusing with lenses of any focus. The reflex principle is simply this: "You see the image on a ground-glass screen in the camera, right up to the moment of exposure. We have only a set of the instrument before us. From this it seems you look through an orifice, set at the side of the instrument, at a reflected image. Those of our readers who have used hand cameras on the reflex principle, will, of course, follow our meaning.

The "N. S." camera has also other features of novelty which deserve notice. It permits of the rapid change of lenses by means of a bayonet joint, fitting on the camera front. From time to time we have pleaded for a camera which will admit of a considerable variation of focus. The "N. S." camera allows of the use of lenses of from two to ten inches in focus. Here, we may mention that Kearton, the well-known moving picture photographer of African subjects, used on his camera a lens of eight inches focus. This, of course, enabled him to get comparatively large images of distant objects at that length of focus.

The "N. S." camera, we read, measures 14-3-4 by 9 by 6½ inches, yet it takes 400 feet of film. It has a shutter adjusted for exposures from 1-32 to 1-100 of a second. It also carries a finder of the frame type with the setting piece accurately adjusted to the camera.

This camera, we may say, is listed at £25-0-0 in London. We do not know whether it will find its way on to this market. Anyhow, it embodies several useful modifications and some novelty of construction which, no doubt, will be welcomed by the users of moving picture cameras.

Mr. George H. Grombacher, of the Seattle Film Exchange, Spokane, Washington; Mr. Ray Grombacher of the Pacific Film Exchange Seattle, Washington, and Mr. Frank Healey of the Montana Film Exchange, Butte, Montana, were visitors on the "Great White Way" this week. These gentlemen came East to look over the Eastern field and to absorb ideas. They made a tour of the Nicholas Power factory and have spent considerable time amongst the leaders of the business in New York. Of course they favored the offices of the Moving Picture World and regaled us with stories of fine theaters and big patronage in the Far West that would make the Eastern exhibitors mouth water. We have in preparation some illustrations of these Far West picture palaces.

Kirksville, Mo.—The Normal School Building has been planned and arranged with special reference to the efficient use of moving pictures and illustrates regular and instruct requirement of films.

Keith & Proctor not only have moving pictures in lighted auditoriums, but their posse agent is making a feature of it in his readers. Good egg.

Ithaca, N. Y., exhibitors, knowing that their city needs a new hospital are showing slides of hospitals that have been built in surrounding cities. Every exhibitor in every city is a public benefactor because he exercises a certain influence for good or bad.

New Orleans, La.—W. W. Armfry, the young man charged with absconding with between $1,000 and $1,500 from the Imperium Film Company, and who fled to Birmingham, Ala., and then to Jacksonville, Fla., has surrendered to Clerk Dreyfus, at the Parish Prison.

The Technique of the Picture Play

By George Rockhill Craw.

Six million people go to picture plays every day in the year in the United States. There are more than 14000 5 and 10 cent picture play houses in this country, giving an average of three exhibitions a day, with an average attendance of 200 persons for each exhibition.

The picture play's popularity in the matter of attendance as shown by these figures, greatly exceeds that of all the legitimate theaters, opera and vaudeville houses, and concert halls, combined. Its daily attendance is sixty times that of baseball at the height of the baseball season, which lasts for only four months, while the picture play houses are open the year round.

With this tremendous popularity, the influence of the picture play house for good or evil is second only to that of the periodical press, and like the newspapers, many plays are either yellow or clean. It is worthy of note that it is the yellow and crime-exploiting newspaper that is quickest to cast the blame for crime upon the influence of the yellow picture play.

Almost every school child in the towns and cities attends the picture plays from one to three times a week. The grown folks go oftener, and without the modifying excuse of having gone to take the children, as they say when the circus comes to town. But, as at the circus, these grown-ups are quite as well entertained, and in much the same primitive way, for most of the picture plays are as yet primitively elemental in their dramatic construction and technique.

The Great Interest in the Films.

How long will the picture plays keep their present popularity?

Now, most of the films hold their interest because of their living out-door scenic beauty; their picturesqueness of costume; the freedom and naturalness of outdoor acting; and through the trick technique of the producer and manufacturer, it being possible to get most extraordinary and surprisingly clever effects in the making of motion pictures.

To many of the patrons of the picture play, the higher priced theater has been a closed book, so that the most primitively constructed picture drama, in the writing of the scenario, is to many a new and wondrous thing, the fresh beauty of the scenes and the picturesqueness of the actors holding the interest in the drama in spite of the amateurish simplicity of the theme and its handling by the author.

But all people tire of pretty pictures, even in endless variety, and as occasional picture plays that posses real dramatic merit are thrown upon the screen, the taste of the people is cultivated, and within themselves they begin to demand plays in which the producer builds upon ideas and forms that through the work of the author are given importance and illumination by logical processes in the action of the drama.

The First Picture Plays.

The mechanical and artistic production of picture plays has far outstripped their progress along purely dramatic lines, due to the policy of the producing manufacturers in keeping the authorship of the plays anonymous, and in offering ridiculously low rates for good scenarios.

Some of the most recent and elaborate productions differ little in their drama from the primitive methods of the first picture plays. In these, the construction was correct, if simple. Here is one of these theme formulas that has been produced and reproduced ad nauseam, under various settings in many climes:

1. A conspiracy to rob a stage coach that is about to set out with much treasure, is established.

2. The coach, with it gold and its fair lady passengers, begins its journey. It is waylaid by the robber band, a terrific battle ensuing, in which one of the wounded guards escapes and goes for help, the bandits making off with the treasure and the fair captives.

3. The wounded guard rides furiously up to the headquarters of the law's representatives, and these mount their horses, and, led by the guard, pursue the robbers, defeat them in a battle, and retake gold and captives.

This formula has been "staged" from the Pyrenees to the Rockies and back by way of the antipodes. It has been acted by the predatory Moors of Algeria, and the visored soldiers of France; by the bad men of the frontier, and the rangers of the West; by the brigands of the mountains, and the gendarmes of Spain; by Tartar outlaws, and Russian Cossacks.

Good From a Structural Standpoint.

This simple little story of pillage and retribution is good from a dramatic standpoint. There is the Introduction, establishing the conspiracy to rob the stage; the Clash, when the outlaws set upon it; and the Denouncement, when they are pursued and beaten, the gold recovered and the captives liberated.

Everything moves along smoothly and logically. The dramatic construction is perfect. The play is a good rudimentary example in dramatic art.

But after having seen one of these plays, one knows exactly what will happen after he has witnessed the second, third, fourth, or forty-'leventh one that he may be forced to look at under a different guise of costume, time, and scene.

Plays Too Rudimentary.

The trouble is that this type of play is too rudimentary. It is not even necessary that a scenario be written for it, so far as the dramatic action is concerned.

The spectators, knowing from the introduction, what the Clash, and Denouement will be, lose all interest in the drama, and the play resolves itself into a matter of pretty pictures and good horsemanship.

But a plethora of pretty pictures and good horsemanship carry much ennui, just as all plethoras do.

The Small Boy Is Loyal.

However, there is one patron of the picture play that never loses interest in this type of drama. It is the small boy.

You will hear him cheer and applaud with all the might of his quivering little body as the wounded guard dashes into the camp of the soldiers or gendarmes, and when the latter hastily mount their horses and ride out with the blood-stained hero at their head, in pursuit of the brigands, his enthusiasm knows no bounds, and he claps till his little clappers are sore. The grown folks merely smile, and look foolishly at each other.

Yes; the picture play is often childish.

Enter the Scenario Writer.

But improvement does not always come when the picture play leaves the primitiveness of its drama. It is then that the scenorio writer enters. It is then that perfect construction and logical technique are usually scattered to heaven's four winds.

The picture play dramatist may be an amateur playwright or he may be a professional, but nondramatic, litterateur, and he may get $15 for his scenario, which, barring a production of his piece, is usually $15 too much.

The producing manufacturers know this, but they must produce, and they are as yet unwilling to pay professional prices for professional work, because the "old stuff still goes," and I may add, it is soon going.

"Brave Hearts."

Another type of the elemental picture drama is exemplified in a film titled, "Brave Hearts," the brave hearts being the inmates of a settler's cabin in the land of the Hurons.

Father and the boys leave for the corn field with horses and plows and guns, while mother and little Debby are left alone with the housework.

A band of Hurons attacks the cabin and little Debby slides out of the back window and goes for help, while mother feigns insanity. This woman, "whom God has touched," as the Indians have it, is led away an unharmed captive, which is an error in Indian portraiture, as an Indian cares as little for the company of a lunatic, as an African for the society of a ghost. But according to the formula, there must be a rescued captive at the denouement, and mother is it.

Little ten-year-old Debby runs to the stable for a horse, and instantly finds one ready saddled and bridled in twentieth century U. S. Army style, which is quite up-to-date for the land of the Hurons of frontier days.

How the horse happened to be saddled and bridled in its stall is more than the audience can fathom, so that numerous exclamations escape the grown members of it, showing that it will soon begin to demand something in the way of technique.

The Illusion Spoiled.

This illogical incident at once spoils the illusion, and makes the drama, which up to this point, is really quite excellent, in an elemental way, somewhat ridiculous.

But there no flies on the way little Debby rides the horse, nor in the way father and the boys, armed to the teeth, ride back after her in pursuit of mother and the Indians, with the small boys in the audience turned inside out with excitement and glee as a thrilling recapture is effected.

Picture Comedy Mostly Horseplay.

Even the most recent efforts at picture comedy fail to get away from horseplay, which is of course primitive comedy, and as the stuff "goes," the manufacturers are satisfied to produce it.

The formula for current picture comedy is as stereotyped as that for the picture drama. Usually the "surprises" are obvious before they are sprung, which technique, or the lack of it, at least has the merit of not disappointing anyone.

It may bore, but what of that? There are more films coming, and the whole show only cost a nickel anyway!

The audence of the photoplay lives in an era of expectation. It has a philosophy all its own.

The Present Status of the Picture Play

It is in a transition from the primitive and elemental to the professionally artistic that the picture play now finds itself.

The producing manufacturers are looking for cleverness and art in their scenarios, but are unwilling to pay for it as it deserves.

Once in a while, something good is started, but for the most part, capable picture dramatists are locking up their scenario MSS, until the people demand something better than the present plays, at which time the producing manufacturers will have to pay the authors what they demand fairly, and award them recognition on the title flashes.

Now, the theaters flash the titles of songs with the authors' names, but the title flash of the picture play goes unheeded. The song is always doggerel, but the play may have genius.

Scenario Writers Unrecognized.

The dearest thing to the true artist's heart is recognition. Anonymous production carries with it no popular recognition, so the promising writer of picture plays gives up or disposes at the prices offered for his work and at the policy of the producing manufacturers in keeping his name hidden from possible fame.

In the field of the spoken drama, the author of a piece is fully recognized on posters, programs and in the advertising, no matter how little known or obscure he may be at the time the play is produced. It is this policy that has given to the spoken drama some of its most brilliant authors. It would do the same thing for the picture play.

Few Scenarios Worthy.

It must be apparent that a scenario of action characterization and interest that is good enough structurally and technically to produce, is good enough to be well paid for, and to bear the name of the author.

Because few that are produced are worthy of price or name, a condition that can be overcome only through proper compensation for those that are worthy, and a public recognition of their authors.

Then will the author have something [illegible] for in the form of the picture play, and the much belittled "canned drama" will reach a new dignity.

Already, a careful selection of films is being made by the [illegible] of the better class theaters, and like [illegible] are finding their own level. The trend is toward improvement, even under the most unwise general policy imaginable on the part of the producing managers in their treatment of authors.

Training and Cleverness Needed.

When one thinks of the training, skill and cleverness that it takes to write an acceptable play for the stage, where words may be spoken and their intelligence conveyed by the sound of the actors' voices, what may be said of the technical skill needed in the writing of a picture play, where the thread of the story must be held together by captions, short quotations, notes, telegrams, and letters and by the pantomime of the actors.

Captions Are a Necessity.

It is almost impossible to write a picture play that makes any pretence toward art and characterization and away from the purely elemental, without a free use of these captions, and yet that technique is best which avoids captions wherever their import can be expressed by the action. However, if there is any lack of lucidity in expressing the import by the action, the caption should be used.

One producer has remarked to the writer that he objects to making a "newspaper" of the theater screen, but it many captions are necessary to the lucidity, there should be no objection to a liberal use of them.

The stage has its "newspaper," the theater program, in which scenes are named and the characters set forth with their relationship, one to another, while often an entire synopsis of the play is given. In the picture play this information is more effectively supplied by the captions, and their judicial use only strengthens the play and enhances the interest by assisting the understanding.

The Work of the Picture Dramatist.

The one who would be a skillful and artistic painter [illegible] must study his play and revise it constantly with the patient thoroughness of a German savant. He must arrange and rearrange every situation in order to get the best effect in the most natural and logical way. He must characterize. He must eliminate the obvious. He must build from action to action with increasing interest toward the [illegible] point, this cumulative interest culminating in the "Climax" or the "Clash." Then he must build logically toward the Denouement, reaching the end, step by step, through a studied and progressive structural technique.

The most facile means for the conveyance of his story a dramatic picture dramatist. The exigency of his scenes are not met. They are puppet scenes.

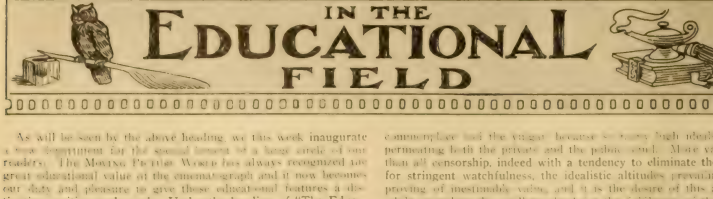
His is a new influence based on the elements of the old and demanding not only the training of the old but a genius for the new.

He talks to the world and must make it understand.

He must have something to say and say it well.

The purely theatrical will not do, but the world must have the element of stirred consideration underlying it.

Then will the picture play come into its own, will all the parlor of its infancy, and the mocking grandeur of its boldness of days vanished.



As will be seen by the above heading, we this week inaugurate a new department for the special benefit of a large circle of our readers. The Moving Picture World has always recognized the great educational value in the cinematograph and it now becomes our duty and pleasure to give these educational features a distinctive position each week. Under the heading of "The Educational Field" we shall, as thoroughly as possible, both lead and follow the motion picture in its advance along all lines calculated to increase its value and progress in the entire field of educational work.

Our first and immediate object will be to record the advances that the picture has already made in the field of education and the publication of articles by eminent men, written with the purpose of directing its influence along the highest possible line of advantage to all classes of people—especially the young and the scholar. While, from its inception, the Moving Picture World has been essentially a trade paper, it has become the only recognized organ and authority for every phase of moving picture work; colleges, schools and institutions of all kinds are among its subscribers, and our correspondence files testify that hundreds outside of the entertainment field are regular readers of these pages. It is for these readers that this page is primarily intended, and in our endeavor to crystalize the wave of sentiment that is abroad in favor of the educational value of the picture, we shall welcome the hearty co-operation of all interested parties and hold ourselves in readiness to serve and help them in every way possible.

IDEALS.

"Man is able each day to raise himself"
"Somewhat nearer to the level of his highest ideals."
—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

These words of wisdom are worthy a secure place in "Memory's cells." Every true man has ideals—high ideals, towards which he can each day climb a little nearer the accomplishing, with great benefit to himself as to his fellow man.

The idealist-dreamer points the way, the idealist-practitioner leads the way, and under the inspiration of his enthusiasm others follow. There is no art or profession which is without such ideal leaders, and now that moving pictures are attaining such an eminence in the world's utilitarian beauties, it behooves all its adherents to put forth the best possible efforts to enrich and ennoble its uses.

We are living in days of great demand, millions of interested people are daily waiting before the screen for the appearance of the latest and best in the art of cinematography; educated now to a point of comprehension unknown a few years ago, they are fast becoming a vast army of critics before whom must pass in close scrutiny the best works of the best picture makers in the world. The automobile has made engineers of thousands of men who never knew the first thing about common mechanics; the aeroplane has brought the science of aeronautics to the common knowledge of the multitude, who before care little more than to know "which way the wind blew." The world is being educated in things "never learned in school" with an education neither superficial or spurious, but at once valuable, important and great. The combined arts and sciences of the moving pictures are today common knowledge, they are no longer "strangers in the land," but an everyday fact. Henceforth the uses of the moving pictures must be idealistic, and they must be lifted daily to the "highest possible level." Already this tendency is being shown "all along the line," that which pertains to art is becoming more artistic because the true artist spirit is entering more largely in the work. That which belong to science is becoming more scientific, reaching down even to the operator and lifting him to higher levels. It has been predicted in these columns repeatedly that the moving picture would outgrow the commonplace and the vulgar because as many high ideals were permeating both the private and the public mind. More valuable than all censorship, indeed with a tendency to eliminate the need for stringent watchfulness, the idealistic altitudes prevailing are proving of inestimable value, and it is the desire of this article, while recording this, still to plead for the fulfilment of the lines at the heading, and to ask that "each day" shall find moving pictures rising to the level of its highest ideals.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE PICTURE.

Early Training Predetermines the Effect That Any Picture May Have on the Mind.

A little girl saw a moving picture in which there was a fire scene and people being rescued. Later she saw another in which some Black Hand villains were trying to extort money. Associating the two ideas she wrote a note demanding $5 and fastened it to a door in a tenement house, threatening to burn the house unless the money was placed under a mat. Of course she was caught and made to confess. This incident furnished the newspapers at the time with much copy in which the picture was assailed, but not one of the writers ever alluded to the fact that the investigation proved this girl to have been possessed of a perverted mind, the result of loose early training.

While this does not condone the pictures showing such scenes, the conclusion is that a weak-minded person reading the newspaper reports of fires and Black Hand doings would be equally liable to be influenced thereby.

Writing in the "Sunday Magazine," Alphonsus P. Haire draws a parallel between the moral and the unmoral effect of the picture, in which he shows that the highly educational influence it can and does exert greatly overshadows any deleterious influence. Also that the moral tone is of a higher order than the spoken drama and much of the published literature of the period.

Much has been said on the morals of the moving picture from the pulpit, in the courts, and by the press. "These shows are sinks of iniquity!" exclaimed one police magistrate. "Ninety-five per cent. of them ought to be closed."

At the Children's Society (New York) it was said that the society had obtained the conviction of more than thirty managers and attachés of moving picture houses in the last few months for permitting children under sixteen years old to enter without escort. Thirty other moving picture men were convicted of more serious charges, as a result of which they are now languishing behind bars. There seems to be some ground for believing that through moving picture shows others may be obliged to don prison stripes.

The documentary evidence touching on this phase of the development of the moving picture seems endless. Its educational aspect is not entirely without its clouds. A New York paper had this recently to say on the subject:

As for the educative influence and intellectual spirit of the moving picture theater, suffice it to say that the titles read from the films exhibited at random from the list of new films prepared for exhibitors: "The Pirates' Bounty," "A Jealous Wife," "A Backgrounds Mystery," "The Girl Who Dared," "The Gentle Sculptress," "The Engineer's Sweetheart," "The Tenderfoot Parson," "The Cowboy's Race for a Bride," and "The Sheriff of Black Gulch."

The last named titles suggest a list of dime novels of a former generation. And what, indeed, is the moving picture show but dime novel literature flashed on a screen by means of image projection and perceived to exhibit minds precisely for that the same? It is on the dime novel that its enormous popular vogue has been secured, and it is by dime novel standards that its moral influence must be measured.

There Is Good in It.

In the face of all this it may seem foolhardy to put in a good word for the silent drama. Yet, one feels constrained, after careful study of the situation, to do so. No denial is made of the bad points of the "nickelodeon;" for, when facts that are unassailable point toward an undesirable state of affairs, it is for the public then to get to work and right matters. A distinction, though, should be drawn between the moving picture itself, the moving picture theater, and the man who conducts it. The fault, wherever there is fault, will generally be found to center in the individual. The moving picture as an institution is as sound as regular drama and the five-cent theater as moral as the two-dollar house.

While the class of show people first attracted into the moving picture world by promises of quick returns on their investments were of the kind that submerge ethics, morals, and common decency to inordinate desire to make money quickly, the demands the public is now making on moving picture people are fast weeding out these adventurers and making intelligence and education a prerequisite of success in this new business. It is true that any article purporting to cover the moving picture industry would be inadequate and superficial if they failed to dwell at some length upon what may fairly be described as the vices of the institution, yet it does not seem necessary to second unreservedly all the condemnations one hears and reads.

There is to be said in favor of the moving picture theater that as yet such rank productions as "The Girl from Rector's," "The Girl with the Whooping Cough," "The Soul Kiss," and "The Easiest Way" have not found their way to any alarming extent into films. This is all an unpleasant subject, but it seems necessary to dwell upon it in order to convince the public that, despite the fact that young minds have possibly been inflamed by melodramatic picture plays and shows of a dime novel order, the moving picture itself is not entirely bad, and that, with proper encouragement and hedged in by intelligent restrictions, it may be made the source of much good.

In the editorial quoted in a preceding paragraph it is somewhat picturesquely set forth that the moving picture show is "bat dime novel literature flashed on a screen by means of magic lanterns and purveyed to youthful minds pictorially for half the old price." This is hardly true.

Some time ago one of the picture houses published a catalogue of educational films. Upward of perhaps three thousand different subjects are embraced in the book, covering many interesting and unique phases of history, geography, botany, travel, entomology, and thnology. There are even slim stories of the latest advances made in the fields of surgery, pathology, biology, and bacteriology, while zoology, ethnology, geology, microscopy, necromantics, mineralogy, ornithology, geology, microscopy, aeronautics, mineralogy, metallurgy, and the science of naval and military warfare all have their departments. In the lists of this one house possibly more than a million lineal feet of film have been prepared solely for the mental uplift and betterment of society.

"The dime novel standard of measurement" suggested in a preceding paragraph could therefore hardly be employed satisfactorily in arriving at the value of all films shown in the moving picture theater.

Making Shakespeare More Popular.

The story is told of a day laborer, who, though able to read and write, had never heard of Shake-peare until he chanced to see one of the several Shakespearean productions in a five-cent motion picture show. The man used to walk several blocks out of his way every evening on his road home from work, so as to pass a moving picture billboard, with the hope of finding a Shakespearean play billed. He not only sees every "heavy" film shown in his town, but has procured a library card, the first he ever owned, and is now reading the plays for himself.

Rochester has lately introduced moving pictures into public schools as a supplement to the blackboard and illustrated geography. Other cities have followed this example. Pittsburg and Milwaukee have the move under consideration. In some of the largest colleges, biographs have been installed. Lack of funds in many cases is the only thing that stands in the way of wider adoption of the illustrative idea of teaching in educational institutions. Fifty thousand dollars is sometimes necessary for equipment sufficiently broad to meet the needs of a large city.

"IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD."

Milwaukee, Wis.—The city authorities have added moving pictures to the list of free entertainments given by the city. The pictures are given in conjunction with the regular band concert and municipal dances on Lapham park. Those who do not care to dance can look at the pictures and listen to the music.

Oakland, Cal.—Moving pictures will be introduced in to the Lowell school with the beginning of this year. They will be at first confined to the Geography classes and later on in other ways.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Authorities have arranged for a continuous series of moving picture shows to be given in each of the different schools in Cleveland.

Rochester, N. Y., has lately introduced moving pictures into the public schools as a supplement to the Black board and illustrated Geography.

Washington, D. C.—Moving pictures as an adjunct to the public school system have been recommended by Mr. S. E. Kramer, director of intermediate instruction. Mr. Kramer is at work upon a definite plan for the introduction of projecting apparatus in the public schools.

Chicago, Ill., has become a contestant of the local exhibitors' league by installing moving pictures in eight of the public schools down to date. Mr. John D. Shoop, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, is looking after the above details.

Baltimore, Md.—The city council have taken under advisement a proposed plan for the introduction of moving pictures into the regular school curriculum of that city.

San Francisco, Cal.—A scheme has been developed by Professor Childs, formerly President of the State Normal school of San Jose, California, for an exchange of moving picture films between the schools of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, and Alameda. Prof. Childs and others believe that the Cosmopolitan stereopticon is one of the greatest aids to visual education, using the stereopticon in giving pupils a clear view of subjects that lend themselves to the pictures.

La Salle, Ill.—Dr. G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, addressing the Northern Illinois Teachers' Association, declared six years of moving picture shows would be more among the greatest contests in the development of the child mind.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Y. M. C. A. of this city is trying the plan which proved so successful last summer of having pictures of instructive scenes before the Sunday afternoon talks.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Moving pictures will illustrate lantern graphs in the city public schools. Geo. H. Elwell, President of the board of education, is working on a plan for making the best use of the school auditoriums, and moving pictures are a feature of the plan. Many of the schools have already stereopticons and Mr. Elwell expects that the introduction of the up-to-date modern moving picture will easily be accomplished, and will add to teaching geography, History, and other subjects.

New York City.—Moving pictures are being used by the Board of Education in the free public lectures to adults and it found successful the use will be extended. Public school auditorium will be opened as a public lecture course.

Madison, Wis., claims the distinction of being the first city to give moving pictures in its public library. It is the intention of Mr. Douglas, State Librarian, to introduce the idea in the libraries throughout the state and hopes in time that many more of these institutions will devote a regular part of their assembly room to the storage of film the same as they now do of books.

Easton, Pa., has installed a brand new moving picture machine for the benefit of the rising generation of East city. Pictures are lectured as they appear on the screen by Miss Leah Coleman, who has a special faculty for making things appear clearly to the child mind.

Newtonville, Mass.—Mr. Chas. Swain Thomas, of the department of English literature in the Newton High school, addressing the Marion County Teachers' Institute on the essential principles in teaching literature, made the statement that before many years, moving pictures will be successfully adopted by the public schools as a medium of making vivid the subject at hand.

Antwerp, Belgium.—The use of moving pictures in the public schools in this city has been in vogue for some time and at this writing it has passed the point of novelty and has settled firmly into its place as a regular part of the day's routine.

Buffalo, N. Y., has been carrying on a vigorous educational campaign in the great anti-tuberculosis movement. Moving pictures have played a large part in the work, and the moving picture men have cooperated with the Boards of Education and Health to such an extent that moving pictures have regained whatever confidence they ever had lost in the city, and a great deal of respect besides.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Mr. Walter McCormick, the young Pittsburg cinematograf, has recently made a series of films which are recorded to be a conservative record of the death from bubonic rube. The bodies were ordered to go through their many ceremonials and rose to the height of originality. These records will be filed away in the archives of the Carnegie library.

Like all other large cities where the moving picture is established there, N. Y. has experienced some trouble with the local clergy and the press. Recently a crusade was begun against all moving picture theaters in the city and many of the clergy went so far as to declare that these theaters were evil, when a happy thought entered the brain of some wise one who intended in interesting the intercalation communion to the pictures. As a result each house is receiving a whole new lot for the benefit of the censorship situation. One instead of increasing the interest naturally came to the pulpit and press. The theaters have been extensively advertised through both mediums, and instead of being advised to refrain from entering the doors of a moving picture theater, the patronage of the entire population is earnestly solicited.

Condenser Breakage, Etc.—Seattle, Wash., says: "Enclosed find $2.50 for a year's subscription and Handbook. Am a regular reader of the 'World,' buying single copies from newsstand each week. I have found it a very instructive and useful publication. I'm sure have troubles no more, as I wish to keep them for reference." As regards the matter of condenser breakage, it is always greater in the winter than in the summer, due of course, to the coldness of temperature. I have reduced breakage by letting my arc burn for a short time and then shutting it off for a minute or two, thus gradually heating the lenses. Also I first use my condensers in the stereo, which seems to temper or season them, so that the breakage is much less. Still, no two pairs of condensers seem to be governed by the same rule. They crack in spite of every precaution one can take. I notice many operators complain of poor patches, misframes, etc. For this they have themselves largely to blame. While a few operators remove bad patches, the greater number run them, irrespective of results on the screen. They seem to work on the 'Let George do it' theory. To remove the emulsion in making a splice I find a safety razor blade most excellent for scraping. The 'Ever-ready' blade is handiest by reason of the fact that it has a heavy head at the top, enabling one to get a firm hold on the blade. I am interested in the improvement of projection, as all operators should be. We have a good Union here and all but a few small houses employ Union men, I am glad to say. Salaries run from $20 to $30 a week, mostly $25."

The condenser matter, in so far as breakage is concerned, has been pretty well thrashed out. So long as we have glass subject to high and sudden changes of temperature there will be breakage. Boiling in water or oil, baking, etc., may or may not reduce the breakage, but using a lens for a while in the steroptcon before placing it before the stronger moving picture arc may, and I think does have some effect. These things have all been published in the Department before, still their re-publication is necessary from time to time since new readers are being constantly added. Glad you have a strong Union in Seattle. I would not call $25 high wages for a 9-hour shift, seven days per week, though it is much more than the average operator receives. The writer hopes and expects to see the time when operators will be considered worth $40 per week; but before that time comes they will, as a whole, have to increase their proficiency and ability in projection very, very much.

* * *

Speed.—Opelousas, La. (Armas Durio, manager Bon Ami Theater) writes: "What do you mean by saying that 'It varies from 40 to 80 feet per minute, but ordinarily remains between 50 and 70'? If the film should be run at 40 feet per minute at one time and 80 feet per minute another time to obtain the best results, why is it the manufacturers do not arrange their films to be run at a uniform speed? You are wrong, Brother Richardson' A film should be run at a uniform speed of about 60 feet per minute and you should correct your answer to 'Slow Speed,' Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 24th issue. I trust that by the above I have not given offense."

Never mind the "offense," Brother Durio. I'm not so thin skinned as all that. As a matter of fact, however, you are very much in the wrong and I have no correction to make. One of the most important functions of the operator lies in his ability to properly gauge speed so as to get out all there is in the film. The Pathé Passion Play, for instance, is at its best when run at approximately 40 feet per minute. On the other hand, there is a film, the name of which I have forgotten, which gives the repressentation of a runaway train. This film is at its best when run at between 85 and 90 feet per minute. Many scenes which would be utterly absurd if run at 60 feet per minute will be found splendid if run at a greater or less speed, according to the subject. I remarked recently that an operator "renders" or "interprets" a film just as a musician renders or interprets a piece of music. In making that statement I had the matter of speed very largely in mind. I remember one film in particular, though its name I have forgotten, in which a child lay dying and its father, summoned by wire, was going to the bedside in his automobile. The deathbed scene was solemn, of course, and very beautiful. I found about 50 feet per minute to be its best interpretation. The automobile, however, ought not to run at slow speed, and if I had continued straight through at 50 per minute the automobile scenes would have been a farce, since the father would have been placed in the position of nagging along very much at his leisure, on his way to the deathbed of his child. Space forbids my saying more at this time. If, however, you will watch carefully, Neighbor Durio, you will discover that you can do much to improve the scenes in even the average film by speed changing. In the case above named, I run the deathbed at 50 feet per minute and the automobile scenes at close to 80, and it changed from one to the other four or five times. This made a success of that film, whereas had I run it at straight speed of 60 feet, it would have been very commonplace indeed, neither the auto or the deathbed scenes being at their best interpretation.

* * *

Getting Things in Line.—Mr. Roger N. Wheeler, Chehalis, Wash., contributes the following: "I should be glad to have you try the following experiment in the matter of liming the lamp lenses and machine head. Nail a piece of black cardboard over the lens hole in the front operating room wall. If everything is in perfect line from the arc to the front end of the projective lens there will be a perfect, clear-cut picture of your aperture opening on the cardboard when the arc is lit. If your lamp is too high or too low, or things are out of line in any way, you will get practically the same effect on the cardboard that you would get on the screen when the arc is too high or too low, or too far to one side in the stereo. I submit this as a convenient, quick and accurate way to find out the correctness of alignment."

Many thanks, Friend Wheeler, for your tip, which is passed on to our readers for consideration and experiment.

* * *

A Bit of Truth.—Mr. E. B. Grubs, Manager of the Lyric Theater, Rock Island, Ill., sends the following: "Enclosed find check for Handbook. I am another of the Trouble Department fans. I believe the manager, as well as the operator, should know his projection machine and its vagaries. The reason many managers put up with the cheap brand of operator is because they themselves do not know when they HAVE poor projection. I desire to take issue with you on just one point, namely, your idea that an operator cannot re-wind while he is projecting. My re-wind is at my operator's right hand and has a tension set so that it stops when the crank stops. My operator can turn the re-wind with his right hand and the machine with his left, keeping his eye on the screen practically every second. If the light goes bad he can switch his hands in a twinkle, and from my personal experience there is no more reason why an operator should not re-wind under proper conditions than there is to think that he cannot feed the lamp with one hand and crank with the other. I wish both yourself and the 'World' continued success."

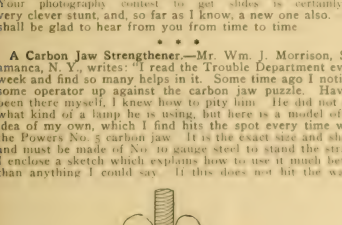
You stated a truth amounting to almost an axiom when you said that too many managers do not know when they have good projection. In other words, they do not know good projection from bad. I shall probably make somebody mad now, for I am going to make the baldheaded assertion that absolutely not one moving picture manager in ten possesses sufficient knowledge of projection to be able to offer expert judgment of the picture on his screen. That is a pretty tough statement, but nevertheless it is the truth. As to re-winding, while I am willing to admit that under ideal conditions, particularly if a motor is employed, it is possible for an operator to do his re-winding while running the machine, still I maintain that it is not the best practice. I assert this fact: upon the performance of an operator depends, in goodly measure, the income of the theater, and there should be absolutely nothing to distract his mind or his attention during the time he is projecting. He has absolutely all he can do to project his picture, if he is to secure the best possible results. You speak of his "light going bad." That, my dear Neighbor Grubs, is something that is not permissible. His light must not "go bad." He must keep such sharp lookout and give such close attention that from the beginning to the end of the run there will be no appreciable change in the illumination of the film. And this is entirely possible to the operator who thoroughly understands his business and attends to it, except for rare cases of carbon flaw. I thoroughly agree with you that the manager should study projection and understand it, at least in theory, as well as any operator. Otherwise, he is not in position to pass intelligent judgment on the picture.

No Troubles.—Mr. H. H. Dean, manager Dreamland Theater, Vernon, B. C., writes: "Friend R.: Please don't glance down this letter looking for trouble. We have our troubles the same as others, but we go after them, locate and remedy them, as I think a great many others could do if they only thought so. We haven't broken a condenser for so long I have forgotten when it was. I file the edges carefully, all around, making them loose in the holder. The back of the lamp house I leave open and the top has a good opening for draft. Somewhere back in the past issues of the department I remember some operator who could not focus his film on both sides at once. I do not really remember, but believe you thought that a film was never out of focus on one side and o. k. on the other. Please look at the film I send you, badly out of focus on one side and the other side is perfect. I have a new Powers No. 6. Have used an Edison for several years and the new Powers, of course, bothered me considerably until I got used to it. Was bothered with the lower loop. I note your instructions that the idler should not be set down tight on the sprocket, but I tightened it down as far as it would go and it worked perfectly. Why? (Don't know! It's wrong! Ed.) We now have no trouble at all, only once in a while the film will run off the end of the sprocket and thus w[illegible] the loop. Our films, of course, are rather old, those I am running this week being nearly two year stuff. Our projection is pronounced by those who visit Vernon as being excellent. As I said, when we have troubles we go after them; we get busy remedying the defect and if one thing does not work we try something else. Our throw is 75 feet, 12 by 18 picture. We have a raised floor, seating 250. Run four full reels per night and change three times a week; no songs, but I make local slides of Vernon and vicinity and run amateur contests on photography, securing many hundreds of slides. I color my own slides, run my own machine and you see I am pretty busy. Have just spare time enough to read the 'World.' Why? Because I am a firm believer in the operator knowing all there is to know about projection from start to finish. Why don't you? There are many reasons why he should and none why he should not. Find enclosed check for Handbook. I wish you, Friend Richardson, the success you surely deserve, and all the readers of the 'World' and yourself a happy and prosperous New Year."

You are mistaken, Friend Dean, in supposing I said that a film could not be out of focus on one side and in focus on the other. That very frequently happens. Sometimes it is the fault of the machine, and once in a while it is the fault of the film itself. To prevent the film running off the lower sprocket, I would suggest you put a thin washer about 3/8 or 3/4 inch in diameter at either end of the idler roller. You can file the bracket enough to admit them. This will prevent the film from running off. I will have the N. Power Co. send you a set. I like your idea of "going after" things. Your photography contest to get slides is certainly a very clever stunt, and, so far as I know, a new one also. We shall be glad to hear from you from time to time

* * *

A Carbon Jaw Strengthener.—Mr. Wm. J. Morrison, Salamanca, N. Y., writes: "I read the Trouble Department every week and find so many helps in it. Some time ago I noticed some operator up against the carbon jaw puzzle. Having been there myself, I knew how to pity him. He did not say what kind of a lamp he is using, but here is a model of an idea of my own, which I find hits the spot every time with the Powers No. 5 carbon jaw. It is the exact size and shape and must be made of No. 10 gauge steel to stand the strain. I enclose a sketch which explains how to use it much better than anything I could say. If this does not hit the waste basket, next time I will tell you about the simple little dissolver I am using."



We shall be glad, indeed, to have a description of your dissolver, Friend M[illegible]. The steel clip, or jaw strengthener, is nothing more nor less than a piece of 10 gauge steel cut as shown in sketch with two ears bent down to hold it in place. The sketch, I think, makes the whole thing clear and the utility of this little device is apparent. The shaded part of the drawing is the clip.

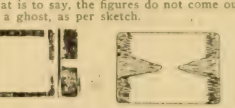
* * *

Condenser Focus.—Pratt, Kan., writes as follows: "I am a constant reader of the 'World,' particularly the Trouble Department. I shall have to resurrect the subject of ghosts, dark spots, etc. My throw is 97 feet; picture ten by fourteen. I am unable to eliminate the dark blue spot in the center of the screen; think perhaps the trouble is in the condensing lens. What focal length condenser should I use for this size of picture and distance? I can eliminate most of the ghost by moving the lamp house as far as it will go. This, however, is not satisfactory, for the reason that the spot will be too large or too small on the aperture plate to get the right kind of results on the screen.

You are using a long focal length of lens—approximately ten inches—and should have two 8½ inch condensing lenses at least. These lenses, however, are quite costly and also comparatively hard to procure. I think you can get along quite well with two 7½-inch condensing lenses as I have used them with much longer objectives than that. There is no objection to setting your lamp house back as far as its ways will permit. In fact, I prefer it set well back, since it gives me more room, and the result in light concentration is essentially the same.

* * *

Ghost.—Milwaukee, Wis., comes across with the following: "I have been in the moving picture business nearly six years and have seen nothing like the conundrum I am now confronted with. I am using an Edison exhibition model machine, 50 foot picture 40 foot throw. The picture is foggy; that is to say, the figures do not come out clear. Also there is a ghost, as per sketch.



I have had ghosts in the center of the curtain, but nothing like the present difficulty. Moving the lamp house back and forward does no good. I use one 6½ and one 7½ condensing lens and my projection lens is the same I used at Hartford, Wis., where everything was all right. What would you suggest in this connection? I have re-coated my screen and even installed a metallic surface curtain, but the ghost is still there on both sides of the picture. This is a new theater and it is, of course, very bad for the trouble is hurting business. I shall, therefore, thank you if you can suggest a remedy."

Well, Milwaukee, I cannot tell you certainly what is wrong, but can suggest several things, any one of which might cause the trouble. If the ghost is as you have sketched it, it is a very peculiar proposition. In the first place, take your objective lens apart and see if it is all right. You cannot always tell by looking through the lens. One of the lenses may have been jarred partly loose and be canted over slightly. If you find the lens to be all right, examine the gate of your machine and see if the tension springs are not out past the edge of the aperture opening. If you find this all right, then take out the lens and look through the machine and see if there is nothing smothering anywhere in the light though, of course, I suppose you have already done this many times. If everything seems to be all right, then carefully line up your machine from the arc to the front end of the objective. Be sure that the light is not striking on the sides of the opening in the operating room wall. Of course, I do not for a moment suppose that it is, yet we must examine all things that could possibly cause such a condition. The four most likely things to be wrong are, first, the gate interfering with the light by reason of the tension springs or something else getting in too far; second, something wrong with the objective lens; third, the light striking on the edge of the opening in the operating room wall; and fourth, something loosening down inside the machine, back of the lens. You have stated a 7½-inch objective lens and I think you would do well to use two 6½ condensers instead of a 6½ and a 7½. If any of our readers have had similar experience let them set the matter forth for the benefit of all, also communicating their solution of the difficulty immediately to Ed. J. Wagner, 621 Third Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis. (C. K. Hunter.)

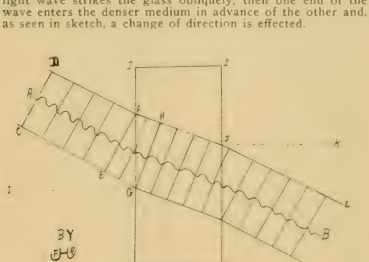
* * *

Application Blank.—I am in receipt, by courtesy of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, New York City, Bureau of Electrical Inspection, 13-21 Park Row, of a copy of the new 1911 application blank for those desirous to be examined as motion picture operators. This blank provides for the following: Name in full; address. Citizen or nonetizen. Date of birth, place of birth and, if nonetizen, time when applicant came to the United States; all of which must be sworn to. Also there is a place for attaching the photograph of the applicant and the recording of his height, weight, color of his hair and eyes, peculiarities of face and complexion, designed, of course, to identify the applicant. On the back is a copy of the law under which the examination is held; also the rules contained on the large placard recently distributed. At the head, in red ink, is printed the following legend: "No fee is charged for registration, examination or license." As the writer understands it, there will be a small photograph of the applicant attached to the application and another to his license card which, of course, provides effective identification and will prevent the lending of cards, a thing which is altogether reprehensible and not to be either encouraged or tolerated.

Light Rays.—Boston, Mass., writes: "I may be putting you up against something too hard, but can you tell me why it is that a lens bends the rays of light? In other words, I know that a light beam in passing through the lens, or even through an ordinary pane of flat glass, is to a certain extent refracted. I do not know what causes this refraction."

The question you ask is one which goes down pretty deep into the foundation of the theory of light. I think, however, I can make the matter reasonably clear to you. Scientists have long since accepted the theory that light travels in, or by, waves. These waves travel at a uniform speed so long as the medium they traverse remains of a given density; also the line of direction is straight. However, when the light ray passes from a thinner to a denser medium or vice versa, there is a change in speed. The thinner the medium the faster the light waves travel. Now, for instance, if a light wave passes from air into a denser medium, such as glass, and it meets the surface of the glass squarely, or in other words, in such a manner that the surface of the glass is at exactly right angles to the path of the light wave then, while there is a lessening of speed as the wave enters the glass, there is no change of direction. If, however, the light wave strikes the glass obliquely, then one end of the wave enters the denser medium in advance of the other and, as seen in sketch, a change of direction is effected.



In the illustration we see a light ray, A-B, represented by the central crooked line, but, for purposes of investigation, given a width C-D. The cross-lines are intended to represent the cross section of the light wave, or ray. It will be seen that when the wave enters the denser medium at F its speed will be immediately retarded, while its other end, E, is still traversing the thinner medium at its original speed. Thus as the ray travels from F-E to G-H, its direction is changed or, as we say, the ray has been "refracted," from its original path. In leaving the glass (1-2-3-4 is a square of glass) the action is reversed and, the two sides of the glass being exactly parallel, the original angle of incidence, C, G, I, and the final angle of refraction, J, K, L, are equal, and the ray is traveling its original direction, but a distance to one side dependent on the thickness of the glass and the angle at which it was originally encountered. I might go further by explaining to you the difference between angles of incidence and angles of refraction, and probably will do so as soon as I am able to spare space, since largely upon this difference depends the ability of trace the path of a light ray through a lens, or system of lenses. The invariable rule is that the angle will always be the smaller in the denser medium. Hence it follows that when dealing with lenses the angle of incidence must always be less than the angle of refraction. This, Boston, is the best explanation I am able to give you, at this time, of the reason why a light ray is bent, or refracted, in passing through glass, provided it strikes the glass obliquely. If it is not clear to you, come again and I'll try to do better.

* * *

Carbon Setting.—San Antonio, Tex., writes: "I am one of the operators who feels that he does not know by any manner of means all there is to know about projection. I have realized this more than ever since reading the Trouble Department, but I am using every endeavor to remedy my deficiency through study. One thing that I would like to have your opinion on is this: Two different authorities, or, at least, supposed to be authorities, advise that carbons be set central and straight up and down for alternating current. Now, Mr. Richardson, this does not sound to me like common sense, and I would like very much to have your opinion."

You are quite right, Nashville, in supposing that the instructions to set carbon central and straight up and down is incorrect. I believe I know the authorities to whom you refer, and it has been a matter of surprise to me that they have made such recommendation. As a matter of fact, to get at the meat of this particular nut, it is a universally conceded fact that the best light available for projection does not come from the arc itself, but from the incandescent crater or craters of the carbons formed by the volatilization of the carbon through enormous heat. Now, if the carbons be set central, very little of the crater light can, of course, be made available for projection, even by setting the carbons at the customary D. C. angle. If, however, the carbons be set central, and also be set straight up and down, then the light from the top crater is shown directly downward, and the light from the lower crater directly upward, the only available light being that of the arc itself. This is a proposition that is absolutely beyond dispute. It cannot be successfully contradicted or controverted. It is a proposition analogous to the fact that one plus one makes two.

When A C began to be used for projection purposes, operators endeavored to use both craters by angling the two carbons ahead, setting the lamp itself, usually, straight up and down. This did not work at all well in practice, since it was impossible to maintain the craters on the front ends of the carbons. The next scheme which came into favor was the setting of the lower carbon straight up and down and the angling forward of the top carbon. This proved to be somewhat of an improvement, but still it was difficult to handle the light since the crater would move around and could not be maintained in one position. Of late years the better operators have, almost to a man, adopted the plan of setting their carbons exactly alike for both A. C. and D. C., using a heavier amperage to make up for the diminished size of the one crater available under this plan. Not so great a candle power is secured thus as by angling the carbons somewhat forward, but the advantage lies in the fact that the crater can be maintained in one position and the light held almost as steady as one can hold D. C. projection light. Those who have my Handbook will find this matter fully discussed, explained and illustrated on pages 86, 87, 88, 89, 90 and 91. To set this matter forth as clearly and fully as I could wish would consume three or four pages of the paper and that, of course, is out of the question at this time. The appended sketch, in which A-A represents light rays from lower, B-B rays from upper crater and C light from arc available for projection, may make the matter more plain Single Condensing Lens.—Mobile, Ala., contributes the following: "Will you please tell me why it is necessary to have two lenses to condense the light. I find that by taking the back lens out and putting the lamp house back as far as it will go, I get the same size spot and believe it is a better spot, too, but it is not so bright. Why is this?"

* * *

It is not at all necessary to use two condensing lenses, Mobile, in so far as the mere matter of condensation of light is concerned. The reason two lenses are used is as follows: Parallel rays entering a plano-convex lens will be converged to point C, as sketch, the distance of this point being dependent on the focal length of the lens. Now if the source of light be placed at point C, rays 1-2-3-4 will be projected in substantially parallel lines. If, however, the source of light be moved back to point D, then rays 1-2-3-4 would be converged as shown by dotted lines, finally reaching a point of crossing, the distance of which from the lens would depend on how far point D might be removed from point C. Now, point C will be the distance of the focal length of the lens from its optical center (a point midway between the flat and convex sides, exact location dependent on refractive index of the glass). It follows from this that with, say, a 6½ lens your arc must be located more than 6½ inches from the optic center of the lens if only one lens be used, else the projected rays will not be condensed. With a combination of two lenses, however, we use what is known as the Equivalent Focus of the combination which is equal to the sum of the focal length of the two single lenses divided by four or, in case the focal length of both lenses of the combination is the same, one-half the focal length of one lens. From this it follows that the parallel rays of two 6½ inch lenses would be converged at point E and that if the source of light be there located rays 5-6-7-8 would be projected in parallel lines, whereas, of course, it might be rendered so that E, rays 5-6-7-8 would be converged as shown by dotted lines. And now we arrive at the meat of the nut, you noticed that while the spot was formed by one lens it was very weak and dim. This was by reason of the fact that your lamp was necessarily located too far from the condenser lens. Your condenser forms a circle 4½ inches in diameter. Naturally the further away the arc is the less of its rays will strike that circle—see, small, left-hand sketch in which A is the arc, B a lens set close and C one further away. This I believe answers your query, Mobile. If it isn't clear please write again.

Half Size M. P. Lens.—Chicago, Ill., writes: "I noted some time ago in the Trouble Department a [illegible] in a Pioneer No. 1 machine equipped with a half-size moving picture lens. Is there any advantage in the use of such a lens for projecting moving pictures? If so, what?"

I cannot answer your question, Chicago, from personal experience. I have been assured, however, by the manager of a theater in Columbus, O., who uses a half size M. P. lens for a long throw, that he gets far better definition than was possible with the ordinary M. P. lens. To the writer this sounds reasonable, and I believe it is true. I am of the opinion that for any M. P. lens of a focal length greater than six inches or possibly seven, a clearer and more luminous spot is had by the use of a half-size lens. I have been informed that one machine manufacturer is contemplating the equipment of all of his future products with half-size lenses. I am skeptical about the advantage of this in so far as short focal lengths be concerned. I should be very glad indeed to hear from others who have used half-size lenses for M. P. projection. Also from the Columbus gentleman, if he will be kind enough to favor us.

* * *

Cleaning Lenses.—Washington, D. C., contributes the following: "In page 92, Jan. 9th issue, under title 'A Couple of Suggestions as a Formula for Cleaning Lenses,' I have one which I think is better, as follows: Ammonia 25 parts, nitric acid, 1 part; mix slowly, pouring alcohol into the mixed acid the acid into the alcohol) and put in a clear shallow glass jar such as salves come in, with screw lid, and keep in a safe place. If takes off all the grease and lenses need not be wiped off, just set them dry. Keep fingers out of solution or they will be burned."

We are indebted to you, Washington, for the formula which we pass on to our readers with the suggestion that it be tried out. It is said that cleanliness is next to godliness, and most certainly it would true in the matter of lenses.

* * *

Various Things. Washington, D. C., writes: "Enclosed find money order for handbook. The last time I wrote I caused some gray hairs as I was the recipient of two light rays argument. I shall therefore not start anything this time. I have been studying that 2-to-1 proposition and believe it is caused mostly by the quick starting of the machine. The sudden pressure of the [illegible] on the sprocket holes and the pull is more twice the test of the reel begins to look out. The machine should be started slowly, gradually speeding up to the right speed. But the operators jump up to 75 or so almost the first turn of the crank. I believe if the operators would stop and think how much pains entered in making pictures appear on your work and how much of a money saver it is to read down at projection as a whole you would be much better and, most important, how soon their loss will be only a matter of ancient history unless projection is improved, they would very quickly begin to study and try to improve their work on the screen. This is for their own interest as well as the interest of all others concerned. I believe, brother Operator, you might also say a few things to the camera operators now and then, to the everlasting benefit of the business as a whole. Lately, I have run a number of pictures which showed very defective camera work. Also a few which were light-struck and some which showed [illegible] and dirty aperture plates in the camera. There is room for improvement on the manufacturers' side of the camera as well as on our own. I work you personally and the Moving Picture World also, every good thing for the coming year."

You are entirely correct in about the stuff in the machine causing the trip. Washington, and you are entirely right in everything else you mention. We think you will stop to consider the matter closely you will see that the work starting of the machine [illegible] from other points of view, could not [illegible] take the time [illegible] behind the machine gets steps [illegible] and starts again [illegible] times every second when the machine is running at [illegible] speed—[illegible].

It is indeed strange how many operators do not seem to realize that poor projection is similar to the goose that laid the golden egg. If continued very much longer it will be likely to get the goose good, too. As to the cameras, there is much truth in what you say. Almost everybody, as well as Moving Picture operators, are careless, particularly in the matter of [illegible] the film in the reel to old films, [illegible] in their treatment. I, too, have noticed the effect of a dirty camera aperture plate and dirty camera lenses, though those two faults are rather rare, but the matter of poor cutting etc. are very common with some manufacturers.

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

The following photo shows the Majestic, one of the prettiest and largest houses in Louisville. If the lobby is free from the cheap gingerbread decorations, the relief work and the numerous statues are of a far more artistic character. A feature of the Majestic is that the picture is projected from behind the screen, but this does not seem to work very well, as while the center of the picture is very bright, clear and in perfect focus, the sides of the picture are not so bright and more or less out of focus. The Majestic had an excellent program and the music, rendered by an orchestra of five pieces, was a great inducement to many persons to remain for a second show. A neat effect at the Majestic is a sort of alcove provided at the lower right side of the screen, neatly draped and lighted for the singer.

CONSTRUCTION.

In visiting the Eden Musee, of New York, I found another good illustration of the advantages of a high screen. The screen is placed in a straight line with the booth, and, as the operating booth is located on the gallery, the bottom of the screen is something like fifteen feet from the floor. The chairs are on the same floor, level, and from the rear rows, even with a merry-widow hat in front, the spectator had a perfect view of the full screen.

While the high screen at the Eden Musee offers some advantages, it is not minus its drawbacks. The screen, on a straight line with the projecting machine, gives a direct projection, consequently a perfect picture. The drawback is, that the first rows of seats are a dead value, as, to look at the picture, the spectators have to lean too far back, in a rather uncomfortable position. It is reasonable to suppose that if the operating booth at the Eden Musee was not so high, the screen would be lowered in the same proportion, and the first rows of chairs would be as comfortable as the last ones.

SEATS.

As stated in previous pages, many, too many, theaters are constructed by architects with no knowledge of the requirements of motion pictures. They build a theater for moving pictures as they would an opera-house, with a wide aisle in the center of the house. If these architects were students of motion pictures, they would know that the best seats are the ones directly in front of the screen, while the picture, viewed from side seats, always appears more or less distorted.

As the majority of the moving picture theaters can accommodate twelve chairs in a row, I would suggest that the middle aisle be discarded, and replaced by aisles on the sides of the house. Twelve chairs in a row in front of the screen will prove a great advantage in many respects, and obviate the great inconvenience of the middle aisle.

With a middle aisle, the persons walking up and down the aisle, looking for a seat, are practically in front of the screen, and obstruct the view from many seats, and nothing discourages the spectator more than to miss a title, a sub-title, or part of a scene

Persons looking for seats, are not the only ones to obstruct the view, as we have to fight another nuisance, the candy-man, and also the ushers. They are a pest, the man trying to sell his cheap candy, and the ushers trying to locate a vacant seat. This is a very serious matter, and the managers who do not allow persons to walk to seats while the picture is on the screen, are the ones with the best patronage.

It is a well-known fact that in the best-conducted moving picture theaters, the managers provide standing room in the rear of the house, and the ushers are not allowed to let anyone walk to a seat, while the picture is on the screen. The ushers are also requested to not move up and down the aisles while the picture is on the screen. Other theaters, very few of them, have a waiting-room, erected between the lobby and the auditorium, and there the late comers are asked to wait until the picture is over.

Many of the exhibitors do not realize the importance of this question, and they have no idea to what inconvenience they place their patrons. Let us take an illustration: If fifty persons enter the auditorium, at the middle of a picture, they do not only annoy many spectators, by promenading in the center aisle, or by trying to force themselves into a seat, but they will annoy as many persons when they will walk out. Yes, they come in time to see the tail end of the picture, and when the same picture will reappear on the screen, they will keep their seats to see the beginning of said picture, and move out before the end of it, as they will not care to see the finish a second time. If persons were not allowed to go to seats while the picture is on the screen, they would not walk out before the end of the picture, and the moment that the spectators would be able to enjoy a show without having to move every other minute, to let someone pass, they would become better patrons of motion pictures, and increase the receipts.

Some architects, not knowing the requirements of motion pictures, and believing that every theater should have side boxes, near the stage have provided many such boxes in moving picture theaters, and the managers, who had an idea that they could increase their receipts by having reserved seats in the boxes, have been badly deceived. Another architect constructed one of the finest theaters, at a great expense, he had the most artistic decorations, the finest furnishings, he had the screen surrounded by one of the most exquisite frames, and the approaching opening of the house was the general talk of the town. When the machine arrived, the manager and architect found that they had made no provision for a booth, and the only course to follow was to purchase a portable booth. This booth, placed on the gallery, spoiled the general decorative effect.

In another instance, both the architect and the manager had given very little attention to the booth, and when the machine was installed, they found that there was no passage for the operator, and, to correct this blunder, they had to destroy part of the decorations to put an extension on the booth.

Such blunders are of daily occurrence and, in too many cases, they are unpardonable.

The Iris Theater, on Kensington, near Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., is a new house, and can be considered a fireproof theater in every sense of the word. The Iris seats 1,600 persons, has a large commodious balcony, built of concrete, with wide stone stairs, and many fire exits. Although the Iris opened a fortnight ago, the last finishing touches are not completed, and we will wait for a picture of the house to give a more complete description of the place.

—J. M. B.

Last week I included a letter from P. C. H. Hummel, setting forth his methods of working up dramatic pictures in accordance with the themetic principles as laid down by Wagner. I made no comments on this letter, as I received it just before sending in my own, and the subject appeared to deserve more than passing mention. The letters of Richard Wagner, and his biographers, are voluminous on his methods, but I can find nothing sufficiently condensed to quote in this page, or in several pages, for the matter of that. Those who are interested, may find information in Wagner's theoretical writings, "Art and Revolution," "The Art Work of the Future," and "Opera and the Drama." His biographers also touch upon the matter, more or less. Boiled down, it amounts to something like this: To each important character, to each important action, motive, or idea, and to each important object (Siegmund's sword, for example), was attached a suggestive musical theme. Whenever the action brought into prominence, any of the characters, motives, or objects, its theme or motif was sung or played. Perhaps Brother Hummell can put it better, but that, I believe, expresses the subject in a few words. Such a method of applying music to the pictures is the ideally perfect one, and if it could be universally carried out, would leave nothing to be desired. At least, such is my opinion. But to apply it thoroughly, one must know his pictures thoroughly beforehand. In this, Brother Hummell is fortunate, as well as industrious. He says: "First of all, I read the stories of coming pictures, and make it my business to see them before they are shown at the places where I am employed." There you have it in a nutshell. Given an analytical mind, five years of experience, and opportunity to study the pictures beforehand, any informed pianist ought to be able to get good results. I would like to hear from others on this subject, as it seems, to me, there is much promising material for thought and discussion.

In addition to his leit motifs, Wagner employed scenic, or descriptive, music, and this idea, too, comes well within the lines of moving picture music.

I have dwelt upon this thematic idea several times in previous articles, although I was merely following the old melodramatic form of attaching a certain easily-remembered melody to each of the principal characters. The germ of the idea is much the same, though of a simple and primitive form. Those who are familiar with the older melodrama, especially the English ones, may remember that the "leading lady" had some pathetic melody, which accompanied her throughout the play. Likewise, the leading man, in scenes when he was the central figure. The villain also came in for his share of "heavy" music for his entrances and big scenes. Other music was neutral, or descriptive, according to scene and action. Now, this idea applied to pictures, though not so elaborate, as I understand Brother Hummell's to be, is much the same in essentials, and is the form I adopted on which to base these articles. The moving picture story is episodic, short and to the point by necessity. Its component parts are exemplified by the characters telling it, of which one is usually predominant. The principal theme of the story centers about the principal character, or characters, of course, and any musical themes given to these characters must be in harmony with the general tendency of the picture, else they will be out of keeping with the characters themselves. This is why I keep so much on seeking for the "central idea," or "impression," of the picture. When the musician has classified his picture, and grasped the general trend of it, he should have less trouble in placing his thematics descriptives, neutrals, and "till-ins," than if he went at it in a haphazard fashion.

* * *

There are pictures which do not so readily work out in this manner. Some of the more active ones are just one piece of "business" after another, without developing anything in particular, until the thousand feet are up. All you can do is follow the action and not bother about motives and themes. Why should you, when the originators don't? Other pictures have a pronounced theme running right through. Lubin's "His Last Parade" is a case in point. Mr. Kaun's Orpheum Theater Orchestra (Chicago), accompanied the picture as follows:

1. Parading, no scene changes.
2. Patriotic march ("Daughters of the American Revolution," by Lampe), this march is played loud for each marching scene and softly for each sick-room scene. Continued without a break. piano and forte, until the old man is assisted out of the ranks, then:
3. Pathetic till he falls back on his pillow, dead.
4. Then, "The Vacant Chair," till finish. If cornet and drums are in orchestra, "Taps" (lights out), may be used before No. 4.

Here is something to argue about. In Pathe's, "The Cowboy's Dilemma," opens a dance-hall scene. In the foreground, some of the characters are playing cards. In the middle distance are dancers, and in the background the musicians—a fiddle and banjo, which plays through the scene. Obviously, the appropriate music would be this sound effect or something suggesting it as nearly as possible. The characters in front become involved in a quarrel, the guests crowd around, almost entirely shutting from view the dancers and players, although an occasional glimpse shows they have not stopped. Which would you accompany the dance music and play a hurry for the melo-dramatic situation in the foreground, or keep up the sound effect of the dance music (which all the characters can hear, if they listen)? It seems to me the latter is the better way, though either would be correct. You, who have the opportunity of playing this picture, might tell us your preference, and give your reasons.

* * *

R. C., Iowa (name withheld by request), says: "I notice a letter from Manager Powell, in last issue of the Moving Picture World, regarding the use of a player piano. I, too, find it impossible to engage expert musicians, in a town of this size, and my music in consequence, is very unsatisfactory. I have been thinking of getting an automatic musical instrument. What would you advise?"

Of course, I hold that between a good pianist and a good automatic player, there can be no choice. No machine can satisfactorily fill the place of a human intelligence. But circumstances alter cases, and where one must choose between an incompetent musician and good mechanical music, it seems the latter has the benefit of the argument. I think, if I were in your place, and could not get a satisfactory pianist, I would take a chance on the other. If you wanted to change back, you could set the "player-piano" up near the door, and use it as a "calls-for," to attract the attention of the passers-by. A great many in this city now, in the larger towns and cities.

Suggestions.

"The Hour Glass" (Mason).

1. Semi-pathetic (Spring Days, Lee Trio), through three scenes. When meets sand.
2. Agitato, till changes—then
3. Mysterious, Heavy Long," till
4. Weird-eerie till with noise—pathetic till
5. Wildly-excited till noise ceases. Agitato pause, each to carry on some one piece of business, then Andante, slow, heavy and pathetic, to end of picture. When sand runs out, change to new, till finish.

"The Heroine of Verdun" (Mason).

1. Large and Grand. Beatrice, till
2. Man comes—about—note attached, then weird mysterious, till Beatrice opens door.
3. Where she reads note—runs out of door, hurry, till after arrest. Lively till finish.

"Sweet Heaven" (Mason).

1. Light reminiscent, or other general till
2. Husband comes in—second scene. Quiet-agitato.
3. At change—agitato (light), hurry.
4. When they read bank—very mysterious.
5. Daughter enters, when picks up necklace.
6. Fast agitato all through chase till they find him lying behind rock.
7. At change—lively till finish.

CHURCH SERVICE IN MOVING PICTURE THEATER.

The Rev. Dr. Bascom of the Bound Brook (N. J.) Methodist Church has met the moving picture question and turned it to church uses. When most of Mr. Bascom's brethren were denouncing moving picture shows, the subjects of the pictures and the darkened halls, Mr. Bascom announced to his congregation that he thought the shows could be reformed. He had a conference with the proprietor of the Crystal Palace, the biggest moving picture show in Bound Brook.

As a result, the proprietor agreed to let the church have the use of his hall and all his apparatus on Sunday evenings at the cost of lighting. Mr. Bascom came over to New York and went through the film houses until he had made an extensive collection of illustrations of Bible stories. Posters were put up all over town that there would be "sacred moving pictures" at the Crystal Palace, and that Mr. Bascom would preach there instead of in the church as usual.

The place was packed half an hour before the service began. Never since the Crystal Palace started was there such a crowd clamoring for admission. Two hundred persons were turned away. With films telling the story of Joseph and his brethren, Mr. Bascom preached sections of his sermon, taking the Bible narrative as a whole for his text.

FILMS WOULD SHOW NEEDS OF STATE.

President John R. Kirk of the State Normal School at Kirksville, Mo., would have films made of the operations on the 100-acre tract of the institution, showing the modern rural school, the transportation of the pupils in covered wagons and other progressive methods. These he would exhibit before the state legislature as an argument for needed appropriations. There is no doubt but that this plan will be cheaper for almost any state than the junket of politicians with their ability to pad expense accounts. In addition the whole assembly would be able to judge for themselves and need not depend upon the report of a chosen few.

F. H. M.

FILMS BEST FOR HEALTH SHOW.

In urging a health show for Milwaukee, Wis., Dr. T. L. Harrington, surgeon of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, declared: "A few object lessons which could be given by means of moving pictures and explained by competent lecturers would be far more impressive than volumes of purely academic discussion of the subjects to be treated."

F. H. M.

N. Y. HERALD CORRESPONDENT OFFERS $5 REWARD IN QUEST OF BAD FILMS.

Reporter's Visits to Best and Cheapest Exhibitions Disclose No Baneful Influences on Humanity.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I have read so much about harmful moving picture shows and I have gone to so many at great loss of time and money that I would feel greatly favored if some one would tell me where I can find harmful or immoral ones, as I am tired and disgusted with my efforts. Here's five dollars to any one for charity who will tell me.

C. D. L.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1911.

Urged by the holy hope of having $5 to invest in charity, a reporter for the Herald yesterday fared forth into the broad highways and little cul-de-sacs of New York in search of the notorious immoral or harmful moving picture show. After a hard day's work the reporter, being, of course, honorable, cannot hold out his hands for the $5.

To give a schedule of the itinerary followed in the unholy search in the holy cause would be tedious, and only charity, which suffereth long, would bear up under it, but before the day was spent the reporter found himself standing up in what might be termed the foyer of a moving picture exhibitory not more than ten miles from Herald square. And what he saw is faithfully written.

THE WIFE WINS, OF COURSE.

There was a young married man who had achieved the habit of going out with other girls. And when the audience saw how nobly his wife carried herself and what lovely opera cloaks, trimmed with real ermine, she wore at the slightest provocation, he was handicapped in his race for popularity. So much so that there was much polite cheering from those who had seats when, with the aid of a white haired man friend she resolved to best him at his own game. In the next act the white haired man friend and the wife appeared in a gilded cafe, and by a remarkable coincidence the young man and one of the girls appeared at the only other table in the place, separated from the wife by nothing but a chintz curtain.

The young man's wine bill was enormous; but the white haired friend and the wife ordered only little black drinks in glass thimbles. The wife made a practice of pouring her drink into a large tumbler, such as is generally placed right before the man's eyes, and then laughing, to make him think she had drank it. Then she ordered more, and laughed (you could see the whole thing) until the young husband heard her, and knew the voice, and making excuses, led the other girl out.

He came back, and after threatening to fight with the chintz curtain saw that it was harmless and plunged through——' Goodness, what a scene! They made up, of course, and the other girl was treated rudely, but the audience got as many tears for its ten cents as it could for thirty-five back home.

AT 42D AND 7TH AVE.

Then the reporter walked up Broadway and spent another ten cents, which made the possible net profits for charity $4.80. At this place the audience was investigating the plan to "Make a Man out of Jim" "The only matter with 'Jim' was that his folks had too much money. He was trying to correct that by "sitting in" a series of poker games, and was succeeding so well that Father, in his comfortable office, one morning received a letter saying that unless something was paid on "Jim's" note they would have the law care for him. This was the first Father had heard of the note, and the way he made faces started several children in the audience crying. If his Delsarte had shaken him loose from the film, he would have tipped something over.

Of course "Jim" seized this moment to come in, and even the sophomores in the audience could see that he was repentant. He and Father shook hands on it, and then he broke the news that he had no money. The martinet of a parent drew a check for him, while "Jim" promised never to do it again, but any one could see as he pocketed the money that he was going right back to the poker game. He might win it all back—but he didn't. Father must have had his son shadowed, for the picture of the game was interrupted with a picture of a message from Father saying that he was bankrupt and needed whatever salary "Jim" could earn.

When "Jim" went home for his vacation from the foundry where he was gaining wealth he discovered that he had been deceived, that father never had been bankrupt, and when he strolled in through the great marble arches one could see that he was thinking up mean things to say. But when he got in the parlor there was Frances, the lovely telephone girl, whom he had neglected long ago, and she made him see that all had been done for his own good.

After this there was the story of the ragged hero who saved the baby from the fire, and the return of the boy who ran away to go to sea and came back as Secretary of the Navy, but so far as this expedition is concerned, Charity must suffer longer and be kind, for any one could see that everything had been prepared to fit the minds and morals of children

THE MELODY (IMP).

"The Melody," is one of those moving pictures in which a musical instrument plays a part that is open to some very good chances of augmentation on the part of the pianist or violinist. This kind of picture is a risky one for a manufacturer to produce, or for an exhibitor to exhibit, for the reason that so much depends upon the orchestra in the final making or marring of it. If the piano player plays rag-time while Old Dan Burns is supposed to be playing the Cavatina or some other classic melody, it is needless to say that the thing will fall flatter than a pan-cake, and will be crabbed from the beginning. But if something appropriate is played, the picture ought to be a joy to the beholder.

"The Melody" centers around an old man character; Dan Burns. In this particular picture he is the whole show, and we can say without hesitation that this is one of the best bits of character "old man" that we ever saw in a moving picture. The part of Dan Burns is played by Mr. William F. Daly who commanded our attention from the very moment the picture began.

The general plot of this story, though old, is simple and strong, but no matter how old a plot may be, if it is well rendered it is always acceptable. It deals with an old violinist who, on account of poverty, is obliged to pawn his beloved instrument. Later on, his loyal wife and daughter manage to earn a little money by sewing, and the old man goes to get his violin back again. But the money is not enough to redeem the unused and the pawnbroker will not give him the violin without the full amount, but allows the old man to play a farewell selection upon his cherished violin. The music according to the pantomime is supposed to be something exquisite; therefore, piano players take notice. If you can't play something good, don't play at all. The picture can't get over without music.

At any rate the music by the old man in the pawn shop attracts At any rate the music by the old man in the pawn shop attracts certain passersby; amongst them a gentleman who had recently had trouble with a violin teacher for his little girl at home. The old man is engaged to take the place of the fire-eating Italian. The pawn broker is so pleased with the music that he hands back the violin, refusing to accept any money for it, and the film ends with the old man fairly well started on his way to prosperity.

It will be observed by this that the plot itself is simple, and cannot be said to be altogether original. But that makes no difference in this case, because the work of Mr. Daly as old man Burns is enough to carry it through to success. Never once did he decend into the mawkish or get on any one's nerves with any driveling sentiment. He held the interest perfectly. He was the whole show from beginning to end, and no one else had a look-in. We murmured a word of relief when the picture was over, that at last some one had come to the front and had given us a sentimental "old man" that was really interesting without becoming sickly.

We congratulate the Imp Company on the production of what will be a success. We congratulate them on having such a splendid actor in their company as Mr. William F. Daly. We also congratulate Mr. Daly upon being so good an actor.

LOS ANGELES LETTER

By Richard V. Spencer

Biograph Co. Arrives.—The Biograph company, comprising some seventy-five people arrived in the city on January 6 after a pleasant uneventful trip. The big studio of the company will now hum with life and preparations for big productions.

Bison Co. Saddened by Death.—Death again has visited the ranks of the Bison Co. This time the grim specter claimed the daughter of Mrs. Josephine Knowles, a member of the Bison Co.

Selig Co. Off for a Trip.—Mr. Boggs, director, and several members of the Selig Co., have gone to Santa Barbara to take a series of pictures. They are expected to return in about a week.

Complains Against Producers.—Recently there appeared before the Los Angeles Board of Park Commissioners four representatives of local moving picture studios, to show cause why their park permit for the use of Griffith Park, should not be revoked. This action is the outcome of many complaints that have been showered upon the park commissioners by autoists, park employees and pedestrians, who allege that an employee of the Los Angeles Water Department was cursed, abused, and all but personally assaulted because he had driven his accident into the grass of a concrete while traveling a public road in Griffith Park. It is alleged that automobile parties have been stopped by imitation "Cowboys," and ordered to turn back. Other pedestrians have complained to the Park Board that they have been bullied and insulted by members of the moving picture companies frequenting the park. There are further complaints that the incessant firing of blank cartridges scares the deer and elk that roam the park. At the time set it is alleged that one of the companies deliberately set fire to a forest ranger's cabin in the Government forest reserve in order to secure a realistic fire scene of a burning settler's cabin. Whether or not these rumors are true will be settled when a further hearing of the case before the Board of Park Commissioners comes up on January 9th. The park in question is said to be the largest municipally park in the world. It is larger than Fairmount Park in Philadelphia. All of it is covered with rugged mountains, deep canyons, running water, and broken foothill land especially adapted to the production of Western and Indian pictures. In this respect it is probably the most photographed park in the world, because of the fact that it has been headquarters for five moving picture companies during the last three years. It was the intention of the Park Commission to revoke the permits, but the representatives of the picture companies at the meeting pleaded for temporary extension of the permits, which were reluctantly granted. Park Superintendent Sherer and Commissioner O'Melveny were appointed a committee to draw up stringent rules regulating moving picture actors, and these will be presented for adoption at the next meeting of the Park Board.

Pathe to Improve Studio.—Mr. James Young Deer, Western producer for the Pathe Company, has ordered the erection of more studio buildings at the Edendale plant. It is the intention of the company to erect one of the largest and best-equipped plants in the City. With these improvements are being added, a high concrete wall, of mission design, will be erected to enclose the studio grounds. The present studio has been in use less than a month. The recent big Pathe Western release, "The Yaqui Girl," was the first picture to be produced by the Coast company.

Clune's Pasadena Theater. Mr. W. H. Clune of Los Angeles, owner of a chain of first-class moving picture theaters in this city and the Southwest, is having a first-class moving picture theater built for him in Pasadena. The theater will have all the latest improvements and accommodations, and will be ready for occupancy about February 1st. Mr. Clune shares with Mr. Daly, the licensed exchange business of Los Angeles and the whole Southwest.

Hyman Opening.—Mr. Arthur S. Hyman's "Hyman Theater," located at Eighth and Broadway, opened Thursday, December 22nd, to a large and appreciative patronage. The theater is strictly first class in every detail. The cost of the theater is slightly in excess of $30,000. Independent reels are shown. The theater will be reviewed in detail in these columns at a later date. Mr. Hyman is to manage the Western Film Company, taking the entire Independent film output for this city and the Southwest.

New Picture Theater at the Plaza. A new high-class moving picture theater is nearing completion at the Plaza. It will be opened about January 15th. Messrs. Kaiser, Sturm & Hughes, proprietors of the Liberty Theater, are the proprietors of the new house. The firm has not yet decided whether independent or licensed films will be shown.

New Theater Built Over the Sea.—Work is being rushed on the big million-dollar pier, at Ocean Park, a beach resort, near Los Angeles. The pier will be completed by June 1st, the opening of the summer season. Among the many attractions to be housed on the new pier will be a first-class moving picture theater, seating a thousand. The theater is being erected for Mr. Cline.

Another New One.—The buildings at 533 South Main street, have been razed, and excavation is now under way for the construction of another first-class moving picture theater. It would seem that Los Angeles cannot get enough of the silent drama for, with the completion of this theater, there will be twelve high class moving picture theaters beside the host of five cent shows.

Director's Auto Wrecked. Mr. Fred J. Balshofer, Western manager and director of the Bison Studio, found himself, and a party of friends, the victims of an automobile accident On New Year's Day. Mr. Balshofer loaded the machine with friends, and started for Santa Monica, a seaside beach resort. While on the way, one of the tires exploded, hurling the machine up against an embankment, and wrecking it. Fortunately none of the party was injured.

Another Producing Company.—The California Motion Picture Company will soon enter into active competition with other companies. Their first release, and which is scheduled for February 15th, if not the intention of the company to specialize on good, clean comedy subjects. Mr. H. E. Howland, the president of the corporation is now in Oakland, but will soon return. No arrangements have yet been made for a market for films. The company has established an office in room 1001 Pacific Building, Los Angeles. The studio and factory is at Long Beach.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

ENTERTAINING QUALITY

Is The Axis Upon which Revolves The Successful Motion Picture.

This Axis is Splendidly Developed in

The First Comedy Hit of the Year

"THEIR NEW MINISTER"

Released Wednesday, Jan. 18th, 1911 Length, 1000 Feet

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

THERE IS ROOM for everybody connected with Motion Pictures on NESTOR'S MAILING LIST. Send your name and address to "NESTORLIST 1007" 147 Fourth Avenue New York

Scene from "Their New Minister"

IT IS NOT a minister's mission to make people laugh—he is, or is supposed to be, a sour-visaged, grim individual, whose frowning glance appears to traverse the boundless space and dwell on the beautiful shore of that far off, unknown country, whence no traveler e'er returns. Be that as it may, "Their New Minister" is the antithesis of what a minister should be. He belies the "holier-than-thou" expression; he—well, he is not a minister at all. He's just a jolly young chap, out for a lark, who sees a funny situation, grabs it quickly and—this is your cue: Grab this roaring comic-film, and grab it now.

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank

R FILMS

urpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

IT PAYS

To Place Your Standing Order For That

ONE NESTOR A WEEK!

Ask Any of the Following

Coming!

"The Man In 23"

Will Arrive Wednesday Jan. 25th,

A CONGLOMERATION OF LAUGHS

EXCHANGES BUYING NESTOR FILMS

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O.
Consolidated Amusement Co.	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah
Eagle Film Exchange	43 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Dixie Film Co.	Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans, La.
Gaumont Co.	Montreal, Canada.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Greene Film Exch.	48 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	205 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch.	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1317 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co.	1100 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Paramount Film Co.	408 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	1026 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	131 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	730-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	701 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	119 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
United Film Co.	Troy, N. Y.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Exchange	508 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

Coming!

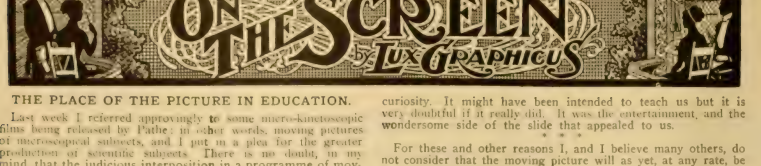
"The Bridal Trail"

For Release Wednesday Feb. 1st

A NESTOR BEAUTY

NESTOR FILMS ARE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York



THE PLACE OF THE PICTURE IN EDUCATION.

Last week I referred approvingly to some micro-kinetoscopic films being released by Pathe; in other words, moving pictures of microscopical subjects, and I put in a plea for the greater production of scientific subjects. There is no doubt, in my mind, that the judicious interposition in a programme of moving pictures illustrating the curiosities and the wonders of nature which, after all, are scientific subjects dealing with a knowledge of the things that are around us, would have a sufficient popularity to justify their production. Still, we must not lose sight of the dollars and cents aspect of the matter. Film manufacturers are not philanthropists, and they do not put out films unless they can see their way to sell x copies—that is to make money out of them.

* * *

My reference to the necessity, or rather the advisability of more scientific subjects, raised the question amongst several friends who are interested in moving pictures as to whether real solid, basic knowledge was imparted by scientific and educational films. Much has been said, and is being said, about the film as an educational agency. It is assumed by many that it is capable of taking the place of the ordinary methods of imparting instruction, namely, orally or by books. It is worth while inquiring whether this is the case.

* * *

There is no doubt that for demonstrative purposes the film is capable of acting as a very valuable educating agency. Take for example, surgical operations: one of the earliest scientific uses to which the film was put to was to reproduce for the benefit of students of surgery the actual details of operations. No doubt much valuable information was thereby imparted. Then again, one might get from the film a good idea of how a particular industry is conducted, say the cultivation of tea or the making of boots. Both of these subjects have been filmed.

* * *

Biblical history is illustrated by the film. One gets, too, a very good idea of the geography of distant parts by studying scenic pictures. But it is only a general idea: a fleeting impression. We know that in colleges and universities, the film is used for this and similar purposes. But have we arrived at that stage when the film can be universally used in the public schools of the country for teaching young children? It does not seem to me so. One of the authorities of public education in New York City is quoted as discounting the value of the film for this purpose. He seems to be under the impression that the scholars would be more interested in the phenomena of the pictures rather than in what the pictures are intended to teach.

* * *

There is much force in this reasoning. It must be remembered that the scholars of the public and other schools are young people whose curiosity only, is likely to be excited by the unique spectacle of a picture, actually showing motion on the screen. And it may therefore be inferred that the youthful mind would be so absorbed and interested in this phenomenon that it would be entirely unable to grasp the lessons which the films were intended to teach.

* * *

All of us have been to school and all of us remember our school days. Our school days were times of stress and disagreeable hard work. We had to wrestle with our sums, our grammar, our history, our geography, and whatever other subjects fell within the curriculum that was prepared for us. Not one of us, or at any rate very few of us, took kindly to our school work. We regarded it as the penance of youth. We escaped from school work whenever we could, preferring play, field sports, or recreation of some kind. This describes the attitude of the average schoolboy towards his lessons.

* * *

This being so, let us imagine the picture substituted, as far as possible, for the book. Suppose films dealing with historical subjects were substituted for history books, would history be taught better than through the books? Doubtful. The youthful mind probably would not grasp the teaching. Secondly, it would probably look upon the picture in the nature of an entertainment, and thus the effect aimed at would be lost. Consider the lantern slide: whenever we at school had a lantern slide entertainment, whatever the subject was, we all looked upon it as a curiosity. It might have been intended to teach us but it is very doubtful if it really did. It was the entertainment, and the wondersome side of the slide that appealed to us.

* * *

For these and other reasons I and I believe many others, do not consider that the moving picture will as yet, at any rate, be largely used for elementary educative purposes. And that is what I refer to in this article—the elementary side of instruction. The arguments against the use of the picture for this purpose are strong. On the other hand there is no doubt that when youth has merged into adolescence, and the boy has become the young man, and the girl has become the young woman, the instructive side of the picture will find considerable scope. Their minds then have been prepared to reject the merely phenomenal part of the picture and grasp the essential teaching of the lesson it conveys. This brings me to what I think is the true place of the picture as an educative agency. It is a complement to a post-graduate course and instruction. In this respect, I believe it will always hold considerable prominence. And by a roundabout process of reasoning, this brings me to my original standpoint, namely, that more scientific, educational and industrial subjects are urgently needed.

* * *

These cannot appeal to the children in our public schools; they appeal to those who have passed out of that stage, just as advanced manuals do in other branches of sciences. Consequently when we see the oft-repeated plea for the employment of the picture in public schools and that plea is disregarded one realizes why this must be so. It comes to this: that those responsible for public elementary education realize that the picture is not for very young people in its educative aspect, but rather for those of an older growth who are capable of appreciating what the picture intends to convey.

GAUMONT AND ALL "BEATER MOVEMENT" CAMERAS ENJOINED—WAGNER "BATTLESHIP" CAMERA EXCEPTED.

On January 9th his Honor, Judge E. Henry Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, heard affidavits and arguments on a motion to reopen the matter of preliminary injunction in the cases against the Yankee Film Company and against William Steiner, Herbert L. Miles, Joseph Miles, Charles V. Henkel, and the Atlas Film Company. Complainant's affidavits on the original motion for injunction had charged infringement by the use of the Wagner "Battleship" camera and a Brederson camera, but the defendants, although believing that the cameras were non-infringing cameras, had not been able to persuade either camera man to disclose the interior construction of his camera to them or to the court, and the court in its opinion filed on January 3d, had commented on the non-production of the cameras and had granted the injunction, apparently in the belief that the two cameras were Gaument or "beater" type cameras. On the motion to reopen, heard on January 9th, the defendants were able to show and did show the Wagner "Battleship" camera to the court, and described in affidavits so much of it as was necessary, the camera having been shown for the first time to the affiants on January 7th and 8th. Strenuous argument, too, was made against the power of the court to impound films or pictures, even when made on infringing cameras, and the further point was made that infringement by the Brederson camera had not been proved, and that the defendants' Gaumont cameras had never been used by them and that the injunction against renting or selling the films should not extend to the carrying out of existing contracts, even where the films had been made on infringing cameras.

On January 10th the court decided all of the above contentions in favor of the defendants, but entered an order for injunction, apparently based solely on the possession of Gaumont cameras by the defendants. The order, as actually entered by the court, is given below. The order as entered by the court expressly excepts the Wagner "Battleship" camera from the injunction, and all pictures and films made on that camera. It makes no mention of the Brederson camera. It does not impound any pictures or films, even those made on infringing cameras, and it does not enjoin the renting or selling or otherwise disposing of any pictures or films, positive or negative, in fulfillment of contracts specifically made for sale or renting prior to the date of the order, even where such films had been made by the use of any infringing camera.

Defendants gave notice of intention to appeal even from the narrow and restricted order of injunction entered by the court.

The affidavits filed by the defendants showed that the Yankee and Atlas films are all now made by the use of the Wagner "Battleship" camera, and have been for several months, and the action of the court expressly sanctions that business as entirely free and clear of all infringement of the Edison reissue patent 12037. This is the first direct holding of the court that any commercially used camera does not infringe since the holding to that effect as to the original Biograph camera in the suit against the American Mutuscope and the Biograph Company.

In the case against the Champion Film Company the complainant asked for the same order that it asked for in the case against the Yankee Film Company, and the counsel defending that company under the circumstances of the case refused either to consent to or to oppose the entry of the order, but reserved the right to move to resettle it if at any time it should become worth while. This the court permitted by adding to the order at the end the words "Without prejudice to a motion to resettle."

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

WILLIAM STEINER, HERBERT L. MILES & JOSEPH MILES, trading under the name ATLAS FILM COMPANY and WILLIAM STEINER, CHARLES V. HENKEL, HERBERT L. MILES & JOSEPH MILES.

ORDER.

Complainant's motion for preliminary injunction and for further relief having come on to be heard on the bill of complaint and the affidavits of George F. Scull, Mrs. Minerva Mullen, Edwin I. Standish, Joseph F. McCoy, Charles H. Wilson and Thomas A. Edison for complainant, and Alfred H. Saunders, Herbert L. Miles, William Steiner, Joseph R. Miles, Leon Wagner, Charles Meyer, H. C. Matthews, Leonard Day, Karl S. Dietz, Edmund Quincy Moses and William Bruce-Greene for defendants, and after hearing, orally and by briefs, D. Edgar Bull, Esquire, and Philip Farnsworth, Esquire, for the motion, and Seward Davis, Esquire, in opposition thereto, and the following affidavits submitted on the settlement of this order, Steiner, Jan. 9, Freeman, Jan. 9, Wagner, Jan. 9, Smith, Jan. 9, Moses, Jan. 9, Henkel, Matthews, Goldin and Miller, Jan. 9, Henkel, Jan. 9, W. H. Kenyon, Jan. 9, and after due consideration, it is ORDERED that a preliminary injunction issue herein enjoining the defendants and each of them, until the final hearing and determination of this cause from directly or indirectly making, using or selling any apparatus containing or embodying, or adapted to contain or embody, the inventions patented and secured to the complainant by claims 1, 2 and 4 of the Reissue Patent No. 12037 issued September 30, 1902, to Thomas A. Edison, being the patent here in suit; and from making, using or selling any camera like or substantially like the Gaumont or so-called "Beater" type of camera; and from otherwise infringing upon the rights of complainant under said claims of said patent in suit; and from selling, giving away, renting or otherwise disposing of any pictures or films, either positive or negative, which have been made directly or indirectly by or for them or either of them by the use of any infringing cameras; except in fulfillment of contracts specifically made for sale or renting of any such film prior to the date of this order; and it is further ORDERED that any and all cameras in the possession of the defendants, or either of them, or under their control, which infringe the said claims of said patent in suit, be forthwith by them delivered by their counsel as an officer of this court to be impounded in his custody until the final hearing of this cause; and said counsel is hereby appointed and directed forthwith as an officer of this court to take possession of said cameras and to keep them in his care and custody impounded under further order of this court; and it is further ORDERED that the bond filed herein by the complainant on the fourth day of January, 1910, be and the same is hereby approved.

This order does not apply to the cameras at Long Branch admitted to the court on the settlement of the order, nor to any films negative or positive produced through the operation of such cameras.

Jan. 10, 1910.

J. HENRY LACOMBE,
United States Judge.

[In the matter of Motion Picture Patents Company vs. Champion Film Company a separate order was issued by Judge Lacombe, as follows in effect:]

Mr. Nicholas Power, Mrs. Power and Miss Power will leave for their winter vacation on January 22nd, visiting Panama, New Barbadoes, San Louis, Martinique, St. Thomas, Havana and the Bermudas. Mr. Power expects to be away about three months. Our readers will no doubt be favored with news of his itinerary from time to time.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Since the mirror screen came into existence any number of special entrances and preparations for sending crowds have been planned on the method; in fact so many of these are being pushed by the manufacturers that the exhibitors are at a loss to know which to choose, as nothing but actual trial in the matter could set any one of these doubtful points at rest, which is the best. Undoubtedly all of the projectors and preparations, now on the market have merits of their own, yet it is almost impossible for us to advise the exhibitors, for they do not all agree as to what constitutes a "good picture." Some desire brilliancy of light, others want detail, while others again are looking for the screen that will save them the most current.

I have been investigating the different makes and while in most instances in manufacturers or agents have been willing to send us samples, or invite us to visit theaters where their curtains are in use, and demonstrate their points of superiority, other manufacturers seem to be averse to giving us any particulars or information of any kind. I have in mind a special make of curtain which has been advertised rather extensively, regarding which we have received many inquiries, in most cases the circular received by the exhibitor being enclosed in the letter to us. Repeated visits to the offices of this manufacturer have failed to elicit any information, the manager apparently avoids any investigation of his product, for as is always the case when I call being unable to locate the manager after several calls I stated the object of my visit to the lady in charge, leaving card and telephone number, requesting a demonstration of their curtain. Up to the present time I have not been asked to "look it over," and I have come to the conclusion that there is nothing about the curtain worthy of recommendation. Therefore, all of the inquiries sent us will be answered to that effect. If this curtain cannot stand examination or investigation, its boom long will it hold up as a theater's.

In regard to the coating preparations there is one in particular that seems to be very popular with the exhibitors. This preparation is called Silvo Kurtain Koat, and is manufactured by the Kurtain Koat Co., 2107 W. Lake street, Chicago. I have had the merits of this preparation demonstrated to me, and it seems to be all the manufacturers claim for it: pictures shown on a curtain coated with "Silvo" convinced me to that effect. At present the Kurtain Koat Co. we are informed, are being made party to a suit instituted by another manufacturer who claims infringement on his patents. While there are many firms selling preparations of a similar nature, it appears that the Kurtain Koat Co. has been picked to try this test case on. The Silvo people in turn are rather awaiting this procedure and they have even gone so far as to guarantee the users of their preparation protection against prosecution. If this case comes to trial it will no doubt establish a precedent which will be followed in the future manufacture of coating preparations. And in the meantime, "the sack goes merrily on."

J. C. K.

Rumors and pressure of usual sorts the means of procuring a serious fire at the Jefferson Theater last Saturday night, when a dying ember of red hot carbon came in contact with a reel of film, causing an immediate combustion, which tended to wrap the entire building in flames. Fortunately the fire was discovered in operation at the Jefferson, and the fact of the occurrence and not only stopped Cohan, but every member of the moving picture profession, owe to the plucky and cool-headedness a debt of gratitude, for through him the picture theaters have been saved time and time again, when they would have otherwise had the doors closed by the authorities. Mr. Cohan, Manager Tom Warner and others of our city were there on the floor while he explained a humorous act called "The Fireman." He poured the air cannon full of water which stood under the orchestra, but the reel of fire red hot glass of mineral made the edge of the projector run, and flying out the end under the box caused a tremendous spitting, the flames leaping from the film, and the crowd and shoulders, filtering into the orchestra. The audience, of the instant, grasped the situation, and rushing for doors and carried them to a point of safety, then rushed back and the operating booth and seating quarters by bursting in.

Warner went right on with his work, keeping the operator at his post, and the fire was soon extinguished. The damage was confined to the booth and the immediate area, the remaining forty minutes of the show had been resumed, the men then came in a hundred strong and quickly removing. The Lyric Opera House of the city has installed people who are to be employed only when the picture is on the screen, and the Jefferson is the first theater to put this plan into effect. Let us hope that the precaution of the Jefferson, by the people changed the audience's fear had to the safety of the audience.

Vim E. Moore.

LICENSED.

"The Fire Department of New York" (Edison).—A record picture, affording a clear idea of the fire department of New York, and how it works. The picture is a companion to the one illustrating the police department, which was issued but a short time ago. Here, the firemen are seen at work, and while those who have been the New York firemen doing their work will, perhaps, appreciate it more than those who never have seen it, still it will convey information to the latter which they could obtain in no other way. The last scene, a fire-boat, with all the streams flowing, presents a picture which looks almost like a great flower, the water rising in white showers, and falling in beautiful spray.

"A Western Night" (Edison).—An interesting comedy, showing a girl, staying alone in a Western hotel, frightened when she hears her next-door neighbor preparing for bed in his usual vigorous way. But eventually she decides to investigate, and discovers that worthy gentleman on his knees, saying his prayers. Immediately she retires, and sleeps soundly through the night. While this has been called a comedy, by the producers, it seems more like a character study, presenting one of those peculiar types which one finds on the frontier, whether it be the West or the East.

"A Runaway Engine" (Kalem).—This is the film, to make which, the producers leased a railroad, and actually smashed two locomotives. And it is quite as thrilling as the title would indicate. A girl runs an engine to meet the wild locomotive, jumping just as the monsters meet, thus saving the special of the president of the road from being smashed by the runaway. As may be expected, the president speedily withdraws his objections to his son's marriage, when he learns that this is the girl to whom the young man is engaged. The picture is thrilling, but the enterprise in making it is one of its most remarkable features. The acting seems almost too realistic in places.

"In Intrigue" (Pathe).—One of those complicated French historical pictures, which is difficult to understand, yet still possessing interest, because of the mechanical excellence and the acting. This tells the story of some Italians who, for revenge, seek the life of Napoleon III, and a handsome girl is put forward as the bait by which he and another are to be killed. But she fails in her part, because she falls in love with one of the men, and eventually receives the bullet in her own heart, that was intended for the prince. Such pictures contain much interest, but it requires a knowledge of French history to make them fully plain. So far as the dramatic and mechanical work are concerned, little fault can be found with this, but to Americans it will be difficult to understand.

"The Italian Barber" (Biograph).—Not worthy of the producers. To waste all the good material required to represent a barber, as inconstant to a girl, and she equally as inconstant, is expensive amusement. The story is puerile. The actors, having no opportunity, do nothing, and the audience wearily awaits the finish. Such pictures as this, with Biograph trade-mark, cannot fail to shock those who have looked for the best of all American films from this company. With their old capable actors scattered, and weak plays, acted by poor substitutes for their former excellent company, the Biograph pictures no longer attract the attention they once did.

"The Evils of Betting" (Pathe).—Represents a man, consumed with a passion for gambling, betting his own money, and a sum stolen from his fiancee's mother, on a horse that lost, and his discovery, and disgrace afterward. Probably the Pathes know why they put this film on the screen. There is nothing in it to convey such information to the audience. It is not even interesting. The subject is threadbare, and the evil consequences of betting on a losing horse, can possess no interest for any audience. No wonder vaudeville is gaining, when such pictures are offered by a leading house.

"The Land of Monkeys" (Pathe).—A colored scenic, presenting a number of interesting views in the Sunda Islands. Views of the natives, and the way they lure monkeys from the forest, a novelty scene of monkeys picking cocoanuts, together with pictures of a tunnel from which a cloud of birds rise, when the natives enter it with torches, and another view, showing how the natives capture big snakes, afford a fair idea of life and scenery there.

"Tag Day at Silver Gulch" (Lubin).—Depicts the arrival of a minister and his daughter at Silver Gulch. As may be supposed, church affairs did not flourish in competition with the saloon, and when a tag day was announced, to raise money to build a church, opposition became pronounced, and it meant perforation, with a bullet, to buy a tag. Bill admired the daughter, and when he discovered her downcast condition, he bought the first tag, and was about to persuade the others to do likewise, when the minister arrived. He had other plans, and carefully removing his coat, he proceeded to give Hank, the ringleader of the opposition, the worst licking he ever had. Hank suddenly discovered that he needed a tag, and he assisted Bill in persuading other people that they needed tags, too. The scene of the licking is one of the best in a Western film for many days, and it fairly sets one's nerves to tingling to see it. The rest of the picture has no particular merit.

"Out of the Past" (Selig).—A love story, told among the old Colonial surroundings of Florida. Simple and straightforward, the picture contains a gently sentimental series of events, which will make it a classic of this type. It faithfully depicts the life and character in that part of the old South, the days just prior to the Civil War. The scenic effects are attractive, and the actors perform their various parts well.

"The Count and the Cowboy" (Essanay).—A comedy which possesses all the crisp and attractive qualities that are usually present in comedies from this house. The scene is laid in the West and presents a French count, in immaculate attire, suddenly dropped among the cowboys. Following an altercation he offers to fight a duel, but when the results of a scheme arranged by the cowboys to show his opponent killing duelists by wholesale are made, he breaks away and barely succeeds in catching the stage on his way back to the effete East, while the cowboys make merry over their successful joke. The character studies are excellent. The story is told with a clarity that leaves nothing to be desired, while the audience does not fail to make its deep interest in the play manifest.

"The Woman Wins" (Gaumont).—A picture with but little interest, which represents the fate of a bashful bachelor whose heart falls into when he attempts to propose. But the woman does not allow him to escape so easily and she finally succeeds in enticing him to propose to her. Perhaps the criticism of an astute manager, who applied it to most recent Gaumont films will serve for this one. He said: "What is the matter with the Gaumont plots lately? The photography is unusually good, and those who understand and appreciate pictorial qualities probably enjoy these films for the pictures alone. But the plots are weak and few of the stories mean anything." Unquestionally what this manager says is true. The two releases of the first week of the year, the "Artist's Pay Day," and the one under consideration were weak. In fact, none of the principal aims of the motion picture were attained with either. No expense was spared in the mechanical department. The negatives must be made on orthochromatic films, the tonal values are so accurately reproduced, and in the printing department the same care is exercised in finishing the positive. Staging and costuming are under the direction of a master. Yet of what use is all this when the plots are weak, or positively silly? The public will shortly follow the example of the managers and begin to ask why the stories are not improved and will leave the theater when a Gaumont title appears. These pictures, and many more of the same type explain why so many theaters are now offering vaudeville and pictures instead of pictures alone. The solution of the difficulty is easy—pay more money for scenarios and get something worth while. Give your company of excellent actors something to do and with your splendid mechanical equipment the pictures will rank among the most attractive and virile instead of being, as now, the subjects of indifferent attention on the part of the audience and of criticism by managers.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN RELEASES

THREE REELS OF GOOD COMEDY
ONE REEL OF SENSATIONAL DRAMA

COMEDY — Release, Monday, January 16th

"The Battered Bridegrooms"
"A Dental Disaster"
Two on one reel. Both replete with situations that will make your audience laugh, and laugh, and laugh again.

DRAMA — Release, Thursday, January 19th

"The Bonanza King"

A sensational feature. A reel depicting adventure, love and daring in an exceedingly interesting manner.

COMEDY — Release, Monday, January 23rd

"When a Man's Single"

Poor fellow. He had an awful time of it. But if you, yourself, do not laugh when you see this comedy, you had ought to see a Doctor. Honest its funny — funny — funny.

COMEDY—WESTERN "Bertie's Bandit" Release, Thursday, January 26th

Can you imagine Bertie, the dear thing, and from the effete East, turned loose with a rip-snorting, dyed-in-the-wool, Western Bandit? Can't you see the comedy possibilities? This is the best WESTERN COMEDY EVER released. You ought to get it first run. Anyway, get it.

EVERY REEL PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHICALLY
EVERY REEL A FINISHED PRODUCTION
GET THEM

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

Proof, not Guess Work, Counts

DURING ITS THREE YEARS OF LIFE THE

MOTIOGRAPH

HAS PROVEN CONSTANTLY THAT IT HAS NO EQUAL

WHY DELAY

When it is well known that the Motiograph is essential to the best projection work get one? Be convinced and rejoice in your increased patronage, for remember the MOTIOGRAPH PUTS IT ON THE SCREEN.

Send for Catalog of Reasons.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph St., CHICAGO, ILL.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agent, 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City
EDW. H. KEMP, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif.
J. F. BROCKLISS, Agent, London, Paris and Berlin

"The Test of Friendship" (Edison).—A melodrama presenting a life-saving episode supposed to take place on the frame of a skyscraper, many stories above the street. It is a story of two men wanting the same girl, but they do not sulk, nor swear revenge, one gives up, and works alongside the one whom he supposes to be more fortunate. Then comes the accident, and one large beam falling to the street below, from which perilous position he is rescued by his comrade. Then, the rescuer who believes himself unsuccessful, ultimately wins the girl. While the picture is melodramatic in the story it tells, it presents scenes which might actually occur, and therefore, has a stronger interest than it might otherwise possess. It returns from superseding the two men as fighting, something which deserves commendation. It accurately portrays the construction of a skyscraper, hence conveys valuable information, all qualities which will be recognized as important.

"The Sophomore's Romance" (Essanay).—A pleasant story of a traveling actress with whom a college sophomore, in a town where the company played, fell in love, followed her home, when she left the company, and married her. With the show stranded, broken up, in fact, by the pranks of the boys, it looked dark, but repenting of their cruelties, the boys loan their goat club to help out, and the picture ends pleasantly. It is lively, tells its story clearly, but possesses no claims to dramatic power.

"A Child's Plea" (Gaumont).—A grandmother is driven from home by an ungrateful daughter-in-law, but returns in answer to the plea of the child, who wants his grandmother. That is the whole story, and it is not too much to say, that it is almost impossible to discern the interest in the film.

"The Hills of Corsica" (Gaumont).—A travelog, giving a succession of picturesque scenes in Corsica. Many will be surprised to see the character of the surface of the island, and how heavily it is wooded. Some of the views are picturesque, and all are interesting.

"Dr. Cupid" (Vitagraph).—A love story, representing a suitor, turned away by the girl's father, because he happened to be a poet, returning in the guise of a doctor, and prescribing for the girl, who gains almost magically under his ministrations, he then consents to the marriage, and doesn't back down when the pseudo-doctor removes his disguise, and discloses the poet.

"The Home of the Seal" (Edison).—Interesting views of the seal herds, on the Palominas Islands, off the coast of Peru. The scenery is wildly picturesque, with the seals struggling in the mad rush of waters, that whirls around the rocks. The seals climb on the rocks, and then tumble off again, quite naturally. The photography of the scenery and the waters are alike, good; and the picture affords a close view of how seals look and act in their native waters.

"The Gardener's Ladder" (Edison).—A comedy, telling the story of the disturbance caused by a gentleman, who, having ordered a young man from the house, when discovered making love to his daughter, jumps to the conclusion that she has eloped, when he finds a ladder leaning against the balcony, in front of her window. Then begins one of those destructive chases, in which the irate father overturns everything in his path, and finds, too late, that the girl has not left her room at all. The young man, now gets into the fuss, and demands that he be allowed to marry the girl, on pain of difficulties too dire to mention. And the subdued father reluctantly consents.

"Love for an Enemy" (Kalem).—A war story, detailing the adventures and the love affairs of a Union spy, in the Confederate lines. The Confederate girl informs him that he is suspected, and assists him to escape, which he accomplishes by swimming under water a considerable distance. After the war, he returns and marries his Southern sweetheart. Melodramatic in its character, the film is interesting, because it touches upon a subject that appeals to any audience.

"The Twin Cinderellas" (Pathe).—A comedy, in which two sleepers are picked up by two policemen, and hidden away. Later, comes discovery and a general mixup, most of it too improbable to be considered as anything more than a flight of the imagination.

"Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight" (Pathe).—A trick comedy, presenting the adventures of a tramp, who makes a flying machine with a bicycle and some hat boxes, and sails triumphantly along, despite the efforts of the military and the artillery to bring him down, until a boy with a pop-gun, sends a missle that reaches a vulnerable part of the machine. He is drawn from the ruins of his machine, and hurried away to prison

"Washed Ashore" (Urban Eclipse).—Details the effect, upon two brothers, of finding a chest full of money, which had been washed up by the ocean. Murder enters their hearts, after dividing the spoil, and one lives over a possibility as a dream, which frightens him. The two turn their find over to the state, and dare to retain it for fear of the consequences. The picture of the ocean are exceptionally good, and the dramatic suggestion, which the sudden possession of unexpected wealth develops, holds the interest of the audience.

"Wood Carving in Brienz" (Urban-Eclipse).—An industrial, presenting a series of views of a little-known, but unusually interesting, occupation. Some of the charming and artistic effects reproduced seem almost beyond belief.

"Love Under Difficulties" (Pathe).—Tells how two young people, occupying adjoining places, make love under difficulties and ultimately marry, despite the objections of their stern fathers, and then return home to discover that these remarkably astute parents knew all the time what the youngsters were doing. The film has no strength. There is no opportunity for actors to display any dramatic ability. In short, the observations regarding the Gaumont film will apply equally to this, and many more now coming from the Pathe studio. The reason for the weakness seems to lie in the acceptance of scenarios from cheap, or poorly paid, writers. The motion picture will never progress when such methods are followed in producing them.

"The Funeral of Count Tolstoi" (Pathe).—A record film, which in years to come will have a historic value. According to his request he was buried in a deep wood. Perhaps this film will not attracts the attention it deserves from the people. Comparatively few understand his life-long battle for the people. In the future, however, when this picture is seen, a fuller realization of his work for humanity will leave permeated the body politic and to see the film will be almost like visiting a shrine.

"The Old Water Jar" (Vitagraph).—An old Indian forsaken by all his friends, spends his time fashioning and decorating a water jar. Suddenly he realizes what a bad Indian he has been. Scenes of his early life are reproduced and pass in review before him. Realizing his sinfulness he adds one more declaration and passes on to the happy hunting grounds of his people.

INDEPENDENT.

"How They Tricked Father" (Lux).—He was an actor, and he loved the girl. She reciprocated, but her stern father objected. But making up as a burglar, the actor demonstrates his ability as an actor, and the father consents to the union. The story is simple, but well and clearly told. It has no special claim to dramatic quality, but is sufficiently lively to hold the interest of the audience.

"The Rival Engine Drivers" (Lux).—A tale of rivalry, between two engine drivers for a girl, which results in a fight while the train is moving, ending in a collision in which the rivals are killed, and their bodies are found among the wreckage, locked in each other's arms. The picture is realistic enough, but seems rather improbable, in that two men would scarcely permit anything of this sort to interfere with their duties to the firm which employed them, or the public whose lives, for the time, were in their hands. Real life might have an occasional abnormal case of this sort, but they are uncommon.

"The Night-cap" (Solax).—A restless individual's night-cap takes fire. He is aroused by the smell of smoke, and turns in an alarm, without finding the fire. The fire department arrives, and fails to find the fire as well. Then ensues a scene of wrecking the entire place. When they are done with the house, the inside is a mass of kindling wood. Suddenly one discovers the burning night-cap, and the unfortunate man is taken to the front of the house, where the fire is put out so vigorously that he is almost drowned.

"Salmon Fishing in Canada" (Solax).—An industrial which is attractive, in that it shows some excellent views of Canadian scenery, all well photographed, and illustrating the salmon fishing industry as well. One of the scenes, shooting the rapids in a canoe, is thrilling, and there are others, which are of more than passing interest. The salmon leaping the cascades is unusual enough to be attractive.

"The Misses Finch and Their Little Nephew, Bill" (Vitagraph).—Four old maids, and one little boy, seems unfair, yet the youngster manages to outdo them each time, supplying no end of amusement for the audience. There is nothing especially noteworthy about the picture, except, that it is an excellent illustration of a live boy's tricks.

"Mother's Portrait" (Eclair).—Forced by untoward circumstances, a father leaves his wife and child, and goes to America. The mother falls ill, and it is necessary that she have expensive medicine. To procure it, the child sells the mother's portrait. Returning home, the gentleman finds his family gone. While wandering aimlessly about, he sees the portrait, and buys it, but the dealer is unable to supply any information regarding it, except that a child brought it. The child, returning to the window to look at it, discovers it gone, but this proves the basis of all their future happiness, because she finds that the man who bought the picture was her own father, and the little family is reunited, with all poverty and suffering gone. The story is clearly told, and the photography is excellent.

"Their First Misunderstanding" (Imp).—A long story of jealousy on the part of a newly-married couple. After going through all sorts of difficulties, and trying various means of getting away from each other, they make up and live happily ever after. Whether the picture is intended as a type of what actually occurs in many instance, it is impossible to say, but unquestionably, the producer had hit perilously close to facts, in making up his picture. A good many domestic misunderstandings are quite as silly as this. The story has the merit of being clearly told, and of being sufficiently attractive to hold the interest of the audince from beginning to end.

"An Erring Son's Awakening" (Yankee).—The story of one of those boys—there's a good many of him—who drifts into evil ways and associations, solely through indifference. Brought to a realizing sense of his position by being arrested, charged with robbing his own father, he is given a new start by a sergeant, who permits him twelve hours' liberty, on the plea that in that time he will find the thief. He does, and recovers the money. The rest is a reformation and a different aspect of affairs. The audience feels a sympathetic thrill, when the boy makes good, and mentally, at least, wishes him well on his journey.

"As the Master Orders" (Reliance).—A case of jealousy, based upon the supposed perfidy of a wife. A jealous woman steals the portrait an artist is painting of his wife, informing the husband that she is in the artist's studio. Divorce proceedings, ending in legal separation, and the retirement of the unfortunate woman, in a convent follow. Some time after the portrait is found, which clears up the mystery. Hurrying to the convent, the husband seeks to induce the woman to return. At first refusing, a kindly monk intercedes, and joining their hands, marries them over. While the acting in this is quite as good as the piece permits, the story is not up to the standard of most former Reliance releases. It must be admitted that most husbands, when their wives protested their innocence, would have listened. It does not seem natural that a real man would go to such lengths without further investigation; and in this direction, at least, there is distortion. Such haste is seldom noted in real life, and it mars a picture. The courtroom scene is pathetic. In truth, it is extremely realistic. The excellent acting in the Reliance films makes such inconsistencies, as mentioned, more prominent than they would be with indifferent acting.

"An Arizona Romance" (American). A clearly-told story of the Arizona desert, with a love theme as a basis, and the wild section of that desolate land as a background. The pictorial qualities of the film will be looked upon as an important feature, and many audiences will acquire a new and accurate impression of the desert, when they see this picture.

"The District Attorney" (Powers).—A district attorney has a daughter. The daughter has two suitors, and not knowing whose invitation to accept to a ball, she says she will accept the one best versed in rhyme, her father to be judge. While sitting in his library, a ruffian enters, and demands the withdrawal of a suit, under threat of dynamite just at this juncture, the boys enter. The father yells, "Dynamite!" One plunges through the window, while the other seizes the bag and throws it out. The coward is kicked off the place, and bravery is rewarded.

"A Tip to Husbands" (Powers).—After a subterfuge, hubby gets out to play poker, but when he doesn't return, wifey goes after him. Hearing her coming, he makes a hurried exit by means of a window and a fire-escape. Wifey starts home in an automobile, but the machine breaks down, and hubby has been in bed a long time when she arrives. The homily she gets on being out so late, alone, leads her to promise never to interfere with his plans.

"Everybody Loves Father" (Thanhouser).—A lively and laughable comedy, presenting the predicaments of a girl who had four suitors. The boys up a scheme to save favor with her father, by rescuing him from drowning. Two others protest, and decide to do the same thing and the most will a motor boat wins. The father agrees to the wedding, but they are all disgusted when they find that the girl was upset their plans by marrying the man who paid attention to her, and didn't try to make business with her father. The film is good for a series of hearty laughs.

"The Only Girl in Camp" (Thanhouser).—A lively story of how some chappies got the entire population of a mining town to a ball, on pretense of hearing a lecture, and there held them up. A girl the story tells in rapid succession the situation, thwarts the outlaws by playing the tune on the ball stage, and as the chappies rush out, keeping the crowd covered, they are caught and held fast. The novelty is new, and no one can deny that it is good.

"A Letter to the Stork" (Atlas).—A child's story, showing the efforts of a little girl to secure a baby for her broken-hearted mother by writing to the stork. The little one imagines a weary way wandering about the earth, only to be tempted at last drops the letter, and it is found by an unfortunate mother on her way to a drunken husband and her baby. Finally seeking the place named in the letter she hears the baby cry, rings the bell, and goes on her way. The little girl believes it was the stork, and arranges to give her mother a surprise. But the baby is kept, and later the own mother is employed as a nurse and all goes well. Not much drama about this, but a pretty story well told, and most touching to be easily comprehended.

"Bill's Widow" (Champion).—Depicting the advantages of Bill, after answering the advertisement of a widow who wants to marry. The cowboys play a trick upon Bill, informing him a spurious widow, and for a time the fun is fast and furious. In the midst of it the real widow arrives, stopping the parson with her. Almost before he knows it Bill is spliced, and to stop the uproar about him gives an order to the saloon-keeper that effectually silences all astonishment.

"Queen of the Prairies" (Columbia).—A graphic picture of the Southwest in those days which made heroes of men and heroines of women. All the characteristic features of a typical community are there. The ranch, the cowboys, the cattle, the early scouts and hunters, and other characters and types which are naturally associated with the place and time. The staging has been done with discretion, and though the producer has crowded his canvas a bit in some particulars perhaps no more than often occurs under similar conditions. Most of the photography is good and clear, and the weak spots are of only minor consequence. It wouldn't take long to do away with them. The picture is a fair representation of the wild Southwest as it was once.

"The Red Light" (Great Northern). A story of the Russo-Japanese war, abounding in dramatic and thrilling situations and depicting graphically intrigues which might have occurred prevous to and during that conflict. The film is staged with skill, and the acting is of the sort that makes the characters live before the audience. Setting upon a subject the producer has worked it out with care, developing his scenes with close attention to the unities and affording opportunity for the actors to do some excellent work.

"A Woman Without a Heart" (Powers). A story of a heartless woman is something of a novelty since there are too such. This represents a woman as ettaching a man with ways without love, finally marrying one but scorning him to return to her life as a dance hall. Eventually she loses for an artist whom she does love and would have married him, only a jealous rival informed her husband and he arrived in time to prevent it. The pictures representing life in dance halls add interest and the dramatic scenes when the woman learns at last what it is to love only to be deprived of its happiness will attract by their strength. The story is clearly told and the audience follows it closely to the end.

WE HAVE SIGNED THE PLEDGE

Rex

See Page 149

SOME NOTABLE ECLAIR FILMS.

Invested with a special view of a number of new film by this firm, it was a pleasure to notice a distinct advance in the highest branches of cinematography; it would appear that a special, determined, and worthy effort had been made to excel in a commendable desire to lead in that advance now demanded of film manufacturers.

The Eclair firm has not confined its efforts to any one particular branch of work, or to any line of subjects, as leaders producing some admirable photographic effects of a nature and quality it would seem difficult to surpass; they have also given an impetus to an upward move in scenic, comedy, dramatic and historical films, in a way which will be appreciated when these new productions reach the public. Among the scenic some new views of Jerusalem are very interesting and will command attention. A tragedy entitled "Cain," a scene in French peasant life is an unusual play, carefully toned so that the most tragic part is made acceptable to even rigid censorship.

Their new comedy is full of sparkle and light humor, giving the best of that vivacity for which our French friends are so particularly capable; making a distinct addition to the present somewhat tame list of comedy now continued with a monotonous sameness. Their newest historical play in the time of King Philip of the fifteenth century is a notable production, the splendid photographic effects being as admirable as the setting of the play.

In the educational field a series illustrative of a French home and hospital for animals in extremely interesting, as besides its educative value they form a series of pictures of a kind calculated to both interest and instruct young people. The Eclair firm is to be congratulated upon this series and there can be no doubt that a continuance of productions of this kind will soon have its effect in the much sought for advance in moving picture work

SALES CO. EMPLOYEES' RECEPTION AND BALL.

The Sales Co., employees are busy with the details of their first annual reception, ball and picture exhibition, which will be held on the evening of February 3d at the Alhambra Hall, 126th Street and Seventh Avenue, Manhattan. This reception will be unique as one of the most representative gatherings in the moving picture industry. The various Independent manufacturers have each taken boxes and will be present to take part in the festivities. Every department from the manufacturers down to the supers will be on hand. The principal actors and actresses of all the Independent studios in New York and vicinity will lend their interesting personalities to the general jollification. The Hall is to be decorated with pennants representing each of the film manufacturing concerns. A special feature of the evening will be the music. The committee has engaged Ferguson's famous military band of Stauch's pavilion, Coney Island, and to anyone who has ever danced at Stauch's this means that it will be some dance music. The trade in general is invited. Admission including lady and gentleman will be one dollar. Handsome souvenirs in the form of miniature nickel-plated film reel fobs will be distributed during the evening.

THE "IMP" COMPANY INVADES CUBA.

Local color is the order of the day in moving picture making. The Revier Company out in Utah are giving us local color. The Selig and Biograph plants are working in Los Angeles, and other companies are seeking "fresh woods and pastures new" for the purpose of obtaining variegated subjects for the gratification of the ever growing moving picture public.

To our mind this is one more proof, if proof be needed, of the stability of the moving picture business as a whole. Shrewd business men have satisfied themselves that the demand for the picture instead of disminishing is likely to expand with the growth of the population. Here and there, perhaps, vaudeville may check its career, as in certain parts of New York City. But generally speaking, it may be taken that the demand for moving pictures by the general public is advancing, if not by leaps and bounds, at least steadily.

Amongst the companies to take advantage of an opportunity for making pictures with local color is the Imp Company who this week are transporting their producing staff and plant to Cuba. Shortly the entire personnel of the company's staff goes to Cuba, where the negatives will be made and probably sent on to New York to be printed and the positives distributed through the Sales Company as usual.

Whatever other construction may be put upon this move of the Imp, it at any rate evinces great enterprise on the part of Carl Laemmle and, will, of course, lend diversity to the Imp output.

There is talk in moving picture circles of other plants being moved to other parts of this hemisphere. Some makers contemplate moving to Canada; Bermuda is talked of; Havana is a possibility. Anybody who takes a map of North America in his hand will perceive that Newfoundland, Nova Scotia in the North, besides Canada, also offer possibilities for moving picture plants. One already exists in Mexico, so that in course of time we may expect North and South America to be pretty well dotted with moving picture plants.

Of course there is nothing remarkable in this fact of manufacturers being located hundreds of thousands of miles from New York City. The apple that we ate this morning was probably from Oregon; there is no reason why the moving picture that we looked at last night should not also have been made in the same distant State. The telephone, the telegraph, the aeroplane, as well as the fast railroad are, in modern business economics, rapidly annihilating time and space; besides there are many points on this hemisphere where one does not have to live over a cyclone cellar.

THE FRIESE GREENE COLOR PROCESS.

At the rooms of the American Association of Science on Tuesday, January 10th, 1911, a demonstration of the Friese Greene process of moving pictures in natural colors was given by the investor, who is at present a sojourner in New York City, on matters pertaining to current litigation in the moving picture field.

The Friese Greene process was twice described in the volume of the Moving Picture World for January to June, 1909. The reader who is interested in its practical details is therefore referred to that volume for any technical data that he may require.

With regard to the results shown: One of the films included a picture of a little girl waving the English Union Jack which we saw in England in the month of July, 1907. We are of the opinion to-day, as we were then, that the method of making moving picture in the colors of nature contains the germs of some really good ideas, which, to be rendered practicable and commercial, require to be carefully worked out in the laboratory. Besides this historical picture, the first to be made and shown by Mr. Friese Greene, there were other specimens exhibited, including a dish of fruit, a very short length, which revealed the colors of nature to our eyes accurately. The large audience present evinced great interest in what was shown.

ACCEPTABLE SHORT COMEDIES.

As a departure from the "rut" or "beaten track" so long trod by the comedy writers is a welcome change that is introduced by "A Family of Vegetarians" (Edison) and "Art and the Legacy" (Lubin). Both are light and sprightly, free from many former conditions and make at least a distinct change from the kind now no longer welcome on the screen. May we look for a continuance along these newer and better lines.

Dreamland Theater, Peekskill, N. Y.—Messrs. Cuff & Anderson who have two photoplay theaters in Paterson, N. J., will open their new Dreamland Theater in Peekskill, N. Y., Saturday, January 14th. Mr. J. H. Hallberg has equipped them with a new Motiograph with extra mechanism, a Standard Economizer and 300 Opera Chairs. These progressive young men have for a long time been very successful in their business enterprises at Paterson, N. J., and have the best wishes of their many friends for continued success and prosperity.

The Palace Theater, of Joliet, Ill., has been re-opened by the Levy Brothers and is now enjoying its first week of prosperity under the management of Phil Levy, who, until recently has been operating throughout the New England States. The Palace is showing three reels of licensed releases, and with the aid of some good vocalists, is providing a very good show. The Levy Brothers expect to operate a chain of Moving Picture houses throughout the middle west, their main offices to be located at 823 North Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

Theater robbery, in Atlantic Highlands, N. J., on January 9th, at the Lyric. Picture machine and all the movables in the booth were taken. Across the street from the Lyric, are kenneled the famous Snedeker bloodhounds, that have done police work all over the state. Perhaps the thieves didn't know that, but anyhow, the dogs were put on the trail. The owner of the bloodhounds gets a free pass to the Lyric for life, if the dogs make good.

Jacksonville, Fla., is to have a film rental agency. The Seminole Film Company has been organized by the Messrs. W. K. Haile, president; H. J. Palmer, vice-president; R. E. Boswell, treasurer and manager, and A. G. Martin, secretary. The new exchange will fill a long-felt want in Florida, as the exhibitors there have heretofore been obliged to depend upon agencies at a great distance. The sponsors for the new concern, are all reputable business men of Jacksonville.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Mr. Harry C. Howard, mayor of Brockton, has issued a statement to the effect that no more "sacred concerts" or moving picture shows will be allowed Sunday nights. Brockton has always had considerable trouble as regards Sunday shows, and has, from time to time, been without any Sunday night entertainments. As these shows are always packed, the houses will feel this edict severely. It is hoped that the exhibitors will be able to convince Mayor Howard that these shows are perfectly proper, and often keeps folks from indulging in less reputable pursuits.

Sheedy's Theater, Brockton, will reopen very shortly. Mike Sheedy, the proprietor, leased the house to Mr. Jean L. Owens, but has now taken the house back again. Mr. Charlie Cook, formerly manager of the Savoy Theater, Fall River, will be the resident manager.

Acker's Theater, Bangor, Me., was closed the week of January 2, owing to some mixup regarding the vaudeville bookings. The house will reopen Monday, January 8, under the same policy of moving pictures and vaudeville.

Mr. William Stecker, formerly manager and lessee of the Scenic and Palace Theaters, Fall River, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His assets are very small, and liabilities not over large. The W. E. Greene Film Exchange, of Boston, is one of the largest creditors.

The Orpheum Theater, Brockton, has been closed owing to the installation of new heating apparatus.

The Palace Theater, Northampton, Mass., has recently been purchased by Messrs. Le Duc & Goddard, from Bishop & Torpey. The former are well known in the moving picture business, as they operate several theaters.

HENRY.

BOSTON.

The Pastime Theater, Washington Street, owned by the American Automatic Amusement Company, Felix Alland, President, was closed Thursday, January 5, by the order of Mayor Fitzgerald. M. J. Hamellburg, the complainant, stated that on a certain day he bought a ticket for the Pastime, but owing to the packed house, could find no seat. Hamellburg did not wish to wait, and asked his admission fee back. This was refused. After some arguments, he was removed by the management. Mr. Alland claims that the man should have had patience to wait until he could find a seat, which would have been in a very few minutes. The mayor heard both sides, represented by counsel, and then ordered the license suspended for 24 hours. His Honor also gave warning that on the first complaint that any Boston moving picture theater had refused to refund money, after it was found that there was no room inside, he would suspend the license. Upon second or third complaint, he would order the license revoked. A notice to that effect will be sent all managers.

Moving pictures have increased the expenses and duties of the State Police, judging from their recent report, in which they make requests for more money for their work as regards the general over-looking and licenses for the moving picture theaters. They also recommend that a larger license fee be required for moving picture theaters.

The Olympic Theater, Bowdoin Square, which was recently taken over by the Realistic Moving Picture Company, has made some changes in admission prices. Ten are charged 10 cents, while ladies and children may enter for half that amount. "We cater especially to women and children" seems to be the motto of Joe Ruthe, general manager for the company.

The Savoy Theater can say with truth that it was the first one to use the word "photoplay" in large type on their advertising signs. The Savoy also is making note of the fact that they have "A silver satin screen — positively the only one in town."

Manager George Appleby, Star Theater, is the only Boston moving picture manager who holds a regular license to operate a machine. Appleby says that each manager should have this license, as it is a safeguard should anything go wrong with the operators.

In the issue of October 8, 1910, the World's New England representative made note of the fact that Alderman Wood was building a moving picture theater in Brighton, a matter of only a few minutes from Boston, which T. E. Dingee was to manage. We regret to state that, owing to some religious pressure that was brought to bear, the house has been refused a license. At Roxbury Crossing, Boston, the same thing took place, only in this particular instance the refusal was announced prior to the building of the theater. These two facts seem to warrant a few words to interesting exhibitors. The first step for any intending exhibitor to take is to go to the mayor of his city, or whatever official is in charge of granting theatrical licenses, and find out this fact. Should a moving picture theater be built on —— street, which conforms to all regulations relating to the building of theaters, is there any reason whereby a license to operate the house cannot be obtained?

In the case of the Brighton Moving Picture Theater, a very considerable amount of money, which had been expended in preliminary work by the owners, has been utterly lost. As the present government is a bit difficult to know just what to state in cases similar to this, the World must know practically every city and town in the country has some law or ordinance governing theaters, and moving pictures as educational and entertaining factors in many cases. Other localities in almost every case refuse to take up cudgels in any of its many forms. When the courts themselves have some other important views on this subject, it is difficult for the citizens to say very much. Anyway, we believe that here and there will exist this condition much better than moving pictures. It must be stated that in the case of the Brighton theater, no enmity against the cinematographic has been shown, as such, but of any kind as would exist in this section. Furthermore, Brighton is almost wholly a residential center. The Roxbury crossing case is a little of another color, as it is practically a ghetto given over to business pursuits of every kind. Maybe that able and spirited gentleman, the Rev. Mr. Lorimer, whose views are so often read in the "World" with so much pleasure and profit, can enlighten us somewhat on this matter.

HENRY.

LUCKY "MONTY."

Last week Mr. E. H. Montagne, who is well known to our readers in all parts of the United States, was the guest at a complimentary dinner tendered to him on the occasion of his imminent departure for Europe. Mr. Montague was for several years associated with the Chicago branch of Pathé and more recently has been connected with the same firm in New York City. Having terminated his connection with Pathé he has accepted an important position as European representative for Selig of Chicago, and purposes shortly starting for London to take up the duties of his new position. The complimentary dinner was organized by Mr. W. Wright of the Kalem Company, and besides the guests of the evening there were present many personal friends of Mr. Montagne assembled for the purpose of wishing him success in his new sphere. An excellent dinner was served and in the course of the evening many complimentary speeches were exchanged. Mr. Montague, we understand, will be in London at the end of this month.

The A. Dewes Company, located at 249 Center street, New York, manufacturers and agents for all kinds of heavy and light machinery, wish to announce to the moving picture manufacturers they have completed a department for the repairing of all makes of perforating and printing machines of foreign and domestic design, and have made special arrangements for the foreign machines. Owing to the complete facilities at hand, the Dewes Company are able to furnish new dies and guarantee all the repair work on perforating and printing machines at a nominal cost, thus eliminating the time and expense connected on consulting European help for disabled machines of this type.

The Mortimer Film Cleaner, advertised on another page of this issue, is a simple but efficient little device that will add a long life to all film exhibited and should also be on the operating room of every moving picture theater. Placed between the magazine and the receiver, it does its work quietly and thoroughly without any extra trouble. It is receiving enthusiastic endorsements, as well as many from the booklet which the manufacturers will forward on request. It will soon pay for itself in the time saved and secure a clean reel on the screen every time and in addition a reel free from grit and dirt means less wear and tear on both film and machine.

For the "Standard" American Moving Picture Machine is giving the desired results, and meeting with the approval of exhibitors, who have given it a test, as evidenced by the increased orders for this machine received during the past few months. Among the latest orders to be filled were those of the new Bijou house, known as the Park Photoplay Theater, at 58th street and Southern Boulevard, with a seating capacity of 300, as conducted by Mr. J. P. Harris, with universal suits, same being presented by a new model "Standard," and also the old Mulberry Street Theater, in which a "Standard" repeated another make.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Moving picture business has been indifferently prosperous during the holiday season. The downtown houses have been catering more of the trade that those in the residential sections. The Cosmos, one of Manager Brylawski's theaters, has changed its hour of opening from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M., and no diminution in receipts has been observed. The weekly announcements, in story form, of the Alhambra, has proved one of the best advertising schemes of moving picture houses. Manager Aviery takes the public into his confidence, tells them what he will give them, and he keeps his promises. He also invites suggestions, and often his programme are "arranged to suit" films. Manager Notes, of the Empress, is one of the strongest Dutchmen bosses in the city. Many of the first appearances of noted fiction and plays on the dramatic stage today, reduced to the photoplay atmosphere, are seen in this theater.

The White Poster Service has opened a new department, in the form of the Banner Service, which consists of large canvases, long enough to stretch across the full front of a theater. This includes vital pictures of the film, lettering, and fancy display. Mr. White has contrived a scheme whereby the manager can have the use of these banners for a nominal sum. This is the day of fancy and conspicuous advertising, in all business, and the moving picture man can not afford to neglect attractive display before his house.

The word "photoplay" has come into general use in this city, supplanting, to a certain extent, all the other epithets that have been used to characterize the silent drama. Somehow, the manager and the public like its terseness.

* * *

Under the new management of Mr. Walker, of Philadelphia, the Paramount Film Exchange, of the Independent Service, is continuing its work in this section, and keeping busy.

W. H. Bradley and J. Boyd Dexter, former managers of the Paramount Film Service, are co-operating in their own establishment. They are operating poster, film, repair, and general equipment departments, and report a large clientele. Just at present they are in rather close quarters, but they will soon be located in their new offices, where each branch of the establishment will have ample space for operation. Both Mr. Breadley and Mr. Dexter have been long identified in the moving picture business.

Tom Moore, manager of the Moore Film Exchange, reports a good opening for the new year. His recent trips into Southern territory, proved very beneficial, financially, and he gained new patrons for the licensed companies. He was instrumental in cutting out vaudeville acts in small houses, and substantially proved to the local manager that moving pictures, and a good signer, was a more profitable proposition.

—W. H.

DETROIT TO BE CENTRAL POINT OF BIG NEW MOVING PICTURE CORPORATION.

A new corporation is going into the field for business, and Detroit is regarded as the most advantageous location.

Lincoln J. Carter, Lou M. Houseman and Otto Melcher, of Chicago, are interested in the Motion Picture Production Company, as the new corporation is known. Some Detroit people are connected, but their names are withheld for the time, as the matter of picking out a location is up to them.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

William Stephenson of Jerseyville, Ill., has purchased of H. V. Porter the moving picture outfit and opened a moving picture theater on Main Street, White Hall, Ill.

The Ottawa Amusement Company of Ottowa, Ill., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500 to do a general amusement business.

E. H. Morrell has purchased a half interest in the Royal Theater at Watseka, Ill., from William Class.

The Alcazar at Pontiac, Ill., will be known in the future as the Photoplay. The place has been remodeled, with improved ventilating facilities, new fireproof operating room and inclined floor containing 254 comfortable seats.

The Lyric Theater Company of Carthage, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,200. The incorporators are A. L. Turner, William Hyde and B. F. Tull.

A moving picture show was conducted in an old barn in Milwaukee six weeks before the building inspector discovered it, according to the press of that city. Neither the interior nor exterior of the building had been changed to attract and hold patronage.

F. H. M.

OBEY THE LAW

BUT, do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use Water and

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE

OZONE (nascent oxygen), it liberates well sweetens and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE for use with atomizer 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at One Cent per gallon. Liquid demonstrate.

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,

2 Rector Street Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

SLIDE ARTIST

Announcement & Advertising Slides

Can Cartoon any song, or prepare copy for classy ad. My Slides are repeaters. References with sample work furnished reliable party. Address,

NED CLEAVELAND, Cartoonist

WASHINGTON C. H., OHIO

The

Independent Film Exchange

of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

A. S. DAVIS, Manager

415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

Two Pin Machines Changed to One Pin

Improved Easy Running, Long Wearing Cams, Stars, Etc., Etc.

E. W. LAVEZZI,

3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

STORIES OF THE FILMS

BIOGRAPHY.

HIS TRUST FULFILLED—The sequel to "His Trust." The opening scene takes place four years afterwards. The war has closed, and the negroes leave to enjoy their emancipation, but George remains true to his friend. He has still those boys cared for the widow and her child. The poor widow's death with sorrow and heartache to shelter on new ideas. The care of the child devolves upon George, who takes her to the lawyer, with whom he arranges for a home for her, paying for same out of his savings, counting absolute security on the part of the lawyer. For several years things go along uneventfully until the child's fond guardian decides to go to the seashore to promote an advantageous offering. To take the child was impossible, but George insists on same. He and little brown and purple travels and he takes the lad on the cars and amusements of the fair and some time as a postal convey which old George takes himself down to the postoffice to inquire of it in order to keep get the mail for the two boys. However, at the end of the mail term there is nothing, and old George's savings and the lawyer is found to inform the girl that a return to school is impossible. He witness the children's departure for school and old George's heart is sad and going to the conveyance where he finds a letter from former friend, enclosing an to the conditions and remonstrance of Miss Fanny, entering the office surreptitiously causes a fat builder to be the ridiculous and pathetic to see for the child and are desire to grant her every wish needs him into temptation, so he takes the forged note, but, fearing he has gone too far, he burns the letter and asserts cause and he puts it back, but not before he is detected. The lawyer, knowing George to be honest, builder of the forged he accuses and sends him off. The English cousin later arrives in the girl and they are befriended and a happy wedding follows shortly after. Old George at a distance views the festivities with tears of joy, and, returning to his shack, but somewhat tired and even tears depart for their new home he goes back to his cabin, takes down his master's other and with his finger in the resignation that he has fulfilled his trust.

HIS TRUST—In every southern home there was the old trusted family servant. Some faithful devotion to master's family was evidenced by the extent of even saving down his life if required. The film story depicts a story of this kind and is no less exaggerates the self-sacrificing love of the man for his master. The extent may now just be given from Colonel Frazier leaves home to join his regiment of Confederate soldiers he tells George on his return to take good care of the wife and child he is leaving behind. A short time after the husband is killed in battle and one of his comrades brings the news of his death to his wife, giving her his sword. This is rung over the mantel. This is indeed a cruel blow to the poor woman, but her burden is made heavier when the Union forces appear, plunder the house and burn it to the ground. When mis-owners the child is above asleep in her crib, it being the home of her affianced son, and the mother has gone for a walk with the daughter for diversion to ease her heartache. The old servant is also out on the farm repairing a bridge. Seeing the flames he at once thinks of the child. Without thought of self George dashes through the flames into the house. Where he finds the little house and encounters his two loyal and—noble, and carries her out placing her safely in the mother's arms, the poor woman having by this time swooned from the excitement. Recovering somewhat from the effects of the struggle in the house he thinks of his master's sword and of the ring of his life he endures the building and secures it. It is not long after that the entire house collapses in a heap of pitiable. Illustration is given some of the sufferings of many a southern woman during that awful time of strife. Gradually and in opposition to the George now assumes the sweetness of his trust and holding the heartbroken woman by the hand leads her out and enable to her safe to the negro cabin where he gives his all to their comfort he having secured an opening blanket on the ground outside the door on which to sit his head. Thus far has the servant been faithful to his trust.

GAUMONT.

A CHILD'S PLEA—The scene is between after his marriage leaves his home at his mother's home. The old Countess, his mother, loves the daughter-in-law, but her affection is not returned in fact the young wife shows a marked and unkind aversion to her.

All the love of the first and the good countess, forgetting all the unkindness to whom she has lavish, showered, makes her son a present of the home. This kindness is not heard by neglect and open disdain on the part of the fashionable daughter-in-law grieve the old lady to understand that the latter has turned his home for ours and the family. The discontent on the part of the young daughter-in-law leads to many social slights of the old lady in person with her friends among the elite. The countess finds that she is the cause of unhappiness for her son and the wife leaves the home. Love she has a fierce desire for my children.

Her countless, heart-rending sorrow lonely years depicted in a manner that will touch the most callous hearts and will cause many to shed tears. The sufferings of the countess are at last rewarded by the return of her son. The little one is running calling to see his grandmother. Every effort resulting has proven to the end she awakes and discovers the dream. The sudden delight is witnessed by the mother. Then is sent for the son and daughter-in-law. Upon the arrival of the latter the countess has changed her heart and the daughter-in-law is found to be a devoted mother.

THE HILLS OF CORSICA—The title of this feature indicates its pertinency. The picturesque and wonderful scenery always prevails among its wild state. The process of these cross steep hillsides and the mountains are grand and beautiful. Most of these scenes are across the Mediterranean Sea, and the boat which is in the Mediterranean Sea conveying the mail and transport a number of the wild settlers of the mountains.

The savage people of the island to about 116 miles and the mountain scenes are built rises abruptly from the sea to a height of 8,000 feet, and is a mass of rugged limestone converging in many fantastic forms of rugged mountain peaks, reminds us of the old Spanish Main. Its people resemble in no way the Italian people as shown in the feature, the men and girls. Together ties enhancing their persons are always visible, even in their descriptions of the inhabitants of these Islands and their customs. The picturesque traditional customs of the coast followed by a man and land among the natives and some of the island. We are shown a good idea of the rude and unusual ceremonies of the island among the inhabitants. The feature is a good one, and will be enjoyed by those who are fond of picturesque scenery and quaint customs.

A SIMPLE RUSTIC TALE

The men and women of the island are not the only ones the other as well daughter and the young people are engaged for marriage. It is nothing unusual while the men are seated their Sundays in the woods their fathers are playing cards and their mothers are entertaining the girls. We see the parents family making a call on neighbor Durand and many more interest the meeting of the two families. While Durand and old folks to themselves and while the women engage in conversation, the men are seen playing a game of cards. It is evident that Durand loses the game for both men are deeply interested in the game. Suddenly Durand throws in his hand and seizes the cards in impressive yard, counting them. He shows that Durand holds one card too many and that, slipping his fist under it in his neighbor's face he calls him a cheat and a knave and rushes from the room.

The old ladies hasten to their escorting are dismayed by the appearance on the scene of the angry Durand, who unceremoniously orders his wife to accompany him home and to sever friendly connections with the Durand family. Then he starts off in high dudgeon, the unfortunate and blissful receives to a curious command to his son to leave his sweetheart forever. And we see the timid youth shrink with horror as the brave his unmanned little to weep over the object that has become his first love.

But the lovers are not so easily parted. There are midnight and other meetings at which they plan to elope. Finally they succeed in doing so, during one of these clandestine flees Frances and goodbye little young Durand he off, while he rescue his dear sweetheart. Then we see the two in the church home. Love, however, still refuses to find a man and pleases her meetings until the climax comes. That arrives when young Durand takes home his one night and she further suspecting the worst refuses the conditions and commands him to leave.

The process, however, are not premature for they leave his dead mothers deepest sorrow. Mother Durand has a needs and appealing two continued the Durand family. Finally the old folks are reconciliations to the fortune, and the wedding for the to consummate and decision a happy home for the young people. The picturesque scenes of the surrounding and some fairs, the play among of the leaders unmountable, and that is the conclusion.

THE MILLER'S SON—The miller's son was the only son and heir to the miller's estate. He was a good workman and was loved by all. The miller's daughter was also loved by all. The miller's son was loved by all. The miller's daughter was also loved by all. The miller's son was loved by all. The miller's daughter was also loved by all. The miller's son duke and only released after many scenes that the captive girl has escaped. Then forcing their way to one of the rear doors they find Lucrezia Borgia standing on the balcony of the castle and preparing to descend by means of the long chain of the castle bell. Lucrezia, however, changes her mind and returns to the room and the two men are about to descend by means of the chain when they hear voices and realize that the guards are coming. They therefore decide to remain where they are and when the guards enter the room they find the two men standing on the balcony. Lucrezia, however, is not to be seen and the guards, thinking that she has escaped by means of the chain, descend by the same means. The two men, however, are captured and taken to the dungeons of the castle, where they are chained to the wall. Lucrezia, who has been watching the proceedings from a window, now comes to the rescue and releases the two men from their chains. They then make their escape by means of the chain and the three, mounting their horses, ride away from the castle.

SLEEP, GENTLE SLEEP.—A young married man perceives no pretense to a smoker. It is his desire to accept the invitation and attempt the smoker. Here the young couple have a chance to keep him at home. After posting a wife she concocts a plan of putting a powder in something on his table wine, hoping that he will fall asleep and thus be prevented from going to the smoker. By a sleight-of-hand interchange the husband puts upon the same plate and puts a sleeping powder into her tea, so that he may be sure to attend the dinner without interference. The result is that they both fall sound asleep.

During the night a hungry tramp gains access to the house through a window. While searching the larder for something to eat he finds the bottle of table wine containing the sleeping powder. It looks good to him and he helps himself to a goodly portion, and is soon fast asleep in the dining room. The following morning when the housemaid enters the dining room to perform her duties she almost stumbles over the prostrate tramp and is nearly frightened out of her wits. She screams loudly for help, which brings a policeman on the run. Arousing the young husband and his wife, she promptly faints. Amidst great confusion the policeman arrives and arrests the tramp for trespassing. The young couple now are the funny side of the sleeping powder joke and have a good laugh over it.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT OF NEW YORK CITY.—Nothing is more interesting to all of us than the fighters of fire in a great city. Whose blood does not tingle as he hears the clank of the bell and the stands one side to let the engine go dashing past? And if he is privileged to see the work of the firemen at a conflagration he sees something to talk about and think of for a long time.

All this we see in the picture, besides the practice work of the men in putting up and ascending scaling ladders, descending the ropes and jumping into life nets. Most interesting of all are the views of the fire boats in operation at the close of the picture. Of these boats, with all streams in operation, is like a gigantic flower pot, the sight being wonderfully beautiful and impressive.

New York city is justly proud of its efficient Fire Department, and people in all parts of the world will be glad to witness the performance of the intrepid fire-fiddles on the motion picture screen.

VITAGRAPH.

WATER LILIES.—"Albertina" is filled with the rhythm and poetry of grace and motion. She is a celebrated dancer whose fame is widespread. She has overtaxed her strength as forbidden to appear in public and is ordered to seek quiet and rest. She chooses as her rural home a place of beautiful and restful country place, where she secures four rooms in a modest cottage.

Next door to Aunt Mary there lives a very handsome fellow who has often admired Aunt Mary's ability to tell fortunes by the aid of tea leaves. Growing restless under the enforced retirement Albertina strolls down to the river's edge where the soft grass. She pulls a number of the delicate flowers from the water and entwines them in a garland which she holds breathlessly about her head. They give her an inspiration and industriously she pirouettes, bends and sweeps her lithe and svelte form like a nymph of unseen enchantress.

The young man across from next door is rowing about the river. He sees Albertina dipping on the velvety floor of grass he espouses by her and rushes toward her. She takes fright and flees from him like a rejected nymph wafted by some gentle zephyr. Following he takes her in his arms and from that moment they are held by Cupid's bonds.

Lucas are sometimes kind and sometimes harsh. In this instance fate has decreed that Maurice Lucas shouldn't be. From a lightning stroke which flashes in his eyes as he stands enchanted gazing out of the window at a gamboling storm. Albertina sends of his office and declares her undying love for him. Just as well just never her engage herself to several and ludicrous and sacrifice her life and love on the altar of his happiness by declaring that she does not love him.

Albertina, meanwhile, returns to the city and again enjoys the public favor as an exponent of Terpsichorean art. Donations, flowers from friends and admirers, and invitations to dinners are showered on her for Maurice. After one of her receptions she returns to her home and finds a letter from Maurice. Her eyes leap first for Maurice. After one of her receptions she returns to her home and finds a letter from Maurice. After one of her receptions she returns to her home and finds a letter from Maurice. After one of her receptions she returns to her home and finds a letter from was left over after making the crystal liquid that rests peacefully in Gerome's decanter.

The pig scenes, turkey and donkey are beautiful, the absence of food and Gerome's exuberance from the right before. He is in force at the end of the fanfare his proposals of reconciliation to his rival. When the manoeuvring of the necessary effort has resumed "with thanks" as an exercise and he add to his agitated heroine the news of announcement in the morning paper of the impending marriage of the one remaining daughter of the age, Chevalier de Rostrand the hero of the hour. His sage knows no bounds and at his fury he demands red ink—red as blood—to convey a telegram of death.

The challenge given is accepted and the Frenchmen and the scientists settle the difficulty a la barbaard style.

LUBIN.

WILL IT EVER COME TO THIS!—Mrs. and Mr. Sarah Jane Brown—note the nomenclature a married couple of 1920. They first appear in the Brown dining-room, where Mr. Brown enters from the kitchen with a tray and puts it down on the table. One of the Brown girls slaps one of the Brown boys, a timid creature of 13, and makes the point clear. Mrs. Brown, dressed in a very masculine costume, comes in, sits down at the table and pours her coffee. Mr. Brown waits on her, tentatively tries to eat from her cup—spoon. It is too tough. She declares the coffee is cold, gets angry and exits. Mr. Brown, left alone, bursts into tears and flees to the kitchen. Mrs. Brown rises angrily, takes her overcoat and Derby and goes out through the door. We next see Mrs. Brown at her office, where she is very attentive to a lady-like young man, her stenographer. We see her at the club, knocking and lighting cards with others of her kind. We see Mr. Brown at home making beds, sweeping, washing dishes, hanging them out and gossiping over the back fence with another man who is similarly employed. We see Mr. Brown "on appeal" in court, where troubles some present-day women. He stops his wife, one morning, just as she is leaving for the office, shows her his worn-out clothes and pleads with her for money to get new ones. Mrs. Brown laughs and snaps her fingers and goes out, slamming the door and leaving poor Mr. Brown in tears. Then, dear, sweet, Willie Brown is released from his bonds by a handsome young man, whom his mother brings home and introduces, and the scene closes with the wedding bells ringing merrily for the young woman and her blushing bridegroom.

PATHE.

MARGUERITE'S BIRTHDAY.—Before going out to do some shopping Marguerite Vaudall reminds her husband Arthur, a young artist, that it is her birthday by writing the fact across the calendar. Arthur, her husband, sees the note, and hastens out to purchase a present. Meanwhile a burglar, who has located the banker's flat below, takes advantage of Vaudall's store-room, leaving part of his booty on their studio table. Marguerite returns and imagines that this is her husband's present. Arthur's return, however, he insinuates that it is a present from the banker she has received, and gathering up the articles in his arms, enters the banker's flat just as the latter is giving the detectives details of his loss. Suspicion soon falls on Arthur, the culprit and all march up to his flat. Things are looking bad, but the burglar happening to knock over some cases in the store-room is discovered, and everything is soon easily explained.

TRAILED BY AN INDIAN.—Two of the ranch hands, proving troublesome and quarrelsome, they are paid off and dismissed by the ranch owner, Jack Douglas. Riding off, they come across Jack's little daughter, and tying a note to the collar of her pet dog, that Jack will never see his daughter again, they ride off with her. On the dog's return, the note is found, and an Indian volunteers to track the cowboys and bring back the little girl. Some magnificent western country is seen as the Indian follows the two horsemen in a long pursuit. Ultimately at the top of a hill, where they have halted, he manages to get at their horses and drive them away. One of the outlaws he then tackles in the middle of the lake, and manages to overcome him. The other takes the girl, and it is not until his body is hanging from a tree-branch and the Indian has vanquished him in a hand-to-hand fight, that he finally gives in and allows the Indian to take the child and return her to her parents.

SEA BIRDS IN THEIR HAUNTS.—Amongst the scenes shown, which are all taken at close quarters, is a colony of Guillemots packed so tightly that defending Birds have to alight on the backs of their companions. Lesser Black Backed Gulls. Unable to obtain whilst the photographer descended so fast down a rope and daughter over a sheer precipice, having a drop of 300 feet. Puffins. Kittiwakes. Wild Ducks. Ptarmigan's nest. Buzzard feeding its young to take whilst the photographer waited for three days in a convenient position. Young Kestrels and a Reed Warbler feeding a young Cuckoo.

THE MARKED DOLLAR.—Basil Regot, the forger [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

and Dave, who is full of red Western blood, is a worthy representative of the type. He takes the law into his own hands and the girl at the same time. They are married and in due time persuade the old gentleman that it is up to him to grant his blessing.

LUCY'S LOVER.—Squire Skeeter's daughter has fallen in love with a young man to whom the father has taken a dislike and he determines to break up the affair.

Hearin, a servant, brings a letter addressed to the daughter. The old man takes possession of it and reading it, finds it is a plan whereby the two young folks will elope. In anger, he tells Henry to kill the lover if he comes near the house. The latter comes to see the sweetheart and Henry attempts to prevent it, but is won over by the sight of money. The old man hands Henry a rope, bidding him tie up the lover, which he does. When the girl comes on Henry passes his arms through those of the lover and the girl becomes indignant and leaves. The father comes back to see how his plan has worked and is told by the lover that he is going away. They shake hands and the Squire is given a rude shake-up, but accepts an apology. Meanwhile, offering the lover a glass of old stock, Henry knocks the box from his hand and he leaves in anger. The lover is discouraged, when Henry tells him of a plan to help him. He is to tell the Squire a story and as he tells it the lover must enact it. The old man comes in and listens to the story, in which the lover removes the key from the Squire's pocket, liberates the girl, and they proceed to the minister's house and return later and tell the father of their marriage. He forgives them and gives them his blessing.

NESTOR.

THEIR NEW MINISTER.—Like Peter Pan, Jack absolutely refused to grow up. His six feet and five and twenty years made not the slightest difference. In spirit he remained the same mischievous boy as of yore. Small wonder then that when he arrived at Uncle Jim's, whom he had not seen for ten years, and was mistaken for their new minister, that he should have instantly decided to have a little fun with the dignified church committee who met him at the station.

With much pomp, they escorted him to John Scott's, the minister's boarding place. So the next day when that worthy returned home with just a drop too much, Jack read the old man a severe lecture on the evils of drink, then demanded the bottle and calmly drank its entire contents before the eyes of the astonished John. The pack of cards which the bewildered man dropped as he pulled out his handkerchief caused Jack to follow his bent that evening, even without Mary Scott's advice. And great was his glee in beguiling the staid committee quietly enjoying a little game of poker. To their amazement the young man joined the game, and proved such an apt pupil that not only did he win everything in sight, but also secured an I. O. U. from Hiram Jones.

It was by waving this I. O. U. over the grouchy old bachelor's head that induced that individual to buy Amanda Suggins a ticket for the Tripe supper, which was to be given for the benefit of the church.

Hiram's marked antipathy to Miss Suggins gave his tormentor an idea. So writing the lady a note in which he congratulated her upon a mythical inheritance, he handed it to Hiram to post and calmly awaited results. Nor had he long to wait, for scarcely had he and Betty seated themselves on the lawn than Miss Suggins and her new ardent admirer presented themselves. Greatly married. Hardly able to keep his face straight, Jack put them through the most ridiculous of mock ceremonies; then fled the house, only to be confronted by the real minister and an indignant church committee.

Jack's knowledge of their little gathering, however, held the men's tempers in check. But, indeed, only a solemn and he proven bet when Uncle Bill stepped forward to vouch for the young scamp, even Betty was forced to accept his humble apology.

RELIANCE.

ON KENTUCKY SOIL.—The old Kentuckian, Col. Goring, is loyal to the Union cause. His son enlists in the Confederate army. The Union army is ordered into the enemy's lines to secure some drawings, and to accomplish his purpose is even pushed to kill young Goring. Pursued and in danger of capture, he takes refuge in Goring's home, and the Colonel hides him in a large basket. The searching party fail to discover him, and as they depart the basis of the dead soldier is brought home on a stretcher. The Colonel is horrified at the realization that he has protected the slayer of his son, and is rent by conflicting emotions. His love of country bids him protect the Union spy, and his paternal love cries out for vengeance. The latter overcomes him, and quickly closing the cover of the basket, he locks it securely, and pulling it with a mass of inflammable material he touches a match to it and escapes out in a few moments the entire house is a seething caldron of flames—the pyre of the unfortunate spy.

ATLAS.

IRISH HEARTS.—Ireland, the seat of romance of poetic cadences of loving poet of fighting, of merry-making and of sadness. Whence in spite of persecution, there is always a wealth of sensibility and gladness for the sons of old Erin is always hoping for better things to come and is not easily discouraged.

Here we build a story out of love, humor and situations. A story as genuine and lovable as Irish tingle at times as to leave no doubt to the minds of those who see the film and we are capable of handling this type of picture—rounded out well.

The story deals with the persecution of God-fearing Irish peasants by the British soldiery. It unfolds in tale of love and hatred on one side surrounded by skillful workmen and general in the other, with the sublime sentiment of the Christian overlying plane in the course of all.

No peerless scene was ever written for a moving

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Design.

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue : : CHICAGO, ILL.

picture as it affords opportunity for the introduction of perhaps the most elaborate and beautiful settings of the character ever constructed. The combination of true Irishmen temperament and true originality adds the finishing touch to what will undoubtedly be a big production of a big production. The while great care was taken in the settings to be historically true in accordance to the period. As an example of this, in the old period of the story is portrayed in a round house, which was removed from there old site of architecture. The picture contains all the ingredients of a big production, with a supporting cast, as all leading characters are handled by men and men experienced to advantage in such parts. A good story well told.

YANKEE.

THE CONVICT'S LAST CHANCE.—[illegible]

[illegible] Your face be [illegible] Going five minutes [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

for work, to have one woman and plenty of a well-fed child knocking about in furious activity around him are one animal with a spirit of his own. Instead he had only himself to please and kick. After that some home duties overcame the worst of his self-centredness. Besides, the kids was rash and funny. Worth a penny to the house to have them around.

Presently Mrs. Jones and daughter of John Jones and no sooner out to work. At anywhere the street received him from his previous and so the girl was unaware as she passed a score of girl from the years of couple. Time he married found he fell one night to find out for himself.

Just did not envision now in the line of the old gloom and when he passed a street scene and cut. Sounds up? Not old or scene to which much thrill he heard the most in the house he was leaving or not interested in the picture. Here he listened for Sadie's ear for thought of his absorbing wife and sick baby. His wild greetings awakened the household. A little dishevelled but of five came running in to find two years standing over a masked man holding a shining revolver. When the mask was removed and she saw his face John Hance cried like a baby when he heard the little one tell her future to wipe out a long life but the man who had saved her life that very day.

Do you think John went back to a cold and cheerless cell? Not on your life. The kid's mother bid him away until the police came and went, without their man, then somebody gave him a chance. With money to back it up.

LIGHT EFFECTS

Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros.

PROPRIETORS

1383-5 Broadway, New York City

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders

German Savings Bank Building

147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

CONSPIRACY

is the keynote of TRUST existence.
Slander and abuse through underlings, their stock in trade.
Treachery is rewarded while honesty of purpose is condemned.
The unlawful Combinations will come into their own if you will

BE INDEPENDENT

TRY THE

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.

338 SPRUCE STREET

Philadelphia, Pa.

INDIANA EXHIBITORS

Barney Oldfield—Jack Johnson Auto Race . . . $30 per day
Belgian Cavalry . . . . . 4 per day
Dieppe Auto Circuit . . . . . 4 per day
Many other feature films for rent

Royal Amusement Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

George Dupree John A. Mack

'Phone 114 Bryant

Gaiety Amusement Enterprises

Theatres Operated, Leased, Rented, Shared

Attractions Furnished

1547 Broadway Gaiety Theatre Bldg. Room 215

SLIDES

Do you need them? We want new customers. Mention this paper and we will mail you five Announcement Slides for $1. Send for catalog if you haven't one. Plain advertising Slides 50c. each, artistically colored.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY

LOCKPORT, N. Y.

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Genre Transparency Company

507 N. Clark Street Chicago

Insure yourself against burned off lead wires by installing a pair of Sterling terminals.

Positively the best terminal ever devised for motion picture arc lights, guaranteed to prevent burned off wires.

We claim this to be the simplest and most practical terminal on the market. Merely insert wire and screw down the nut. It grips the wire like a vise.

Send $1 today for a pair postpaid. State size wire used.

STERLING NOVELTY CO.

500 Main St., Warren, Ohio

Exchanges write for proposition.

Little Giant Carbon Sharpener

$3.50

Will save 25 per cent of your carbon expense.

New principle—Two knives which can be removed instantly for sharpening.

SPECIAL

8 x 12 Pink Label Electra carbons $4.00 per 100. Moving Picture Machines. Dissolving Stereopticons $45.00 up. Oxy-Hydro. Gas. Gas Making Outfits; all Supplies and repairs.

ERKER'S St. Louis, Mo.

"SILVERLIGHT"

ALUMINUM MOTION PICTURE CURTAIN

Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Economy, Flexibility, Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular.

RALPH J. GOLSEN SUPPLY CO. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR

S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

LICENSED RELEASES

BIOGRAPH.

Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.).....997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.).....998
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables.....449
Dec. 8—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.).....576
Dec. 12—The Golden Supper (Dr.).....999
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-law (Dr.).....998
Dec. 19—The Lesson (Dr.).....994
Dec. 22—White Roses (Dr.).....559
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress (Com).....449
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.).....999
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts.....882
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.).....811
Jan. 2—The Two Paths (Dr.).....999
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves (Dr.).....998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Dr.).....995
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Com.).....592
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.).....995
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.).....559
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.).....999

EDISON.

Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.).....995
Dec. 7—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.).....449
Dec. 9—Amateur Night (Com.).....
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.).....256
Dec. 13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.).....756
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Police Force of New York City Scenic 995
Dec. 21—The Minute They Played on Bumptious (Com.) 990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 27—Fanny, the Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)...990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)...1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep (Com.).....
Jan. 5—Fire Dept. of New York City (Sc.).....
Jan. 6—A Western Night (Dr.).....
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Scenic).....995
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.).....
Jan. 13—The Link That Held (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 17—With Interest To Date (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 18—Linda's Birthday Gift (Com.).....595
Jan. 20—Mike the Miker (Dr.).....990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.).....995
Jan. 27—The Rich Uncle and Letter (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.).....995

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Dec. 2—"Circle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.).....956
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com).....1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.).....997
Dec. 20—The Great Call (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank (Com.).....
Dec. 24—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift (Dr.)1000
Dec. 27—Girls Will be Boys (Com.).....1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys (Com.)...1000
Jan. 10—The Sophomore's Romance (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.).....999
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 21—The Border Ranger (Dr.).....985

KALEM CO.

Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.).....955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.).....995
Dec. 21—The Little Spinsterwild Maiden (Dr.)..980
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part (Dr.).....980
Dec. 28—The Girl of Pelican Archipelago (Dr.)..980
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 4—The Baited Bear (Dr.).....975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine (Dr.).....995
Jan. 11—For Love of An Enemy (Dr.).....995
Jan. 13—The Feud of An Indian Maiden (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—Her Chum's Brother (Dr.).....980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.).....

LUBIN.

Dec. 1—Sammy Sam (Com.).....
Dec. 12—An Exile's Love (Dr.).....999
Dec. 5—The Mother's Ranch (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—The Dead Letter (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—An Abandoned Camel (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.).....980
Dec. 28—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.).....990
Dec. 29—Art and the Legacy (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—His Last Parade (Dr.).....950
Jan. 8—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....940
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....950
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come to Pass (Com.)...710
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....950
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....950
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come To This (Com.)...710
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 26—The Count and the Cowboys (Com.)...1000
Jan. 30—Saved by Love (Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip (Com.).....573
Dec. 5—A Man of Honor (Dr.).....884
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.).....171
Dec. 10—The Revolt (Dr.).....942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Killer (Com.).....279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.).....676
Dec. 17—Hated and the Next Born King (Bibli cal).....995
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)..229
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.).....732
Dec. 24—Calm and Storm (Ind.).....279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.).....995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.).....981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Day Dog (Dr.).....972
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins (Com.).....945
Jan. 10—Child's Idea (Dr.).....758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Corsica (Sc.).....243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.).....958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.).....837
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Scenic).....198

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Dec. 12—Wooden Shoes (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.).....749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.).....253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.).....676
Dec. 21—A Change in Fashion.....332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.).....959
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England 848
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair (Dr.).....978
Jan. 7—Washed Ashore (Dr.).....670
Jan. 11—Wood Carving at Brient (Ind.).....320
Jan. 18—By The King's Order (Dr.).....

G. MELIES.

Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Santa Claus' Day (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome (Dr.).....980
Dec. 29—Nell's Country (Dr.).....980
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scarf (Dr.).....980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "I. L." Ranch (Dr.).980
Jan. 19—Changing Coats (Com.).....980

PATHE.

Dec. 21—The Runaway Motor Car (Com.).....555
Dec. 21—Mas Goes Skiing (Com.).....430
Dec. 23—The Lucky Charm (Fairy Tale).....807
Dec. 23—Betty's Fireworks (Com.).....
Dec. 24—Sunshine in Poverty Run (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Atonement (Dr.).....856
Dec. 27—Mas Goes Skiing.....844
Dec. 28—Running Away from a Fortune (Com.) 540
Dec. 28—The American Fleet in French Waters 125
Dec. 28—Mas Goes Skiing.....331
Dec. 30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.).....768
Dec. 30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.).....230
Dec. 31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 2—The Shepherd Violinist (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids (Sc.).....
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—An Intrigue (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties (Com.).....
Jan. 9—The Vow of Count Rudolf (Sc.).....
Jan. 9—The Fate of Barney (Dr.).....
Jan. 9—In the Land of the Monkeys (Scenic)
Jan. 11—The Three Checkers (Sc.).....
Jan. 11—Dusty Rhodes Loses a Bride (Com.)..
Jan. 13—So Near Yet So Quite (Com.).....
Jan. 14—Max In Search of Wood (Com.).....
Jan. 14—The Battle At Badajoz (Dr.).....
Jan. 16—Saved By Her Dog (Dr.).....
Jan. 16—Saved By Her Parents (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—Saved By An Indian (Dr.).....
Jan. 20—Max Wants to Be a Sailor (Com.).....
Jan. 20—Love Knows No Friend (Com.).....
Jan. 21—The Masked Indian (Sc.).....

SELIG.

Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Comin's Exit (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—John Rogers and the Hounds (Mystical)1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.).....990
Dec. 29—Dandelion and Pumpkins (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 2—The Arguments (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 9—Shadow of a Fear (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Detectives (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 16—Daddy (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.).....976
Dec. 13—The Love and the Man (Dr.).....1015
Dec. 16—Paying at Divorce (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.).....
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—Cleaning (Dr.).....
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....
Dec. 27—[illegible] (Dr.).....998
Dec. [illegible]—Across [illegible] 998
Dec. [illegible]—Where the Strife Ends .....
Jan. [illegible]—Back to Love and War (Dr.) 873
Jan. [illegible]—The Mission Bell and Their Neighbors (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar (Dr.).....979
Jan. [illegible]—Love [illegible] 998
Jan. [illegible]—Two [illegible] .....
Jan. [illegible]—Where [illegible] .....
Jan. [illegible]—Crossing the [illegible] .....
Jan. [illegible]—The Lure of Money (Dr.).....
Jan. [illegible]—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....
Jan. [illegible]—The Lure of Money (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS

Monday, January 16

Biograph—His Trust (Dr.).....
Lubin—Will It Ever Come to This (Com.)...
Essanay—Hank and Lank (Com.).....
Pathe—Mascagni's Reminiscences (Dr.).....
Pathe—Saved by the Dogs (Dr.).....
Selig—Daddy (Dr.).....

Tuesday, January 17

Edison—Mr. Cooper's In Love (Sc.).....
Lubin—His Master's Son (Dr.).....
Gaumont—The Second Letter (Dr.).....
Gaumont—A Water Contest (Scenic).....
Vitagraph—Three Men and a Maid (Dr.).....

Wednesday, January 18

Edison—Lasky's Birthday Gift (Com.).....
Kalem—Her Chum's Brother (Dr.).....
Pathe—Trailed By An Indian (Dr.).....
Lubin—By The King's Order (Dr.).....

Thursday, January 19.

Biograph—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.).....
Lubin—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....
Melies—Changing Coats (Com.).....
Selig—Tilda Not Guilty.....

Friday January 20

Edison—Mike the Miner (Dr.).....
Pathe—Sea Lands In Their Homes (Ind.).....
Pathe—The Tables Are Turned (Com.).....
Kalem—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.).....
Vitagraph—The Gift in the Fruit (Com.).....

Saturday, January 21.

Essanay—The Border Ranger (Dr.).....
Gaumont—Tilda No. (Dr.).....
Pathe—The Masked Dancer (Dr.).....
Vitagraph—Good Up By The Day (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday January 16

Am[illegible]—The Battery Engineers .....
Am[illegible]—A Dental Discovery .....
Victor—The Runaway Automobile (Com.).....
(Dr.).....
Imp—Mr. Wife's Kid (Com.).....
Imp—Melody (Dr.).....
Yankee—The Lucky Day (Dr.).....

Tuesday January 17

Eclair—The New Dress .....
Powers—A Mother's Love Saves .....
Powers—Lessons Learned (Com.).....
Thanhouser—Mary's Strategy (Com.).....
(Dr.).....

Wednesday January 18

Am[illegible]—The Sacrifice .....
Victor—A Spanish Romance .....
Imp—Where the Word Was .....

Thursday January 19.

Am[illegible]—The Sacrifice .....
Eclair—The Old Home .....
Imp—The Sheriff's Son .....
Powers—Fun Seekers (Com.).....
Thanhouser—Mary's Strategy (Com.).....
Victor—[illegible] .....

Friday January 20

Am[illegible]—The Sacrifice .....
Eclair—[illegible] .....
Powers—A Spanish Romance .....
Thanhouser—[illegible] .....
Victor—[illegible] .....

Saturday January 21

Am[illegible]—[illegible] .....
Eclair—[illegible] .....
Powers—[illegible] .....
Thanhouser—[illegible] .....
Victor—[illegible] .....

START THE NEW YEAR
by Subscribing to
The MOVING PICTURE WORLD
$2.00 PER YEAR $2.00

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Dec. 12—The Runaway Star (Com.)
Dec. 17—The Drifting Star (Dr.)
Dec. 19—The Final Mistake (Dr.)
Dec. 22—The Inventor's Daughter (Com.).
Dec. 24—A Troublesome Patient (Com.).
Dec. 26—
Dec. 29—The Sparks and the Man (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Guy Bitts's Visitors (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Brotherhood's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Arizona Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 12—Love's Lovers (Com.)
Jan. 16—The Bankrupt Plan (Com.)
Jan. 19—Rescued by Rescuers (Com.) .525
Jan. 23—A Jay-bird Deserted (Com.) .450
Jan. 26—The Runaway King (Dr.) .980
Feb. 2—Will A Man's Smile (Com.) .980
Jan. 30—Bertie's Bandit (Dr.) .980
Feb. 6—The Waifs (Dr.) .980
Feb. 9—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.) .980

ATLAS.

Dec. 7—Nature's Noblemen (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Rescued (Dr.)
Dec. 21—The Code of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Counsel's salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Small Rube (Com.)
Jan. 11—Interest in his Work (Dr.)
Jan. 18—A Gift Well (Dr.)
Jan. 25—Jack Hunter (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Dec. 7—Hearts of the Sea (Dr.) .950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.).950
Dec. 21—The Mother (Dr.) .950
Dec. 28—The Golden Girls (Dr.) .950
Jan. 1—Bill's Widow (Dr.) .950
Jan. 4—Pages of the Early West (Dr.) .950
Jan. 7—The Widow (Dr.) .950
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.) .950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.)
Nov. 12—The Heroine of Cherokee Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.) .1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.) .1000
Dec. 10—The Gentleman's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) .545
Dec. 19—Under the Sovereigns (Dr.) .400
Dec. 26—The Lock Keeper (Dr.) .537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.) .390
Jan. 2—The Great Water Competition (Com.) 480
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.) .480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.) .930
Jan. 16—The Jealousy Soothsees Ramulot (Com.) .478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.) .482
Jan. 23—Painless Extraction (Com.) .503
Jan. 23—Kill The Fly (Com.) .442

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 19—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 15—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Dicker's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 26—The Sequence (Dr.) .482
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sec.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Heiress Bet (Com.)
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery (Dr.)

IMP.

Dec. 10—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec. 29—The Unexpected Inheritance (Dr.) .995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.) .990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.) .995
Jan. 5—Rescued (Dr.) .980
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.) .998
Jan. 12—The Empty Purse (Dr.) .992
Jan. 16—His Last Patient (Dr.) .547
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodnight's Courtship (Dr.) .500
Jan. 26—Mended (Dr.) .995
Jan. 26—The Dancer (Dr.) .1000
Jan. 26—Dance 1707 Chester (Dr.) .997

LUX.

Dec. 22—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.) .423
Dec. 29—Rosalie's Jewels (Com.) .426
Dec. 29—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.) .547
Dec. 29—Tom Writes a Poem (Com.) .373
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.) .498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.) .367
Jan. 13—Bill As A Jockey (Com.) .465
Jan. 20—Tom In Mr. Name (Com.) .438
Jan. 20—A Troubled Dilemma (Dr.) .586
Jan. 27—His Faithful Furniture (Com.) .390

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

(Bison.)

Dec. 15—An Indian's Test
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Cattle Baron's Daughter
Dec. 26—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec. 29—Custer's Last Fight .900
Dec. 30—Dining the Terror .900
Jan. 2—In the Heart of the Sierras (Dr.) .900
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion (Dr.) .900
Jan. 9—An Indian Trapper's Prize (Dr.) .900
Jan. 13—The Cook Claim (Dr.) .900

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 15—The Fisherman's Revenge
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists.....
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.).....
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Rivals .900
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls .500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day.....500
Jan. 3—Antonio Toscarino .900
Jan. 7—Foolshead As Inspector of Hygiene (Com.)
Jan. 12—Joanna of Bragamo .500
Jan. 14—The Recall .900

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 7—The Toll-Tab Portrait
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part..
Dec. 14—Pido Forsaken by Aenea.....
Dec. 21—The Doll's Dance Christmas Dinner.....
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum As a Policeman (Com.) .500
Jan. 4—The Vampiring Hero (Dr.) .500
Jan. 28—Grandfather's Pipe .500
Dec. 28—Dramatic Engine Driver .500
Jan. 11—How Tweedledum Pays His Bills.....500
Jan. 11—Clouds and Ice Fields .500

NESTOR.

Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians .1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.)
Dec. 7—The Vampiring Hero (Dr.)
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—Dramatic Rehearsal
Dec. 28—Ebbs of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sleepy Shaw Saves Pete .950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man In 23

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan. 3—Beanx Nor Wanted (Com.)
Jan. 7—As the Master Orders (Dr.) .990
Jan. 10—The District Attorney (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Love to Each Other (Com.)
Jan. 14—Monte Cristo (Dr.)
Jan. 17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.) .990
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line.....
Dec. 24—The Refuge .....
Dec. 31—A Sacrifice—and Then (Dr.) .990
Jan. 7—As the Master Orders (Dr.) .990
Jan. 11—The Hour of Fate (Dr.) .990
Jan. 14—The Doll's Secret (Dr.) .500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.) (Dr.) .500

SOLAX COMPANY.

Dec. 16—Two Suits
Dec. 28—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan. 6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan. 13—Salmon Fishing In Canada (Sc.)
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Com.)

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) .1000
Dec. 23—Looking Forward (Dr.) .1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.) .1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.) .1000

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.) .1000
Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter (Dr.) .1000
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers (Com.) .1000
Jan. 10—Everybody Scores Father (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Only Girl In Camp (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Very Last Comets (Dr.) .1000
Jan. 17—Bertie's Brainstorm (Com.)
Jan. 20—The Old Clockmaker's Daughter (Dr.)

YANKEE.

Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec. 30—The Bravo's Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Rival Widowne (Dr.)
Jan. 9—The Bravo's Revenge
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned To Hold (Dr.)
Jan. 23—The Convict's Last Chance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—A Son of Old Glory (Dr.)

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements; three cents per word, cash with order. 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATION WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Experienced manager, sober and reliable. Has thoroughly understands the moving picture business. Will accept position on percentage of profits. Address, EXPERIENCED, care of Moving Picture World.

ELECTRICAL MACHINIST—of ten years' practical experience in the moving picture business desires position to install, repair and operate the electrical and mechanical equipments of a moving picture studio, an exchange, or as cameraman. Address H. E. Moore, care of Moving Picture World.

EXPERIENCED BARITONE AND PIANIST—Man and wife—Musicians of ability with repertoire for moving picture theatres. Want positions with reliable moving picture house. Must be first class. Address, Box 721, Blackwell, Okla.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Best equipped Moving Picture Theater in town. Electric light plant, mirror screen, leather upholstered opera chairs. There is no improvement known that is not included in this magnificent business established four years and is netting from $90.00 to $80.00 weekly. Best of reasons for selling. Price $4,000.00. Must be seen to be appreciated. Address, OHIO, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE.—Nickelodeon. A bargain. Good town. Fine business. G. N., 225 West Second Street, Weston, W. Va.

FOR SALE.—Moving Picture Theater in a town of 25,000. Good reasons for selling. A moneymaker for a hustler. THE LYRIC, Parkersburg, W. Va.

FOR SALE.—Vaudeville and Picture Theater. Finest equipment, private electric plant, stage, scenery and curtains. Good lease, central location, open Sundays. Population 70,000. For quick sale $1,850.00. Good reasons. ORA G. FACCETT, Care of Grand Theatre, Toledo, Ohio.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 270, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Moving picture theater and outfit. Good location and business. Address OTTO GMINER, 317 West Fulton St., Waupaca, Wis.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—A Gaumont Moving Picture Camera, positively new. A bargain for cash buyer. E. M. OLSON, 2020 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Complete Picture Theater Outfit. Power's machine, new asbestos booth, 260 folding chairs, electrical appliances and mirrors to complete a building at a sacrifice. Post office Box 256, Hamilton, Ills.

FOR SALE—Bargain. A brand new Powers No. 6 machine. Complete except table and legs and upper magazine. I. JACOBY, 269 Grand Street, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED.—To Buy or Rent, Moving Picture Theater. Must be a bargain. Address, Box 127, Roanoke, Ills.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

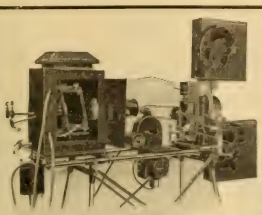
WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

WE ARE ALMOST READY!

Rex



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

REMEMBER

After Feb. 1st, 1911

$225.00

The Standard is the only machine passed by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters on which a motor is used.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY

101 BEEKMAN STREET NEW YORK CITY

FILMS FOR SALE

after sixty or ninety days of release. Also commercial in excellent condition at reasonable prices.

M. YSSEL

973 N. 7th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MANUFACTURERS---NOTICE!

I am now prepared to do special work on ex posures, Negatives, developing and printing. Guaranteed work by my own process. Interior work by X ray light system a specialty.

FRED. W. HOCHSTETTER

2720 W. Division St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Exhibitors, Send us your name and address and we will place it on our mailing list, and you will receive price lists for supplies that will interest you, and will put money in your pockets.

THE STERN MFG CO., 109 N. 10TH STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

ILLUSTRATED SONG SLIDES

made of cast iron wouldn't be sufficient proof that they were complete if furnished by a Film Exchange. Why put up with these conditions any longer? Put in an exclusive service that will be the talk of your town.

Our price is 25c a set per week, your week's supply of sets in one consignment. Time lost in transportation not charged for.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
6th floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

Coming MONDAY, JAN. 23
The Convict's Last Chance
A YANKEE WONDER FILM

FRIDAY, JAN. 27
The biggest feature of the year
A Son of Old Glory
Massive Egyptian, Spectacular Drama
POSTERS—BULLETINS OUT NOW. Write

YANKEE FILMS
344 East 32d Street New York

Atlas Films Hold the World

COMING WEDNESDAY JAN. 25
AN ATLAS MASTER FILM
Irish Hearts
Superb Photo-Tale of Old Erin ORDER YOURS EARLY
Elegant Posters
Bulletins Mailed
Atlas Film Co. 10 E. 15th St. New York

All Advertising Copy must be in hand not later than Wednesday Noon

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

POSITIVELY
the only way to
CHECK YOUR PUBLIC

The Jones Check Gate has been in operation at different stations in the HUDSON TUNNELS, and found to give a perfect count, with a smooth and noiseless operation.

Many of the large Theatres in New York and elsewhere have installed THE JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE, and they have favorably satisfied those purchasers.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE MAN TO GET YOU ONE

Manufactured by JONES CHANGE REGISTER COMPANY, Inc., 18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

Moving Picture Supplies

Tickets, roll of 2,000 .	$ 16
Bio Carbons 6x5-8 per 100	2.15
Electra Carbons 6x5-8 per 100	2.10
Announcement Slides, Col.	.25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders	.75
Imported Condensers . .	.75
Rewinders Complete . .	3.50
Metal Slide Carriers . .	.50

Send for Descriptive Catalogue

American Moving Picture Supply Company
110 Fourth Ave. - New York City

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days o/o

This advertisement describes new and second-hand Independent and Underwriters' Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and inspection on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereoptikon Views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars

For Sale by Dealers

MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

It Has Come to Stay

THE LITTLE WONDER OF THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Cleans 1,000 Feet of Film for ONE CENT

NO INCONVENIENCE TO THE OPERATOR.

It does the work while he rewinds the Film.

PRICE
$10.00
Liberal discount to Exchanges

Send for our literature, giving full description of the little wonder and what it will do.

Endorsed by the largest licensed and independent exchanges

No Moving Picture House complete without it

Manufactured by The Mortimer Film Cleaning Co., Freeport, Maine
Main Office, Fidelity Bld'g., Suite 703-4, Portland, Maine.

GUARANTEED NOT TO INJURE THE FILM

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 . . .	$1.25	20,000 . . .	$4.60	50,000 . . .	$7.50
10,000 . . .	$2.50	25,000 . . .	$5.50	100,000 . . .	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
Steel Frame Theatre Chairs
ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office; 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office ; 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public. It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.

It holds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.

It is the only sanitary chair.

It is a space-saver, lifesaver and money-saver.

It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.

If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.

Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.
2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

USE AN ATTRACTIVE
PROGRAM SHEET
FOR YOUR LOBBY
Lithographed in colors

Program Sheets 10c. Size, 36x62 inches
Film Title Strips 2c. Size, 5x27 inches
For All Assn. Releases.
A. B. C. and All Other Makes of Posters, 10c.

T. H. PLAMPIN
105 EAST 14th ST., NEW YORK
Top Floor, Rooms 6, 7, 8 and 9

FILMS for RENT

FIRST CLASS SERVICE

Write Us for Terms

T. A. MACK EXCHANGE

70 Dearborn Street
Chicago, Ill.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. HALLBERG 36 East 23d St. New York City

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhouser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange.

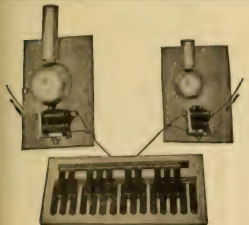
Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats	GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices	The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a side instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboards, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your orchestral expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small cabinet piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (Gen. Bway and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1808 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave., S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 35 E. Main.

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

Uniforms
Stylish
Nobby
Cheap

Coat and Pants like cut $ 11½ as low as $7.50. Caps, $1.00.

R. W. STOCKLEY & CO.
810 W. Walnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.
Mfrs. of Uniforms and Equipments

UNIFORMS
AND CAPS
FOR
Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

NEW SLIDES
For the following Songs—JUST OUT

Moonlight, Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart knew a Heart Like Mine
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From the Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

EXCHANGES!

Save time and money by having your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hochstetter process. Endorsed and recommended by leading exchanges.

We are now prepared to install renovating plants in exchanges at very reasonable rates.

Specimen work done at our plant at 60 cents a reel. Agents wanted.

Ortho Film Co., 2726 W. Division St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

STEEL BOOTHS

APPROVED BY UNDERWRITERS

S. B. LELAND
MONTPELIER, VT.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Harps etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

[illegible] ONE TO CENT

CLARENCE E. SINN

DON'T WORRY

I CAN POSITIVELY IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES BY SUPPLYING YOU WITH AN OPERATOR WHO KNOWS HOW
THE SECRET HAS ONLY BEEN KNOWN A FEW WEEKS AND MY OPERATORS ARE THE ONLY ONES WHO KNOW IT
TEL 1405 MAD. SQ.

F. C. TAYLOR.

49 WEST 28TH ST. N.Y.C.

(10 YEARS IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS MEANS SOMETHING)

FILMS FOR RENT

We ship on rental basis anywhere. Special care taken of Foreign trade. We can furnish you with any grade service you desire. We can also sell you films, any age, any make, at reasonable prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

ACME FILM CO., Inc., 12 E. 15th Street, New York

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat any-more since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc

was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works

1402 Broadway

Fort Wayne, Indiana

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums, and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 5x 4 $10.00 / Size Shell 14x15

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 line pressure screw rods, Kangaroo, Z gora or Skunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F CLEVELAND, OHIO

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS

908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

Managers' and Operators' Handbook

.... BY ....

F. H. RICHARDSON

Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See? 20 ft.
Hand Colored - - - $3.00
(Same Black and White) - 2.00
Just a moment; Show only half over. 15 ft. Hand Colored - 2.00
(Same Black and White) - 1.50
Those who have seen the entire performance will kindly pass out. 20 ft. Hand Colored - - 3.00
(Same Black and White - 2.00
New Pictures every day, 10 ft. Hand Colored - - - 1.50
(Same Black and White) - 1.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order. Send us an order. Your money back if you say so.

The F. A. Film Cement

IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.

Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle - - - 25 cents
Six bottles by express - - $1.00

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

All Licensed Exhibitors

who are thinking of taking steps to prove to their own satisfaction that Independent films are the best money-bringers in the business, are herewith asked to send for my Loose-Leaf Supplementary list of films. Judging from the record number of Power, Edison and Motiograph machines I have sold during the past two weeks to Licensed exhibitors, the tidal wave toward Independence is greater than it has been in the past year. Slip me a line and let's get busy building up that business of yours!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service
196-198 Lake St.
Chicago

OTHER OFFICES
Omaha, Neb. Minneapolis, Minn.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

Power's Cameragraph, $75. Edison Kinetoscope, $65. Cinemagraph, $45; Optigraph Nos. 4 for $45; Optigraph, $35; Mechanism, $25; Electro Lamps, Rheostats, Calcium Jets, Low $25; Motiograph, $165; Standard, Edison Model B, etc. Many others. MACHINES WANTED
Send for Supplement 33 of Bargains
HARBACH & CO.
809 FILBERT STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

TO THE TRADE

I CARRY A STOCK OF INDEPENDENT FILMS, BOTH AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN MAKES, ALSO ASSOCIATION FILMS, BOTH OF WHICH ARE IN EXCELLENT SHAPE. BANNERS AND POSTERS FREE. TOM BIBLE.

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE
1325 Arch Street
PHILADELPHIA, - - - PA.
BELL 'PHONE, - WALNUT 402.

WE will discontinue releasing until the plans for an independent program, not controlled by a trust, are perfected.

Arrangements now being made for a weekly program of twelve reels weekly independent to include

2 Reviers Weekly

In the meantime we are making negatives of our usual quality and will have some excellent features to release.

REMEMBER
2 Reviers Weekly

included in an independent program of twelve reels weekly about 1st of March and not controlled by a trust.

Revier Motion Picture Co.
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

A. J. CLAPHAM, Exclusive Agent
12 East 15th St., NEW YORK

At Last

it is possible to secure comfortable, even illumination throughout a theatre without a brilliant light in range of vision.

¶ The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination is a notable success in the lighting of Moving Picture Houses.

¶ Theatres in all sections of the country installing this inexpensive and very desirable electric lighting system.

¶ You are undoubtedly interested in this important matter.

¶ Write us for full information. Our engineering department, on receipt of particulars, will furnish, free of expense, report and recommendations.

Sold by Electrical Trade Generally
WRITE TODAY
National X-Ray Reflector Co.
227 Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO, ILL.

5c Show Souvenirs

IMPORTED CHINAWARE, Per 25 ..... $ 1.00
ALL LEATHER PURSES, Per Doz. 3.00
TRICK MATCH BOX, Per Gross 3.00
ORIENTAL FANS, Assorted Numbers, Per Gross 3.00
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES, Per Gross 3.00
JAPANESE TURTLE INKSTAND, Per Gross 4.00
FANCY COLORED PAPER BALLS, Per Gross 1.00
HOHNER HARMONICAS, Assorted, Per Gross 12.00
SELLULOID NOVELTY, Per Gross 3.00
JAPANESE PAPER AIR WHISTLES, Per Hundred ..... .50
JAPANESE PAPER TRAYS, Per Set ..... .50
IMPORTED HOUSE OF FANS, Per Hundred 1.00
DECORATED WINE GLASSES, Per Dozen ..... .50

Terms Cash Personal Checks must be Certified

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
631 and 633 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

Powers Picture Plays

Don't Miss This Great Tuesday

SPLIT REEL* for January 24th

A Wife's Love
A DRAMA
Full of heart-stirring incidents that will make you glad you saw this "Hit."

2 on 1

Little Dorothy
A COMEDY
Full of howls and screams. A great subject to finish this "split."

Saturday Feature, January 28

THE MASQUERADERS

A COMEDY DRAMA

How an heiress proves "Bob" loves her for herself and not for her money. Full of comedy scenes, with enough pathos to just touch the human chord in all.

Get It! Demand It! You Need It!

Have You Featured Monte Cristo? Do So

A Few Lobby Display Frames and Easels Left at $5

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue, New York

SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs for Lobby

Vol. 8, No. 4 January 28, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

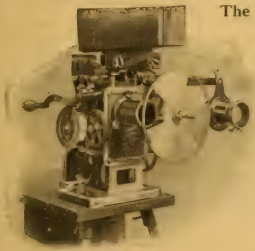
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

BY VIRTUE OF ITS SUPERIOR QUALITIES

Power's Cameragraph No. 6



The Perfect Motion Picture Machine

is in demand all over the world.

Its price puts it within reach of all.

Why buy any other?

Read what our Australian agents, The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co. Ltd., say:

The Nicholas Power Company,
115-117 Nassau Street,
New York, U. S. A.

Gentlemen: Your letter of November 9th received, together with the advertisement enclosed, and I certainly must congratulate you upon the way you advertise your machines.

You can rest assured we will do the same thing with your machines and I am sure you will find our firm a livewire.

I might add that we have already taken orders for fifteen Powers Cameragraphs on the strength of the two machines we are now using at the Colonial Theater, and we could have sold at least a dozen more if we had had the machines in our possession.

In addition to the fifty (50) machines Mr. Morgan ordered when he was in New York, I wish you would please send us at once the following order:

48 Powers mechanisms, to be shipped as follows
24 Powers mechanisms, to be shipped to our Sydney office, address as above.
12 Powers mechanisms, to be shipped to our Melbourne (Vic.) office, Sutton's Building.
12 Powers mechanisms, to be shipped to our Brisbane (Qld.) office, George Buildings.

We are now building a new theater in Melbourne, which will cost us for the ground and building $100,000. We intend to make a special feature of the operating room and will spend at least $1,000 in the operating room alone. We intend to install two Powers Cameragraphs and will make a big feature of them. I must certainly say that our pictures have improved wonderfully since we have started using your machines. We have several advertising features which we will introduce there and the Powers Cameragraphs will come in for their share. It is our intention to make this one of the finest moving picture houses in the world.

Hoping that you will give our orders your personal attention, and trusting that we may always be able to do a big business with your firm, we remain,

Yours truly,
The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd.
(Signed) J. D. Williams, Managing Director.

Dated, Sydney, Aus., Dec. 19, 1910. Write today for Catalogue G., describing it.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading manufacturers of motion picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask

FOR

THE THANHOUSER TWO A WEEK

Release of Tuesday, Jan. 31

With "The Thanhouser Kid" at Her Best!

ONLY IN THE WAY

If this is only in YOUR way you'll have an enthusiastic "house" upon that occasion, and maybe a crowded one. And if it isn't in your way, make it COME your way, because a good thing is always worth fighting for. But, two to one, it's likely that you won't HAVE to kick much for this reel, for it's one of the best cards in your exchange man's pack, and he's only wise to spring it on you. At that, you might invite him to spring it at his very earliest opportunity. You need this bunch of heart interest in your programme and you need it quick. No. 181. Code Word: Way.

Release of Friday, Feb. 3

A Picture With a Lesson!

ADRIFT

is a useful film with a big, simple moral that would do much to reconcile the Church to the Motion Picture—if the former knew that this sort of film was so much in evidence. Therefore, in billing and announcing this reel, make appeal to the church folk in your district and see if it doesn't go to change the picture views of even the "most conservative." For the American church-goer is always open to conviction, and will concede the motion picture an influence for morality and honest living just as soon AS HE KNOWS THAT IT IS. No. 182. Code Word: Adrift.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to EDITOR, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) complete, GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

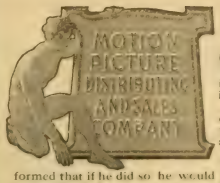
For System's sake address ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK



IMPETUS

¶ A snowball rolling down hill gathers momentum and weight. The first big rock it strikes usually retards the former and greatly reduces the latter. The Sales Company, rolling steadily up hill, has acquired an impetus and imparted to all branches of the industry not dominated by the Trust, this same impetus to such an extent that no obstacle has been able to retard its progress.

There is that indescribable something which dominates every member and every factor of the Independent fraternity in the Moving Picture business which enables them to ride over what in other lines might seem insurmountable difficulties.

Our attention was called last week to the case of an exhibitor owning six houses who desired to take Independent service in five of them. He was informed that if he did so he would be unable ever after to secure "licensed" service. This is pure bluff and buncombe and any exhibitor who has not enough of the "indescribable something" to tell these people to go to, deserves to be crushed and his business taken from him in the way that monopoly originally planned to do.

Buck up, tell these people where they get off and you will soon have them eating out of your hand. They want that one house as badly as we want the five and if they could not get the six they would take one.

Select your service from the following programme and save $104.00 in royalties next year. If you have experienced any difficulty in the past in securing a satisfactory Independent service, write us and tell us about it. All correspondence is treated as strictly confidential.

OUR PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, January 24th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 730 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 514 South Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

CANADA.

Apperson, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 201 Railroad Bldg., Denver.
Consolidated Film Co., Rooms Block, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 426 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 426 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rooms Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 167 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 208 Tremont St., Boston.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1109 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, [illegible] St., Minneapolis.

MISSOURI.

Rapid Film and Amusement Co., 1202 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1317 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 30 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 126 East 14th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 128 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 93 Fifth Ave., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 116 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Cincinnati Interstate Film Co., 305 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cleveland Interstate Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cleveland.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 312 Main St., Oklahoma City.

OREGON

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Sherlock Bldg., Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 126 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 410 Penn St., Pittsburg.
Penn Film Exchange, 1004 Penn Ave., Pittsburg.
Pennsylvania Film and Exhibitors Co., 43 North 2nd St., Philadelphia.
Pittsburg Film Exchange, 307 Penn Ave., Pittsburg.
Standard Film Exchange, [illegible]

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 211 [illegible] St., Dallas.

UTAH.

Consolidated Ind. Film Co., [illegible]

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange, [illegible] Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

IMPS IN CUBA!

Both "Imp" stock companies are now in Cuba producing films that will once more clinch the fact that the Imp is the most energetic and enterprising film-maker in the business. Watch for the Cuban Imps, the Florida Imps, the Mexican Imps. Meanwhile get after these next Imp releases—every week!

By the time you reach this scene in "Maid or Man," the Imp release of Monday, Jan. 30, you will have laughed till your sides ache. It is a farce comedy of the best type with a series of dead funny situations, each following swiftly on the heels of the other, and winding up with a happy finish. Please make it a point to tell your exchange you want "Maid or Man". It is another of the "Little Mary" series and you must not miss a single blessed one of these! Get busy!

You have been begging us to produce some high-class slapstick comedy on split reels. Very well! We give you a corking good dose of it in "The Mix-up," released Thursday, Feb. 2, and "An Imaginary Elopement" on the same reel. The picture shown herewith is a climax in one of the funniest chains of silly horse-play you ever saw and we'll guarantee it will bring down your house with roars of delight. We're giving you what you demand. Now see that you GET IT FROM YOUR EXCHANGE!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, 102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres. All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

EXHIBITORS

A Fair Field and No Favor

IS ALL WE ASK AND IS WHAT YOU SHOULD HAVE

If you have any difficulty in getting a first, second, third or any run you want of Lux Films, kindly write at once to our 10 East 15th Street address

Release, Friday, January 27th, 1911

Little Willie Goes Cycling
Comedy — 236 Feet

Riding up and down walls and ceilings, between people's legs, etc. are some of Willie's stunts, which result in uproariously funny catastrophes when his parents try to follow him. For fun get it.

An Infamous Son
Drama — 652 Feet

The miss-spent life of a son, the sorrow it causes his old parents, performance of his duty by the father when he arrests his wayward son, create situations that are intensely dramatic.

GET LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS. SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ELECTRA CARBONS

LONGEST LIFE
WHITEST LIGHT
AND MOST UNIFORM IN DIAMETER

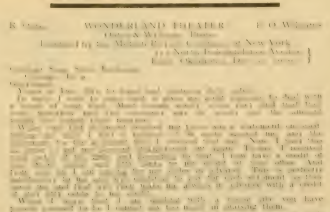
PINK LABEL ELECTRA CARBONS

ELECTRA TRADE MARK

NONE BETTER
NONE SO GOOD
ASK THE OPERATOR
WHO HAS USED THEM

HUGO REISINGER, SOLE IMPORTER
11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

ONE OF THE MANY



25c. a set per week. Our method of shipping your week's supply of sets in one consignment enables you to advertise, programme and rehearse all songs. The largest slide exchange in the world.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
SIXTH FLOOR PORTLAND BLOCK
107 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.
Dept. 1

See What They Say About

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8, '10.

Please ship C. O. D. one can of Kurtain Koat, as I have used the other can and found it to be the greatest thing I ever saw.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 17, '10

We have examined Mr. ———'s curtain and have nothing but praise for the results in comparison to other curtains.

$6.00

and following directions will give you the same results as above. One can covers 350 square feet. Order from your exchange or C. O. D.

KURTAIN KOAT CO.
2109 W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

"Arco-B" Biograph Carbons

Manufactured Expressly for Motion Picture Machines

Long Burning at High Amperage, Brilliant and Steady Light

None Genuine Unless Stamped "Arco-B"

WRITE FOR PRICES BEFORE ORDERING ELSEWHERE

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Sole Importers
232-234 Greenwich Street, New York

ONE OF OUR SPECIALTIES

Portable Box Offices

For Theaters and Picture Houses

WIRED COMPLETE READY FOR LIGHTING
CATHEDRAL GLASS DOME
Marble or Wood Base Any Size Any Style

The Largest Builders of
ELECTRIC SIGNS IN THE WORLD

STRAUSS & COMPANY
Incorporated
440-442 West 42d Street, New York
Write for Estimate and Catalogue

ENTERTAIN YOUR PATRONS WITH

The Regina
Mandolin Orchestrion

THE music furnished by this wonderful instrument is second worth the price of admission to your show. It will draw the crowds and hold them as no other musical attraction can do. It is operated by spring motor or by electric motor, as desired, and plays upon metal strips by means of vibrating hammers, making most delightful music which combines the effects of piano, mandolins, zither and organ.

It is furnished either with or without a nickel-in-the-slot attachment and when equipped to play on the insertion of a coin has proved to be a most successful and profitable investment for use in public places.

The Regina Mandolin Orchestrion is fully guaranteed and is sold at a reasonable price. Easy terms of payment can be arranged.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a musical instrument send for full description of this Regina Mandolin Orchestrion with prices and terms.

THE REGINA COMPANY
Broadway and 17th St., New York 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago

MANUFACTURERS OF

REGINA MUSIC BOXES
REGINA MANDOLIN ORCHESTRIONS
REGINA HEXAPHONES
REGINA PNEUMATIC CLEANERS

3
Paramount Reasons
Y
You Should Deal With The
WASHINGTON
Paramount Film Co.

1.—The Paramount System of locking two reels together, gives you the week's program in advance.

2.—The Paramount Posters are both varied and attractive; moreover they are FREE!

3.—The Paramount weekly program consists of fourteen reels selected from the best INDEPENDENT MAKES.

A very limited number of choice runs are open.

Write wire or call for them.

WASHINGTON PARAMOUNT FILM CO.

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

Champion Films

Take it straight from us. GET it straight from the Exchange. It is a motographic achievement. WHAT? That CHAMP FILM of February 1st, 1911.

"Judged by Higher Power"

Denied the realization of her heart's dictation, the humiliation of unrequited love made that love iniquitous. With avowed vengeance, the cause of which will move your deepest sympathy, she inflicted torturous grief. Unmindful of all but self-gratification, Supreme Judgment was brought to bear, and the inevitable punishment meted out.

"A Champ Film of Interest"

Scene from "Judged by Higher Power"

Don't forget CHAMPS on Wednesday

Don't take our word for it, investigate for yourself. Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

See Release Dates for Champ Features

CHAMPION FILM CO.

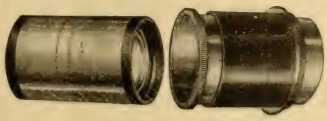
Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at
Coytesville on the Hudson

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?



GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENSES HAVE PUT THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS ON A HIGHER PLANE by improving the quality of the picture, increasing the illumination and fitting the picture to the screen. No other optical concern in the world has attempted to make projection lenses so carefully corrected and graded so closely in focal lengths that the right lenses for each exhibitor's conditions can be shipped as soon as the order is received.

Order Gundlach Lenses if You Want the Best Picture it is Possible to Produce

A complete stock of our lenses is carried by

NICHOLAS POWER CO., 115 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago, Ill.

Makers of the Motiograph

Every Film Exchange sells them subject to approval.

TO ORDER, state the size of the screen, the size of the picture wanted and the distance from the lens to the center of the screen.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.

828 Clinton Avenue So. Rochester, N. Y.

SWEEPUM SWEEPUM

What is it?

IT IS A

Dust and Dirt Catcher and a Disinfectant

SOLD IN BARRELS AND HALF BARRELS

Write us

M. F. ELLIS & CO.

297 and 299 Montello Street

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 6th

DOCTOR AGAINST HIS WILL 984 feet

(By the great French Writer MOLIERE)

One of the greatest comedies ever imagined; in this piece MOLIERE outdoes himself, and the whole film fairly sparkles with humor.

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

GREAT NORTHERN

The Trunk Mystery Detective

The Trunk Mystery

(RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 21)

A more thrilling, sensational and intensely interesting detective feature film has never been released. The kind of film that brings capacity houses. You're a loser if you don't get this big-hit headliner.

(RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 28)

Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done

A smashing hit comedy bound to get many laughs.

AND

Triumph of Intelligence

A hilarious trick comedy of how brain conquers muscle. By all means get this reel of genuine fun.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Solax Company

MAKERS OF FINE FILMS

OUR FILMS HAVE ALL THE EAR-MARKS THAT ARE ALWAYS CHARACTERISTIC OF A FINISHED PRODUCT

Scene from "HIS BEST FRIEND"

MADE BY MEN LONG IN THE BUSINESS

TINTED AND TONED THROUGHOUT

RELEASE JAN. 27th
His Best Friend
DRAMA

RELEASE FEB. 3d
Ring of Love
COMEDY

RELEASE FEB. 10th
Put Out
COMEDY

147 Fourth Ave. Solax Company New York City

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 1[illegible] Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 JANUARY 28, 1911 No. 4

The Educational Aspect of the Moving Picture.

The educational aspect of the moving picture within the past few months has taken on such large proportions that it bids fair to rival the amusement field of the ever popular film. During these few months past motion picture has been discussed in the general press as it never was before. Destructive criticism gave way to curious speculation when it was found that destructive criticism could not destroy. Curious speculation in its turn gave way to mild interest, and mild interest at last has been supplanted by enthusiasm, on the part of those who were at first among the bitterest enemies of the picture.

* * *

The general trend of these belated amends is that the men who are recognized as leading lights in the educational field have at last conceded the value of the moving picture as an adjunct to the business of teaching. Not only have these men recognized the picture, but they are installing projection apparatus in their school rooms. There was a certain air of triumph around this office when the news came that the first projection apparatus had been installed in a public school. The news was printed in full, together with editorial comment and other indications of editorial satisfaction. Since that time so many schools have bought picture mechanisms that editorial comment upon each case would be impossible. To-day when a school puts in a moving picture outfit it is only an item, not an event.

* * *

All this is very interesting to the maker of moving picture machines, also to the maker of films and the man who rents them, but the exhibitor says "what is to become of me?" In other words, if the schools go into the exhibiting business, the exhibitor thinks they will draw away his patronage. Well that is one way of looking at it, but it is like looking through the wrong end of a pair of opera glasses. Moving pictures can never expand too much to make things bad for the exhibitor. The fact that they are expanding into school, church and business is a sign that they are becoming more popular. The more thoroughly imbued the country becomes with the picture habit no matter in what form, the better for the motion picture showman.

* * *

If the worst comes to the worst, what is the matter with the erstwhile exhibitor trying to fix exalted station of "Superintendent of Moving Pictures" in the public schools in his home town? A political soft snap is better than a long fare and empty benches, if the exhibition business goes to the bow wows on that account. But me on this pessimistic stuff. Look at the doughnut and not at the hole. The two fields of amusement and education are far enough apart not to interfere with each other. If anything, the school pictures will in a way be an indorsement of all pictures, and without doubt will make two picture fans grow where only one grew before. Make a little girl and her dad a few big eyes who have been kept away from picture shows on heartsay evidence will start he always to attend. They will also get the craze in violent form, and make up for lost time, as they all do.

As might be expected, there already have arisen superfine critics who oppose moving pictures in the schools who do not object to them as an amusement. One of them declares that "You cannot insert learning hypodermically" meaning that we learn only by taking thought. According to that we might all of us be blind for all the good our eyes are to us in getting an education. All you have to do is think. The harder you think the more you will know. When you teach a child to spell CAT it is not necessary to have any picture of a cat. The child will find out by "taking thought," whatever that means. Another critic closes a long-winded evaporation of other people's ideas by concluding, "the exercises of the human mind and heart are not going to receive their highest ministry through the convenient quivering of a visible picture on the retina of a thoughtless observer." Even we did not suppose the three R's would ever be taught by moving pictures, but when it comes to a "thoughtless observer," according to Webster a man cannot observe without thinking. As Bill Devery would say, the two words are "salonimous."

* * *

As opposed to these who claim that moving pictures leave a scant image on the retina or in the brain, we have the assurance of others who have found that the young mind is plastic and impressionable, given by the picture an easy mental and indelible mark. One factor claims the pictures have an impression but a wallop; the wasp idea, and the other factor maintains that a child's mind is nothing but a putrefying cavity. They have both done their level best at getting a head with us, but they have cried "Wolf" so many times that the public will no longer drop their work and run to save the sheep. As a result from these spectacular critics it is a pleasure to harken to the words of a sane educator. Dr. C. Stuart Hall, of Clark University, La Salle 10 also says that in the scope of sane moving pictures will become among the greatest elements in the development of the child's mind.

* * *

People think through the eye. That is a truth as old as the hills. The duller folks are, the more they think through the eye. An infant thinks entirely through the eye. A young child thinks principally through the eye. The older we get the less we think through the eye, but no matter how old we are, we never get done thinking through the eye. If that were not true text books would be no more acceptable books for children to learn from than encyclopedias or the pictures of objects one finds in stores and their names would not follow them. There would be no room in all the universe and not pretty things in the world that are made to please the eye. There simply would be no such thing as Art, that's all. The moving picture is not an amplification of these things that goes over so much further? Call it "canned drama" if you will, but people in spite of a vast percentage of "canned education," or hypodermic education, if the term will stretch that far.

Decline of the House Organ.

Our readers will, we trust, pardon us "I told you so" at the outset of this article. It is not so many moons since the advent of the gorgeously bulletin, expensively gotten up on glazed paper, containing sixteen pages, more or less, of film synopsis, interspersed with cute, gaily tinted and original would-be-funny quips of would-be budding "Mark Twice Dickens." Needless to say, the film synopsis was generally too much overdone to fool any but the novice, and the rest of the matter, after the novelty of the first few issues, was discarded by all except the few who have nothing else to do but read anything that may be lying around. The "original" soon had many imitators and with a shining example such as the "daily record" before them, it was strikingly apparent, so much so that it seemed as if a copy of one of the first had been laid down as a model for all the others.

It is now a matter of record that the originators have long since discarded altogether the size and style of their first love. They are now putting very much less of a weekly expenditure in this direction and their present form of single sheet is much more likely to achieve a degree of success in its desired object simply because every particle of extraneous and irrelevant matter is eliminated. That a number of the original style of eight or more pages is still issued weekly only proves that those responsible for them commenced the experiment later and have not yet had time to figure the cost and net results.

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has harped on this string in former issues and the writer of this is betting with himself (a very safe way to gamble, by the way) that a good many readers will have said before they get this far that this is simply another plea for the greater efficiency of the trade paper as the proper medium for the publicity which the house organ tries to get, and those who have reached this conclusion are "dead right." Edited by outside interests who have an outlook over the whole field from much the same viewpoint as the buying public, the trade paper in any field is read with a degree of confidence in its news columns that its readers cannot be expected to give to any house organ. Another advantage of the trade paper is that it places before its readers all the news under one cover, so that comparisons are easily made and decisions arrived at much more readily than by going through a score or so of different booklets, all advocating their particular brand.

We might go on and offer several more arguments in support of our contention, but to what purpose? The most convincing argument of all is the decline of the house organ and its gradual elimination by those who have had the longest experience with it, which we have noted for several months past. Theories may sound well, ideals may seem practical, but experience teaches in the long run. We are indebted to an excellent short editorial in the current number of "Printer's Ink" for our inspiration at this time. This quotation from said editorial of our esteemed contemporary puts the matter in a nutshell: "Long experience with it has convinced me that it doesn't pay for the time spent going over it. The really interesting propositions which I ought not to miss are invariably advertised in the trade papers." This is from a dealer in Milwaukee and we imagine that it expresses the feelings of a great majority of dealers and buyers, whether of films or any other marketable commodity.

* * *

The manager of a Milwaukee theater, whose complaint that he had not received his paper we had been investigating, tells the following joke on himself. He had become so used to the pink cover which was used by the World last year that he was misled by the change in color and had thrown the MOVING PICTURE WORLD into the waste basket without removing the wrapper, thinking it was another paper which also uses a buff color cover. We mention this because several people have suggested that we adhere to the pink cover. While this was distinctive it did not, in our opinion, please the eye so well as the color now being used.

The Clergyman in the Picture.

That the clergyman has a place in the picture is only natural: indeed, it would seem impossible to do without him, if true life in all its phases should be depicted; as he, perhaps, more than any other professional man enters more thoroughly and frequently into the everyday life of people of all classes. Under these circumstances it becomes imperative that any presentation in which a minister of religion is called into requisition, the same should be given with a faithfulness to the ideal of his ministerial calling and functions, and in no wise should he be the subject of contempt, ridicule, burlesque, or even of manufactured scandal. In the "Street Preacher," it was pleasant to notice this truthful delineation of the minister, which drew words of appreciation in these columns; unfortunately, however, this particular instance seems to have proved the exception and not the rule.

In the "Preacher's Wife," the minister is falsely represented as of ultra-Puritanical ideas, and an almost brutal nature. Again, another instance has come under the writer's notice, in which a minister is represented as "flirting" with a young wife, whose child is almost drowned, as a result of the lack of parental oversight; it was all right for the young matron to invite her visiting pastor to take tea with her, but to represent them as holding hands, with endearing looks, is a brutal abuse of the privilege given the scenario writer.

To deliberately manufacture the foundation of a scandal in this way, can only be harmful to the moving picture profession, and will alienate a great body of worthy men, whose approbation should be sought, rather than that they should be held as victims of a false contempt; which such presentations must naturally produce in the minds of those who see these unkind pictures.

It has occurred to the writer that no other profession is thus outraged; why then the minister? Is it possible that some authors of such playlets believe that the public, generally, rejoices in impiety? If so, it is time to tell them that they are mistaken. Not only do the ministers themselves look for a truthful representation of their calling, but an intelligent public desires that a class of men whom they respect, shall be accorded a proper place on the stage and in the picture; as a rule they get it on the stage, therefore, they must have it in the picture. The place of the clergyman in the picture is that which his high office designates, and which is faithfully adhered to, almost universally, by those who fill that office. Scenario writers and manufacturers will find it to their profit to remember these things.

—W. H. JACKSON.

"Jackass Music"

Dear Sirs—I have just seen the article on "Jackass Music," by Louis Reeves Harrison, in the issue of January 21, 1911, and I am sure Mr. Harrison has not exaggerated his views, as far as music in moving picture houses is concerned. For I, also, have heard some jackass music, as he describes it, and wonder how on earth managers can expect anyone to come into their theaters, and sit down, and listen to such unappropriate music, as I was obliged to listen to while there. The week commencing January 2, 1911, I had business in Allentown, Pa., and on the evening of the same day, with another traveling man, I went to see some picture shows. The first house we entered was a small one, in which there was only a piano to furnish music, and I will say the music at that house was quite fair. The young girl presiding, played music in harmony with the picture, in fact, it suited the pictures quite well, and she kept the piano going from the time the picture was thrown on the screen, when she took a short rest, or until the next picture was shown on the screen, when she again started to play, which is more than I can say for the larger house, to which we went afterward, and where we found they had a six-piece orchestra. But oh! such torture as we were obliged to suffer while in that place—indescribable. The orchestra was there all right, but very little music was rendered, for they never started to play to a picture until it was almost over, and when the end of the picture appeared they shut off the music abruptly, not even waiting to get to the end of a line, and worse still, we noticed that when a comic picture was on the screen, they did not play at all, and the audience had to supply the entire reel, instead of that, they got up and scattered through the audience. When the next picture appeared, which was dramatic, entitled "The Refuge," the musicians reappeared, and by the time this picture was almost, or more than half over, the leader of the orchestra had at last found some music, which, no doubt, she thought was appropriate for this particular picture (judging from the length of time it took her to find it), imagine our surprise and disgust, when they struck up the strain of "John Took Me Home to See His Mother," when the scene appeared in which the drunkard's child was dying, and the poor mother, beside herself with grief, is left to fight the battle against the world without the only treasure that had given her strength to go forward. Then, they switched off to the strain of "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland," and it seemed as if the pianist was trying to race with the rest of the orchestra. Finally, we could stand the torture no longer, so we left the theater in disgust, vowing we would never enter it again, to be made to endure such torture—for torture it certainly was to be obliged to sit and look at pictures to which there was no music. One might as well listen to a singer unaccompanied by music as to look at pictures without music, for it would detract all the beauty from the song and singer, same as it did from the pictures which would otherwise have been good.

—WM. H. McCRACKEN.

The Advent of the "Talking" Picture, and its Effects on the Theatrical Map.

By Robert Grau.

It was my pleasure and province to be present, in the audience which crowded Keith's Union Square Theater, in New York, one evening in July, 1894. This was the eventful night when the motion picture was first revealed to American theater-goers.

It is true, that an inferior device, under the name of Eidoloscope, had made a feeble effort to introduce, also in a Keith theater (in Philadelphia), the effects which were destined ultimately to change the theatrical map, and to create the most lucrative field of endeavor in the history of public entertaining.

The advent of Lumiere's cinematograph was announced with much advance advertising, but public interest was not aroused instanter. The theater was only fairly filled on the opening night, but an idea may be had of the success from the fact that the theater which had, up to this time, played to average weekly receipts of about $3,000, found its "takings" increased within a single month, to the unprecedented average of $7,000 a week, though the cost to the management was probably not over $100 a week for the machine itself.

Inside of a year, the cinematograph was installed in every vaudeville theater in America, and hundreds of new establishments came into being. Thus, was inaugurated the vaudeville craze, which, as it progressed, brought into being, many new devices, such as the Biograph and the Vitagraph, while, in a few years, no theater was without its own device.

In 1902, "the store" theater came into existence, and of these there were, at one time, nearly 30,000 in this country. New York City had more than 600 of this class alone.

An illustration of the vogue of the motion picture is best shown by the statement that one of the earliest endeavorers in this field—Marcus Loew—started in the Harlem district, about five years ago. Today this man is immensely rich. He has about forty theaters of his own; the majority of which are of the first-class, such as the Majestic, Yorkville, and Lincoln Square Theaters, in New York. Hardly a week goes by that Mr Loew does not add a theater to his list, while he has now, in the course of erection, two magnificent amusement palaces, involving a cost of nearly a million dollars.

About four years ago, William Fox, a man yet in his early thirties, opened the first "store" theater in Brooklyn. His success was so great that within a year he had a dozen similar resorts, where moving pictures were the sole attraction. In 1907 this man bought the lease of the Dewey Theater, on East 14th street, paying a rental of $50,000 a year. He then secured the Gotham Theater, in Harlem, the Star Theater, on Lexington avenue, the Family Theater, on 125th street. He also has several theaters in Brooklyn.

Despite the enormous rentals, and the low price of admission, Mr. Fox has made a fortune in the short space of four years, and last year amazed his colleagues by leasing the Academy of Music, paying a rental of $100,000 a year, for a building which cost its owners but three times as much.

Although Messrs Keith and Proctor have seven theaters of costly construction, in Greater New York, but one of these—the Fifth Avenue—is used for the type of vaudeville which they are supposed to stand for; all the rest including the Union Square Theater, where the cinematograph was first seen, have reverted to the camera man, and Mr Proctor has a score of theaters in the smaller cities, besides those in which he is affiliated with Mr Keith.

For several years, the various manufacturers of films, have been sorely tried, to keep up with the demands for new subjects. The public patronage has grown to such an extent, that millions of new theater-goers have been created. To hold this patronage, and prevent its being absorbed by the regular theaters, has been the aim of all concerned in this vast industry.

Some of the world's greatest players have posed for the film makers, many of whom have stock companies, under the direction of famous stage directors and producers.

For several years, efforts have been made to create a perfect synchonism between the moving picture and the phonograph, in order that stage presentations of plays and operas could be reproduced.

The spectacle has already been presented of a famous stage idol, appearing in a theater of high prices of admission, while but a stone's-throw away a perfect counterfeit presentation, both as to voice and action could be seen for five cents.

Three of the greatest factors in the field of motion photography, including Thomas A. Edison, who invented also the phonograph, have announced recently, that all of the problems for an absolute synchronism were either solved, or near solution, and this surely is the most notable achievement of this generation, as far as the art of entertaining is concerned.

Mr. Edison has prophesied that the day is near when the workingman will present himself in front of a moving picture theater, deposit his dime, and witness a representation of scenes from grand opera, such as are presented at the Metropolitan Opera House, in New York.

This writer has already been privileged to hear and see almost an entire act of Donizetti's "Lucia de Lamammoor," including the famous sextette, as sung by Caruso, Sembrich, Plancon and others. Although perfection had not yet been achieved, no great wrench of the imagination is necessary, in order to predict that another year or two at most will witness a state of perfection, through absolute synchronism, which will revolutionize the art of entertaining all over the world.

The serious side of this situation lies in the ultimate fate of the player and singer, and by a quite similar reckoning that of the manager and producer.

We know that Caruso has earned almost as much money from the presentation of his vocal records as has been accorded to him from his grand opera achievements. Yet there are those who have deplored the fact that the royalty is being paid in a slight deterioration in the illustrious Italian's voice.

I yield to no one, in my appreciation of the benefits to be derived from the phonograph, and have often wished that it had come into being in time to have preserved the voices of Malibra, Jenny Lind and Adelina Patti, in her prime. But it even one year less of Caruso, is the penalty which music lovers will have to pay in order that future generations may have preserved for them his vocal records, the price is hard to yield to.

It will be of interest to the reader to learn that in Paris, such eminent celebrities as Mme. Bernhardt, Jane Hading, Mme. Rejane, an dMonnet Sully, have been retained to pose for the great films, such as the Pathe Freres, who will pay a fabulous sum, in order that they may raise the level of their achievements.

The probabilities of a perfect synchronism, as one of the two great Edison devices, fix it must be understood that it was Edison who made possible the era of motion photography, are beyond all conception. Through this great advancement the Parsifal Play, as presented at Oberammergau, could be brought to our doors and that, too, at a not very distant date.

It is already on the cards, to present before American audiences, scenes from grand opera, as presented at the Grand Opera House, in Paris, Covent Garden, in London, and La Scala, in Milan. Thus grand opera novelties, which would probably not be heard in this country for years will have presentations within the year of their European premiere, and the great lavishly spectacles are now being in order that the tremendous barrier of transmitting to America over 1,000 persons, may be overcome.

The film companies are capitalized in the millions, and there is not the slightest indication that any retrograde movement in this field will be permitted.

The great problem which presents itself as the effect that modernism may have on the actual player and singer, but after all, it is the latter element which has made possible the great progress in the moving picture industry, for they are induced to accept the liberal payments offered.

Recently Sousa was offered by Camus, for the sole right to take his vocal records, and this sum was just a bonus for exclusive privileges. Madame Adelina Patti, when in this country on her last tour, refused an offer of $100,000 for a similar privilege, and this, too, at a period in her career when she was no longer the Patti of old.

The writer believes that the motion picture theater of the future will be on a far more important basis than that of the present. Already the "store" theater is passing away, and the tendency is to secure regular theaters. In all the larger cities, large and commodious establishments are being erected, and millions of dollars of invested capital is available at every turn. The effect on the regular theaters has already been appalling. Two years ago the vast chain of theaters, devoted to melodrama, found their position untenable, and there are today, less than a dozen of this class of amusement temples in operation. All have reverted to what is known as "pop" vaudeville, or else they are lying dormant.

In Philadelphia, there are two score of handsome theaters, newly built, some costing as high as $500,000 each, and all created through the really tremendous expansion in the field whereof I write. The attendance is simply enormous. It is not too much to assert that 100,000 persons attend these theaters daily, in the Quaker City. In Boston, the situation is quite similar, while in the smaller cities, a very unique state of affairs has come about. In what are called "one-night stands," the moving picture has solved the problem of the local managers, who have not hesitated to cast the legitimate attractions to oblivion, and turned their "opry" houses into the money-getting policy which prevails in these days. Heretofore, the local manager would get one or two companies a week, for his public's entertainment, and he had a hard time to pay his way. Today, by the simple process of installing a moving picture machine, and engaging a few minor acts of vaudeville, he is able to entertain from two to three thousand persons each day, at an average price of admission of ten cents. The expenses are nil; the profits are huge. I have in mind a little town, near New York, with a population of 30,000. Up to two years ago, it was impossible to attract a paying audience with any attraction. Today, the one theater available, gives three performances daily. No week goes by, that less than 60 per cent. of the town's population does not enter this theater at least once; while it is an absolutely normal condition to find as many as 1,000 persons waiting in the lobbies and on the sidewalks, at 9 P. M., for an exodus of the seated audience, so that they may enter and witness the show.

The public, created by all this procedure, is constantly being educated, and gradually becomes more exacting in its demands, hence the advent of the "talking" picture, with all the enhancement which it promises to bring, should result in a general uplift, together with much benefit to the masses who must naturally appreciate any effort which will make possible for them to see and hear for ten cents, that which has heretofore cost from fifty cents to two dollars.

It remains yet to be seen, how nearly science and artifice have served to duplicate the original interpretations in music and the drama. Mr. Edison has promised that the counterfeit will be almost perfect.

The Technique of the Picture Play---Structure.

By George Rockhill Craw. (Second Article).

What is a Drama?

To write a good scenario for, or to produce a good picture play, one must know what it is he is trying to create.

"We all know that," I hear someone say. "A picture play is a drama."

Even so, but what then is a drama?

"It has a beginning, a middle, and an end."

True enough! Aristotle said that hundreds of years ago, and it has been said in a different way by the later writers on technique, who say that a drama has: first, an Introduction; second, a Climax or a Clash; and third, a Denouement or a Catastrophe. But this does not answer my question. I did not ask what has a drama? but what is a drama?

"A drama is 'make believe.'"

Ah, now we are getting to the heart of the thing! A drama is an illusion, and the more perfect the illusion, the better the drama.

To create a perfect illusion, the creation must be logical to the minds of the audience, which means that its events must proceed rationally.

Now, nothing can be built rationally, unless it has a definite framework, or structure. The architectural designer may have a conception of an inspiring church tower, but to create it effectually, he must build a rational structure, consisting of, first, the Foundation; second, the Walls; and third, the Tower. One is of no value without the others.

In building a perfect drama (good dramas are always "built"), we must have a structure consisting of three parts:

First—The Beginning, which is the Itroudction;

Second—The Middle, which is the Climax;

Third—The End, which may be a Catastrophe or a happy Denouement.

This is true of all dramas, whether in one, two, three, four, or five acts.

The picture plays, as at present presented, may be classed as "one-acters," a thousand-foot reel taking up about the same time as the usual 20-minute, one-act spoken plays, presented in the circuit vaudeville houses. We may soon see picture plays in from one to five acts, with a thousand-foot reel to each act, the time between the acts being taken up by rewinding, which will correspond to the time given to the setting of the stage in the spoken drama. But enough of polyreel prophecies! Let us first perfect the technique of our monoreel plays!

Building a Comedy.

Now, that we know the structural elements of the drama, let us apply them.

Let us say, we have an idea for a picture play—a comedy.*

It is about a shiftless, worthless, fat negro character, named Sam, who reads in a newspaper a comic paragraph that the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, caught in a country churchyard, in the full of the moon, at midnight, by a red-headed, double-jointed, knock-kneed, cross-eyed nigger, riding a white mule, will bring good luck to whoever possesses it.

"But"—someone interrupts—"most comedies go in a straight line. They have no definite structure."

Ah, but they would be better comedies if they were more structurally dramatic, as witness the loosely constructed "Becky Sharp," to use a well-known example from the speaking stage.

The Introduction.

So we will give our comedy a structure. The Introduction shall consist of the establishing of the existence of a theory that the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, caught according to the circumstances given above, will bring good luck to its possessor. We establish this by having the poverty-stricken negro, Sam, read the paragraph in a daily paper. Our scene is laid in a big, busy city. We develop the comedy by having the comedy character, Sam, prepare himself to prove the correctness of the theory. First, he convinces himself that he is cross-eyed, using a small pocket mirror for the purpose, making cross-eyes at himself in it. Next, he finds that he is knock-kneed and double-jointed. He is dubious about his black, kinky hair, but comedy develops in his making his hair red by stealing a bottle of red hair dye from a hairdresser's shop, which dye, after an escape from his pretty pursuers, he empties upon his head. Now, he is almost prepared to put the theory to the test, and he leaves the large city to find a country churchyard. So much for the Beginning, or Introduction.

*NOTE—Mr. Craw's comedy, "The Rabbit's Foot," from which this idea is taken, is copyrighted.

The Middle, or Climax, shall consist of the catching of the graveyard rabbit.

Sam reaches the country, and steals a white mule, comedy developing in the discovery of the theft by the farmers, and their chase after Sam, who eludes them. Midnight approaches and Sam nears a country churchyard, riding the white mule. There is a full moon. Comedy develops in Sam's fear of the graves as he rides in among them, and in the appearance of ghosts and skeletons here and there, with Sam paralyzed with fright. Suddenly one of them hurls a white object, which Sam dodges. It is a graveyard rabbit. Other spook take up the bombardment and the air is filled with rabbits. Sam is almost knocked off the mule and hangs stricken with fear about its neck. He regains his seat and rides frantically, warding off the rabbits with his right arm and hand. He accidentally catches one of them by its left hind foot, and with eyes as big as saucers, escapes with his prize.

The Denouement.

The End, or Denouement, shall be devoted to the proving of the theory that the rabbit's foot is lucky as advanced in the introduction.

Sam returns to the city very poor and very hungry. Comedy is developed in the fact that his rabbit's foot has done him no good. But suddenly, he finds a pocketbook with money in it. He goes into a negro cafe to buy a meal, but finding that there is a pool-room in connection, in which bets are being made on Jeffries and Johnson, he puts all his money on Johnson and forgets that he is hungry. He goes out painfully realizing the mistake he has made. Several other lucky things happen to Sam by which he gets money, and each time it is all bet on the irresistible Johnson. This all happens the day of the big fight. Suddenly the odds are wiped off the blackboard in the pool-room and the fight returns begin to come in, Sam being the most interested and excited man in the crowded room. At last it is announced that Johnson wins, after much painful uncertainty and delirious hope as the rounds are read. Sam is made rich as he cashes in, and then buys a big dinner of chicken, pork chops, watermelon, and other things dear to a darky's heart. The play is finished. The theory is proved. A rabbit's foot is lucky.

It is only a little original, black-face, picture comedy, built on the structural lines of a thesis, and using many conventional picture play "props" and situations. The evidence of its structure is eliminated. The play goes smoothly on without any markings of the structural divisions upon which we have built it. The very adherance to structural rules hides the evidence of the author's craftsmanship, and the illusion is perfected in accordance with the proper use of them.

The object of rational structure in the writing of a play is to foster the illusion. Thus in the comedy, "The Rabbit's Foot," the fun advances the play along the lines of its structure. It is progressive and the audience realizes that the play and the fun is progressing along definite lines. Thus the interest is enhanced to see where this progress will lead.

The negro character might come out and merely make funny cross eyes and walk knock kneed and get a laugh, but when this is done to further the progress of an idea, the fun is enhanced and an illusion is formed—the illusion that the actor is really a negro who intends to test the theory regarding the luck producing qualities of a rabbit's foot.

The Climax.

The Climax, in which the ghosts appear, is of course, the hardest test on the credulity of the audience in the illusion, but by this time the illusion is so well established and the interest in the progress of the play so keen because of its structure, that all is accepted and the interest is held to the end.

Of course the structure of a comedy need not be so well defined as that of a drama, and still the comedy may be very entertaining, because of its funny incidents no matter how much detached they may be. This is true because comedy does not have to be so definitely structural in its form as drama in order to get a "box office" effect, although being structural adds life to comedy.

Building a Tragedy.

But a drama must go up one side of a mountain and descend on the other side, and the scenes of comedy may be woven into the structure. Sometimes the structure of a drama has this form [illegible] and sometimes its form is like this [illegible]. It all depends on whether the proper place for the Climax (the apex of the hills) dramatic requires the Climax to be in the middle or near the end.

The clearest cut form of play is the tragedy. A tragedy is a complete event. We often hear that a tragedy occurring in a family, but did you ever hear of a comedy occurring in one? People may remark that "the funniest thing happened over at Jones' today," but the idea of a structural event is not brought to mind. The thing may have been just the suicide incident that Mr Jones jumped to rid us of a dinner party given by his wife.

But tragedy is structural. It consists of first a cause, second, the Deed; third, the deed's Effect.

"Ed Smith has killed himself," a friend informs you.

"No!" you exclaim, breathless. "What a blow to his wife! Why did he do it?"

And then a complete drama is recited to you by the friend, having a beginning, a middle and an end. You are told that business reverses made Smith despondent, that he shot himself through the heart, and that the shock made his wife insane.

Let us write a play on this structure. Our object in writing it is to have it produced. Our object in having it produced is to create the illusion that the actors presenting it are really the persons about whom our play is written. The stronger this illusion, the better our play.

Now it is not so hard to create an illusion as it is to keep from spoiling it in trying to strengthen the play by adding to its "interest" qualities, and thus getting off the structure.

We start our drama by showing that Ed Smith is in financial straits. But why should he kill himself? There must be a logical reason or the illusion of the audience is spoiled, and it is illusion we are striving for. Many men are continually in financial straits, but they do not kill themselves. So to make the suicide plausible we must show that Smith is used to high living, is getting old and cannot bear the thought of poverty; or we may show that he is a young man who has appropriated the funds of others to his own use and is about to be discovered.

As we have prepared for the Climax so must we prepare for the Denouement before completing our Introduction in order that when the wife goes insane there shall be a logical reason for it, and thus at the very beginning of the play we proceed to lay the foundation for the Denouement, the wife's insanity.

Mrs. Smith may be presented in the Introduction as having bad health or a highly nervous temperament. Either of these conditions would make insanity a possible result of the shock of her husband's suicide. Or to increase the interest in the drama we may make the wife a healthy and personally rational woman of thoughtless and extravagant habits, whose insanity is the result of mental stress brought about not alone by the mere shock of her husband's suicide, but through the commerce and horror of realizing that it was she who caused her husband's death by bringing about the financial ruin through her high living and extravagance. Thus at the beginning of the play we would lay the foundation for this remorse by showing the wife's manner of living.

In writing this play an restrained dramatist would probably use the method of having the wife go insane in the Introduction. Thus her insanity would be the result of the simple cause, shocking grief. Most picture plays are based on the method of a simple cause. The trained dramatist, however, would show the wife as a reckless spendthrift in the Introduction, and thus in the Denouement, the cause of her insanity would be complex—shocking grief and remorse, and he would gain the moral effect of retribution.

The untrained dramatist, being versatile, might liven his introduction with a comedy character having no bearing on the structural progress of the play. He might bring in a healthy, young, thoughtless and extravagant girl as a friend of the invalid wife, for otherwise the play might be too somber.

But the trained dramatist, using the complex method, which is really simplest in its dramatic economy, would get the comedy and lightness out of the wife in the Introduction, making her a thoughtless, healthy, high spirited and extravagant woman. This comedy work, unlike that of the girl in the other method, would be structurally a part of the drama, a part of its progress, for it organically brings her husband nearer to ruin and death, and herself to shocking bereavement, remorse and insanity—her retribution.

In the first method, the girl's comedy lines not being organic, divert the mind of the audience from the structural progress of the play. Anything that does this tends to spoil the illusion, the end sought in all plays.

The method of the untrained dramatist would produce a simple, artificial melodrama, such as are too many of our picture plays; that of the trained dramatist, a strong, purposeful play, every element of which is organic, taking its place as a part of the play's structural progress to the end.

It is the latter kind of picture plays that hold their audiences and cause the plays to be discussed and talked about after the people have left the theater.

The Cherry Pits.

Proper structure causes the interest to go up and up, cumulatively, unflaggingly. As an example of cumulative interest I will cite the picture drama, "The Cherry Pits," whose structure is, on the whole, excellent, with some minor errors of technique. As in most picture plays the causes and effects are simple and not complex, the play owing its strength to its splendid portrayal of the character of Colonel Rey, strong characterization being a treat in the picture field.

The play opens with the conferring of the cross of the Legion of Honor upon Colonel Rey when he is a young man, Napoleon himself officiating. This is a prelude to the real drama. The latter commences with a garden scene in France. Three young men are seated at a table. They are eating cherries and are flushed with wine. Colonel Rey, now gray and advanced in years with old fashioned and threadbare, but neatly brushed, clothes, stalks in, in proud dignity, taking a seat at the table next the young men, and sitting down facing the other way. As he comes in the young men stare at his proud military bearing and nudge each other. After he is seated, one of them flips a cherry pit at him, which strikes his arm. He turns round, sees them laughing, picks up the cherry pit with dignity and ties it in his handkerchief. The prank is repeated by a second of the young men and this time the cherry pit strikes the Colonel's ear. Incensed, but with quiet dignity, the Colonel ties this pit also in his handkerchief, and then gets up and faces them. As he does so the third young man has thrown a pit, which strikes the Colonel over the heart. He looks at them, controls his anger, picks up the pit, adds it to the others tied in his handkerchief, and leaves the garden.

In this scene we have had an admirable introduction and a fine character study in Colonel Rey. The introduction is further developed and the drama rises when the three young men come face to face with the Colonel at a state ball, and it rises still further when he is introduced as the most expert duellist in France and refuses to greet them. Finding that the young men are his equals socially, the Colonel challenges one of them to a duel. It is the who who cast the first cherry pit, striking him on the arm.

The day of the duel arrives and the two men meet on the field of honor. The young man misses, but the Colonel's bullet strikes him in the arm. The Colonel then returns his cherry pit to him, taking it from the hankerchief in which he had wrapped it the day of the insult. This is a clever piece of technique, some say, for it suggests to the audience that as the Colonel has three pits to return, there are yet two duels to come, and the interest is kept at a tension. It may be contended also that the literal returning of the cherry pit retards the action, has no real value in the drama, and should have been left out, as the audience probably realized that the Colonel figuratively returned the young man's cherry pit when his bullet penetrated his arm. It may be contended that the caption used, "I return your cherry pit!" was sufficient and that it alone would suggest the two coming duels. Many rave, the drama is still rising. The Colonel challenges the second young man, whose cherry pit has struck him on the ear, and in the duel that follows the younger man misses, but the Colonel unerringly pierces his ear, thus returning his cherry pit.

The interest now rises to a tragic climax when the turn of the third young man, the one whose pit struck the Colonel over the heart, comes.

The three friends are together in their bachelor quarters, two wounded, the third with certain death hovering over his head. The Colonel's messenger appears, with the third challenge, it is thought, but no, it is a message from the Colonel, who is ill, asking the young man who struck him over the heart to call at his rooms.

The three friends leave with the messenger, and enter the sick room of the Colonel, where the third of them is forgiven. Then the Colonel, who is very much worse than he has believed, is fatally stricken and dies as the cross of the Legion of Honor, given him by his beloved Emperor forty years before, is laid upon his noble old breast.

The prelude would have been best used as a retrospective vision of the Colonel's, after he had returned home from the garden where the insults took place. A chasm of forty years between a prelude and an introduction, is a long jump for an audience to span, and the illusion would have been best conserved by showing what happened in the past after the audience is familiar with and interested in the old Colonel, rather than before it is aware of his existence.

In the spoken drama, a prelude is the only means available in a case of this kind, as for instance in the "Prisoner of Zenda," but with the motion picture it is possible to show things as passing in the mind of a character in evidence, by means of the dream, or vision technique of the picture screen, and it is best to show retrospective scenes in this way. They then become contemporary with the action of the drama proper, and are organically a part of the structure, instead of a detached happening of many years gone by.

[Editor's Note. Further articles by Mr. Craw on technique, illustrated by constructive criticism of current picture plays will appear from time to time.]

PENNSYLVANIA LAW.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—We wish to call your urgent attention to the theater law No. 233 P. L., now in force in Pennsylvania. This law can be complied with by the smaller theaters with the exception of the three four-foot aisle clause, as most of the photo playhouses are but fifteen to thirty feet in width. The Legislature of Pennsylvania now being in session, immediate action should be taken. We would suggest that you take it up with each individual exhibitor in this State, asking them to write to or to see, if possible, the representatives to the legislature from their districts looking toward a plan to modify that part of the law which it is impossible for the smaller size houses to comply with. This law as it now stands, states that theaters must have three four-foot aisles, and as this is a proposition which is impossible for the small theaters to comply with, we feel that it is unjust and should be modified so as to leave the aisle question open to the discretion of the factory inspector, in all cases where the width is not sufficient to permit of three four-foot aisles.

We wish you would make a strong appeal to the Pennsylvania exhibitors by mail and through the trade journals and film exchanges asking them to take immediate action while the legislature is in session. We are now taking up the matter with our representative, Mr. Geo. W. Sassaman, of the Berks district, and will have him frame a bill and present it before the legislature at the earliest date.

We trust that you will give this matter immediate attention, as this is not only for the interest of the exhibitors alone, but for all concerned.

Awaiting an early reply, I remain,

Very truly yours,

GEO. W. BENNETHUM.

For Reading, Pa., Exhibitors.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

NEW SCHOOLS TO WHICH THE CINEMATOGRAPH HAS GIVEN BIRTH.

First Article.

Although an acknowledged fact that the cinematograph has made possible many advantages in various fields of knowledge, it is probably most interesting to note the definite and new schools which have resulted absolutely and solely from and for its uses.

The Commercial School.

The first of these may be designated the commercial school, wherein commercial establishments of the larger class are using the moving picture to educate their employees in every branch of their own manufacture. In the current issue of System—a commercial monthly—there appears an illustrated article showing a most elaborate use of the cinematograph in making each branch of a large factory acquainted with every other branch, and especially training salesmen in a thorough knowledge of the intricacies of the business they are to represent. Others are preparing pictures for public exhibition, to supersede the older methods of advertising, by giving entire exhibitions of the process of manufacturing all kinds of goods in which people are interested, and whereby an intelligent knowledge will be mutually beneficial to buyer and seller.

Municipal School.

Another is the municipal school, in which the governing bodies of large cities are training the city employees by a thorough and systematic course in the various new advantages which are now open to them; the taxpayers, also, are enlightened as to methods of civic rule, and young people of the high schools are taught by illustrations from actual life, the most modern methods of civil government, with the double advantage of a more extensive course in a shorter time.

Military and Naval School.

Military and Naval Schools of Instruction have been established in almost every country for the benefit of both soldier and sailor giving a marvellously important course of instruction in the arts of war and peace, with a scope that could never have been deemed possible to the most imaginative prophetic mind of even earlier Napoleonic times, the extraordinary range of field maneuvering now reduced from the great expanse of territory, to the limits of the lecture rooms, are being especially used in German military training.

Medical School.

Probably one of the most important of these new schools, is that of Practical Surgery and Medical Microscopic Research. The pages of the Moving Picture World less than a year ago recorded the fact that an eminent surgeon was not aware of the future possibilities of cinematography in his profession. In the seeming incredible short space of time or less than that covered by the last year, internal work, both human and animal, has become a recognized necessity for teaching and lecture purposes. In the field of microcinematography there appears one of the most useful scientific schools which promises to be a great blessing to life of all kinds; the narrow limits of the microscope have now given place to the broader limits of the screen, so that the most minute germs can be openly studied by professor and student alike, and as intelligent exhibitions are highly appreciated by schools generally and the public at large, even in the theaters, a film of the kind is appreciated. In a more general and universal sense, the moving picture has most educational assistance, where its attendance is possible; the mass economy of the lecturing man in placing its educational and conservative value to a testimony in its favor—as in addition to the thousands—the fact that a majority of the large universities and colleges of the United States have installed an important branch. While other schools may be mentioned, time and space now forbid these present remark; a future notice of these will appear in due course; it will suffice, however, to suggest in this first article as to what the School of Cinematography itself?

School of Cinematography.

Cinematography has become both a profession and a great commercial enterprise, true if not hundreds, of thousands, are now enlisted in its artistic, scientific and industrial activities so that it may well be classified as a school of schools, whose one mission is the imparting of knowledge; a universal university—for nothing is barred from its curriculum.

PICTURE INSTRUCTION.

John Collier, Educational Secretary, National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures writing for The Survey says: "Motion pictures have made us a nation of theatergoers. They carry the beauties of the stage into millions of homes hitherto untouched by dramatic art. They have such a vast repertory that they appeal to practically all social classes and to old and young alike.

"Motion pictures will be used for many purposes in the schools. Even the best educational uses have been anticipated in the commercial theaters. The National Board of Censorship in twelve months inspected 4,000 reels of perforated film—fifteen minute shows. Of these, 90 were classified as 'Educational.' There exists a great range of geographical, industrial and historical reels already available.

"The school will use the motion picture because it is graphic and dramatic. The text-book illustration and the stereopticon now provide a graphic element in the curriculum, but the moving picture improves on the stereopticon in every way, even in artistic color effects. The growth of a plant from seed to harvest is shown in a few minutes' time on the screen; ice melts, grass and trees sway in a continuous process according to season. The almost instantly swift motion of the locomotive and car has been discovered by pictures taken at the rate of 1,000 a minute. Time can be shown on the screen at any desired speed. Actual color photography is now a commercial reality in motion pictures.

"The lesson pictures are not only graphic. The way in which one movie presents instruction awakens the will of a child. The pictured action arouses a dramatic interest, which, properly used, could carry down a mental response attitude and into an active mind. Of course the school must exercise an analytic use of the entire films presented. Otherwise the passive pupil merely result in amusement and not intellect-making. Education through doing the thing well already playing part of it in waterways, industrial reforms, and the school schools between this and that is great and the motion pictures. Exercises from the kitchen and cooking class can be everywhere as one skilful operator and by a special selection of the pictures necessary.

"Motion pictures seem to make the entire region of the family of the child and to the community. The school must no longer be a mere mind-teaching machine but a center for the family and the community. Motion pictures appeal to the whole family, and combine amusement with education. They attract people who do not go to the evening lectures courses, the church, or the social settlement. These people pay for admission, they come fashionably, and they feel pleasantly and far more readily during the motion picture hour than during any other part of their day.

[illegible] has gotten the better of philanthropy and of municipal good-will in helping the wage-earning millions to use their leisure constructively and pleasurably. Has not the time come when the school, endowed with a conscious public ideal, should be expected to equip itself with that powerful magnet, the motion picture, which has given to the commercial show-house its great advantage? As yet in America neither the demand nor the supply for educational motion pictures has been effectively organized.

"The likelihood that all well equipped schools will soon use motion pictures does not threaten the life of the commercial theater. The great public patronizes drama for enjoyment rather than instruction. The school will always be limited in the purely amusing element it can provide, and here the theater will retain its place. The school center which will combine motion pictures with other attractions such as the dance, the gymnasium, the amateur theatrical, will menace the prosperity of the commercial show house just as it will menace the prosperity of the questionable dance hall or poolroom. The development of the school on such lines as these will force all places of commercial amusement to improve enormously or to go out of business. The extensive use of motion pictures by the school will elevate the character of films shown in the theaters. If the school meets the responsibility we prescribed, the places of cheap entertainment will all be vastly different, morally and artistically, ten years from now. It is by constructive competition, much more than by restrictive legal measures, that the amusements of the people are going to be improved."

SCHOOLS IN WHICH THE CINEMATOGRAPH HAS BECOME A NECESSITY.

In contra-distinction to those schools which have been brought with existence by the cinematograph, there are other schools which were already in existence, to which the coming of the cinematograph has been a great benefit, indeed in many instances it seems as if they had long been waiting for the advent of this new power, to enable them properly to fulfil the educational mission which made them necessary. In the schools of the deaf and dumb the new sight-teacher is able to impart a ten-fold degree of knowledge, the limitation of the simple illustration or stationary picture, has been replaced by the moving, living, knowledge-giving picture, so that besides a more thorough education, a quicker one has been made possible to these afflicted children.

In the schools for the feeble minded the cinematograph has come as a great enlightener, proving itself a value long considered improbable in the education of these unfortunate people, it having been found that the combined influences of the increased use of the faculties, with the larger powers of imparting knowledge, has shown a decided tendency to quicken the otherwise hindered powers of these people, young and old.

In all kinds of technical instruction whether in schools or institutions, the possibility of illustrating the trades from actual manufacturing centers has proved of inestimable benefit; more especially in those institutions of a state, charity, or reform character; in which the inhabitants are unable to see and know from any actual experience, any of those features of trade in which they were interested, beyond the limitations of an instructor and their books. Whole industries from beginning to end may now be presented, giving a complete conception of the full purposes of those things which previously could at best only be learned in part. As an illustration it may be mentioned that by the aid of pictures and models the construction and working of automobile is now easily taught; showing the possibilities in other lines when so successful in this particular one.

* * *

Y. W. C. A. Finds Photoplay Valuable.—A moving-picture machine was the gift of the board of directors of the Mechanics-American Bank, of St. Louis, to the Young Women's Christian Association, of that city. It will be installed in the gymnasium of the association building and used for the entertainment of girls and young women who like pictures. Films suitable for the Sunday afternoon vesper services will be secured. The St. Louis Y. W. C. A. will also recognize the value of the moving picture show by having a space in the foyer of its new building at Fourteenth and Locust Streets for similar entertainments. An outdoor moving picture exhibit in the summer also will promote the idea.

* * *

New Haven, Conn.—The question of introducing moving pictures as a part of the night school curriculum after being strongly recommended by some of the teachers has been taken under advisement by the Board of Education.

FAKE OUTSIDE ADVERTISING

The attention of the exhibitors, in New York City and elsewhere, should be drawn to this fact: that to put the moving picture business on a sound basis, it is high time that the use of fake posters should be eliminated. In passing one of the well-known houses, within a block of Broadway, not long ago, I noticed, as I had on several other occasions, quite a string of vividly-colored posters of the four-sheet size strung across the entrance, and leaving just enough head room for one to pass under, depicting murdering Indians in the act of scalping their captors, who were on their knees, seemingly, pleading for mercy; then, on an adjoining sheet, a young hero, in the act of rescuing an unfortunate girl, who had been cast into the waters of a canal by a desperate Desmond, and in reward for his bravery, received a knife through his heart, the blood stains clearly showing on his shirt. There were, at least, eight or ten of these posters, each one of a more blood-curdling nature than the other. Bearing no name of any manufacturer, I was curious to know who was the maker, and after sitting for an hour of so in this theater, and being treated to a first-class show, I looked up the manager, and inquired of him the object of the deceiving pictures, and received this answer: "Oh, I find this a good way of drawing the attention of the passing crowd; you know, we have so much competition, that we are compelled to fake it to get them inside, and when once there, we are certain they will remain, and if they do get up and go out, it makes no difference, for we are not after a steady patronage—ours is all transient."

The managers of this house have been warned by the police to exhibit more subdued lithographs for advertising purposes, but have displayed very little interest in the warning. This is just the opportunity some cranks are looking for, with the view of rapping the picture, good and hard, in the columns of the daily papers. As there are more readers of the daily papers than patrons to the moving picture show houses, it is through the eagerness of such men as are at the head of this, and other horses of its kind, or make all they can today, and hang out the to-let sign tomorrow, that the picture business, in time, will suffer, unless something is done to prevent them from advertising pictures which any manufacturer would refuse to produce and attach his name. This same string of pictures can be seen daily, without change, until some one gets torn with long use, then it is replaced with another of the same type. It is a wonder that some of the manufacturers have not taken steps to prevent the association of their film titles with these fake posters.

MAC ARTHUR.

THE DREAM (Imp).

The title and plot of this picture are not new. The theme is the familiar one of a husband who has at home a charming though unsophisticated young wife. It also contains that well known love-pirate, the female stenographer. The husband falls for the wiles of said stenographer, and they have a wine supper, while the simple wife waits at home beside the empty chair. The husband returns home and does a little house-wrecking by way of expressing his feelings, while the timid wife shrinks away to some other part of the flat. The erring husband falls into a stupor on the sofa, and proceeds to dream. He has the usual erring husband's dream that his wife is out repeating the same performance that he has just gone through himself.

The film shows the accidental emotions that always go with such a dream, and from these facts we gather that he is having a very horrible dream, as he sees his wife in company with a handsome stranger. The dreamer finally finds himself on the floor and wakes up with what appears to be the worst headache you ever saw in your life. But the headache is quickly cured by the appearance of the dream little wife, who has not been out sporting at all. The end is pleasant. He sees the error of his ways, and is duly forgiven, and from all appearances he will never do it again.

No doubt this film will have a hard time getting over to certain ladies in every audience who have gone through that same drama themselves several times, only to find that the case is chronic. But as we said before the principal charm of the picture is the young wife. Our feelings, however, were somewhat sentimental when we saw "our Mary" as a wife, arrayed in evening gown, and dining with swells. We felt the same misgivings that a father must feel when he observes his daughter as she stands upon the threshold of womanhood gazing into the new life to come. In other words, we have always considered "Mary" as a child. It has never occurred to us that she might grow up and be a woman some day; but, judging from her delineation of the matron, we have every reason to expect that her past experiences in portraying ingenue roles will be merely an epoch in her advancement and her final success as a leading woman.

Mr E. A. Dunn, writes: "I had a small cabinet organ installed in our house and one of my "wrinkles" is to play the melody on the organ with the right hand and the accompaniment on the piano with the other" (an interesting stunt. Brother Dunn, I suppose you have them standing at right angles so you can turn from one to the other without changing your seat, otherwise it would take a pretty long reach. But doesn't it cover up your drummer so that you cannot see each other I'd like to know just how you do it).—C. E. S.

He further says, "Let me quote an example about the use of the organ. We had 'Sunshine in Poverty Row' for Xmas week. The picture depicts poverty and sickness. I used sad music from the start until the time that it shows 'Post Master's home,' then I fill in with a light waltz using F minor all the way through—you can work out some beautiful stuff in minors—(some people can't, Brother D.), and fall back to sad when the poor people's home is shown. When Santa Claus appears I play very softly, with three stops, on the organ 'Adeste Fideles,' gradually pulling out one stop after the other and when the children of the rich and poor are shown with their joyful parents, I play, 'Holy, God, We Praise Thy Name,' the drummer playing chimes all through. We got a hand every performance."

And you deserved a hand every performance. If you work up your pictures generally as well as the one you give us, you are to be complimented. Let us hear from you again, your letters are interesting.

Mrs. Edith W. Tross, of Rochester, N. Y., writes: "Have read your interesting articles on music for the pictures and would be very glad if you could give me a list of some of the good characteristic music something on the style of 'Laces and Graces.' We run the Independant films and the Ambrosia; also most all the foreign makes of film, many of which are dramas, which that kind of music would go well with. I should be very glad of any other suggestions that you might see fit to make. If you have any sneaky music, I could use that also to good advantage."

Your list has been sent, though I must apologize for the delay. I have been trying to get the latest catalogs and some of the publishers are a bit slow in sending these to me. However, I think the list of numbers sent, to what you require thought not so complete as I would like to make it.

I append suggestions for the following pictures.

"HIS TRUST" (Biograph).

1—Any march containing Southern airs, till change.
2—Dixie, through three scenes.
3—Light neutral till battle scene, then,
4—Hurry till change.
5—Lively and light music till change, then,
6—Hurry through all battle scenes until interior is shown with mother and child.
7—At soldier's death, "The Vacant Chair," until after interior is shown again (till change).
8—Marsa's in the Cold Ground, till soldiers (guerrillas) enter
9—Hurry till they exit.
10—Plaintive till end of picture

"TAG DAY AT SILVER GULCH" (Lubin).

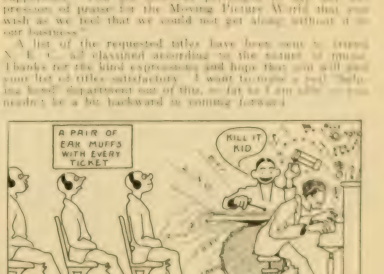
1—Waltz or other neutral at opening.
2—When woman sits at organ, any gospel hymn till she stops playing.
3—Lively music p and f till flight
4—Hurry till end of flight.
5—Lively (march) till finish.

Mr Charles Powell, of Rodica, Ind., writes: "Received yours of December 20th and must thank you for the interest you have taken in my communication in regard to the Pianola music for moving pictures. Also will thank you in advance for marked catalog of perforated music. If you are at any expense or trouble to get this catalog to me, with say, one hundred marked rolls, kindly present bill and I will remit at once. I want a few good 'hurries,' 'Indian War Dances,' 'Indian Scenes,' 'Plaintives.' Heavy marches 4-4 time and music for comic scenes and quite a bunch for lively comedy. A Dirge and the best possible 'chase' to accompany pictures of different nationality 'Sentimental Scenes,' Western, and all kinds of indefinable scenes. Also for Wake scenes and country pictures. Kindly send addresses of manufacturers of Pianola music and please send inclosed ten cents to pay for mailing."

I have complied with this request so far as possible, but as far as some kinds of music is concerned it is impossible as it is "mighty slim pickings." The storm scenes as "William Tell" and "Rising Hurricane" are good but you will have to separate them from the roll in some way. There are quite a number of good things connected in standard overture selections and symphonies if there was only some way of telling you how to find them and get them out. However, I asked it on a few. Let me know how they came out.

S. E. C., of Ogden, writes: "We have postponed writing you for some time, knowing that you are so busy answering the inquiries of other exhibitors who are probably not up on the music proposition as well as we are, but feeling that you can and will help us to obtain a greater degree of harmony in this line, we at last break down and write. We are interested to know everything worth while about this more than important feature of the game. We have taken the World ever since we have been in the business, some three years now, and have always been carefully students of its many good departments, watching with interest its splendid progress and our own while reading it. But coming down to the business of the present we would be greatly enlarged if you would send us a list of the names of music that you think, most essential for every moving picture house to possess for licensed films for we are nothing else. We have a very good leader of music for the pictures (now) and have nothing but sheet of music (music with the exception of a few instances where we have found). We are strong exponents of the music before the piano player rather than the take player. We use one orchestra once a week for musical programs before the show and during the intermission, but not for the pictures as we find that the proper music cannot be put on but by very few orchestras. We rely upon the piano and drums, but have obtained the best in their line that we possibly could. We will thank you in advance for your favor and will enclose stamps for reply. If there are any charges please send on your bill and we will remit promptly. Don't fail to send us the list of dramas and others of that nature, also music for 'hurries,' 'mysteries,' 'comedy' etc. Please don't use this letter for publication unless name and place of theater are suppressed. You are however privileged to use any expression of praise for the Moving Picture World that you wish as we feel that we could not get along without it as our business."

A list of the requested titles have been sent to [illegible] N. E. C. as classified according to the nature of music. I thanks for the kind expressions and hope that you will find your list of titles satisfactory. I want to [illegible] you [illegible] department one of this [illegible] and we [illegible] made; be a bit backward in coming forward.



CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

PROPER ILLUMINATION OF MOVING PICTURE AND OTHER THEATERS.

The lighting of theaters has long been a serious problem. Heretofore it has been almost impossible to illuminate same in a manner at all satisfactory to either owners or to the public. This because of the lack of a proper system, correct appliances and correct illuminating engineering.

The Moving Picture World, particularly, are aware of the agitation in New York City, and recent ordinances compelling the owners of theaters to illuminate their theaters at all times. The managers and owners are only too anxious to make their places as satisfactory as possible in every respect.

The old methods of illumination by direct lighting units of great brilliancy, with their harsh glare, has been entirely wrong in principle. Since the advent of the Tungsten lamp, giving three times the illumination with the same amount of current as the old carbon filament lamp, a system of indirect illumination has been perfected, that is one of the successes of the lighting field.

Only recently has this very desirable method of illumination been called to the attention of theater owners. It is particularly desirable for use in moving picture theaters. The brilliant source of light is covered from view in a one-piece corrugated silver-plated reflector, which is of correct scientific design. This reflector encased in a brass or composition bowl, containing the Tungsten lamp, throws the light at the correct angle to the ceiling, from whence it is diffused throughout the room in a soft even distribution.

The first impression upon entering a space illuminated by this eye-comfort system of indirect illumination—as it is called—is that the room is not very well illuminated, but a person can see to read with a distinctness that is surprising.

This method of illumination seems to have solved the problem that the theater owners have to contend with. If these fixtures are hung at the proper distance from the ceiling, the major part of the light rays strike the ceiling and reflect back into the auditorium without spreading on to the wall and screen. These fixtures containing the lighting units can be had at almost any price, from expensive artistic bowls of special design, containing many lamps, down to spun brass fixtures of pleasing design, but very inexpensive in price.

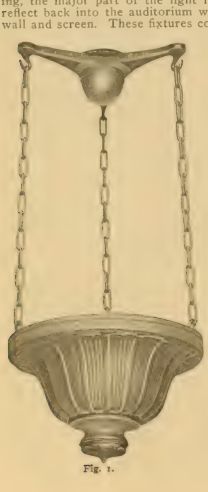


Fig. 1.

Fig. 2.

The illustration (Fig. 1) shows an artistic metal bowl fixture, that costs about $20.00.

Illustration Fig. 2 shows a lighting fixture also of brass containing the reflector that costs approximately $10.00.

These fixtures can be used in connection with either a 60-watt or a 100-watt Tungsten lamp as is required.

Figure 3 shows a large metal fixture to use a 250-watt Tungsten lamp. This fixture is oftentimes used for lobbies and auditoriums where one fixture of large power is preferable to several containing smaller wattage lamps.

More elaborate fixtures of special design, to harmonize with the architecture of any interior can be made. These take any metal finish and are reasonable in price in comparison with solid metal fixtures.

The beauty of this system of indirect illumination for moving picture theaters is that it interferes in no way with the pictures and does not have to be changed in any way while the pictures are being shown.

In the last installation, The Rome Moving Picture Theater, Rome, N. Y., but two of the inexpensive fixtures are used. It is stated in regard to this illumination "the place is light enough to read a newspaper with comfort in any part of the auditorium. The lights are not turned out during the running of the pictures and in no way detract from the brilliancy of the results on the screen. During the past week owners of moving picture shows in Utica, Syracuse and Rochester have visited Rome to look over this installation."

The Plaza Theater, of Chicago, shows the effect of good lighting on the success of a theater. This amusement house is less than one year old. This building was erected as nearly fire proof as possible, conforming to the strict requirements of the city's building ordinances relating to theaters. However, it was lacking in several features to make it a cosy, popular house. After several changes in the management it was made evident that extensive changes were necessary to improve the house, and particularly the lighting. Since the remodeling of the theater it has enjoyed much greater patronage, credit for a large part of which is evidently due to improved lighting. In rearranging the lighting of this auditorium it was felt that in this Eye-Comfort system of Indirect Illumination there were favorable features that made it particularly suitable for theater lighting.

The indirect lighting system was patented in 1909, by the inventors, Mr. A. D. Curtis and Mr. A. J. Morgan, of the X-Ray Reflector Co., of Chicago, of which Mr. Curtis is president.

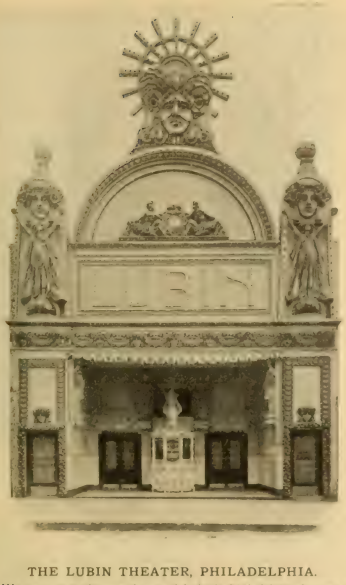
In view of the fact that their system is particularly adapted to theatrical houses, they have installed a special theatrical department at 227 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, where theater owners and managers may obtain, free of charge to them, any engineering reports, advice or recommendations which they may desire.

We understand that Mr. John J. Ryan, of the Syndicate Theater Company has ordered indirect lighting features for his new St. Louis Theater, "The Colonial."

REDUCTION IN NEW ENGLAND FIRE INSURANCE RATE.

At the recent annual meeting of the New England Insurance Exchange, the executive committee's report reviews the improvements effected during the year, as follows:

"The rules governing moving picture machine installations were amended, reducing the charge for an approved equipment from twenty-five to ten cents, and also providing for a permit at a charge of ten cents per annum, allowing the installation of a moving picture machine for not over thirty nights in any one policy year, when such nights were not consecutive.



THE LUBIN THEATER, PHILADELPHIA.

We present a picture of one of Lubin's Philadelphia houses as an example of the ornate style of architecture. There are a number of these houses located in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Cincinnati, and the originality of their design and imposing decoration make them noticeable by day, while the multitude and arrangement of the electric lights attract the pedestrian at night. These houses are all the work of one architect, Mr. Franz C. Koenig, 4912 Parkside Avenue, Philadelphia, and his experience and conscientious work has been manifested in the continued satisfaction he has given to the Lubin interests. Mr. Koenig also designs smaller theaters. He says: "The smallest place needs just as much attention as the larger one; while the larger houses impress the public by its proportions, so much the smaller one be laid out in such a way that it will impress its patrons with the proper dimensions and at the same time give room. Experience is the surest guide to success. There are hundreds of little details which are just as important as the construction. A stage, seats and some decorations alone will not make 'a modern photoplay house.' The public wants the best, and every effort should be made to furnish them with a house that will be a lasting and profitable enterprise."

Lawmakers Attack Sunday Shows.—Representative Hamilton, of Texas, has offered a bill for passage in the lower house of the Texas legislature providing, among other things, a fine not to exceed $200 for operating a moving picture show on Sunday and doubled penalties for succeeding offenses.

Moving pictures will be a feature of the pure food exhibit of the manufacturers of Oklahoma at Oklahoma City, February 5-28.

The Savoy Theater Company of Terre Haute, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $80,000. The incorporators are S. M. Young, A. H. Joab, and Edward Hampton.

THE NEW "PARK THEATER," BROOKLYN.

One of the most recent additions to the moving picture houses in Brooklyn is the "Park Theater" on Fifth Avenue, at the corner of Fifteenth Street. A large hall on the second floor has been converted into a most beautiful theater, being decorated and equipped in the latest and most approved artistic style.

At the entrance a most elaborate ticket booth is the only evidence of the presence of this new theater, this booth now used, in itself at once, an attraction and an advertisement, on account of its bright and pleasing appearance. An unusually broad staircase with special risers and hanging electric bulbs make a superior and effective approach to the upper hall, on the walls of this hallway like the seats of books and a hat-rolled representative season, and made by the artistic nature of the whole. Unlicensed attendants and courteous in their reception of patrons, the metal decorations of the interior are also elaborate set in good taste, consisting of imitation tapestry with gold and gold trimmings. The electric lights are shaded with rose colored globes, so that the general effect of the interior is most pleasing. The proprietor, Mr. Germain, has spared no expense in his desire to make this one of the most complete and attractive moving picture homes in the section of Brooklyn. The ready response shown by the attendance at matinees shows that a genuine appreciation is accorded a determined desire to cater according to the highest principles. Mr. Germain personally censors and supervises both the films and music, so that nothing that can possibly offend the most fastidious is allowed, as a result entertainments select of a cinematographic order of the best class are given, and are meeting with the success such a refined place deserves.

ANSBACH'S MONTICELLO THEATER.

We reproduce herewith a cut from the plans of the Monticello Theater which opened in November in Jersey City, N. J. The Monticello takes its name from its location, being at the corner of Harrison and Monticello avenues. This theater fills a long felt want for a high grade playhouse in a portion of the city that has heretofore been devoid of anything approaching a large and thoroughly equipped theater. The location of this new house is in the very heart and center of the Bergen Section. There car lines pass the door, and it is accessible from many directions and distances.

The theater itself is a model of architectural theater construction. To begin with, it is probably the most beautiful theater building that was ever erected. There is not enough space in it to keep anyone warm if it were all heating at once. The color scheme is unusually attractive, with a touch of gold being discernible. Balconies, stairways, flooring, stage and all other structural details are done in cement.

The front of the theater, as will be seen from the accompanying cut, is nicely done in the cottage style and presents a very safe appearance with its tiling steps and pavement. Inside the theater it is very pretty decorated, the color scheme being a light green; the seats a darker green. Rich red carpets and hangings contribute to the quiet of the auditorium, as well as giving it a luxurious appearance.

Every employee from the chief electrician down to the youngest has wears a fine and expensive uniform of navy blue, trimmed with gold.

THE MONTICELLO THEATER

The Monticello Theater has a seating capacity of 1,100 and the performance is a two evening entertainment at 25 cents admission. The exhibition features are of the very best, being procured from the United Booking Offices, and the film service is Independent pictures, which are giving the best of satisfaction.

This establishment represents an investment of $50,000, and is owned by the Anshach Improvement Company, a stock company which was formed by Mr. Anshach after much persistence and hard work in convincing the stockholders that the location was in the Section of the Hill Section and that a theater there would improve their property on all sides.

As a manager Mr. Anshach has proved himself no less capable than as a promoter or as a financier. He has been connected with the amusement profession for thirty years. Prior to his entry into the moving picture field, Mr. Ansbach has been well known in Avenue work as a remarkable contriver and magician. Under the auspices of the late Major Pond, he has appeared before royalty in Europe and at private entertainments among the first families of New York's 400.

THE BARONESS BLANC TALKS ABOUT TALKING PICTURES.

For three years I have studied the art of talking to pictures, noting each detail and seeking to cultivate that particular vocal method combining flexibility and adaptability, which is essential, in order to make the figures on the screen absolutely true to life.

The Talking Picture Play, correctly portrayed, is the most realistic form of the drama in existence. When the Hero saves the Heroine who doesn't jump two or three feet into a net, while a super at fifty cents-a-night throws up a handful of sawdust to represent a splash. In the up-to-date moving picture drama the young man dives into real water, becomes thoroughly immersed, and the young woman is for the time being generally beneath the waves. Can you wonder then that the masses prefer to pay only five cents to see the actual reproduction of the real thing on the moving picture screen instead of parting with a quarter to witness the make-believe on the melodramatic stage?

Bear in mind that the utterances of the actor behind the screen must be limited to the lip movements of the figure on the sheet. If the "talker" should be too loquacious he or she is liable to be "left" a scene behind. For example, he may be repeating a marriage service, and delay too long, and find that the picture has jumped to "twenty years after."

One's articulation must be clear and incisive and the voice sufficiently flexible to get the light and shade effects, while it must be able to penetrate the sheet which contains the picture and conceals the speaker.

Two senses must be exercised simultaneously — the eye and the ear. You must watch your picture and listen at the same time to what the other characters are saying. There is no doubt that "talking to the pictures" and the working up of realistic effects will be developed to a much more considerable extent in the near future.

One idealist exists today in the Moving Picture business, Mr. Alfred West, of Portsmouth, England. He utilizes the service of a full orchestra, consisting of ten pieces, and in several cases has the music specially written for the picture. He employs a corps of skilled artists to talk his pictures as well as a lecturer to introduce them.

I would suggest that all popular and standard successes should be photographed from start to finish and preserved for future reference. Just fancy what an assistance it would be for the producer twenty years hence to be able to refer to a film, say of Mme X. He would see at the glance the business and situations after which he would call for the phonographic records, and he would hear it reproduced exactly as it sounded twenty years previously.

For the extra expense of a few hundred dollars he would be able to make an ample income and have the satisfaction of knowing that he obtains the highest price of admission in the world for a purely moving picture show. It seems such a pity that so many managers in this country cannot realize that a piano player and a trap-drummer are not sufficient to display a moving picture to the best advantage.

A word to the manufacturer. It is to your interest, gentlemen, to advocate the selection of competent interpreters for talking pictures. Today your supply is limited to those whose story can only be adequately expressed in dumb show.

How much more extensive would your repetoire be, had you the opportunity of producing pictures which would mainly be talked by competent performers?

I saw Hamlet in Moving Pictures the other day. It was a five-cent audience, and few, if any, were familiar with the text of Shakespeare's play. It was the grave scene where Hamlet moralizes on the fate of "Poor Yorick."

THE BARONESS BLANC.

I overheard the following conversation between two earnest spectators.

She—"Say, what's the guy talking about?"

He—"Gee, can't you see he wants to buy a burial lot."

Another phase of the Talking Picture business is that it can be utilized as a stepping stone to dramatic instruction. Nowadays what is known as the "business" of a play is usually evolved from the brain of the stage manager or, to be more accurate his recollection of the play. In future years, to estimate its chances of success as a revival, a try-out in a Talking Picture Theater would determine whether or not to produce it in a regular theater should there be any in existence twenty years from today.

Again think of the ease with which the student for the stage would acquire the rudiments of dramatic art. Mr. Daniel Frohman, in a recent interview in the New York Herald, advocates the creation of a dramatic department at our universities, and he believes that acting should be taught there.

By adopting my suggestion each university would preserve film cases containing standard reproductions of the best plays enacted by the world's best actors.

After the film has been placed in the machine the dramatic professor would apportion the cast, the lights would be lowered, and a preliminary run would be made in order that the members of the class might become familiar with the appearances of their respective characters. Presuming that each student was letter-perfect, the next item would be talking to the pictures, the speed of which would be regulated in accordance with the nature of the play.

The "business" and situations of a play would be thus acquired in a very brief space of time, and the instructor would be saved much energy.

In course of time the ambition of every actor would be to attain to the giddy height of being sufficiently good to be photographed in animated photography, as a standard record, just as an aviator desires to fly higher than his rivals.

—ELIZABETH BLANC.

Next week we will add eight pages to the text section of this paper. This will give World subscribers twice as much reading matter as is given in any other paper in this field. The "Trouble Department" and other permanent features have made such inroads on our space that this extension is necessary and will be permanent.

Carbon Jaws.—An unsigned postal card dated New York City reads: "Will you kindly give me the following information? Is there any place in New York where I can get a pair of carbon jaws made? What is the best metal to have them made of for A. C.? About what would they cost? Is it a violation to thread the machine while the arc is burning, provided it is over on the stereo side? I received a card of rules the other day from the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and there seems to be nothing forbidding it."

You can have a pair of carbon jaws made at any good blacksmith shop. Malleable iron, or a piece of the leaf of a heavy truck spring are both good material. The cost will depend upon the blacksmith. I would suggest the purchase of a pair of jaws per offer of Mr. M. A. Mofarlin, page 41, January 7th issue. There is nothing, so far as I know, preventing the threading of the machine while the lamp is burning on the stereo side. Forbidding threading under those conditions would be nothing short of silly.

* * *

Canadian Projection Best.—Sault Ste. Maria, Mich., says: "Enclosed find money order for Handbook. There are three houses in the Soo and as a rule projection is very poor. In the Canadian Soo there are three more and conditions over there are much better, from every standpoint."

Sorry to hear so poor a report from the "City of Locks." What is the matter with the boys up there? Don't let those Canadians put it over you like that. Get busy! Uphold the honor of the stars and stripes, first, last, and all the time. Thus shall the patriots of the Soo, Marie (American side) moving picture theaters arise and call ye blessed!

* * *

Heavy Light Bills.—Mr. R. P. Borden, Tunkhannock, Pa., makes the following inquiry "Can we project as good pictures with calcium light as we get with electricity by using the gas-making outfit advertised in The World? My electric light bill is enormous, $1 flat per night of two hours. They refuse to put up meter, so I am looking for a substitute. We have built a moving picture house in Tunkhannock, capacity 300, and have a Powers No. 5 machine. Would the lamp house do for calcium light? From machine to curtain is 34 feet, the voltage of our system is 110, and we use 30 amperes. What would you advise us to do?"

No, Neighbor Borden, you cannot produce as good pictures with calcium light as with electricity. In fact, taking one film after another, you would have difficulty in projecting them at all, that is to say, in even a satisfactory manner. Given a reasonably fine arc and a screen not more than 8 feet wide, it is possible to produce a fairly good picture with calcium and the outfits advertised are O. K. Any picture larger than that, however will be very dim and the denser films will scarcely show at all. You do not say what other lights you operate besides your projection arc, I, therefore, cannot judge whether or no your light bill is excessive. I am afraid I cannot advise you to make any change at all, unless you wish to buy an electric light outfit. Looking back through the Trouble Department you will see some letters from users of small individual electric light plants who seem to be highly pleased with their performance. These plants are comparatively costly in the way of installation, but very cheap of operation thereafter, and the installation of such a plant is the only thing I could suggest. One user claims he gets his current, using such a plant, for about 1½ cents per kilowatt hour, which is very very cheap, indeed—about one third the price usually charged by light companies. You will find one such outfit advertised in the pages of this paper. You might write to them.

* * *

Wants to Form a Union. Waterbury, Conn., writes: "I wish to become a Union operator but there is no operators' Union here, though there is a local of the I. A. T. S. E. How many operators would we require to secure a charter and become a branch of the local I. A. T. S. E. and to whom should we apply for same?"

I cannot say from memory, but usually it requires from 9 to 12 men to secure a charter. I would suggest you communicate with the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union, Local No. 182, I. A. T. S. E., Room 7, No. 745 Washington Street, Boston, Mass. From them you can secure all the necessary data, which I have not at hand at the moment. Should you be unable to form a union through lack of material, you no doubt can secure membership in the Boston Local, provided, of course, you prove yourself worthy of their acceptance, as you no doubt will.

* * *

Direct Current Reducer.—Indiana "Some of town suppressed), writes: "Can you recommend to us some device to reduce our light bill. We have 220 volt direct current and are using two 110 volt rheostats in series. We get a good steady light. How much of the current is wasted? How many amperes have we at 220 volts with an Edison improved lamp? If we put our screen in the center of a room 24 feet wide and install the machine on the side with a 45 foot throw, can we get good results?"

No, Indiana, I am sorry to say, I know of no device for reducing direct current that I can recommend. There are some direct current savers on the market, but I have no personal knowledge of their efficiency and durability and, cannot, therefore, recommend them. When using 220 volts through rheostats, you waste the difference between 45 volts and 220 volts, or approximately, you use 45 volts and waste 175 which, if you are in metered service, is extraordinarily expensive. The make of lamp has nothing whatever to do with the number of amperes you use, that being entirely governed by the ohms resistance in your arc and rheostats. To figure the number of amperes you are using it would be necessary to know what pressure your rheostats are made to work on and the number of amperes they would each deliver on that pressure when connected singly, in series with an arc. Assuming your rheostats to be built to use 30 amperes, you may figure what they would deliver when connected in series on 220 volts as follows: Subtract 45 (resistance of the arc) from 110 and divide the result by 28. This gives the number of ohms resistance in the rheostat which, multiplied by 2 gives the total ohms offered by both when connected in series. Next subtract 45 from 220 and divide the result by the number of ohms in both rheostats and the final result will be the number of amperes you are now using, provided that if the rheostats have been in use for some considerable time the result will be somewhat too high due to the fact that after resistance coils have been used for a time their resistance becomes appreciably higher. Now, I do not think you will get satisfactory results with such a heavy side throw. One side of the picture will be denser (further from top to bottom) than the other and you will have to have a very good lens indeed to get fairly good definition ("focus") on both sides of the picture. You could reduce your light bills materially by the installation of a set with motor and rewolt dynamo, the motor of course, to run the dynamo. The installation would be pretty costly, however, and I would, with that kind of outfit, require as my sole written guarantee from the selling company as to its satisfactory regulation, efficiency and general performance, something you probably could not get.

* * *

Grand Ball.—Moving Picture Operators' Union No. 2 I. A. T. S. E. Hall, No. 8 [illegible] their annual ball and entertainment at the Germania Assembly Hall, Tuesday, December 29, 1908. The ball has not been held for a few years, but the committee in charge are to be congratulated on the success they have met with in securing the best hall in the city and in the arrangements they have made for the entertainment and dancing. It was announced by the committee that all moving picture men and vaudeville

Twenty-five Cycle Current.—[illegible] writes: We are now using direct current [illegible] A. C. current to change to D. C. current. What is the best and most economical way to do this? Would a motor generator be the best way? Would it be the way of a rotary converter? Which one of these would be the most economical to run? Would it be possible to run a 25 cycle motor on a 60 cycle current? Would it be possible to run a 60 cycle motor on a 25 cycle current? Would it be necessary to have a Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union in Brooklyn? We have a Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union in the city of Newark, N. J. [illegible] The following is Our [illegible] of its topic, which has been transmitted to Dundas: "There are about ten theatres in this city which are using 25-cycle current; some of them get very good results and others very poor. I find one can get a light bright enough for song slides by the use of one rheostat, but by using two in multiple giving a double amperage of 75, the result is fairly satisfactory. After considerable experiment and study I figured out a coil resistance which proves to be a producer of good light on 25-cycle current as well as that produced by D. C. Several of these coils are in use on 25 cycle current in Buffalo and they are all proving satisfactory. There are some ordinary transformers in use but they are not giving satisfaction. Twenty-five cycle is very hard to handle with rheostats or transformers for resistance."

I have given this for what it is worth. Evidently, from the letter at least a fair degree of projection light may be had through the use of 25-cycle current, a thing I had not believed possible. I am indeed, glad to learn this fact and would advise those contemplating the use of 25-cycle current to communicate with Mr. E. C. Winegar, 130 East Delevan avenue, Buffalo, N. Y., Secretary Operators' Union, Branch No. 4, I. A. T. S. E.

Measuring Condensers.—Sterling, Colo., inquires as to correctness of a recent statement made that the convex side of condenser should be placed towards the wall in measuring. This has been fully answered on pages 70 and 79, January 14th issue.

German Operator.—I have the application of a German operator, for whose ability I cannot personally vouch, but who writes a most excellent letter and offers references. This gentleman wishes a steady position outside of Greater New York. Address Mr. B. Weiss, 352 St. Paul's Avenue, Tompkinsville, Staten Island, N. Y. Mr. Weiss is German by birth and presumably speaks the language.

Film Weld.—From Cleveland, O., comes six bottles of a new film cement with request that I test same. It is the invention of a couple of operators belonging to Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local 160, I. A. T. S. E., Cleveland, O. The sending of six bottles is evidence of their own belief in their product. I shall place this cement with competent operators and exchanges in New York City for test, and will report concerning it in the near future.

Song Slides.—Chicago, Ill., writes: "Kindly inform me through the Trouble Department as to exact size of illustrated song slides and how they are made, etc. Also, what are the North American Song Slide Company's slides made of?"

Song slides are nothing more nor less than a photograph on a piece of glass 3¼ by 4 inches. The negative is usually made on a plate somewhat larger than this, say 4 by 5 inches, and either reduced or the best part of the original negative only is used. The printing from the negative is done on a glass positive, the latter being colored by hand with water-colors. That is all there is to it, except that, of course, the slides are made to fit as fast as possible, the words of a song, where they are to be used for Sharp purpose. I am not acquainted with the North American Song Slide Company's product, and I cannot, therefore, answer your question as to what they are made of.

South Africa.—Mr. H. C. Muller, Claremont, South Africa, writes: "The Trouble Department has been very valuable to me. Cape Town is absolutely flooded with Bioscope shows, the majority of which are on a very small scale, employing crank turners at a salary ranging from two to three pounds per week ($10 to $15). You can well imagine the class of shows put up by men who have only had two or three weeks' tuition as operators. The few real operators here seem to be afraid to exchange information. All their energies seem bent to the running down of other shows and bragging up of their own. I claim to be one of the pioneers out here and have tried several times to form an operators' union, but have failed. So far as I can see, the men seem to be afraid to be put to the test of an examination. I do not say this is the fact, but that is the way it looks. I believe no man should be allowed to join a union except after passing a satisfactory examination and proving himself to be a real operator. I am using a Motiograph machine and have occasionally been troubled with unsteady pictures. I have overcome this in the following way:

"I accomplish this by riveting a shoe of steel on each of the tension springs, being careful to counter-sink the rivet well and using soft rivets to prevent scratching the film."

We are glad to hear from you, Neighbor Muller, but sorry to note that projection is in such a sad state in that far-off city. I sincerely trust that there will be material improvement in the immediate future. The operator who is afraid to exchange ideas, or lets any opportunity slip to exchange ideas with his fellow operator is acting very, very foolish. My advice to operators is to exchange ideas whenever and wherever possible. Never let an opportunity slip to gain knowledge yourself, and never be afraid of telling the other fellow anything you may happen to know. On behalf of our readers I thank you for the tension spring idea, which personally I believe to be most excellent.

Lower Loop.—Mr. Calvert V. V. Turner, Hemet, Cal., orders a Handbook and inquires as to the advisability of trying to catch the lower loop while the machine is running. That is to say, when the lower loop pulls out, is it advisable to raise the idler and try to re-loop the machine while it is running. I have only one answer to that which is that the thing can be done, and it is the common practice with many operators to do it, but it is almost invariably at the expense of injuring the film. It is a practice by no means to be commended.

A Useful Suggestion.—Mr. A. L. Bliven, Audbon, Ia., contributes the following: "As regards Rock Island's query concerning the projection of a 35 foot picture at fifty feet, it would require a lens of about 1½ inch E. F. If such a lens can be had, I do not think it would work on all machines. I see you did not print my letter as regards projecting the photograph of the arc on the wall of the operating room through a small hole in the lamp house opposite the arc, using a white paper on the wall for a screen. I know it works and have used it for years. A handy tool for oiling the machine is made as follows: Take an embroidery needle and stick the point in a small round stick something like a pen holder; break off the top end of the eye. If made right it holds one drop of oil which can be placed anywhere you desire, a thing you cannot always do with an oil can. A little oil should be placed on a piece of glass or in a jeweler's oil cup and the broken eye is dipped in it."

Neighbor Bliven's idea of projecting the arc through a pin hole cut in the lamp house opposite the arc is entirely practical and works very well. Just why the idea was not published, I do not know; it probably got mislaid. The broken needle stunt looks exceedingly good to yours truly; in fact, it looks so good that I recommend it most earnestly to all operators for a trial, and I want them to report on it, if they will be so kind.

Ghosts.—Moosejaw, Sask., Canada, writes: "My trouble is as follows: I have a dark spot in the curtain. My throw is 82 feet and the picture 10x12. The features of the actors do not come out clearly. I have used different condensers from 4½ to 7½ and have tried them in different ways. I have an Edison machine."

You have about a 6½ inch E. F. projection lens, Moosejaw, and for this you should have two 7½ inch condensers. It may be that this blue spot in the curtain is due to the fact that your lamp house is too close to the machine head. Try setting it back farther. With two 7½ inch condensers and the face of your condensing lens somewhere between 12 and 18 inches from the aperture you should be able to eliminate dark spot. As to the lack of definition in the picture, that probably is the fault of the projection lens. I think if you will take the lens apart you will probably find somewhere on the inside or outside of the lens a finger print. Take the lens apart and wash it thoroughly with alcohol, polishing afterwards. Be sure, however, you get it together right again. If this does not remedy matters, have your film exchange send you another lens to try and that will show whether or not the trouble lies in the projection lens. If same fault shows up with the other lens, it is evident the trouble lies elsewhere. I believe, however, you will find the projection lens is the culprit.

Wire Size.—Maplewood, O., who is located in a small town, but running a very nice show, on Saturday nights only, speaks many kind words for this Department and the World in general and then asks: "I use a No. 10 wire from the generator to lamp, but gather from the Department it should be a No. 4 or No. 6. I have a Standard machine which I have been running since April, 1910, and have never blown a fuse or broken a condenser. I have had them tell me my pictures were better than those of theatre-it later towns. I see 25 ampere wire fuses. Do you think I could get a heavier wire with larger wire, say No. 4? I have a non-adjustable rheostat of 35 amperes capacity. Enclosed find check for $1.50 for Handbook."

The necessary size of wire is governed by the number of amperes flowing through it. No. 6 wire is advised because it has a capacity of 46 amperes. The amount of current you get is regulated by the resistance used. You say you have a 35 ampere rheostat, but the fact that you are using a 25 ampere fuse is evidence that your rheostat is not delivering 35 amperes of current. A No. 10 wire is only rated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters at 24 amperes. You are probably pulling somewhat more than this and, therefore, have your No. 10 wire overloaded. I would advise you to increase them to No. 6.

Electric Light Outfit.—Wisconsin (name of town suppressed) writes as follows: "Enclosed find $1.50 for Handbook. The Trouble Department is one of the best things ever started in a moving picture magazine. We would like some advice. We are contemplating putting out a road show in connection with our regular attractions. We desire to make a circuit of the smaller towns around here, playing them either every week or alternating weeks, as may seem best. We wish to run pictures mostly, and most of the towns have no electricity. What kind of an equipment would you recommend for the best results? We would like to know what kind of a machine we have to use calcium and carry a power plant. If the latter, how much does one weigh, and is it very bulky? Also, which equipment would be best to carry as to running expenses, etc.? It may be necessary to make some drives or use an auto. Could this be carried in one reasonably large machine?"

What I would advise, Wisconsin, would depend altogether on how you propose going into this thing. First, I shall tell you what I have had in mind for a long time and have on two or three occasions come very near doing, and then I shall name various makers of portable electric light outfits send you data concerning their machines. What I would do, or rather what I intended doing, is as follows: Get a 60-h.p. gasoline auto truck similar to the automobile moving vans used in cities, having same made with an extra large body entirely closed in. Such a truck should be capable of making at least 20 miles per hour on ordinary roads and when fully loaded climb any hill that is climbable. In the truck I would mount a general electric direct current dynamo capable of delivering ample current for incandescent lights and moving picture machine, say a total of not less than 5 k.w. Such an outfit as this would cost considerable money. I had figures on it at one time, but I forget just what the amount was. You could, however, carry practically everything needed in one truck. When you arrived at the show place you would, of course, switch your truck engine over to the dynamo, and you would have all kinds of power and points of current for projection and put out plenty of incandescent lights. This latter would be a novelty in itself in a town having no current. I would suggest, if this matter strikes you favorably, that you run down to Chicago and consult some builder of automobile trucks, since the main cost will be the auto and the dynamo. Such an outfit properly cared for ought to last for a long time, and, in my humble opinion, if rightly managed, be a money maker.

Gives it Up.—From Stockton, Cal., comes the following: "On page 1469, December 24th issue, I note your request for answer to Rock Island's question concerning projection of 35 foot picture at 60-foot throw. I have been in the moving picture business some long, in which time I learned, which I was to learn of the trade from an operator in three months' time. Since then I have picked up through experience, study, and reading many valuable points which could not have been acquired in 1000 for the simple reason that projection was in a comparatively crude stage, so far as knowledge and appliances were. Rock Island's query, however, is the first one of late years to make me sit up and take notice. For the benefit of the Know-it-alls, I admit that I have yet something to learn—the same as have they. The more I study Rock Island's problem the farther away it seems to get, but I submit the old formula or 4.3 inches I. F. for interpositive and approximately 4 feet of it inches I. F. for moving picture. The second is due to be right, but the question is are some of such exceedingly short focal length practical? Of this I am in doubt."

$$F = \frac{S \times I}{D + S} \quad \text{or} \quad \frac{60 \times 600}{420 + 8} = \frac{1800}{428} = 4.27,$$

Your figures, Stockton, are correct, and I guess you are not the only one who was afraid to take a shot at that particular proposition, since I received only two answers. I answered Rock Island's question some time ago, and I shall now go a little bit more into detail. A moving picture lens of such exceedingly short focal length would be practical, provided it be a lens of such size, in round numbers, as is commonly used and very carefully ground and would probably cost a good deal of money. I doubt if a lens of that focal length giving a sharp definition could be had for less than, say, $100 to $150 dollars (in this I am merely guessing; so far as I know such a lens has never been made. The curvature of the glass would be so great that the ordinary cheap lens would not do at all; or, at least, that is my view of the matter. Then, too, there enters the problem of a machine capable of accommodating such a lens. I believe in such an extreme case as this the Edengraph is the only machine which could be used, the lens of that machine being hung clear of everything, the same as in the case of a lens used in a stereopticon. A Motograph inside shutter machine could not accommodate such a lens on account of its striking the lens. The other machines, I believe, would not allow of sufficient spreading of the light ray, since the whole lens would be very close to the aperture. To use a lens of such short focal length for the projection of pictures on a moving picture film at 50-foot throw is impractical, not to say impossible. To sum the whole matter up, in my judgment, that kind of a projection would require a costly special lens and either a machine with the front plate removed and a special lens holder installed, or else an Edengraph. An ordinary shutter could not, I believe, be used at all, though in this latter I may possibly be mistaken.

Similar to the Above.—Mr. [illegible] Lloyd writing from Akron, Ohio, submits the following: "What is the largest motion picture that has been successfully projected, so far as your personal knowledge goes? Can I expect a picture to be 20 feet wide with proper light and lens? If not, why not?"

You cannot get a satisfactory picture 20 by 20 feet, Friend Lloyd, for the following reasons: In the first place the magnification would be so enormous that some of the sharpness would be lost. I believe also the picture would otherwise be very defective. That is to say, the necessary minute defects in the photograph itself would be so enormously magnified that they would spoil the general result. The reader from that it would be a physical impossibility to force sufficient light through a section of thin celluloid, 20 ft. by 20 ft. or so. The ordinary picture, say 12 feet wide, contains approximately 216 square feet, whereas a picture 20 by 20 would contain 400 square feet. With the heaviest amperage used for carbon positive projection, namely 100 amperes, you get a very brilliant picture 12 feet wide, and you could get a fairly bright picture 20 in width, the latter containing 100 square feet. Now, you observe, it is simply a question, as high as you would dare to go, since the heat of too concentrated light would be so intense that the metal in the gate itself would become overheated sufficiently to set the film on fire. Assuming this to be a fact, then we have a fairly bright picture when distributing the light from 100 amperes over 216 square feet. With 20 by 20 however, you would attempt to distribute your light over 1550 square feet, or almost 7½ times the amount of space contained in the former picture. You would, therefore, decrease your illumination per square foot by approximately 85%, and the resultant picture would be so very dim indeed. This observer, when in connection with the moving picture business, would I think, never attempt anything but little more than a fairly shadow. The 35mm. film is my individual opinion, understand. I have never seen anything of that kind used out. In fact I think it never had been tried out. The largest picture I have personally seen was 30 feet wide, and the illumination was poor. I have frequently heard of other larger ones, but so far as I can recall, I have never promptly run that statement down to my satisfaction from 3 to 10 feet. I would say that with the present use of film it might be within the range of possibilities to project a motion picture which be called reasonably fair as large as 20 feet, or possibly even go that wide in a very dark place, but the best line of light would, in my judgment, fall the picture. I would regard 12 feet as the extreme limit with the present use of film. And as many that kind of a picture at all well you would have to use, in my judgment, from 50 to 100 amperes of current. These remarks, however, will please give actual measurements when you write, Lloyd, or [illegible]

Gas Outfit.—Carson City, Nev., writes: "Will you kindly let me know what you know of the Carson gas outfit made in Chicago? About what candle power is it?"

I have had no personal experience with the Carson gas outfit, Carson City, but you will find any candle power to be easily obtained with the Welsbach. Why don't you look through the Trouble Department for the last three months or my recollection serves me right you will find several letters setting forth experience with various gas outfits. I would appreciate letters from operators who have handled gas extensively, setting forth their experi-

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Neve

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

MARKED INDIVIDUALITY i
You will find INDIV

RELEASE of WEDN

"THE M

A CYCLONIC

ORDER

THE WISE EXHIBITOR

and his name is legion, does not go gunning after his Exchange; he does not let said Exchange shoot him any old film—NO! he can't be bamboozled—he knows what he wants—ONE NESTOR A WEEK—and gets it because he asks for it, demands it, roughhouses for it, if need be, and because he well knows that

"IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD"

Any Exhibitor can be wise, if he will only take the trouble to look around and see for himself. Why wait? Begin right now with "THE MAN IN 23", an ultra-funny-film that will put you wise to the whys and wherefores every Exhibitor in the land should always demand and get—NESTOR FILMS.

Scene fr

For Bulletins Write To "NESTORLIST 1008" 147 Fourth Avenue, N. Y.

BOOK NOW!---"THE BRIDAL TRAIL"

A Dramatic Gem For Release Wednesday, Feb. 1st, 191

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME VII.

July-December, 1910

Edited by
J. P. CHALMERS
THOS. BEDDING, F.R.P.S.

PUBLISHED BY

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO.

125 East Twenty-third Street, New York

Index to Volume VII.—July to December, 1910

A

Abstinathy Essay on the Screen, The 86
About the Films 1124
Accessories for Moving Picture Work 1197
Across the Footlights 280
Actor—Likewise Actress, The 1099
Advertising Films 978
Advertising for the Exhibitor 520
Advertising the Show 674
Aiga Film Cement 941
Afternoon in New York and an Evening in Brooklyn Among the Picture Theatres 1343
Alliance Meeting at Cleveland 1061
Alliance President Satisfied with Results of His Mission, The 82
Alliance's Call to Arms, The 1022
Alien Operator 986
Alien Operators 889
Alien Operators in New York, The 460
Amateur Night. By H. F. Hoffman 861
American Film Manufacturing Co. 1162
American vs. English Films 187
Among the Philadelphia Shows 384
Among the Shows 526
Animal in the Picture, The 1258
Answer to Censorship Troubles. Louis Reeves Harrison 862
Animated Pictures, The. Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. 1023
Anti-Deliverianism and the Picture 187
Anti-F. M. P. A. Film 678
Antisemitic Show Business. By H. F. Hoffman 243
Anti-U. M. P. A. 733
Appeal to the Exhibitor and to the Public 1208
Arithmetic of the Independent Situation, The 134
Around New York 1402
"Art" of the Producer, The 1181
Art vs. Avarice. By Louis Reeves Harrison 622
Artilize, The 1153
As It Should Be 1333
Atlas Turkey 1299

B

Ball of the M. P. and P. M. Operators' Local No. 165, Cincinnati, Ohio 1166
Baltimore and the Picture. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. 209
Baltimore Exhibitors Have a Jollification 413
Barnstormer in the Photoplay, The. Louis Reeves Harrison. 1103
"Beacon Theater," Boston 1223
Becket 1161
Best Interests of the Business, The 1329
Between the Acts 1463
Bio Arc Screen, The 1107
Black List, A 397
Blunders or Successes of Cinematographs 1349
Booked as Correspondence Schools 1189
Boosting the Show Through the Pictures 1425
Broadway Has Its Way 597
Broadway's Latest Mistake 23
Brooklyn Priest Deals With Problems of Moving Pictures 983
Buffalo Bill Pictures 1

C

Call to Arms, The. By M. A. Neff 1099
Camels Too Frisky for Camera 89
Candy vs. Picture 1401
Canned Drama 1402
Carlton Motion Picture Laboratories 680
Cash vs. Credit 1329
Casual Visit to the Vitagraph Plant, A 624
Censorship 1014
Censorship 923
Censorship Needed for the Newspaper. By Mrs. Ida Jackson Chicago 100
Champion Film Makes Good 626
"Change Daily" Abuse. The. C. W. Lawford 897
Change Daily" Abuse 1137
Chapman Sues "Film Index" for Libel. A. J. 1100
Cheerful Idiot, A 1147
Chicago Again on Top 141
Chief Operators. By F. H. Richardson 802
Childish Innocence Corrupted 680
Childhood, The. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1013
Christmas on the Screen. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. 1409
Christmas Spirit 1401
Churches and the Picture, The 678
Cinematograph in Official Physes, The 619
Code Association Seeks to Regulate, Instead of Condemning, the Shows 149
Clement and Her Work, Mrs. 826
Clergyman Reviews the Fight Pictures 889
Color and the Picture 182
Comet and the Solar Screen, The 777
Comment on Moving Pictures. By Civil Authorities 12
Concerning Scenarios. By Reader 56
Consolidation of Rental Interests 567
Contract in Journalism, A 1344
Copyright and the Picture 903
Correct Rating of Cartoons 903
Correction 736
Costume Play, The 1003
Curtain, The 629

D

Daily Change, The 1066
"Daisies"—A Vitagraph Pastoral. By Louis Reeves Harrison 1
Deadly Parallel, The 1042
Death of N. H. Brown 1329
De Beaufort Count 1050
De Beaufort Count. Nobody's Fool Says Carl Laemmle 1352
Decorating the Picture Theater 1402
Delightful Evening 1233
Demonstration of Kinemacolor 291
Diluted Picture, The 1038
"Dime Novel" Picture, The 452
"Dixie Medley, A 1241
Dream of the Picture, The 1483
Dove of Peace 74
Drama of the People, The 865
Dramatograph Company 240
Drama and Tragic. By H. F. Hoffman 134
Dramatic Reader in the Moving Picture Field 985
Drugs and the Picture 72

E

East Side Standard 698
Edison, The Life and Inventions. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. 1224
Edison, His Life and Inventions. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. 1280
Editors Fade, The 200
Edison Pathéstain. By Louis Reeves Harrison 136
Edison Projecting Kinetoscope and Films at Boston Mechanics' 1
Edison Special Film Reel 358
Educators Endorse Moving Pictures, Noted 83
"Elevina" Carbons and Their Manufacture 1067
Electric Signs for Moving Picture Theaters 1111
Electric Motor Places Improved Projector Carbon on the Market 140
Elopment Pictures 453
Elusive Quality, The 398
Elusive Quality, The. By Jane Elliott Snow 869
Elixir of Youth 1360
End of the Anti-Immoral M. P. Association 918
Esthetic Tragedy, An 568
Example of Nerve, An 302
Example to Summit 457
Exhibitors' Opportunity, The 1043
Exhibitors' League of the State of Ohio. By President M. A. Neff 1112
Exhibitor and the Newspaper, The 1160
Exhibitors' Call to Arms, The 1172
Exhibitors' League Meeting at Columbus, Ohio 1481
Exhibitors' League, The 1544
Explaining the Picture 359
Exposition 686
Exploration and the Picture 916

F

Face and the Picture, The 1338
Fall Outlook, The 507
Farragut Hall 1364
Film Manufacturers to Rise to the Standard of Modern Exactitude 31
Fight Film War, The 200
Fight and Its Aftermath, The 340
Film Men Convene at Niagara Falls 239
Film Stopping Boxer 1181
Finance and the Film 1218
First Kinemacolor Dramatic Picture, The 1413
Five New York Exhibitors Fined 147
Flickers 1353
Flickers 881
Flickers 745
For the Uplift of the People 879
Forty-second Street's Opportunity 978
Frisco Greene Color Process, The 1413
From a Member of the Public 1184
From Australia 1300
Full Dress and Kinematograph in Germany 745

G

Gaumont Masterpiece 1411
General Examinations. By F. H. Richardson 88
Genie Transparency Co., The 309
Good Projection of New York Men. By F. H. Richardson 660
Go to Harlem for a Good Show. By F. H. Richardson 188
Gotch Zbyszko Wrestling Match Pictures 199
Gumdrops and Sunbeams 1329
Greater N. Y. Has a Model Picture House 627
Growth of the Yankee 1182

H

Hammack Invents Intermittent Device 200
Hearst and the Pictures 758
Herod and the New Born King. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1549
High Grade Motion Pictures 184
Higher Ideals 286
Higher Education Needed 1182
Hints on Operating the Pathe Professional Projector 758
How Not to Do It 638
Houses in Cincinnati and South 357

I

Illustrated Song, The 1161
Imitation or Imaginary Moving Pictures in Newspaper Illustration 188
Importance of the Scenario, The 400
Improvements in Projecting Machines 948
"Imp" Birthday Party, The 1048
Industry in General, The 1162
Independent Situation 1336
Indian and the Cowboy, The 1300
Independent Progress 1413
Independent Enterprise 39
Independents 866
Internationalism and the Picture 621
Is It to Be Forward or Retreat 1158

K

Kearton and His Work, Cherry 567
Kearton, Cherry 739
Kinemacolor Machine. By F. H. Richardson 146
Kinematography 746

Kinemacolor in New York 1165
Kinemacolor Demonstration in Boston. By Henry 1200
Kleine Economic Single Stereopticon 1252

L

Lantern Slides of the Fight 1165
Lasegard's Success 1165
Lauenstein Returns, Carl 1165
Lectures and the Picture, The 1165
Let "Excelsior" Be the Cue 1184
Liar and His Lies, A 15
Liar and More of His Lies, A 1165
Life on a Ranch 79
Living Picture Revealing Nature 1165
Libel on the Business, A 1165
"Light House" Films at Shows 1201
Lincoln's Clemency, Abraham 1165
Lord's Prayer, The 1165
Lord's Prayer, The 1165
Low Prices for Stories 1165
Lux Gruppens and the Religious Picture. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1165
"Lux" Comedies to the Fore 1165
Lyceum Film Co., The 1165
Lynch, W. Fay 1165

M

Marriage of Esther, By Rev. W. H. Jackson 149
Man Behind the Booking Sheet, The 1241
Man-About-Town on the Jeffries-Johnson Fight 1200
Managerial Stopgap 1165
Mazeppa 1165
Making of a Cinematograph, The 1165
McQuade Hard Pressed for Copy 1165
Medical Kinematography 1165
Melies Company Now in Texas, The 1241
Meeting the Independents at Cleveland. By John M. Bradley and H. F. Hoffmann 1229
Meeting of the Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, November 28, 1910 1241
Mico-Kinetoscope, The 1165
Micro-Cinematography 1165
Minister and the Moving Picture 1165
Mistakes of a Near Editor 1165
Mission of the Picture, The 15
Miserable Work. By F. H. Richardson 88
Moving Pictures in Railway Depots 1165
Moving Picture Inquiry in New York City 1165
Moving Picture Statistics in New Britain, Conn. By Rev. Herbert A. Jump 1241
Moving Picture Exhibition a Profession 1165
Moving Pictures for the Chicago Schools 1165
Moving Pictures to Replace Sermons 1165
Moving Picture Convention (Atlantic City Meeting) 1165
Moving Picture Plot, The. By Henry 1165
Moving Picture Convention, A. By Thomas Redding. F.R.P.S. Article I. 677
Moving Picture Convention, A. By Thomas Redding. F.R.P.S. Article II. 787
Moving Picture Convention, A. By Thomas Redding. F.R.P.S. Article III 789
Moving Pictures in Natural Colors. By Thomas Redding. Article I. 809
Moving Pictures in Natural Colors. By Thomas Redding. Article II 981
Moving Pictures in Natural Colors. By Thomas Redding. Article III 1149
Moving Picture Shows in Spain 1165
Moving Pictures as a Cure for Insanity 1165
Moving Pictures of Industrial Value Besides Pleasure Giving 1165
Moving Pictures in Siam 1165
Moving Picture Enterprise Developing Rapidly 1165
Moving Pictures as a Factor in Land Developments, The 999
Moving Picture Censorship 809
Moving Picture Economics. By Epes Winthrop Sargent 941
Moving Pictures in Japan 928
Moving Pictures and Its Enemies The. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 664
Moving Picture vs. the Reformers, The. By C. W. Lawford. 747
Moving Picture Entertainment for Milwaukee School 1165
Moving Picture in Schools to Teach 1165
Moving Pictures in Russia 1165
Moving Pictures of Brain 1165
Moving Pictures in Relation to the World The. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1165
Moving Pictures in Church 1165
Moving Picture Backgrounds. By H. F. Hoffman 787
Moving Pictures in the Classroom. By H. F. Hoffman 18
Moving Pictures in School 83
Motion Pictures as a Cause 1241
Motion Slides 1165
Motion Picture Manual, A. By Louis Reeves Harrison 1165
Motion Pictures Are a Power of Good 1165
Motion Pictures and the Drama in America. By Percy N. Vernon 1165
Mutograph Camera of America 1165
Monotone of the Program 1165
Motion Pictures from Europe Barred 1165
Morals of the Show, The 1165
Morals of the Picture Shows 1165
Money Saver for Moving Picture Theaters 1165
More Mutograph Merchants 1165
Morals of the Picture Maker, The 1165
Morals of the Picture 1165
Mutterings from the Man in the Street 1165
Musical Instrument, New 1165
Music and the Show, The 1165
Music for the Picture 1165
Music and the Picture 1165
Music in the Mission, The 1165

N

Name of the House, The 1165
New York and the Moving Picture Theater 1165
New Publicity, The 1165
New Name, Photoplay, The 1165
New Film Concern Floated 1165
New Sign 1165

New Legal Advice 1165
New Independent Motion Picture 1165
Newspaper Sensationalism 1165
New York Film Law to Be Tested in U. S. Supreme Court 1165
1910 Educational Films, The 1165
New Independents vs. Trust 1165
New Illinois Law Strikes 1165
Notice to Exhibitors 1165
Novel Entertainment, A 1165
Novel Idea, A 1165
Novel Advertising Dodge 1165
Nonsense, a Motion Picture by Snub Jones 1165
Nudes Does Not Equal Success 1165

O

On The Big Fight 1165
One Cannot Secure Proper Backgrounds in the 1165
Open Letter and Reply, An 1165
Open Letter to the Independents, An 1165
Operation Scores, The H. H. Buckwalter 1165
Our Lady of the Sunset. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1165
Outdoor Moving Pictures and Artificial Light 1165
Own Films 1165

P

Paying the Piper. By C. W. Lawford 1165
Paradoxical 1165
Patent American Company Making Gone 1165
Pathfilm, The 1165
Pathe Passes Pay Envelopes in Envelopes 1165
Pathe Plays Not in Fight 1165
Passing of the Sweet Girl, The 1165
Past, The Present and the Future, The 1165
Paper Head 1165
Patent Release No. 12,192, 1909 1165
Personal Equation, The 1165
Perfecting the Moving Picture, The 1165
Phonodeik 1165
Photoplay, The 1165
Photoplays 1165
Photography in Natural Colors. By Thomas Redding, F.R.P.S. 1165
Pictures in the Courts 1165
Picture Personalities—David Hassell 15
Picture Personalities—Miss Florence E. James 787
Picture Personalities—Mr. H. G. Philpott 612
Picture Personalities—Miss Mabel 535
Picture Personalities—Miss Mabel Trunnelle 1165
Picture Personalities—Miss Marion Cooke 1165
Picture Personalities—Miss Nellie Grant 789
Picture Personalities—Miss Mildred B. Eames 1241
Picture and the Children, The 15
Picture Men in Congress 1165
Picture on the Trail, The 1165
Picture of the Future, The 1165
Picture Men in Omaha, The 1165
Picture in the School, The 665
Picture Men in the City of Ease, The. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 664
Picture Week in Brooklyn 641
Picture on the Trail Again, The 1224
Picture Marking Time 1165
Picture in Washington, The 1184
Picture Economics 1165
Picture Small Towns 1165
Pictures in Educational Fields 810
Pictures to Teach the Mules 811
Pidgeon, Miss Mary 1165
Pipe Organ, The 38
Pictorialism and Its Future 1165
Play Mad 1165
Plays and Players Outlawed Life 1165
Plea for Mess Comedies, A 1165
Pleasant Surprise, A 1165
Poston Those 1165
Police at the Paper 1165
Poems in Pictures 1165
Posters, The 1165
Prank Played 1165
Police Drama of the Screen 1165
Polygraph, The 1165
Price Fixed Pictures Legal 1165
Poses and the Picture 1165
Prescription Blanks Unnecessary, A 1165
Pictures in Selling Plan 1165
Professional Pendulums or a New Problem in Lantern Rooms. By H. Hartman 1165
Private Playing 1165
Poses and the Picture, The 1165
Public Library Co., The 1165
Push Goes Around 1165

Q

Qualifying Phrase. II Influence of 15
Quiet and the Picture 1165

R

Rose Stock Co. to Use Films 1165
Rare Bidding 1165
Record Attack Cooper, The Battle to Death 1165
Reel Drama, The 1165
Reasons for Liberal Exhibitor. By Rev. W. H. Jackson 1165
Reasonable Regulations of the Moving Picture Play. By Rev. Herbert A. Jump 1165
Reasons for Some Founders of the Moving Picture, A 15
Reasonableness in Censorship. By W. H. Jackson 1165
Requirements of Projection Lenses. By Thomas Redding, F.R.P.S. 1165
Roosevelt, the Picture Man 1165

S

Sales Manager of the Under a Monitor 1165
San Francisco Operator Loses Family 1165
Sensation and Their Welfare 1165
Scenic Artist Established Wood Worked 1165
Scenario, The 1165
Scientific 1165

Salig In Florida 1350
Sentiment of the Picture. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. I 599
Sentiment of the Picture. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. II 882
Sentiment of the Picture. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. III 1041
Sentiment of the Picture. By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S. IV 1199
"Shadow the Shadows and Minutes Myths" 491
Shows Not Reached as Yet 1041
Signs of the Times 250
Soliciting 526
Solax Company 812
Somers Third Avenue Moving Picture Theatre 1463
Southern Exhibitors' Association 473
Square Deals and Rental Rebates 132
Steel Reels from Europe, Mr. 22
Spirit Photography and the Picture 664
Split Reels 1219
Special Licenses 1545
St. Paul and the Centurion. By Rev. H. F. Jackson 79
Story of Dramatic Works 1092
Stolmar Bankruptcy Case Dismissed 32
Surgery Taught by Moving Pictures 40
Summer and the Picture 130
Successful Film Men 349
Sunday Shows Sanctioned by Milwaukee Supreme Court 460

T

Talk on Cartoons and Their Manufacture 628
Talkfest, The 74
Teaching by Pictures 19
Test—Argument vs. Results, The 1183
Theater Manager Gets a Lesson 89
Theater "Flash" on Broadway, New York 397
There Is Everything in a Name 400
Theater-School 508
Those Who Know, Demand the Best 629
Those Titles. By F. H. Richardson 1451
Tip from South America, A 1350
To Cover Big Fight 89
Topical Picture, The 132
Tongue of Rumor, The 578
To Whom Does the Credit Belong 1038
Toledo Film Exchange 1052
Tournament Film 1105

U

Unconscious Heroism 516
Urban in New York, Charles 620
Usual Thing, The. Article I 733
Usual Thing, The. Article II 798
Usual Thing, The. Article III 857
Usual Thing, The. Article IV 1031
"Usual Thing" in England, The 1284

V

Vaudeville 1531
Vaudeville Put in Its Place 93
Vaudeville Music Uniforms 1166
Vaudeville Was Called Upon, Why. By C. W. Lawford 455
Variety and Originality. By W. S. Buckwalter 569
Vaudeville Worse than the Moving Picture Shows 1473
Vermont and the Moving Picture 1226
Vitagraph Girl Night, A. By F. H. Richardson 1021
Vitagraph Night with Maurice Costello as a Guest at the Fulton Auditorium, Brooklyn 1223
Vitagraph Picture of the Roosevelt Reception, The 22
Vitagraph Company Lose All Their Old Reels 149
Visit to Selig's, A 253
Voice from the Berkshires, Virginia Bartlett 1161
Vulgarity and Virtue 1342

W

Washington and the Picture 510
War in Peace Valley 893
Weeding Out the Adventurer 1542
Week in Chicago 147
Weird Spasm of Virtue, A. By F. H. Richardson 242
We Say It Yet: What Becomes of the Titles? 1233
What Is a Good Picture? 23
What I Know and Have Seen. By Charles N. Sims 76
Why Vaudeville Was Called Upon 528
What People Want. By H. F. Hoffman 77
Why I Favor the Moving Pictures. By Jane Elliott Snow 138
Why Vaudeville Was Called Upon 697
What Is a Nickelodeon? 742
Why Vaudeville Is Discarded 757
What the Mirror Screen Will Do for the Exhibitor 140
Why So Much Drama? 1182
Where It Stands and What It Stands For 1340
When Doctors Disagree 1350
Why Vaudeville Is Detrimental 1183
Why? F. H. Richardson 1365
What the Nickel Theater Does 925
What Becomes of the Titles 1122
"What Becomes of the Titles?" Almost Answered 1412
What It Cost to Produce 1544
With the Music Makers 1411
Wordless Play and the Silent Drama 342
"Word for the Hack." By Charles N. Sims 1483
Workingman's College, The 458
Word for the Foreign Manufacturer, A 1123
Wordless Play and the Silent Drama, The. By Thos. Bedding. 565
Writing on the Wall, The 14

Y

Yellow Journalism 881
Yet Another Knocker 1233

Z

Zenith Sign 1544
Zoology in Kinemacolor 1481

Index to Stories of the Films.

Licensed Releases.

A

Across Russian Poland—Gaumont ... 421
Actor's Fund Field Day—Vitagraph ... 886
Ace of Hearts, The—Gaumont ... 211
Adopted Daughter, The—Lubin ... 155
Advertising for a Wife—Pathe ... 295
Advertisement Answered—Essanay ... 155
Aeroplanes in Flight and Construction ... 885
Affair of an Egg, The—Biograph ... 591
After the Ball—Biograph ... 1546
All on Account of a Tiger—Essanay ... 886
Almighty Dollar, The—Lubin ... 155
Algerian Stud—Pathe ... 155
Almost a Hero—Edison ... 938
Alice's Adventures in Wonderland—Edison ... 938
Alpine Retreat—Urban Eclipse ... 1180
American Count, An—Lubin ... 1487
Amateur Night—Edison ... 1486
Amazon, The—Gaumont ... 1005
Angler's Dream—Gaumont ... 259
Anarchistic Grip, The—Lubin ... 479
Ancient Mariner—Gaumont ... 911
Another's Good—Pathe ... 1066
Ancient Castles of Austria—Gaumont ... 595
An Unfair Game—Vitagraph ... 425
An Early Way—Gaumont ... 646
An Indian's Gratitude—Pathe ... 822
An Heavenly Hour Redemption—Pathe ... 1527
An Old Story with a New Ending—Biograph ... 410
Animated Armchair—Pathe ... 1067
Angels of Luck—Biograph ... 587
Appeal of the Prairie, An—Pathe ... 591
Apache Gold—Lubin ... 39
Arabian Maid—Biograph ... 300
Art Lover's Strategy, The—Gaumont ... 259
Arms and the Woman—Edison ... 1429
Artisan, The—Urban Eclipse ... 645
Arizona Romance—Pathe ... 946
Archie's Archery—Lubin ... 944
Art and the Legacy—Lubin ... 1547
As the Bells Rang—Vitagraph ... 295
Attack on the Mill, The—Edison ... 419
Attack on Fort Ridgely, The—Kalem ... 1129
Attacked by Aeroplanes—Edison ... 89
Atonement, The—Pathe ... 1547
Auld Robin Grey—Vitagraph ... 1067
Awful Symphony—Pathe ... 259

B

Bad Man's Christmas Gift, The—Essanay ... 1546
Barnacle's Chaperone, The—Vitagraph ... 1067
Banquet, The—Essanay ... 1066
Banker's Daughter, The—Biograph ... 1004
Baggage Smashers, The—Lubin ... 884
Bachelor and the Baby—Vitagraph ... 824
Baseball, Betty's All-Star—Selig ... 589
Barrington's House Party, Mrs.—Vitagraph ... 479
Back to Nature—Vitagraph ... 481
Back to Life After Long Years—Lubin ... 423
Bargain Day's Ruby, Mrs.—Melies ... 311
Bad Man's Last Deed, The—Essanay ... 39
Bertie's Elopement—Selig ... 705
Bearded Bandit, The—Essanay ... 820
Behind a Mask—Urban Eclipse ... 1246
Betty is Still at Her Old Tricks—Pathe ... 822
Betty's Fireworks—Pathe ... 1488
Betty is Punished—Pathe ... 884
Betty as an Errand Girl—Pathe ... 365
Beautiful Margaret, The—Gaumont ... 259
Belgian Army, The—Pathe ... 591
Becket—Vitagraph ... 103
Between Love and Honor—Vitagraph ... 103
Big Hearted Marr—Pathe ... 103
Big Scoop, The—Edison ... 591
Billy's Sister—Melies ... 822
Birthday Cigars—Melies ... 1066
Bisated Hopes—Selig ... 1067
Black Heart—Pathe ... 1427
Bothers—Lubin ... 1066
Both Were Stung—Gaumont ... 1005
Borrowed Baby, The—Lubin ... 1067
Boy Scouts of America in Camp at Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y.—Edison ... 1125
Boarding School Romance, A—Vitagraph ... 104
Border Tale, A—Pathe ... 1308
Brave Hearts—Kalem ... 287
Brother Man—Vitagraph ... 880
Bruges, Belgium—Pathe ... 1067
Broken Doll, The—Biograph ... 1042
Broncho Billy's Redemption—Essanay ... 299
Broken Symphony, A—Vitagraph ... 204
Bridge's Indian Bride, The—Kalem ... 1180
Breaking Up Ice in Finland—Pathe ... 211
Bumptious as an Aviator—Edison ... 709
Bumptious Takes Up Automobiling—Edison ... 405
Bumptious as a Fireman—Edison ... 709
Bumptious Plays Hamlet—Edison ... 882
Buying a Mother-in-Law—Gaumont ... 477
Buying a Bear—Urban Eclipse ... 938
Bum and the Bomb, The—Vitagraph ... 1248

C

Cagliostro—Pathe ... 313
Catalan, the Minstrel—Pathe ... 1548
Cain and Abel—Gaumont ... 1547
Captain's Bride, The—Edison ... 1486
Caught by the Camera—Lubin ... 1246
Cast Into the Flames—Gaumont ... 1246
Calino Takes New Lodgings—Gaumont ... 589
Castaway's Return—Pathe ... 479
Canadian Mounties—Kalem ... 477
Call of the Blood, The—Kalem ... 583
Camel and Horse Racing in Egypt—Edison ... 211
Call to Arms, A—Essanay ... 39
Cassie in Bad—Pathe ... 39
Child's Impulse, A—Biograph ... 37
Cause of Hate, A—Lubin ... 583
China Clam Industry—Lubin ... 37
Cause That Failed, A—Edison ... 37
Commerce Issues Invitations ... 1067
Cause of Hate, A—Lubin ... 583
Champion of the Law—Lubin ... 1067
Cause That Failed, A—Edison ... 37
Cause, The—Vitagraph ... 1067
Cast's Stocking, A—Essanay ... 1067
Common Sailors, The—Pathe ... 1067
Cameo Kirby—Pathe ... 1427
Coast of Gold, The—Essanay ... 39
Clown Mistakes Mr. Star—Lubin ... 37
Count Has Designs, The—Lubin ... 1067
Cause Serves, A—Essanay ... 937
Clown and the Chorus Girl, The—Edison ... 1067
Count and the Courtship, The—Lubin ... 1067
Color Scheme, A—Biograph ... 1067
Complete Love, The—Biograph ... 1067
Country Fair, The—Selig ... 1067
Common Wonders of United States ... 1067
Cowboy's Vindication, A—Essanay ... 1067
Cowboy and the Bronco Queen ... 1067
Cowboy's Mother-in-Law, The—Essanay ... 1067
Cowboy's Vindication, A—Essanay ... 1067
Cowboy's Sentiment—Selig ... 1067
Cowboy's Sweetheart and Bronco Buster ... 1067
Complainer's Vacation, The—Lubin ... 1067
Compensation's Guest, The—Lubin ... 1067
Coal Strategy—Kalem ... 1067
Count and the Girl, The—Lubin ... 1067
College Chicken—Essanay ... 1067
Colonial Belle, A—Kalem ... 1067
Curate's Mess—Essanay ... 1067

D

Daughter of Israel, A—Kalem ... 1067
Daughter of the Mines, A—Edison ... 1067
Davy Jones' Locker—Thanhouser ... 1067
Daisies—Vitagraph ... 1067
Dancing Instructor, A—Essanay ... 1067
Desperate, The—Essanay ... 1067
Detective's Dilemma—Pathe ... 1067
Death of Admiral Coligny, The ... 1067
Dead Letter, The—Kalem ... 1067
Dastlet Argument's Triumph ... 1067
Divers's House, The—Gaumont ... 1067
Drive Mosher, A—Vitagraph ... 1067
Dog on Business, A—Essanay ... 1067
Dog's Instinct, A—Pathe ... 1067
Double Deception—Vitagraph ... 1067
Dough and the Cherub, Jack—Selig ... 1067
Dora Thorne—Selig ... 1067
Dream Pills, The—Lubin ... 1067
Drifts of Snow in Chamonix Valley ... 1067
Dramatic Highlights ... 1067
Duck Farm, The—Lubin ... 1067
Dumb Half-Breed's Defense, The—Essanay ... 1067
Dummy in Dogville, A ... 1067

E

Early Settlers, The—Selig ... 1067
Edelki's Adventure—Lubin ... 1067
Effendina's Garden—Essanay ... 1067
Elder Sinclair's Vow—Lubin ... 1067
Elder Alden's Indian Ward—Kalem ... 1067
Endgement, The—Selig ... 1067
Entanglement, The—Lubin ... 1067
Equal to the Emergency—Edison ... 1067
Encouragement, The—Essanay ... 1067
Escape of the Duke of Marlborough ... 1067
Examination Day at School—Edison ... 1067
Eaton's Love—Lubin ... 1067

F

False Love and True—Lubin ... 1067
False Friend, A—Lubin ... 1067
Fatness Detector, The—Lubin ... 1067
Fair Exchange, A—Essanay ... 1067
Fair Impostor, A—Lubin ... 1067
Faithful Lover, The—Pathe ... 1067
Fairy Tale and What Came of It ... 1067
Fatal Wedding, The—Vitagraph ... 1067
Fisher Scenes, The—Gaumont ... 1067
Fisher Folk, The—Edison ... 1067
Fiery Ordeal, A—Lubin ... 1067
Fiesta at Santa Barbara ... 1067
Fiery Ordeal, A—Lubin ... 1067
Fisher Folk, The—Edison

K

Kentucky Pioneer, A—Selig 764
Keg of Life, The—Edison 1125
Kids Will Be Kids—Pathe 255

L

Law and the Man, The—Vitagraph 1488
Law of the West, The—Selig 267
Lad from Old Ireland, The—Kalem 1246
Lassie's Birthday, The—Lubin 1486
Lady Raiders, The—Selig 1427
Lady and the Burglar, The—Edison 419
Land of the Moons, The—Vitagraph 528
Latest Fashion in Skirts, The—Pathe 257
Lazy Mutiny, Brave—Edison 257
Leap for Life, A—Kalem 645
Legend of Sant Isaac, The—Kalem 344
Legends, The—Biograph 1486
Legacy, The—Vitagraph 944
Life in Senegal, Africa—Gaumont 99
Life of a Life, A—Vitagraph 357
Life Saver Before and After the Revolution, The—Edison 1126
Little Mother, The—Kalem 645
Little Snowdrop—Pathe 1427
Little Matchseller's Christmas, The—Eclipse 1427
Little Rag—Selig 937
Little by Little Hands—Selig 591
Little Sorrowful Maiden, The—Kalem 1487
Little Shepherd, The—Essanay 1246
Little Station Agent, The—Edison 1186
Life of Moliere, The—Urban-Eclipse 1066
Life of a Soldier, The—Edison 1486
Life for Love, A—Pathe 822
Lights of Chemistry, Another—Pathe 1067
Light in the Window, The—Vitagraph 1548
Liz's Career—Lubin 884
Love Vs One Another—Pathe 101
Lord's Prayer, The—Gaumont 366
Lost in the Soudan—Selig 423
Love at First Sight—Essanay 1246
Love Laughs at Locksmiths—Pathe 1187
Love in Quarantine—Biograph 1186
Love and the Law—Edison 475
Love, Luck and Gasoline—Vitagraph 1308
Love's Sweet Song—Lubin 703
Love's Awakening—Essanay 1396
Lover's Will, The—Pathe 479
Lover's Ruse, The—Gaumont 884
Lucy at Boarding School—Pathe 589
Lunatic at Large, A—Vitagraph 765
Lucky Toothache, A—Biograph 882
Lured by a Phantom—Gaumont 1396

M

Masher, The—Biograph 822
Maid of Niagara, The—Pathe 1308
Max in a Dilemma—Pathe 1427
Max in the Alps—Pathe 1066
Max is Absent-Minded—Pathe 762
Max in a Dilemma—Pathe 703
Max Has Trouble With His Eyes—Pathe 1067
Max Has to Change—Pathe 423
Max Goes Skating—Pathe 1187
Max Fools the Police—Pathe 41
Mammy's Birthday Present—Kalem 589
Man Who Died, The—Lubin 535
Man Who Learned, The—Edison 591
Mad Dog Scare, A—Selig 260
Making Wooden Shoes—Gaumont 258
Mammoth Cave 209
Mazeppa—Selig 155
Mexican Domain—Gaumont 259
Memento of the Past—Pathe 255
Mexican Legend, A—Pathe 1127
Merry Wives of Windsor, The—Selig 1247
Men Hater's Club—Vitagraph 481
Micro-Cinematography: Recurrent Fever ..... Pathe 1427
Midnight Cupid, A—Biograph 97
Mirth and Sorrow—Pathe 822
Military Kite-Flying at Rheims—Urban-Eclipse 589
Millionaire and the Hunch Girl, The—Essanay 535
Mistaken Identity—Pathe 209
Mike the Housemaid—Lubin 1066
Miscegenation, A—Pathe 479
Moonlight Flitting, The—Urban Eclipse 155
More Than His Duty—Edison 882
Mountain Rat, A—Melies 1126
Mountain Maid, A—Edison 1546
Modern Prodigal, The—Biograph 1247
Mister Friend Puller 1066
Modern Knight Errant, A—Vitagraph 703
Modern Cinderella, A—Vitagraph 1248
Mohawk's Way, A—Biograph 645
More of Betty's Pranks—Pathe 261
Mollie and the Piano—Edison 363
Motoring Among the Cliffs and Gorges of France —Gaumont 99
Maggie's First Sweetheart—Biograph 37
Muggsy Becomes a Hero—Biograph 591
Musical Rands, The—Lubin 1427
Mulcahy's Head—Essanay 366
Buffalo Fight—Pathe 1066
Mystery of Lonely Gulch—Pathe 944
Mystery of the Torn Note, The—Lubin 1126

N

Nantes and Its Surroundings—Urban Eclipse 1247
Napoleon—Pathe 41
Nellie's Fate—Vitagraph 1067
New Style Inkwell—Pathe 1067
Nine of Diamonds, The—Vitagraph 1187
No Man's Land—Pathe 367
Not So Bad As It Seemed—Biograph 1246
No Place Like Home—Selig 1248

O

Oath of the Man, The—Biograph 700
Ole Swimming Hole, The—Selig 764
Old Lonesborough, The—Edison 1247
Old Love and the New—Edison 205
Old Glory—Vitagraph 41
Old Silver Mine in Peru—Edison 1546
Old Home, The—Gaumont 1487
Old Dad and Cub Melies 1427
Onesboro Vows—Edison 820
On, On, Max—Pathe 944
On the Mexican Border—Lubin 1067
On the Bandstone—Vitagraph 944
On the Riverside—Gaumont 99
On the Banks of the Zanzier Zone ..... Eclipse 1427
Other Johnson, The—Essanay 97
Other Man, The—Pathe 1187
Outwitted—Pathe 944
Out of the Night—Edison 1187
Overland Limited—Selig 1488
Overland Coach Robbery, The—Pathe 155
Over Mountain Passes—Edison 760

P

Pals—Melies 1307
Tale of the Range—Essanay 847
Path of Duty, The—Lubin 764
Papa's First Wedding—Essanay 884
Patriots of the Plains—Essanay 761
Paris, Viewed from the Eiffel Tower ..... Eclipse 477
Pal and the Girl—Essanay 37
Perversity of Fate, The—Kalem 421
Pete Has a Good Time—Pathe 263
Personal Matter, A—Edison 257
Peg Woffington—Edison 257
Pekin, the Walled City—Gaumont 207
Phoenix, The—Selig 1011
Phaedra—Pathe 1187
Phantom Rider, The—Gaumont 1428
Pharaoh, or Israel in Egypt—Gaumont 1166
Picturesque Waters of Italy—Gaumont 419
Philanthropic Majora—Gaumont 1063
Pigs is Pigs—Edison 1546
Please Take One—Pathe 155
Plain Dealer, A—Biograph 1306
Playing at Divorce—Vitagraph 1548
Plucky American Girl, A—Melies 703
Postal Substitute, A—Melies 207
Political Discussion, A—Pathe 155
Powerful Voice, A—Gaumont 645
Poems in Pictures—Gaumont 701
Popular Tune—Essanay 1307
Pony Express Rider, The—Gaumont 645
Preacher's Wife, The—Vitagraph 1428
Preacher, The Little—Melies 99
Pioneer and His Daughter—Gaumont 259
Purgative, The—Biograph 97
Pure Gold—Kalem 259

Q

Quarrel, The—Urban Eclipse 822
Queen of Hearts, The—Selig 1308

R

Rachel—Kalem 1307
Reasoned, or a Romance of War—Vitagraph 829
Gaumont 99
Rebellious Betty—Pathe 41
Reason at Molly Pitcher—Edison 1307
Reggie's Engagement—Lubin 1307
Recreation of an Heiress—Biograph 1486
Return of Ta Wa Wa, The—Melies 421
Return at Midnight, The—Urban Eclipse 1307
Reserved Shot, The—Gaumont 762
Remanded Until 764
Redman's Orphanage Festival, 1910 ..... Eclipse 822
Resourceful Robert—Melies 703
Refusing a Mansion—Gaumont 477
Red Girl and the Child, The—Pathe 423
Red Man's Way, A 41
Rhine from Cologne to Bengen, The—Pathe 101
Riding School in Belgium—Pathe 99
Rivington's Ride, Mrs—Edison 649
Riders of the Plains—Edison 1125
Rival Barons, The—Urban-Eclipse 1186
Right in Front of Father 1186
Roosevelt Reviewing the French Troops ..... Pathe 101
Rose of the Plains, The—Kalem 1246
Rosemary, For Remembrance—Lubin 207
Romance on the Lazy K—Lubin 1247
Romance of the Heather, The—Melies 255
Romance of a Necklace, The—Gaumont 884
Romance in the Rockies—Lubin 1066
Rough Rider, A—Melies 1065
Romany Wife, The—Kalem 477
Rose of Salem Town—Biograph 700
Rose Leaves—Vitagraph 481
Road to Richmond, The—Selig 591
Rough and Ready—Vitagraph 591
Robert, the Devil—Gaumont 645
Ruins of Mediaeval Fortifications in France— Gaumont 99
Runaway Motor Car, The—Lubin 1487
Running From a Fortune—Pathe 1547
Runaway Dog, A—Pathe 101
Russian Spy, The—Urban-Eclipse 99
Russian Wolf Hunt—Pathe 1187

S

Save Us From Our Friends—Pathe 41
Saved By the Flag—Vitagraph 41
Saved by Rain—Pathe 507
Saved by Divine Providence—Pathe 1427
Saved in the Nick of Time—Pathe 1307
Sage, the Outcast and the Widow, The—Vitagraph 885
Sanitarium, The—Selig 885
Salt on the Bird's Tail, The—Melies 703
Salutary Lesson, A—Biograph 1066
Sculptor's Ideal, The—Gaumont 259
Scenes in British India—Urban-Eclipse 1427
Scenes in the Celestial Empire—Urban-Eclipse 762
Schoolmaster of Marenosa, The—Selig 647
Scenes Sixteen—Biograph 205
Settled Out of Court—Selig 1067
Secret of the Cellar—Urban-Eclipse 1126
Seth's Temptation—Kalem 1427
Sepoy's Wife, The—Vitagraph 649
Sergeant, The—Selig 765
Sheriff, The—Lubin 41
Sharaff's Capture—Lubin 764
Shepherd and the Maid, The—Gaumont 595
Shrimps—Selig 367
Shorty at the Shoot—Lubin 421
Single Husband, The—Edison 1186
Shepherd's Bar, The—Pathe 823
Shadows and Sunshine—Lubin 1307
Shadow of the Past, A—Pathe 1187
Simple Mistake, A—Pathe 703
Silent Witness, The—Urban-Eclipse 421
Silver Medal's Sacrifice—Kalem 1066
Sick Baby—Pathe 762
Simple Charity—Biograph 1065
Signed Ring—Urban-Eclipse 1067
Silent Message—Essanay 1065
Sing Wah's Care, A—Selig 260
Slippery Jim—Pathe 822
Sorrows of the Unfaithful, The—Biograph 475
Song of the Wildwood Flute, The—Biograph 1246
Southern Tunes—Pathe 822
Song that Reached His Heart, The—Edison 942
Spanish Lovelly—Gaumont 1126
Spoony Sam—Lubin 1307
St. Paul and the Centurion—Urban Eclipse 99
Stars and Stripes, The—Edison 97
Stepdaughter, The—Lubin 259
Stepmother—Selig 1308
Stolen Claim, The—Edison 1306
Strongest Tie, The—Kalem 1065
Stronger Will, The—Lubin 535
Stranger, The—Kalem 1547
Stigma, The—Pathe 884
Street Preacher, The—Lubin 1186
Summer Idyl, The—Biograph 587
Summer Tragedy, A—Biograph 700
Summer Flirtation, A—Pathe 885
Sunset Gaumont 701
Sultan Father, The—Edison 942
Sunken Submarine, The—Gaumont 762
Sunshine in Poverty Row—Pathe 1488
Sapphos—Vitagraph 1308
Sunshine Sue—Biograph 1428
Swiss Guide, The—Edison 1065

T

Tangled Masquerade, A—Essanay 1486
Tale of the Sea, A—Selig 1428
Take the Mirror Told, The—Pathe 1307
Tale of a Hat, A—Vitagraph 1187
Tale of Two Coats, The—Edison 97
Tarascon on the Rhone—Gaumont 1307
Taming of Bill, The—Lubin 1428
Tactics of Cupid—Gaumont 701
Take-Me Out to the Ball Game—Essanay 479
Tenderfoot, The Gem of the Ranches—Gaumont 311
Tenderfoot Messenger, The—Kalem 1428
Telephone, The—Vitagraph 1127
Thief, The—Essanay 205
Three of Them, The—Vitagraph 647
Three Friends' Rite, The—Atlantic 481
Through the Enemy's Line—Gaumont 207
Through the Clouds—Edison 1306
The Vow, or Judah's Daughter—Gaumont 535
That Chink at Golden Gulch—Biograph 882
Times Are Out of Joint, The—Gaumont 1428
Thy Type Romance—Vitagraph 1428
Too Much Water—Gaumont 762
Toymaker's Wife, and the Devil—Edison 1308
Touch of a Child's Hand, The—Kalem 1307
Toni's Remembrance, The—Essanay 761
Tramps, The—Urban Eclipse 645
Tropical Java of the South Sea Islands, The—E. 99
True to His Trust—Kalem 421
Tragical Misunderstood—Urban-Eclipse 1065
Troubles of a Pilot, The—Pathe 421
Troublesome Baby, The—Biograph 1186
Trip to the Isle of Jersey—Pathe 703
Trip Through Scotland, A—Urban-Eclipse 1126
Trip Through Switzerland—Urban-Eclipse 1307
Trip Over the Rocky and Selkirk Mts—Edison 1186
Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy—Gaumont 1186
Troubles of a Pilot, The—Pathe 479
Trailed to the West—Essanay 153
Turning the Tables—Biograph 1306
Turn of the Mainee, The—Vitagraph 479
Two Highland Lads—Vitagraph 261
Twist, The—Pathe 257
Two Sisters, The—Pathe 647
Two Waifs and a Straw—Vitagraph 703
Two Boys in Blue—Selig 944
Two Little Waifs—Biograph 1004
Tyrant of Florence, The—Urban Eclipse 1486

U

Under the Old Apple Tree—Vitagraph 481
Under the Stars and Bars—Melies 1066
Under-Western Skies—Essanay 313
Unrequited Love—Gaumont 1065
Unselfish Love—Edison 642
Unconscious Heroism—Pathe 703
Unlimited Luck, The—Gaumont 99
Unknown Claim, The—Essanay 99
Unexpected Help—Biograph 1247
Unexpected Return—Edison 366
Uncle Tom's Cabin—Part I.—Vitagraph 313
Uncle Tom's Cabin—Part II.—Vitagraph 313
Uncle Tom's Cabin—Part III.—Vitagraph 313
Under Both Flags—Pathe 367
Up-to-Date Service—Essanay 263
Usurer, The—Biograph 413
U. S. Submarine "Salmon"—Edison 363

V

Vacation in Havana, A—Edison 151
Valet's Vindication, The—Edison 477
Vagaries of Love—Pathe 647
Vampire, The—Selig 1127

W

Way of Life, The—Kalem 1146
Way of the Transgressor is Hard, The—Gaumont 645
Waiter No. 5—Biograph 1004
Water Cure, The—Gaumont 421
Westerner's Way, A—Essanay 1125
Wedding Trip from Montreal Through Canada and Hong Kong—Edison 1064
Werther—Pathe 885
Who Is Boss?—Pathe 580
Who Owns the Ring?—Pathe 762
When We Were in Our Teens—Biograph 419
When Lovers Part—Kalem 1487
What a Blonder—Pathe 1368
What Great Learned—Melies 1067
What the Daisy Said—Biograph 151
White Man's Money, the Red Man's Curse—Ike 759
White Roses—Biograph 1480
White—Essanay 587
Willie—Selig 423
Wilful Peggy—Biograph 475
Wilson's Wife's Countenance—Vitagraph 43
Winning of Miss Laughet, The—Edison 1426
Winning Back His Love—Biograph 1516
Widow of Mill Creek Flat, The—Selig 1368
Wireless Romance, A—Edison 151
Wicked Baron and the Page, The—Urban Eclipse 152
Wife's Mamma—Lubin 261
Witch of Caribbee—Urban Eclipse 310
With Bridges Burned—Edison 262
Woman in the Case, The—Melies 261
Woman's Gift, A—Gaumont 1246
Woman's Vanity—Lubin 827
Woman's Love, A—Vitagraph 1368
Woman of Samaria, The—Pathe 1057
Wooing O't, The—Vitagraph 267
Won in the North—Melies 593
Wrong Box, The—Vitagraph 597

Y

Yaqui Girl, The—Pathe 1548
Yvonne's Sacrifice—Gaumont 535

Z

Zeb, Zeke and the Widow—Lubin 762

Independent Releases.

A

Abernathy Kids to the Rescue—Champion 109
Absent-Minded Actor—Powers 1230
Adventure of a Millionaire, Powers 1072
Absent-Minded Boston, The—Lubin 960
Acrobat's Son, The—Lux 485
All the World's a Stage—Imp 772
All's Fair in Love and War—Gaumont 880
Almost a Hero—Powers 372
Among the Roses—Imp 371
American and the Girl, The—Thanhouser 1059
Animated Seatcrow, The—Atlas 371
Animation Powders—Atlas 707
Ankle—Imp 771
Arm of the Law—Atlas 1452
Assisted Elopement—Thanhouser 560
Aspirations of Gerard and Pence, The—Imp 1045
Athletic Instructor—Defender 691
Attempted Elopement—Defender 662
Aunt Tabetha's Maples—Lux 545
Auntie in Reverse—Lux 880
Aunt Julia's Portrait—Lux 1500
Avenged—Thanhouser 859

B

Bachelor's Finish, A—Powers 1490
Back to the Mountains—Nestor 266
Badger's Nerve 967
Bear Ye One Another's Burdens—Lux 245
Beyond Endurance—Domino 1045
Bewitched—Lux 1042
Beechwood Ghost, The—Powers 772
Betrothed's Secret, The—Nestor 560
Behind the Scenes of the Cinematograph—Lubin 779
Between Duty and Honor—Lubin 997
Bill's Spreadeagle—Lux 861
Bill and the Missing Key—Lux 880
Bill as a Road—Lux 1143
Bill as a Lover—Lux 1030
Bill Plays Rough—Lux 1490
Bill as an Operator 1030
Bill Mason's Ride Captive 779
Big Joke—Amerson 1510
Birthday Present, The—Nestor 1030
Blogpie in Search of the Rank Hand—Lux 1191
Blazed Trail, The—Nestor 541
Blind Man's Eye, The—Essanay 697
Beaming Business—Thanhouser 187
Bobby's Dream, The—Lux 691
Bowling Craze—Atlas 1512
Boss of the Town Line, Essay—Nestor 999
Broker's Daughter, The—Nestor 344
Brothers—Atlas 1302
Burglar and the Baby, The—Powers 1069
Buried Man of Tuscarora, The—Lubin 1479
Bully's Waterloo, A—Atlas 449

C

Case of the Missing Bag, The—Nestor 1479
Cast The Brand Upon the Water—Atlas 1192
Caught by Counterfeiters—Atlas 1045
Cat came Back, The—Atlas 893
Carmencita, The—Edison 1059
Cattle Thief's Reward, The—Nestor 141
Cattle Rustler's Daughter—Rex 713
Cattleman's Feud, The—Champion 1067
Captured by Wireless—Amerson 779
Caprice of a Flirt, The—Amerson 1045
Cactus Kit—Rex 1045
Captain's Wife, The—Nestor 49
Call of the circus, The—Imp 49
Charles the Fifth—Lux 47
Chemist's Mistake—Lux 489
Christmas Letter—Nestor 1402
Child of Two Mothers, The—Powers 1402
Chief's Daughter—Atlas 743
Child's Inheritance, A—Lux 1256
Childhood of Jane Hampton, The—Rex 1440
City of Her Dreams, The—Thanhouser 1490
Clown and His Dog 51
Corralled in His Wigwam—Atlas 1030
Clumsy as the Wind, A—Lux 1122
Cricket Bats, A—Lux 1486
Cricket Bats—Lux 1030
Converted Bandit—Powers 108
Cricket—Lux 225
Cohen's Scholarship Difficulties 1070
Comber and the Bookmaker 485
Cohen's Luck—Atlas 779
Cowman's Baking Powder—Atlas 880
Contempt by the Bonnie—Thanhouser 752
Count of Monte Cristo, The—Lux 636
Cowboy's Devotion—Defender 691
Cowboy's Sacrifice—Champion 1067
Cowboy's Gratitude—Rex 317
Comedienne of the Footlights—Powers 919
Cowboy's Mistake—Rex 178
Custer's Revenge, The—Imp 1190
Consequences of a Flirt—Lux 541
Compromising Hans, The—Nestor 1454
Count of No Account, The—Atlas 429
Cohens Fallen Fortune 714
Cohen's Fire—Powers 707
Count of Monticello, The—Lux 952
Cowboy's Dream, The—Nestor 892
Cleveland Trade Tips—Nestor 49
Cupid's Revenge—Nestor 999
Cohen's Outing—Powers 1030
Cowboy's Sacrifice—Rex 892

D

Doves of the Bush Wood—Champion 1556
Dame Mac Roussel—Solax 1486
Day of Reckoning, A—Powers 599
Dainty Parisienne, A—Thanhouser 485
Dash for Arizona, A—Nestor 707
Dead in Indiana—Nestor 1256
Devil, The—Powers 892
Dorothy Bellfield Tells—Thanhouser 1152
Dawning Day, The—Imp 772
Dramatic Belle—Thanhouser 892
Desperate Rivalry, A—Nestor 1402
Deserted Bride Reunited, A—Lux 225
Discovers Ike—Powers 431
Dynamite Schemer, The—Nestor 1256
Defiant Captive, A—Imp 1256
Dixon—Imp 599
Dorothy Discovers the Fountain 1067
Dounce of the Range—Gaumont 502
Dispatch Bearer, The—Atlas 1030
Dots and Dashes—Thanhouser 772
Dr. Gardner's Conscience—Lubin 880

E

Education of Mary Jane, The—Defender 1192
Exiled Mother, The—Essanay 1192

F

Flower Lubin 47
Fighting Jones, The—Imp 47
Fatherless Mary Jane 1454
Fortune's Favor, A—Powers 1256
Fortune's Favor—Lubin 1067
Fighting Hallmarks, The—Thanhouser 1256
Faith Rises a Bath—Lux 1256
Fooling a Sucker—Lux 1402
Father of the Bride, The—Gaumont 1256
Fighting Hollow Horn, The—Kay 1067
Fighting Trapper, The—Rex 485
Fatal Vengeance, A—Nestor 1402
Fame of Fire, The—Essanay 1402
Fortune of Love, A—Lubin 1067
Fisherman's Luck, The—Atlas 1067
Fisherman's Glue, The—Amerson 1067
Fisherman's Revenge, The—Nestor 1067
Flag of His Country, The—Essanay 47
For the Sake of a Kiss—Nestor 49
For the Sake of Her Name 49
For the Child's Sake—Powers 49
For the Child's Sake—Imp 49
For a Woman's Honor—Atlas 49
For Love of Gold—Nestor 141
Fortune's Wheel—Rex 1115
Fighting Blood—Essanay 1256
Fisher's Star, A—Powers 1256
Fisher's Big Day—Lubin 1067

G

Going Lawyers Before You—Lux 479
Game of Hearts, A—Powers 1067
Game of Chance, A—Lubin 1067
Game of Hearts, A—Lux 1067
Garden of Eden, The—Lux 1067
Gentle Art of Making Love—Lux 49
Gentle Art of Making Love—Lux 49
Gentle Art of Making Love—Lux 49

Model's Redemption, The—Imp 1020
Molly at the Regiment' Ambassdr 713
Money Lender's Son, The—Lux 167
Mother—Thanhouser 599
Mother and Child—Imp 893
Mother and Daughter—Powers 47
Mother's Portrait—Lux 899
Monogramed Cigarette, The—Yankee 882
Moonshiner's Daughter, The—Nestor 597
Monkeyshines—Atlas 597
Monkey Showman of Dutch—Eclair 823
Music Teacher, The—Nestor 852
Musette's Caprice—Eclair 429
Must Be Without Encumbrance—Lux 167
Medal Competition, The—Eclair 1551
Mental Science—Powers 1672
Medicine Man, The—Powers 1370
Millionaire Milkman, The—Thanhouser 1450
Missing Bridegroom, The—Yankee 1551
Museum of Sacrelges, The—Eclair 1432

N

Nature's Nobleman—Atlas 1312
Necklace of the Dead, The—Nordisk 1491
Necessity is the Mother of Invention—Lux 1310
New Barber, The—Imp 693
New Magdalene, The—Powers 1230
Night Rustlers, The—Bison 541
Nothing But Money—American 1310
Not Guilty—Thanhouser 773
Nurse's Trunk, The—Eclair 161

O

Oh! What a Knight—Thanhouser 952
Chanel Troupe of Acrobats, The—Nordisk 1312
Old Miner's Dull, The—Yankee 1432
Old Heads and Young Hearts—Imp 109
Our Dear Uncle From America—Eclair 1370
On the Border—Powers 47
One Man's Confession—Centaur 107
One Touch of Nature—Solax 1232
Once Upon a Time—Imp 217
Only a Bunch of Flowers—Lux 373
Only a Hobo—Atlas 161
Order is to March—Eclair 836
Ordeal of Helen Gray, The—Powers 1192
Outcast's Salvation, The—Atlas 1492
Our Housemaid—Powers 218

P

Paul and Virginia—Thanhouser 1190
Pawnshop, The—Solax 1481
Pet that Speaks, The—Ambrosio 832
Pilgrim, The—Nestor 1432
Pirate's Dower, The—Yankee 109
Plucky Western Kid, A—Powers 1490
Playwright's Love, The—Bison 215
Poacher, The—Nordisk 1370
Poor Student, The—Lux 1370
Pocahontas—Thanhouser 892
Pressed Roses—Imp 711
Prospector's Treasure, The—Atlas 213
Prodigal Son, The—Nordisk 213
Prairie Postmistress, The—Bison 573
Prayer of a Miner's Child—Bison 890
Pretty Duirmaid, The—Cines 1010
Price of a Sacrifice, The—Eclair 1312
Pugilist's Child, The—Powers 655

Q

Quiet Pipe, A—Lux 47
Queen of the Nihilists—Yankee 1310
Queen of the Prairies—Columbia 1552

R

Ranchman and the Music—Champion 1671
Ranchman's Bride, The—Nestor 1491
Ranch Raiders, The—American 770
Ranchman's Simple Son, The—Bison 51
Resurrection of Lazarus, The—Eclair 1671
Religious Fetes at Tibet—Eclair 1672
Revolving Doors, The—Imp 1232
Regeneration, The—American 1370
Rehearsal, The—Powers 1370
Reunited—Imp 1500
Red Fern and the Kid—Bison 161
Rev. John Wright of Missouri—Nestor 1011
Real Cure—Atlas 263
Restoration, The—Thanhouser 349
Redman's Revolution, The—Bison 431
Right to Labor—Yankee 161
Right Girl, The—Imp 487
Rip Van Winkle—Thanhouser 1370
Ride to Death, The—Powers 1450
Round Trip, $5.98—Capitol 742
Romance of an Anvil—Champion 213
Romany Star—Nestor 890
Romance Redskins—American 1010
Rural Widehearts, The—Yankee 1550
Rosalie's Dowry—Lux 1490

S

Saboo Next Door—Imp 109
Sally's Beaus—Powers 109
Sackling of Rome, The—Eclair 541
Saved by Bisco—Nordisk 892
Saved by Her Dog—Eclair 956
Saved by a Violet—Atlas 1232
Saved from Himself—Bellefont 51
Scarecrow, The—Nordisk 1552
Schoolmate's Ride for Life—Defender 770
Sergeant's Daughter, The—Solax 1012
Selfish Man's Lesson, A—Lux 545
Senator's Double, The—Nestor 371
Sewing Girl, The—Powers 873
Shed in the Night—Capitol 1010
Sheriff and "Miss Jones," The—Powers 1072
Sheriff and the Detective, The—Champion 1372
Sheriff and His Son, The—Champion 453
Sheriff of Black Gulch, The—Bison 107
Shanghaied—Defender 431
She Would Be a Railroad Man—Nestor 49
She Survives Her Son-in-Law—Atlas 263
She Regained Strength and Got It—Lux 1012
She Stoops to Conquer—Thanhouser 429
Silversmith to King Louis XI., The—Eclair 213
Silver Plume Mine—Solax 892
Sinner's Sacrifice, A—Bison 107
Sister's Sacrifice, A—Imp 545
Simpson's Sister—Powers 832
Sleepy Jones—Powers 892
Snorer, The—Atlas 947
Soldier's Duty, The—Eclair 263
Sons of the Minister—Nordisk 109
Sons of the West—Nestor 319
Society Sinner, A—Film d'Art 487
Soldier's Sacrifice, A—Nestor 107
Solving the Band Theft—Yankee 950
Spirit of the West—Yankee 1070
Straw Ride, A—Atlas 1552
Stadlight's Devotion—American 1250
Street Arab of Paris, The—Eclair 770
Stage Coach Tom—Columbia 1232
Strayed from the Range—Nestor 713
Stolen by Indians—Champion 892
Storms of Life, The—Nordisk 832
Stolen Invention, The—Thanhouser 655
Story of the Spitfire, The—Champion 267
Summer Time—Imp 1611

T

Tale a Camera Told, The—Defender 893
Tale of a Hot Dog, The—Atlas 429
Tangled Lives—Thanhouser 655
Taming of Jane, The—Imp 431
Tattler, The—Powers 161
Taft for a Day—Motograph 49
Tennest and Sunshine—Thanhouser 47
Tell Tale Perfume, The—Powers 599
Terror of the Plains, A—Yankee 1492
Temptation of Sam Bottler, The—Film d'Art.. 597
That Typist Again—Lux 573
That Letter from Teddy—Defender 545
Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute—Revier 1450
Their Day of Thanks—Imp 1190
Thou Shalt Not Kill—Powers 1250
Thanksgiving Surprise, A—Thanhouser 1250
That Dog Gone Dog—Atlas 1010
Their Child—Thanhouser 992
Through the Ruins of Carthage—Eclair 770
Tim Writes a Poem—Lux 1370
Touching Mystery, A—Atlas 850
Touching Affair, A—American 1431
Tantalline as a Ballet Dancer—Eclair 711
Tantalline is My Date—Eclair 161
Tantaline in Love—Cines 1010
True Counter Heart, A—Bison 373
True Indian Brave, A—Bison 597
Trailing the Black Hand—Atlas 655
Tramp Reunited, The—Powers 1430
Truth Revealed, The—Lux 1131
Turning of the Worm—Atlas 1010
Two Maids—Imp 213
Two Pals, A—Nestor 267
Two Lucky Jims—American 1550
Two Scouts—Solax 1432
Two Daughters, The—Imp 598
Twixt Loyalty and Duty—Imp 1312
Tweedledum's Forest Romance—Ambrosio 641
Tweedledum's Duel—Ambrosio 836
Tweedledum as His First Bicycle—Ambrosio .. 890
Typist Again—Lux 731
Tyrant, The—Lux 1010

U

Uncle Tom's Cabin—Thanhouser 267
Unexpected Servants—Eclair 485
Unreasonable Jealousy—Imp 1490
Unexpected Honeymoon, The—Imp 1490
Unappreciated Daughter in Law—Yankee 1432
U. S. Revenue Detective, The—Yankee 265

V

Valley Falls—Nestor 1311
Value—Beyond Price—Thanhouser 1311
Vera, the Gypsy Girl—American 1491
Viking, The—Powers 267
Virgin of Babylon—Ambrosio 770
Vicar of Wakefield, The—Thanhouser 1550

W

War—Powers 772
Way of the West, The—Champion 1131
Wanted: A Babe—Powers 1310
Ward of Uncle Sam—Yankee 1432
Well Matched Marriage, A—Eclair 1550
Western Justice—Yankee 1372
Western Justice—Bison 597
Western Girl's Sacrifice, A—Champion 711
What Will It Be?—Lux 1372
When the World Sleeps—Powers 1310
Who Wins the Widow?—Powers 1310
What Is to Be, Will Be—Solax 1310
Why Dad Was Held Up—Nestor 451
Where You Go, I Go—Lux 1012
White Princess of the Tribe, The—Champion. 672
White Squaw, The—Yankee 655
Who Is She?—Nordisk 1010
Who Killed John Dall?—Powers 451
Who Killed John Dare?—Yankee 487
When Cupid Sleeps—Atlas 770
Where the Sun Sets—Nestor 1370
Wise Druggist—Imp 1550
Willie Visits a Moving Picture Show—Nordisk. 892
Winning a Husband—Powers 373
Wild Flower and the Rose, The—Thanhouser. 1250
Widow and Her Child, A—Solax 1150
Witchs' Spectacle, The—Lux 47
Wild Bill's Defeat—Defender 832
Within an Inch of His Life—Powers 832
Widow, The—Imp 487
Willie—Imp 1010
Wild Geese Chase, A—Champion 597
Woman's Better Nature, A—Bison 431
Women of the West—Yankee 770
Woman Hater, The—Powers 1310
Woman's Wit—Powers 892
Woman's Lawyer, A—Powers 1192
Woodman, The—Nestor 1130
Wooden Sword, A—Cines 1072
Wreck, The—Eclair 1238
Wrong Bag, The—Atlas 371
Wrong Trail, The—Bison 952

Y

Yankee Girl's Reward, The—Yankee 711
Yankeeanna—Imp 265
You Saved My Life—Imp 545
Young Deer's Return—Bison 850
Young Lord Stanley—Thanhouser 1012

FILMS

rpassed—Often Imitated"

of NESTOR'S many virtues.
LITY GALORE in the JANUARY 25th, 1911

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

N IN 23"

DY—980 FEET.

GET IT!!

Man in 23"

EXCHANGES BUYING NESTOR FILMS

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film & Proj. Co.	909 Arcade Building, Dayton, O.
Consolidated Amusement Co.	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Eagle Film Exchange	48 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Gaumont Co.	Montreal, Canada.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Greene Film Exch.	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch.	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1547 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Paramount Film Co.	498 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	913 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	167 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swaab Film Service	1408 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	501 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	310 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
United Film Co.	Troy, N. Y.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Exchange	207 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

NESTOR FILMS ARE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

OK NOW!---"THE TRANSGRESSOR" A Story of Superlative Pathos. For Release Wednesday, Feb. 8th, 1911 case. In general, however, Carson City, gas is only to be considered where electric light is unavailable. The "Model B" is the best gas making outfit of which I have personal knowledge and experience.

Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

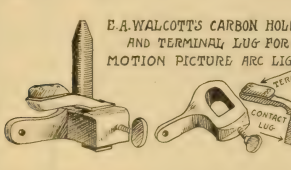
A Suggestion.—Mr. J. T. Max Hardin, Mo., writes: "I have a suggestion to make concerning the Edison machine, as follows: Take a rubber (old style) tension roller, such as was used as a sprocket idler, and trim same down to fit over the rollers on top of the gate, fastening the roller to the upper film guide, as shown in sketch. This does away with the necessity of changing upper film guides, which is made necessary from time to time by by reason of the ears wearing off at the top. It is a very easy matter to solder a tin holder on the guide and it saves a lot of bother. We are in a small town, but while using junk we give the best projection that can possibly be given with our equipment. Something like a month ago I noticed a red-hot roast on projection at the Majestic Theater, of Chicago. In December 24th issue appears a complimentary notice of one of the Keith & Proctor houses in New York City, though of my own personal knowledge, the projection at the Columbia Theater, Kansas City (a Keith & Proctor enterprise) is about as bad as the worst. They use a Pathe professional machine, projecting from the top of the balcony. Their picture is very much broader at the bottom than at the top and it is never in focus. On January 26, I was in that theater and the projection was, if such a thing is possible, worse than usual. The shutter was out of time and the picture jumped all over the curtain. They run about six-day independent films. This same description applies in every detail to the Globe Theater in Kansas City, in each of which houses three reels of film and three acts of vaudeville constitute the program; admission, 10 cents."

Thanks for your suggestion, Friend May. The sketch is not quite plain enough to understand, therefore did not use it, but no doubt users of Edison machines will see what you mean and adopt the scheme without further instructions.

I am printing your descriptions of the slip-shod performances in two of the Kansas City houses because it reads as though it were correct. One can usually tell by reading a letter whether it is right or wrong; that is to say, whether a man is describing things as he has seen them or not. If I am mistaken in this I shall probably get a horrible calling down from Kansas City. If, on the other hand, your statement is correct, it would seem that the Keith & Proctor house and the Globe Theater of Kansas City need considerable "fixing," and a good hard jolt may possibly do them good.

Another Carbon Holder.—Mr. F. L. Wolcott, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "As everybody seems to have a 'jaw,' I will contribute mine, which I have had in use for several months. While I am the inventor of this jaw, the boys are all welcome to use it, provided they remember me in their dreams. The terminal lug gives perfect contact and is very easy of manipulation.



Friend Wolcott, you have a fine jaw, and I am sure the boys will let you "jaw" them all you want to; but joking aside, given a little larger thumb screw, I should say that it is as good a looking proposition, on the face of it, as anything of the kind I have viewed to date, with the single exception that the terminal lug ought to be made considerably longer to remove the wire contact farther from the arc to prevent excessive oxidation of the wire, with consequent liability to burn off. On behalf of our readers, I thank you for submitting the excellent sketch and allowing the free use of the device.

A Matter of Salary.—Indiana (name of town suppressed), writes as follows: "Dear Sir: I am a most interested reader of the Moving Picture World and have been connected with the photoplay business for seven years past. This communication, however, is in regard to a friend of mine, an operator and young man, nineteen years of age. He produces excellent pictures, sharp and clear, with perfect light; keeps the machine in the best of condition, is always on time, and, in fact, comes as near possessing all the attributes of a first-class operator as one would be likely to find. The theater in which he is employed is conceited to be one of the best in the city. They have the mirror screen, chime bells, orchestra, and all up-to-date modern conveniences. The house pays utmost wages to all the musicians employed. Now, here is the trouble: My friend, the operator, looks much younger than his real age (so he was employed when his former manager consolidated with this company, and was receiving in his former place $12.50 per week for 2½ hours' work each evening. His former manager arranged with the new company to discharge their operator, who was receiving $18 per week, and employ my friend at the same amount, namely $12.50, to nine-hours' work per day. Of course, he kicked and asked for higher salary, but was told he was too young to get more—that he had a fine large operating room, the best machines, etc., etc. He likes the place and is pleased with everything except the wages. He has asked repeatedly for an increase, but to no avail. There is no union of operators here. He is licensed, has excellent recommendations from the city electrical inspector, but is 'easy.' He should tell them to go straight to ?#&%$") (???. But I have often heard him say that he would like to have your advice. The main question is this: Should an operator's wages be governed by his age or personal appearance, as it seems to be in this case? All other employees of the house receive excellent wages. Please withhold my name and the name of the city."

Well, Indiana, when I first read your letter I was of two minds. I really have much sympathy with a man, young or old, who will consent to work nine hours a day for $12.50. The thing is ridiculous. It is an outrage for an employer to ask such a thing and it is an outrage for an employee to consent to it. The item of age has absolutely nothing whatever to do with the matter, and the manager who takes advantage of the young looks of the man in question—well, I should just like to have the opportunity of talking to him face to face for about two minutes. I certainly would tell him his right name and address. If this young man is delivering the goods, he is entitled to full pay, whether he is 50 years old or 15. It is the work that counts. As a matter of fact, however, the man has nobody to blame but himself. Because he has a job he likes he is holding it down at half pay rather than quit. If all operators took that view it would be a very short time before all operators would be working at $12.50 per week. Do you realize that a man could make more than that in the penitentiary. You tell your friend who wishes my advice to march up to that manager and tell him that if he doesn't want to pay for the service he is delivering he can go plumb to the place you mentioned and quit. My advice to that young man is to not only do that, but do it quick. He certainly won't be losing much, and as long as he sticks around there at $12.50 per week he is depriving himself of any opportunity of advancement and he is also depriving any other man of the position at a decent salary and injuring his brother operators in general. He will hate to part to give up his job, but it has to be done, nevertheless. Twelve dollars and a half for nine hours per day! Huh! If that "manager" isn't careful he will die of enlargement of the heart—I don't think!

Tension Springs.—Washington, D. C., writes: "Is there a top or bottom to the Edison tension spring? That is to say, does it make any difference which end up you put them? Also please tell me if Nicholas Power is related to the Powers of the Powers Picture Play Company. The Trouble Department is certainly appreciated by the Washington operators."

Yes, Washington, you will find that there is a trifle of difference in the length from the screw hole of the Model B Edison tension spring to one end than to the screw hole to the other end, and if you get them in wrong the lower end will strike on the gate. I do not remember whether the long end goes up or down, but you can tell by trying them. No, Mr. Nicholas Power is not, so far as I know, in any way related to the people of the Powers Film Company. His name is Power—theirs Powers—two different breeds of cats. Glad the men in Washington like the Department, of course. By the way, I expect to be in Washington Easter morning, January 28, possibly accompanied by Mrs. Richardson, and remain until Sunday night. Am to run a set of films taken in the active circle before one of the big clubs of Washington, Saturday evening; would be glad to meet some of the men while there.

Grand Ball.—"Lawrence-Haverhill, Mass., Moving Picture Operators' Protective Union No. 6, I. A. T. S. E., of Lawrence and Haverhill, Mass., indulged in a grand ball Thursday evening, December 22, 1910. The ball was a huge success, and from 8 p.m. until the early hours of the morning it was the operator instead of the picture who was dancing. The hall was decorated with electric streamers, carrying Japanese lanterns and colored bulbs, from corner to corner. In the center was a huge emblem of the I. A. T. S. E., worked out in electric lights. Around the hall were suspended Japanese fans and parasols, all of which combined to produce a very pleasing effect indeed, the like of which had not been witnessed on those plains before. A dinner was run in connection with the streamers and during several of the popular numbers the lights were turned down and the chorus slide thrown on a screen, the dancers singing as they danced. This feature made a tremendous hit and was encored time after time. The Grand March was led by President Frank J. Dowd, followed by the other officials and members." The correspondent, after describing the ball continues: "If you ever take a trip to these parts, Friend Richardson, kindly let us know and we will give you the time of your life. Don't be bashful, for we will be there with the goods. We take the Moving Picture World, and the first thing looked for is the Trouble Department, in which we always find something interesting, and I might add, also, something to learn, for the motto of our local is 'Live, learn, and let live.'"

Well, I do not know when I shall get up in that neck of the woods, but if I ever do you will have the opportunity to make good. I should like very much indeed to meet you boys and I am certainly glad that your ball was successful. The program you sent is very neat, indeed. It hangs in my parlor at home.

Several Questions.—New York City propounds the following: "First, what is the best material to use on the electric motion screen? It now has two coats of whitewash. Second, what is the best material to use on machine gears? Where can I buy it and what is the cost? Third, why is it that when framing picture down the gears bind very much and when framed about up they do the same load and make a noise? I use a Powers No. 5 machine. Fourth, is there any remedy for a picture out of focus on the left side? My operating room is located in the right-hand corner. I know the picture is ordinarily out of focus in such case, but do you know if it can be focused clear by adjusting the lens in any way."

If I were in your place, I would go to Macey's (I say Macey's because I know they have it), and get bleached muslin bed sheeting a foot wide and stretch it over the asbestos curtain. You can coat the old curtain with English whiting, mix it the same as you would calcimine, adding a little white glue to make it stick. My own preference, however, would be the cloth. Second, I presume you mean what is the best lubricant for the gears. I prefer engine cylinder oil. It is a very heavy oil, which can be obtained of any dealer in lubricants, and a quarter's worth of it will last you a year or more. Vaseline also is a very fair lubricant for gears. Third, your gears bind for the reason either that your toggle joint is worn or the set collar holding same is loose. You can easily take the machine down to the Powers factory and have it fixed if you cannot overcome the difficulty yourself. Fourth, you might overcome the focus proposition to some extent by changing lenses, and thus again you might make it worse. I would get my exchange to let me have half a dozen lenses of the size you use and try them out. You might get one out of the bunch that would very nearly, if not quite, overcome the difficulty. A very good lens will stand considerable side throw and still give a sharp definition, but a poor lens will show out of focus as soon as the machine is set to one side. You will find an article dealing with that subject on page 999, October 29th issue. The article gives a remedy which you might try out and report results.

Picture Jumps.—Orville O. writes: "Enclosed find $1.50 for Handbook. I am a regular reader of the Trouble Department and find it very interesting and instructive. There is one thing which puzzles me considerably, namely: Why is it that we to by 12 picture (throw 12 feet) will sometimes stand as steady as a rock and again I will have a film that will jump all over the screen? Is it the fault of the machine or the film?"

If some time you perfectly steady and others jump, it would indicate the fault lies in the film, not in the machine. Keep your sprockets, particularly the intermittent sprocket, perfectly clean. Keep the dust motion out of your intermittent sprocket. Keep your sprocket idlers set away from the sprocket so that the grooves of the film and not in it that your tension springs are set just right, remembering that the office of the tension springs is to stop the film when the intermittent ceases to move. Hold it perfectly still over the aperture during the time of exposure, but tension must and above that to accomplish the result is excessive and excessive tension is very bad from any and every point of view. You will find ordinarily that brays the film will run most steadier than very light, thin stock.

Light Plant.—The following letter is unsigned and undated, nor has it any postmark, so that I do not know where it comes from. It reads: "Would like to have your opinion regarding a light plant. 4 h.p. engine and 60 volt, 30 ampere dynamo direct current. Can one get sufficient current from such an outfit to get good light at arc and about ten 16 cp. light bands? What is the best amperage at D.C. carbons for 8 mm.? There is a little trick I have used for burning my carbons. I take a piece of tin and bend it around the carbon and put it in a tin holder and fasten it at an angle just in front of the opening in the lamp house door. The carbon then gets centered in the ruby glass perfectly."

No, such an outfit as you describe would not be satisfactory for the projection of pictures. Your ten 16 c.p. lamps would require approximately 5 amperes, your motor, which would run you 25 amperes. The engine would be big enough, even though you run all of his outfit at once, but the engine is rated at 4 h.p. 24 hours power. But the margin would be too small, too small. You would have to pull at least 40 amperes to get anything like a good picture, as it were a very small one, and you would be pushing your dynamo right on to its capacity all the same the 40 and harming it, and about you over that 40 there would be a sudden drop of about four fifths of the capacity of the dynamo. I doubt if a small dynamo would stand such things even though it be a commercial machine. I would not advise the purchase of that outfit for projection. Neither would I say positively that you could not make it work. As to the piece of glass at present in the carbon holder of the glass for the mirror shown in the basket on Mr. H. Linton (page 79, January 4th issue), in which the reflection of the arc can be seen instead of their being thrown on the wall.

Keith & Proctor Projection.—The editor of this department is to become of quite a number of letters inquiring as to what is the secret of the much advertised "lighted house projection" in New York Keith & Proctor Theatres. The secret of this projection lies in several things all of which have been from time to time advertised in the Trouble Department and which, if intelligently followed out by our readers, would give practically the same effect now produced in the Keith & Proctor houses. My answer to those who have suffered regarding said secret these various things which, combined, make possible the projection of pictures in a lighted house is entitled to much credit, more from the fact that he induced the Keith & Proctor people to allow the demonstration of the plan than to do mere journalistic, since as I have said, everything that goes to make up the scheme has already been advertised in these pages. Strictly used in general, I might say the following things: A very powerful intensified reading of the projection lights, an especially prepared screen to make the most of the available projection light, a very good machine of projection lens and condensers, a machine that cuts as small as possible the percentage of light necessary you have it. But the net for a moment imagine that anybody and everybody can jump in and successfully adopt these means. The theories is simple and yet the successful application requires considerable and no small amount of ingenuity, notwithstanding the fact that the whole thing lies in the combination of the foregoing means and in nothing else.

CHRIS CLINTON.

Chris Clinton's Stage name, Chris Wilson), baritone and singer, communicate with E. A. Braddock, Jersey City, N. J. Immediate opportunity.

FLICKERS.

Moving pictures in private asylums. Why a penny show!

* * *

There are a great many people who are daily seen moving pictures outside of machines.

* * *

The Imperial Company deserves two thanks at the hands of exhibitors at large for its excellent work in training actors and acting them to get the scenes elsewhere.

* * *

What is the difference between a "flapper" and a "vamper"? Well, a vamper is a person that a scene, and a flapper is a scene from which comes the wood whimpers. Moreover, flapper is the plural.

* * *

Talking about fast cutting, how regarding running picture scenes in Los Angeles that are about to run into the streets of the moving picture actors. There are some scenes that around the low running, ready to be arrested by the police and have other scenes running.

* * *

Moving picture assistant at Hoboken, N. J., not the most careful person for entering the scene because the man office and the camera station. He is the first outdoors on record to get the picture first, and it quite some from the next office to the railroad.

LICENSED.

"When a Man Loves" (Biograph).—A bachelor falls in love with a pretty country girl, the daughter of an old friend, but later, when he discovers that she has a lover, he crushes his own sentiments and helps them to elope, carrying them away in his automobile. The father of the girl arrives in time to congratulate the newly wedded couple. The film is interesting because it depicts what actual people would do under similar circumstances.

"His Last Parade" (Lubin).—A pathetic story of a veteran who rose from a sick bed, joined in a parade, fell exhausted from the effort and died shortly afterward. The picture is intensely human in its appeal, and presents a phase of patriotism which appeals irresistibly to almost all who see it.

"A Mix in Masks" (Lubin).—A humorous story of a masquerade, representing the father and mother of a girl dressing exactly like she and her sweetheart and the complications that followed at the ball. When eventually the four got together and unmasked, the young people admitted the joke was on them.

"Ramona's Father" (Selig).—An Indian story of California, based upon a misunderstanding which arouses the jealousy of a Mexican. First, a young man is stabbed, after he recovers, turned back to life by an Indian girl, he is lassoed by the same jealous Mexican, but is rescued by the Indian girl, and she in turn is stabbed. Finally the young man and Indian girl are disposed of. Even though the setting of this picture is unusually attractive and the acting is all that could be desired, it is too murderous in its conception. It is scarcely necessary to have so much stabbing. Such unpleasant scenes should be suggested rather than actually produced. One might do, perhaps, but the jealousy and the murderous assaults are too pronounced, and should be materially toned down if it is desired to make this picture as attractive as its technical qualities warrant.

"The Crimson Scars" (Melies).—A story that grips the heart with its appeal to the human in the audience. A poor girl, with dreams of becoming a great actress, helps in saving a popular star from a fire. Befriended by the actress, she eventually becomes a great actress herself, but she carries all her life the crimson scars which were the result of her experience in saving the actress. The hopes of the child, ultimately realized and the life-long gratitude of the actress, are the moving sentiments in the picture and appeal very strongly to the audience.

"Fire! Fire! Fire!" (Melies).—A comedy, presenting a band of suffragettes calling upon the mayor of a city and demanding charge of a department. The firemen having struck, the fire department having struck, the fire department is turned over to the women. The first fire alarm and its disastrous results convince the women that charge of a city department is not all their fancy painted it, and they return to their homes both wetter and wiser.

"The Midnight Marauder" (Biograph).—A comedy, presenting the actions of a gentleman who waxes eloquent over his wonderful exploits, including the killing of a bear unarmed and single-handed. When a burglar enters his house it is a question of which can run the faster, and they fall from the window with the chesty gentleman on top. But his cup of enjoyment does not overflow, though the morning papers for some reason, insist upon giving credit where credit is due.

"Help Wanted" (Biograph).—Because his uncle cuts off his allowance, a young man threatens suicide in a letter. Engaged in other matters, the uncle forgets the threat, but remembering it suddenly, he tears furiously to his nephew's home, only to discover the hoax. Instead of the money, the young man gets the "help wanted" page of the morning paper.

"The Widow's Choice" (Lubin).—Two young men, very much in love with a widow, are sent away on business for a month. Fearing one will obtain some advantage, they sign an agreement, putting the sprightly widow in the care of their father, a widower. He must of necessity call upon her. She looks good to him and he does to her. The end of the matter is, that when the boys return, ready to renew the contest, their father introduces the erstwhile widow as their step-mother. This is a chic love comedy, full of bright acting and interesting situations.

"The Owner of the 'L. L.' Ranch" (Melies).—A Western comedy, detailing with some success, the adventures of a lord who contests a claim for a ranch with a woman, popular with all the cowboys and wins. Through some of those strange events in the way of fate, her favorite cowboy, and her abject slave, comes into possession of money and buys back the ranch. Before it is known, however, the irate cowboys have decided to make a shining example of the lord, and the new owner arrives at the ranch to find the lord fitted out with a hempen necktie, traveling the road that leads toward eternity. He is released and makes a getaway that is surprising in its celerity. Then the new owner and the former proprietor conclude a bargain which makes them joint proprietors for life. A lively and well-acted picture, telling a straightforward story.

"The Rival Dramatists" (Selig).—A burlesque on the famous Chanticler dramas of M. Rostand, which presents a novelty in the costuming and the acting. The story it tells is not as clear as it might be, but the comical appearance of the characters in a measure overcomes that objection. The closing scene, a pair of roosters fighting in a barnyard, is very funny.

"A Girl of the West" (Essanay).—A thrilling story of the way a girl saves her brother from arrest by donning a suit of his clothes, mounting his horse and leading the officer a merry chase. The officer is her lover and starts to make the arrest of the erring brother reluctantly and because his oath compels him to do it. The sheriff gets the girl with her father's consent, and the brother gives them assurance that he will reform.

"A Simple Rustic Tale" (Gaumont).—The graphic story of a quarrel between two neighboring families, which arose over a dispute at cards. The acting in it is admirable and the difficulties under which the lovers meet add immensely to the interest of the picture. By a ruse, which leaves the young man's father virtually alone, the mother succeeds in reuniting the severed families. The beauty of this picture lies in the clever reproduction of the principal characteristics of country people under such circumstances, supplemented by clear photography.

"The Battle at Redwood" (Pathe).—A Western drama by the American Company, graphically portraying the attack of the Indians upon some white settlers. The thrills include an onset of Indians, a burning wagon train and other features typically Western, and wild enough to suit almost anyone. Not many films of recent production have been any more exciting.

"Coward or Hero" (Vitagraph).—The story of a timid boy, who developed into a young man with sufficient courage to go down into a mine where there had been an explosion, to save his life-long friend. The closing scene shows him after a second explosion in the mine, with the water rising around him, a strong, but unpleasant subject. Not much of passion makes it interesting. But it tells a story in a straightforward way and because it depicts life with some fidelity to the facts, it holds the interest of the audience from beginning to end.

"His Trust" (Biograph).—Depicts a negro servant left by his master to care for his wife and child when he goes to war, and how he proved his faithfulness to the trust reposed in him. The master is killed, which causes the servant to redouble his watchfulness. Shortly afterward the Union soldiers come and plunder and burn the house. Into the flames rushes the servant and brings out the child, and then once more to get his master's sword. Taking the two he has protected with his own life he leads them to his own cabin and offers them all he has. The Biograph players have told a story graphically and with dramatic force. They have reproduced accurately conditions which actually existed in

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

Release Monday, January 23d.

"When a Man's Single"

A Comedy of a man who did not like married life—at the start. The finish is a scream.

Length approx. 980 feet.

Release Thursday, January 26th.

"Bertie's Bandit"

A Western Comedy. Made in Arizona. An American screech.

Length approx. 985 feet.

Release Monday, January 30th.

"The Genius"

A Comedy Drama. Replete with dramatic situations tempered with a few laughs. A good reel.

Length approx. 965 feet.

Release Thursday, February 2nd.

"The Mission in the Desert"

A Western Feature Drama. A sensation. A reel you will repeat and repeat. Made in Arizona.

Length approx. 985 feet.

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS—ALL

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST

A mechanically Perfect Machine for the projection of STEADY, FLICKERLESS Motion PICTURES
THE PAINTED ON THE WALL SORT only to be had with the MOTIOGRAPH
A MARVEL OF SIMPLICITY, combining Beauty of DESIGN and ACCESSIBILITY of every part and Screen. Count all outfitted.

THIS IS THE MACHINE THE MOTIOGRAPH

THAT STANDS COMPARISON, point for point, with every standard machine on the market today. The most expert [illegible] tion AND IS ALWAYS THE VICTOR. THE [illegible] MOTIOGRAPH [illegible]

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agent, 16 E. 23rd Street, New York City
EDW. H. KEMP, Agent, 811 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif.
J. F. BRONCKHORST, Agent, London, Paris and Berlin

thousands of instances all over the South while the war raged, and at its close. And they have done it so well that it holds the attention of the audience from beginning to end. It seems much like the old-time products of the Biograph company.

"Will It Ever Come to This?" (Lubin).—A comedy purporting to depict conditions in 1020, when women have usurped the places of men in all pursuits and apply much the same course of reasoning regarding men and boys that some men do now regarding women and girls. Whether it is funny or pathetic depends upon the point of view. At any rate, it is sufficiently interesting to keep an audience laughing throughout its length.

"Marguerite's Birthday" (Pathe).—A lively mix-up caused by a burglar conveying the articles he had taken in one flat into another where a woman supposes them to be birthday presents and the husband is jealous because he believes his wife has been receiving attention from another. The discovery of the burglar ends the controversy. But after all, why spoil so much good material in telling a story of so little consequence?

"Easy Coin" (Lubin).—He offered to shovel the snow from the sidewalk, but that was too hard, so by working on the sympathies of the neighbors he succeeds in getting help and they also take up a collection. When they discover him collecting money for the work done there is some rough house and the last seen of the gentleman he is rolling down a snow bank.

"Buddy, the Little Guardian" (Silig).—A story of human passion and suffering. It tells of the cruelties of a father that drive the mother away. Then the father mends his ways, and to help him the boy obtains work. He is hurt by an automobile and taken to a hospital where his mother is a nurse. The father, once more the victim of drink is hurt and taken to the same hospital. The boy's love follows the boy and is surprised to find in the nurse his old sweetheart, the boy's mother. The father dies from his injuries. The rest of the story can be guessed.

"His Mother's Son" (Essanay).—A story beginning in slavery days, and ending in a wheat-pit contest in which a young man is driven to the wall and likely to lose his fortune, and also the girl. Just at this juncture, when his money is gone, his old negro servant loans him a considerable sum and presumably because of the pleadings of the girl, her father goes in and buys, with the result that the young man comes out a winner. The film tells a story of real flesh-and-blood people, but offers nothing especially dramatic. The fact that the negro's $1,000 is used as a basis of the restored fortune will strike those who know the wheat pit, and its manipulations as closely akin to child's play. It wouldn't take long to swallow up $1,000 in wheat.

"The Sealed Letter" (Gaumont).—A girl deserts her old sweetheart and goes away with a rich yachtsman, leaving a letter for the unfortunate young man to read when out at sea. Broken-hearted, he goes through life, and years after, a vision of the girl still haunts him. Photography and acting, such as is required, are both good, but like others released by this firm of late, the story has no claim to strength or dramatic power. It is scarcely too much to say that whatever material was used in its production was wasted.

"Three Men and a Maid" (Vitagraph).—Two bachelors are notified by their cousin that he is sending his daughter to them to be cared for. Assuming she is a child, they supply all sorts of toys and are greatly chagrined when they discover she is a young woman. She falls in love with their secretary, which leads to his discharge. Ultimately, however, the bachelors relent, and the dove of peace coos melodiously again. This idea was used about a year ago by another manufacturer, the difference being the girl married the man who was to care for her, instead of the secretary.

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant for the Theatre

AROMA FOAM

Aroma Foam is manufactured expressly for use as a spray and is the most effective and agreeable method of purifying and disinfecting. Manufactured in four perfumes—Jonathan, Lavarian, Violet and Azurian. Send 40 cents in stamps for Sample Quart with Mouth Spray, or remit $2.00 for four quarts and you can then order in quantity the perfume which may be most pleasing to you. Write for price in quantity.

SANITARY SERVICE CORPORATION

80 Wall Street, New York City

INDEPENDENT.

"The Empty Shell" (Imp).—A dramatic story, detailing the uncertainty of circumstantial evidence as shown in the case of Jean, alone connected of murder because his revolver was the only one with an empty shell in a room where a man was murdered. Later, the real murderer, overcome with remorse, confesses and Jean's wife, after an arduous snow-shoe journey, arrives just in time to prevent the execution of the sentence. The real murderer was never found. He wandered away and was lost in the snow. The story is dramatic because it shows what serious mistakes can easily be made. Moreover, it tells the story clearly and graphically, holding the attention of the audience from the beginning to the close.

"For Better or Worse" (Revier).—Arrested for something which occurred in his younger days the man leaves his wife without an explanation and is taken away to prison. Later he escapes, and meets his own wife who conceals him while the officers search for him. Then together they escape across the border. It is not quite clear what the producer was attempting to convey in this film. It has few claims to interest. The artistic excellence is not a feature, and the story it tells is hardly sufficient to hold an audience spellbound. While there is nothing positively bad about it, one may say with equal truth that it possesses nothing positively good.

"The Borrowed Flat" (American).—A comedy, presenting what happened in a borrowed flat. It fulfills its purpose. It raises a laugh.

"The Tenderfoot's Roundup" (American).—A Western picture made just on the outskirts of Santa Fe, possessing in its scenery, at least, the true Western flavor. The story concerns a young married man in the East who is virtually given out by his mother-in-law and lands upon this ranch where the cowboys have fun with him while inducting him into the mysteries of the avocation, but later he returns the compliment. All goes well until he receives a telegram from home and the way he rushes for the limited and jumps from his horse to the rear platform while the train is moving is a hair raising scene. The telegram takes him through and he rushes into his house and bounds up-stairs, in all his Western regalia, just in time to meet the nurse with an infant in her arms. The little family is rounded up and promises to be happy ever afterwards.

"Re-united" (Imp).—The tale of a little girl, lost while a child, or carried away by the Gypsies. Fifteen years later her former playmate stops at a Gypsy encampment to get water for his automobile, sees the girl, falls in love with her and after they are married. After misfortunes they discover that they were former playmates and both families are rejoiced at the discovery of the daughter lost so many years ago. The interest in the picture is principally in the scenic effects. The story has no claim to strength. The acting and photography are quite up to the standard of the Imp pictures, consequently the audience enjoys it, though they are not called upon to consider any great tragedy.

"Monte Cristo" (Powers).—Dumas' familiar story graphically presented in motion pictures. The producer has followed the narrative as closely as the exigencies of the case permit. It is a long story and requires great condensation to get it on the films at all. But here are the principal scenes. Dantes' arrival, his meeting with Mercedes, Fernando's plot and the arrest of Dantes at his betrothal. The Chateau d'If, the Abbe Faria, Dantes' escape, and the other familiar scenes. They are all produced with fidelity to the original and with appreciation of the requirements of the narration. The producer has done his work well and has given the public an interesting picture of one of the most popular stories in the world.

"A Homeless Boy" (Great Northern).—A story of a boy whose mother dies and leaves him alone, forced through ill treatment to wander through the world homeless. Breaking into a house to obtain food he is startled to discover a picture that was familiar. It proves to be a picture of his old home with himself and mother at the door. The artist entering is at first disposed to be hard with him, but after hearing his story adopts him as his son.

A Classy Gathering.—Above is shown the first annual banquet of the Toronto Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local Union No. 173, I. A. T. S. E., held December 1, 1910, at 11 p. m. A few of the more prominent guests were Mr. Robert Newman, President of the Theatrical Stage Employees' Union, and Mr. John Cohen, Manager Toronto office of Kleine Optical Company. Look carefully at the above splendid photograph. The faces are those of bright, keen, intelligent men—men who are, if looks count for anything, a distinct credit to the profession. This photograph placed side by side with photographs of banquets held by the leaders of moving picturedom—film exchange men and manufacturers loses nothing by the comparison. The Union has elected the following officers to serve during 1911: President, Geo. Mehl; Vice-President, Clarence McMahon; Secretary, Walter D. Shank; Treasurer, Philip Wilson.

"The Jealously of Sosthenes Ramwtal" (Eclair).—That name is enough to make a man jealous if he had no other provocation. But here was the girl he loved persistently refusing to love him in return and lavishing her affections upon an army officer. When the officer visits Sosthenes' establishment out of curiosity, he is sold a dose of poison that would kill a horse. Then the unfortunate Sosthenes—[illegible] with remorse, so bad, indeed, that he becomes frightened at his own shadow and when summoned to Daisy's home to behold his work he almost gets heart disease. But nothing happened and in the exuberant joy he feels when he finds he hasn't poisoned anybody he easily falls in love with the English governess. Thus all ends well and everybody is satisfied.

"My Wife's Hat" (Eclair).—A snappy comedy showing the misadventures of a gentleman who goes out to buy his wife a hat. When he arrives with it the fusillade to which it has been subjected makes it resemble anything but a hat. But with a few deft touches it assumes the bewitching form of a fashionable creation and the mollified wife warmly congratulates him upon his success.

"The Melody" (Imp).—This film was reviewed in last week's issue of The Moving Picture World so well that nothing further is required. The film is all that the review made it appear. The part of the old man is admirably acted indeed. The film tells a simple story so clearly that it cannot be misunderstood. Thus the first requisite of a motion picture is fulfilled. Everything about it helps to tell the story and make it strong.

"The Folks Back Home" (Yankee).—A homely story, showing how a young man went to a city and ultimately forgot his sweetheart and his mother, until suddenly restored to his senses by a telegram informing him his mother is dying. It reaches him at a revel at a gilded cafe, but so forcibly does it restore his former good sense that he immediately starts home. His arrival helps restore to his mother to health. The attachment is renewed with the old sweetheart, and the ending is a happy one for everybody. The story is well told and some of the causes of forgetfulness are made plainly apparent. It might be said that the firm in producing this film has preached a sermon, but maybe that would be putting the case too strong. Nevertheless, the story is good, well told and will linger in the memory.

"The Battered Bridegrooms" (American).—A comedy which presents the misadventures of some unfortunates so graphically that the audience is kept in exceedingly good humor throughout.

"On Kentucky Soil" (Reliance).—A Union spy kills a Confederate soldier and is hidden from the searching party by the dead soldier's father. The body of the dead soldier is brought in and the father realizes that he is protecting his son's slayer. He is torn by conflicting impulses, but finally his desire for vengeance triumphs and he sets fire to the large basket in which the spy is hidden. Shortly the whole house is ablaze, the funeral pyre of the unfortunate spy. The successful representation of conflicting human emotions when the father is trying to decide what to do is one of the best of its kind ever put on the screen. The impression when he eventually sets the house on fire is horrifying, yet it is one of those scenes which possess a peculiar fascination. It would be difficult to conceive two separate acts any more dramatic than these. The interpretation by the actors leaves nothing to be desired.

"A Montana Love Story" (Powers).—Susan the boarding mistress is loveless until Tompkins appears. Then she runs to ribbons, neglecting her boarders for Tompkins. Unable to stand it any longer, they inform Tompkins he must either leave or be hung. He leaves. Then Susan refuses to cook any more until they bring him back. After an exciting chase he is captured and returned to the loving Susan. To get even, the escapes with Tompkins, leaving a note in which she says the ranchers can cook their own meals, anyhow.

"Love's Trials" (Powers).—A stern father objects but love laughs long and uproariously at the locks, and other things papa interposes. They elope and are married. Papa suffers a number of interesting and exciting episodes, at the end of which, the young people return married. The inevitable is accepted, and papa grants his blessing.

"Bertie's Brainstorm" (Thanhouser).—A love story, representing a fop trying to earn his living in competition for the hand of a girl. His amusing experiences add zest to the pictures. The girl improves the time and upsets his carefully-laid plans by marrying the other fellow.

SONG SLIDES

LIDE Non-Breakable Non-Inflammable LIDE

Colored Song and Announcement Slides

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

100 Sensational Air Stunt Slides of the International Aviation meet at SAN FRANCISCO, January, 1911, showing clearly the daring and success of aviator in the air. The moving is accompanied by sound, the same as at the exact performance. Invest a nominal amount and you can make more money than in any other line. Two complete entertainments for Lobby Attraction.

A set of twelve slides of the human song-bird of the Universe, TETRAZINI, singing to 60,000 people in the streets of San Francisco on Christmas Eve, 1910, and her Christmas Red Cross work, beautifully colored, $4.50 [illegible]

DUHEM & HARTER SLIDE CO.

650 Oak Street San Francisco, Cal.

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND

Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. [illegible] of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for the twelve [illegible] to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support one. Fifty machines [illegible] will prove a more [illegible] to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Persons [illegible] anywhere in the [illegible] dollars deposited in the machine every dollar will be your profit. If no sales, will make a good [illegible]

Write us for [illegible] territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY

56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

New England Notes.

Not long ago we noted in these columns that the Princess Theater, Wakefield, Mass., was making a good record for itself under the ownership and management of Mr Charles Hodgton. The house recently increased its seating capacity and is to abandon the use of vaudeville. Mr. Hodgton feels that he has built up a solid patronage under his policy of "your money's worth all the time," and that he can dispense with his acts. Plenty of the best illustrated songs, musical features, besides the films, will make up the new program.

The Scenic Theater, Hartford, Conn., which is owned and managed by H. C. Young, is now changing its films tri-weekly. Illustrated songs complete the program. The Scenic draws excellent patronage at all times, and is considered an excellent proposition.

Morewood Lake, which is adjacent to Pittsfield, Mass., was the scene of a boiler explosion at which much damage was done. The local moving picture managers showed their generosity by holding a benefit performance for those incapacitated by the explosion.

Mr. John L. Owens, who, in company with Mr. Charlie Cook, controls Sheedy's Theater, Brockton, is going to take a trip to Florida for the benefit of Mrs. Owen's health. The theater will be cared for by Mr. Cook in the meantime.

In the annual report of J. E. Downey, superintendent of buildings in Cambridge, Mass., the permits for building operations include the Cambridge Theater Building, with $100,000 as the figure of its estimated cost. Every indication points to pictures and vaudeville as the attractions that will be offered when the theater is completed.

The Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., which was opened to the public last month, has made a change of managers. Mr. Frank Davidson will succeed Mr. Burke. Davidson has had varied and expert experience in this line of business, and will no doubt make good in his new position.

The Music Hall, Pawtucket, R. I., which is managed by Mr. David Buffington, reports unusually brisk business with moving pictures and vaudeville. —HENRY.

BOSTON.

One of our local dailies recently printed a rather lengthy article regarding a local young man who had been arrested and sentenced to jail because of his leanings toward a bandit's career. The reasons set forth as the cause were the yellow 5-cent periodicals, "Nick Carter," etc. No mention at all was made of moving pictures. The incident was well worth recording, owing to its novelty.

Local independent theaters have hailed with the greatest of delight the acquisition by the "Imp Co." of little Mary Pickford. Several local houses clipped the photograph of the young lady from the pages of the Moving Picture World and pasted the picture in the lobby. The sentence, "Formerly with the Biograph Co." was given a prominent place in the billboard. Licensed exhibitors are viewing the strengthening of the independent manufacturers' stock companies with more or less seriousness—and questioning.

The World's New England representative was cornered by a local moving picture operator and was persuaded into buying a ticket for the First Grand Smoke Talk of the Moving Picture Operators, Local 182, I. A. T. S. E. The event will take place Monday evening, January 16, at America Hall, Washington street. The regular meeting of the union will be held before the blowout. As this feast is not scheduled to close until 1 a. m., it will not be too much to expect some rather punk projection the "morning after." Vaudeville and pictures will make up the major portion of the entertainment, with a luncheon to top it off.

The Beacon Theater, Tremont street, is now charging 20 cents admission on Sunday evenings. The management has decided that it is better to run only two complete programs with the 20-cent admission rate than to run four or more shows at 10 cents. Although less people enter the house under this policy, they go away much better satisfied.

The Theater Comique, Tremont Row, is now using eight illustrated songs and six reels of independent films from the W. E. Greene Film Exchange. Manager Sam La Vangie has issued an edict that all female singers must appear before the audience clad in pure white dresses.

Advertisements in the lobbies of local houses no longer read, "We show five reels of films," and in their place are printed "5,000 feet of films." One house even states that you may see "one mile of pictures" if you will but pass the box-office.

The New York Dramatic Mirror, through its Boston correspondent, states that Mayor Fitzgerald wrote "a sharp letter" to local moving picture theaters regarding the action he would take should another case similar to that of the Pastime Theater's arise. The Mirror's correspondent is mixed on his notes, as no such letter was sent from the mayor's office.

The World's New England representative had the pleasure of a long chat with Mr. L. W. Atwater, of the Nicholas Power Company, last week. Mr. Atwater informed the writer that he had just placed a No. 6 Cameragraph at the Statehouse, after a strenuous competition with other projecting machines. The Statehouse has great need of moving picture machines, as every film released is exhibited for the benefit of Chief Whitney, who passes judgment as to whether the films are suitable for Sunday night shows. It might be stated that it is extremely difficult to procure good Sunday night shows, as the chief is both exacting and impartial when using his blue pencil.

Mr. Jacob Lourie, of the Beacon Theater, Tremont street, is now dividing his time between that house and his new Nashua, N. H. theater. Mr. Lourie remarks that the new house opened standing room only. During Mr. Lourie's absence from the Beacon, Mr. Chas. Heath is in charge.

Mr. Frank L. Browne, formerly general manager of the Old South and New Washington theaters, is very busily engaged trying to have his Roxbury, Mass., theater opened as soon as possible. The new house is to be called "Browne's Roxbury Theater," and will be large and first class in every way. Browne is one of the ablest moving picture managers in Boston, as was evidenced by his results at the houses he formerly managed, and will no doubt make good when his own boss.

A bill was introduced into the State Legislature, Saturday, January 14, by which power of revoking or suspending all theatrical licenses should be invested in the mayor alone. At present the mayor and the state police must agree before any steps of this nature are taken. The bill will be watched by local moving picture managers, who are curious to see if it will be enacted as a law. —HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The city council of Le Mars, Iowa, has passed an ordinance which forbids the operation of moving picture shows on Sunday.

A. E. Long, of Galena, may open a moving picture and vaudeville theater in the Virden building, Princeton, Ill., it is reported.

George Waters, of Girard, Ill., has opened a moving picture theater in that place.

G. W. Parks has purchased the interests of his partner, Ellis D. Robb and Louis J. Stout in the Bijou, at Eldora, Iowa.

The Crystal Theater, Paxton, has ordered 250 new opera chairs and the place will be redecorated before they are installed.

The Cozy Theater Company, of Houston, Tex., has been incorporated with capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are Maurice, Harry and Jules H. Wolf.

Louis Rubens is now giving two reels of pictures with his vaudeville show at the Fox, Aurora, Ill.

Vernon Seaver and Dee Robinson, of Peoria, who have made a little mark in middle-west amusements, have been prospecting at Sterling, Ill., with a view of opening a picture house and vaudeville theater. This city has an ordinance forbidding Sunday shows that may have to be removed to entice photoplay magnates. F. H. M.

Pictures Advertise Farming Implements.

The International Harvester Company, one of the largest farm implement concerns in the United States has attained wonderful results from the use of moving pictures. This company has a film which it features, entitled, "The Romance of the Reaper." At state and county fairs it is shown in black-top tents. Visitors get a ticket admitting them to the entertainment by applying at the company's exhibit, thus killing two buying birds with one advertising stone. In the winter this remarkable demonstration goes over the farmer's institute meeting circuits and because of its agricultural educational value is generally accorded a place on the program, when it has the undivided attention of the farmers and land-owners present.

THE SCENARIO A HELP TO WRITERS?

"The writer who is ambitious to succeed in short story writing can receive no better training than that involved in turning out a certain number of scenarios each month," says Robert Saunders Dowst, in an article on "Scenario Writing," in the January number of "The Editor." He declares what the magazines want is plot and that practice in building these will develop a symmetrical framework for the weight of dialogue and other adornments of the author. He also advises writers that few offerings command the $100 figure advertised by many producers. F. H. M.

Notes From Los Angeles.

By Richard V. Spencer
(Coast Correspondent of the World.)

Mr. P. L. Howland, President of the California Motion Picture Company, has recently returned from San Francisco where he had gone to purchase apparatus and supplies. A carload of supplies are expected on January 15th, on which date the company expects to begin daily work on their pictures. Recently, upon the authority of the Long Beach Board of Fire Commissioners, the entire apparatus at fire headquarters No. 1 was taken out and runs were made on Pine and Ocean Avenues, the runs being so realistic that many citizens began to look for the fire. Pictures were taken of the firemen in action, representing the men responding to alarms, hurriedly dressing, sliding down the poles, hitching the harness, etc. When the film is finished it will receive a private hearing before the city officials and newspaper men. At this date it is not known whether the pictures will be marketed through the Sales Company, or marketed independently. A company of professional actors and actresses have been chosen, and they will soon be put to work interpreting comedy, stated the company intends to specialize upon.

* * *

A recent midnight fire that happened near the Bison studio had an amusing aftermath. During the progress of the fire the horses in the Bison stables became alarmed at the noise and strayed away. The Bison Countrymen rounded up the steeds the following morning.

* * *

The Pathé Company have recently added to their Edendale Studio holdings until they now occupy a full block, which, under the personal direction of Mr. James Young Deer, is being substantially improved as fast as a corps of artisans can perform the work. The studio when finished will be one of the largest and most complete on the Coast. The buildings will be of mission design and will be surrounded by a ten-foot wall of concrete between the arches of which will be hung mission bells.

Two of the most famous death-dealing, cowpuncher-defying broncbos ever saddled are kept near the Edendale Studios. These are "Grave Digger" and "Black Demon." Both broncbos have a record behind them. These broncbos are known to Western cowboys as the ultimate of animal viciousness. With old "Steamboat" they form a trinity of broncbos that few men have ever been able to ride at all, let alone break them. In the old days of the Cheyenne Round Up Celebrations these horses formed a conspicuous part, more than one expert cowpuncher being killed and disabled by their vicious bucking. It was "Grave Digger" that killed the famous broncbo buster, Dick Stanley, a few years ago. His widow, Mrs Stanley, is now appearing with the moving picture studios, having their location here. Appearing with the local companies are cowboys famous all over the West as broncbo busters, trick riders, and general all around cattle eaters. Several of them hold international roping and riding records.

* * *

The American's Western Company are now in Arizona taking pictures. They are headed for Los Angeles, which it is rumored they will reach about the first of February. They will take the Grand Canon in moving pictures. This canon is conceded to be one of the eight wonders of the world. The camera cannot picture the beauty and grandeur of the rock and soil formations of the canon in their natural colors, although it will prove an impressive bit of photography even in black and white.

ADOPT RULES FOR LOCAL PRODUCERS.

Rules for the regulation of the moving picture makers who frequent the city parks, particularly Griffith Park, were adopted by the Los Angeles Board of Park Commissioners at a recent meeting. The rules have proved less drastic than the producers had been led to expect. As told in the World of last week, complaints of a serious nature had been made to the board of alleged abuses of privilege among which it was alleged that the companies left the scenes of pictures littered with trash, that they destroyed trees and shrubbery, and that prospectors in the park have been abused while traveling park roads. To combat it may be mentioned that several of these abuses were justified such for instance as hailing people who were about to intrude in the range of the camera and thus destroy the picture. The rules presented and adopted by the commissioners, contain the following provisions:

Moving picture makers may be given permits revocable at any time at the discretion of the Board of Park Commissioners.

This permit must be exhibited when pictures are to be taken and the name of the company must be registered with the park foreman or custodian.

They must permit no waste, must not cut, mutilate, destroy, or destroy any flowers, trees, plants or other growing things in the park.

They must observe all the regulations of the park commission and all city ordinances.

They must leave the place where pictures are taken as neat as the said clean up all papers and trash.

The scene to be used must be selected by the approval of the park foreman and superintendent.

They must at all times treat city employees and others with respect.

MICROBE MOTION PICTURES.

According to a report made this week by the California State Board of Health at Sacramento, moving pictures and grass waltzing will soon drive the influenza, the Carpentier, and other demons of the old West back to the woods and ranches. Gone will be the pop of the Winchester and the shoulder slide of the Redskins, and in their place the motion pictures of the future may be expected to behold such blighting specialties as battles of the intelligent germ-fighting forces against the invading army of microbes kept upon the principles of the human body. Secretary Stone, of the Board of Health has incorporated the following poem in his latest health bulletin:

No more we'll seek the picture shows
To drive away the blues,
To see how Casey led the cow
Up where the grasses lush
No more may we the movies see
Then Wallie Wright on fly,
We'd rather watch the germicides jump
And see the germs waltz by.
No more we'll seek the far North Pole
With Peary or with Cook
Or scour the plains with Bronchy Bill
We'll watch the Bookworm hook;
No more we'll linger to see portrayed
The pranks of little Willie:
We'll watch the microbe do its stunts
And cheer the new bacilli.
—Courtesy M. Kessler.

Sign Limit.—Mr W. H. Cline, owner and proprietor of Cline's Broadway Theater, was recently summoned before the Fire Commission to show cause why the thirty-foot electric sign over the property should not be cut down to twenty feet to conform with the city ordinances governing electric signs. When the sign was under construction he was informed by the Fire Chief and the Chief Building Inspector that the sign should not exceed twenty feet in height, and that architect's plan of a thirty foot sign was thus penciled. Nevertheless the sign was erected as planned. Recently Mr Cline's attorney appeared before the board and asked permission to let the sign remain as it is. The board took the matter under consideration. It is probable that they will order the reduction in weight which, if done, will ruin the esthetic value of the sign and necessitate its remodeling at great cost.

New Theater.—The Electric Theater, a new 500-seat edifice, opened opposite the Post office last week. The theater is one of the better class moving picture theaters. The interior is cozy and neatly decorated. A good class of seats are provided. The theater is featuring the work of the Pathe Mexico City Studio, whose scenes particularly appeal to the large Latin population in the neighborhood of the theater. The theater is located opposite the new million dollar Post Office and has a number of the best locations in the downtown district. Among the films shown were the Pathe films of the recent Centennial Celebration held at Mexico City.

Romantic.—Quanah Parker, the famous half-breed chief of the Comanche Indians, whose history is a romantic parallel to many pioneers of the Southwest, recently stepped from the reservation into Texas and recovered the body of his white mother, Cynthia Ann Parker, whom the Texas authorities returned for removal to The children recalls a romance that had its setting in Texas shortly after the close of the Civil War. In 1860 Parker's fort near what is now the site of Nocona, Texas, was raided by Comanche Indians and among the captives taken were Benjamin Parker and his daughter, Cynthia, three years of age. Parker was killed by the Indians and the little girl was believed to have perished, the girl's mother having died years before. In 1861 Cynthia was married to Chief Peta Nocona, whom she bore three children, two of whom died in their infancy. Quanah Parker was the surviving member. In 1860 a detachment of United States cavalry and a company of Texas Rangers under the leadership of the late Texas Governor Sul Ross. The Indians were surprised in camp, which they had established on the Pease River in the Panhandle district. After the fight a woman carrying a baby was captured. This woman, it was discovered, was Cynthia Ann Parker, the missing child that had been stolen from Parker's Fort long years before. It was learned that she had been adopted into the tribe and when she grew to womanhood had married the chief, Peta Nocona. The chief was killed [illegible] River battle, and Cynthia, his white squaw, was carried back to civilization. Cynthia Ann Parker is described by the historians to have been a very handsome young woman, with large gray eyes and regular features, weighing about 135 pounds and splendidly proportioned. Indian traders and scouts had on occasion seen the girl and tried in vain to ransom her from the tribe. After returning to civilization, it is said that she pined for her former life of savage freedom and tribal life that she had grown to love. Several years after her recapture she died and was buried near what is now the town of Pearson Station, Texas. Quanah Parker, her son, removed the body to [illegible] Mission, near Cache, where she was reburied with tribal honors. Recently Congress made an appropriation of $1,000 for the erection of a suitable monument to mark her resting place. The above story has been told in prose, verse, and lastly has been adapted to moving pictures by several companies producing Indian stories.

CHICAGO NOTES.

The American Film Mfg. Co. has surprised the most sanguine by the rapid progress they are making toward perfection, which becomes more noticeable in each new release put out under the trade-mark of the "Flying A." Of course we all admit that the personnel of this company had the advantage of years of experience when they entered the field, nevertheless our expectations of what they would be able to accompiish has been more than realized. In looking over some of the American Co.'s advance releases recently, I was impressed by the excellence of the work of their western company in a wonderful western picture, entitled "The Mission in the Desert," which will be released February 2nd. From a photographic standpoint, the reel was a revelation. The action takes place within a few miles of Tucson, Arizona, on the great American desert, and the story is built around an old Spanish mission. The acting is fully in keeping with the photography—the characters in the depiction of the parts alloted to them show an ability and knowledge of their medium, which will undoubtedly place the American Co. and their western releases right up with the top-notchers along these lines. "The Mission in the Desert" can be consistently called a western classic, and no doubt the exhibitors will be clamoring for an early booking on this feature film when it is released.

At the same time I also viewed with satisfaction the release booked for January 30th, entitled "The Genius." If I remember correctly, this comedy drama is written along the same lines as the play called "A Poor Relation," which was made popular all over the country by such well known actors as Sol Smith Russell and Ezra Kendall. In this release, Mr. Warren Kerrigan, the popular "lead" of the American Co., again displays his versatility, but Kerrigan had better look to his laurels, for the clever work of the American's child actors (Miss Baby Griffen and Master Clarence Johnson) is something remarkable. Little Clarence is certainly a born comedian, and it is safe to predict that he will do much to increase the popularity of American releases with those who witness his work in "The Genius."

From the quality of the American films evidenced by my inspection, this company is undoubtedly destined for great things in the Independent ranks, and the exhibitors are surely making a mistake if they do not include American releases in their bookings.

* * *

The "Exhibitors' Critic Club," that jolly bunch of theater owners and managers that visits the various licensed exhibition rooms every week and good naturedly tell Goble and Nehls and Linn and Gordon that their releases are "likened unto Roget fort," and call every bulletin a "bunk sheet." yes, that very bunch, where do you suppose I saw them Tuesday afternoon? I can't hardly believe it myself, but it's true nevertheless. They were all down in Laemmle's exhibition room looking over Independent releases, everything from Imps to Solax, and from their remarks I concluded that they were satisfied with what they saw. "Irish Sam" (you know him), was lecturing(?) on the different releases, and although he runs licensed films in his theater, his lecture showed that he is well posted on the independent subjects. It was pleasing to note that the exhibitors are becoming broad minded enough to realize that "the other fellow" can make good pictures, and to give him credit for it when he does. All of which strengthens my opinion that the open market is looming up in the distance. J. C. K.

NO HEADACHE

Do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use the modern scientific germicide. Test how the OZONE (nascent oxygen) it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at ONE CENT PER GALLON.

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,

2 Rector Street Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1413 Gramercy

The Independent Film Exchange
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

LAVEZZI'S OPERATORS' NECESSITIES

Cam Star Arbor and Sprocket - - $12.00
Intermittent Sprockets - - - 1.50
Feed Sprockets - - - - 2.50
Set of tempered Punches for removing Taper Pins - - - .50
Milled Block to support arbors to keep from springing out of true while pins are being driven in or out. - .50
Two Pin Machines changed to One Pin, etc.
Testimonials Furnished.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I WANT TO BUY FOR CASH
"PATHE'S PASSION PLAY"
Must have privilege of inspection
FRANK L. BROWNE, 1116 Carney Bldg., Boston

STORIES OF THE FILMS

PATHE.

HOW MAX WENT AROUND THE WORLD.—Max has consented to let his wife run indefinite of taking a trip around the world and now is in fond letters of the event. His real intentions, however, are to have a good time down the coast months. Just prior to taken too many drinks and is conveyed to his home by a waiter. Next morning he is awakened by his wife, who tells him that she had the train and an accident and no cause seems to accompany his safety. Desperate Max at once arrives on Mrs. Max at intervals from different countries. Max, first forgotten to expose the negatives for each picture. Then he goes out of the scenes and will have to see the pictures to appreciate.

SAVED BY TELEGRAPHY.—The daughter of the general manager of the telegraph company becomes interested in telegraphy and calls on her father every day to get her lessons in the art. Morton, the operator who handles her keys for from the first and thus have seen tangles an acquaintance which in the girl's mind ripens into an invitation from the sweetheart. Morton goes to her father's office to meet her and meets James Dean, his friend. Wind up with Morton and find the office empty. He doesn't know that within the great safe vault behind the massive door closed and locked by a careless employee. It is the General Manager and his daughter, suffocating for want of air, diminishing as the operators let loose the awful secret, and how he saves them from a frightful death by his sweetheart's knowledge of telegraphy constitutes a dramatic situation seldom, if ever equalled in photography.

IL TROVATORE.—The story of Verdi's well known opera is cleverly handled. Briefly, the old Count Di Luna gives his two young sons a pocket. Manrico still a babe, is carried off by the gypsy Azucena. Their father having died Count Di Luna as a rival who Manrico for the affections of Leonora. After many sensational encounters Manrico is caught and placed in a dungeon by the Count. Leonora so fires him promises to marry the Count, and has taken poison. The Count, finding Leonora is dead, orders Manrico to be executed. He then starts from Azucena, who soon has looked that Manrico is her son and beheaded, was his long lost brother.

FATHER AGAINST HIS WILL.—A young Lothario is to his sweetheart at the park entrance at 3.30 and on his way through the park he spies a pretty maiden shipwrecked on a rock while their respective mentors are on some trivial errand which takes them from view. Our hero, to the rescue, soon finds himself beside the maiden in their solitude. Fearful of attempts to leave them but a passing cab runs thither as he is about to start his farewell proposal. Our hero, in about to start his farewell responsibility upon a cool world passes on to the other. Then the trouble begins. Protesting violently as he is driven along on all he meets his parental wife soon is shocked and appalled at his perfidy. In the meantime the maidens are frantically searching for their lost lady. Eventually Azucena seeks in the grocer shop where, after a misunderstood of affairs and much splitting scene the scenes happily reconciled.

LUBIN.

A BROTHER'S REDEMPTION.—In 1880, two brothers were married a prosperous business and their home. Their father, the other partner, have independent the business was successful and he used to drive. Returning to his home one day he found his brother in the act of robbing the safe. He attempted to run to escape, all the other business could do. When the younger brother returned to found the safe open and the money gone. He was the money missing as he was standing on he knew that could help. The older brother, accused of the crime, was sent to a county house for a year. His wife, a poor girl, and their child. Meanwhile the younger brother, to escape the clutches of the police, had gone to the country, and in a village and got married. Soon he received a letter from the old country, informing him of the death of his father, and that his brother was about to be released from prison. He returned to the city, and found his brother's wife and child living in poverty. He then went to the home of his brother's wife, and told her that he was the guilty one, and that his brother was innocent. He then left the house, and went to the police station, and told them that he was the guilty one, and that his brother was innocent. He then left the police station, and

URBAN ECLIPSE.

BY THE KING'S ORDER.—The opening scene shows the color Villon in his study. By the hand of subaltern, he wastes treasures on the beauty that passes him by, unknown on the hill. The latter wayfarers are seized and subjected to their belongings and, while in despair over their losses, find cape and Marquis of the day passeching them on horseback. To him they relate their doings and he promises redress and a remembrance with his treasure. Villon, Villon. The next scene shows the arrival of the Marquis at the home of his betrothed and the angry conversation between them. Against the wishes of Villon, is much moved by the denunciation of the father's crimes by the Marquis and engages in a heated dispute with his father after the Marquis has departed. He leaves his home in high indignen. espies a young girl in the courtyard of the house. He rushes to her and, resisting her to consciousness, turns his back on the girl and starts to her mount. Then he assists her to walk into the home. Unknown to Jasper, the young lady is none other than Lucy, only daughter of the Governor of St. Leu and his own best cousin. As they approach the St Leu castle, we see the Marquis to meet them. He shows no consideration over his daughter's condition. She explains, and dwells on the timely service of the stranger, who rescued her. The Marquis turns to thank the young man and, recognizing Jasper, treats him with marked coldness. He orders his daughter to the house and bids Jasper be off. The latter, full of pride and resentment, turns his back on father and daughter and walks angrily away.

Following this scene, in close succession, is another showing the gathering of a large body of a squad of soldiers in charge of an officer. The latter presents a letter to the Marquis. It commands him in the King's name to capture, dead or alive, Jean Villon on charge of rebellion against the royal authority.

Lucy has heard her father read the King's letter and fearing for the safety of Jasper, whom she has met from time to time, decides to go to warn him of his danger. In the meantime, Jasper has returned home. Jean Villon with his servants and followers are assembled in the old tower. A lookout tells him of the approach of the soldiers and we see the grim old man hastily arm his retainers and order them to the loopholes of the tower. Spying Jasper, he thrusts a musket into his hands and orders him to fight. He convinces him that he must flee. It is now too late to depart by any of the doors, for the castle is surrounded by the soldiers. Jasper presses a spring in the masonry of the stairway and an exit is immediately revealed. Through this the lovers disappear and the entrance to the passageway closes.

Just as they emerge from the doorway in the ground floor of the structure, they run into the arms of the Marquis of St. Leu. Lucy begs her father to permit Jasper to escape and he listens to her appeals.

The Villon fortress is finally entered, and we see the soldiers rush into the room in the old tower, on the floor of which the bodies of the dead defenders lie about. Jean Villon is not among them. He has taken refuge in the tunnel underneath, by means of the secret passage.

We next see Jasper and Lucy in happy conference at her home. At this moment, the M. Minion is ushered in. He is a favorite of the King and carries a pardon for Jasper. The latter is jealous because Mr. Minion is an admirer of Lucy's hand, and when the parchment is handed him he tears it up, throwing it at Minion's feet, and meanwhile assuming the defensive at his door. Then he rushes away to the old tower.

Later Jasper informs Mr. Minion that he accompany him to the Villon home. In order to save her lover from any rash act. As they approach, the soldiers tell them they have found Villon. The bullet is intended for the Marquis, but it inflicts a glancing wound on Lucy's shoulder.

When Villon frees his men and he again seeks refuge through the secret opening. On that instant Jasper enters the tunnel, unaware of Villon and its consequences. He lifts the pistol from the floor, and is examining it when the Marquis and Minion, who are ahead of him, rush on him and disarm him.

It is the thought of both men that Jasper is the guilty one, but the latter hastily asserts his innocence and is overcome by the condition of his accoutrement. Suddenly he espies his father's hat lying over the secret exit. He lifts it and pointing to it tells them of his fears. Then, mad with their horror of the attempted crime, he reveals the secret passage. A few moments afterwards the old criminal is taken into custody and marched off. The lovers are reunited and the Marquis gives his sanction to their marriage.

VITAGRAPH.

CAST UP BY THE DEEP.—Braxton, a man of means and social prominence, sequestrates himself on an obscure fishing village for rest and quiet. He finds much diversion and novelty in coming in contact with the fisher folk of the settlement. He becomes acquainted and finds companionship with a young fisher maiden, who fills very much in his fancy because of her extreme simplicity, her unsophisticated and free from the arts pampered by society, of which he has become heartily sick.

He grows very fond of the girl and falls in love with her. She is very fond of him, but cannot understand why one of his station and educational standard shows her attention. His countenance is noticed by her people and they do not hesitate to tell her that his purpose cannot be honorable and the poor child is in a quandary between the promptings of her heart and the incongruous which she is subjected by whispering distrust. She refuses to listen to his protestations and proposal of marriage.

The little fisher maiden marries one of her own class, a coarse fellow of violent nature. Five years have she is a widow with a child. Braxton is still a bachelor; no one has ever succeeded in her affections. He visits the village and finds the girl in a most unhappy condition. Her husband has proven to be a worthless scoundrel, and this summer finds him with the smart set, cruising in a yacht along the shores of the fashionable resorts. He tells her so.

He is thinking of her; "half in fun and whole in earnest" he writes a note to her, places it in an empty champagne bottle and throws it overboard, hoping that it may drift to her and let her know that he is thinking of her.

Sitting on the jetty, she is looking wearily out to sea, dreaming of the happy days of bygone years when she was free from the encroachment of another sooner who declares his love. As she again reclines listlessly into the deep she espies the bottle. She asks her sister to get it for her. Upon how the water, gets the bottle, breaks it and extracts the note. Its contents appeal to all sympathy, forgets the note and tells him to throw the bottle back into the sea—thus it is decided by the fisher folk that the lovers remain apart, she happy in the thought of his love, he in the hope of hers, rather than a life of incompatibility with one above or beneath one's social station.

THE GIRL IN THE FILM.—Charlie, who is a camera fiend, goes out with his kodak for a few snapshots for his collection of photographs. He shoots around and gets some "dandies." Tired out, he sits down on a bench in the warm sunlight and falls asleep. In this position he is seen by a number of young women, among them her friend. The friend induces Nan to have her picture taken; softly they tip-toe up to the bench and remove the camera. Nan, posing, steps up, takes a few more photographs and starts to the developing room with the exposed negatives.

In the course of a day or two he goes for the films and is very much surprised to see the strange face and figure of a young girl in each of his films. At first he will not believe it belongs to him, but the photographer assures him that it does. He is attracted and charmed by the girl's face and determines upon finding the original at all costs. He walks the streets, casting looks into the faces of every passing female until he at last sees her with his chum, begs an introduction and secures an invitation to call at her home. He accepts and the longer he stays at her home the better acquainted they become. He lingers, and the longer he lingers the more he hates to leave. Eleven o'clock comes and he rises—in fact, he is forced to rise—and always his going until 4 a. m., and it is doubtful that he would have gone then if Ma and the police. train had not put an appearance and started him on his way.

The next morning. What a difference. Nan lies in bed until 10 o'clock and gets a telegram to get to work at 8 o'clock. Both are tired and sleepy; he gets very little sympathy from his fellow workers, who have evidently gotten wise to the girl in the film.

FATHER'S FRIEND AND A MAID.—Two brothers, jolly old bachelors, receive a letter from their cousin stating that he is dying and will leave his only child, a girl, to their care. She has her late father's friendship and care.

Recovering from their surprise they call the housekeeper and immediately begin preparations for her reception—buy all sorts of toys and comforts to make a child happy and become very much interested in the work.

They have in their employ a good-looking young fellow as their private secretary, in whom they have great confidence and trust. They also have every reason to, for he is attentive to his business and theirs.

Virtue is expected and her two guardians are very happy in their expectations of entertaining the child—one is beating a drum, the other working a sort of Jumping Jack, anticipating the pleasure of the little one when she sees the amusements.

While thus engaged Vivian is announced, and when they get a glimpse of an attractive young lady with her by a child they are very much embarrassed and try to hide the cause of their confusion. They have to adapt themselves to new conditions, and Vivian is soon engaged in straightening up the house and giving it a thorough overhauling.

She needs the private secretary; there is an immediate mutual admiration and it is not long before it becomes quite unrestrained between them, and the old gentlemen become suspicious and decide that the secretary is a fortune hunter. This is the signal for Vivian to assert herself and she does it, establishing her guardians that she is well able to manage her own affairs.

The secretary takes his dismissal to heart, is taken sick and ordered to wait. The young ward goes to see him and she is followed by the two old fellows. They trace her to the clerk's lodging. When they find the young man and together they haven't the heart to find fault; their feelings gradually subside and they succumb to the pleadings of their ward, give their blessing and re-engage the young fellow with an increase of salary.

BIOGRAPH.

THE POOR SICK MEN.—Mrs. Wilson secures seats for the theater as does also her daughter Peggy, expecting that respective holidays to accompany them thereto. The men, however, have other fish to fry, both having a weakness, each unknown to the other, for the game. Cards are secured table, a quiet game of draw, so when they learn of the plan of their wives they at once scheme to avoid what they would now be an ordeal. The subterfuge is illness. Mr. Wilson pretends to suffer excruciating pain in the stomach and shows his a violent headache. Of course, neither of the men know why the other is so anxious to avoid going to the theater, but the latter, having a very abject sympathy, they consent to go unescorted. Now the men are up against another problem, that is, how to avoid the wives' sympathy. The first to make the getaway and makes hurried strides for the club room where the game has progressed in the game when son-in-law arrives. Consternation besets both at this meeting and when Wilson arrives he has yet another shock in son-in-law answers, "I came after you." Well, the truth of the situation prevails and they make the best of it by becoming partners in the little discretion, both taking hands. They have hardly started in the game of stud when they are surprised by the butting-in of the police and the majority of the players are "pinched." Wilson and his son-in-law are left in the cops by getting in the fire-escape, not, however, without losing their coats and hats which they left in their hurried exit. Coming back to the room they find the entrance still guarded, so a disguise is their only hope, as they are without coats and collars. Climbing up the fire-escape, the son-in-law enters a room above and pilfers a small boy's suit which when donned proves a misfit. This way they manage to get by the guards, but their trouble has only just begun. They find the street in a real stop and placed to guard a street corner and the son-in-law, mistaken for a "mamma's pet," is set upon by a gang of newsboys. It is necessary in this stage to get home just ahead of their wives who are excessive in their sympathy for the poor sick men who had to remain at home and suffer from their illness, while they enjoyed an evening at the theater. The only laughter that the episode proved a lasting lesson.

FATE'S TURNING.—John Lawson, Jr., owing to his father's illness has the burden of business unexpectedly thrust upon him. Unaccustomed to the absolute responsibility, suffers a nervous breakdown. His father and mother decide that a change of air suggests he take the rest cure at a summer resort. This he decides to do, and bidding adieu to his fiancee leaves for Virginia at the Lawson hotel the same day. In the dining hall he is attended by a pretty waitress to whom he takes a great fancy. Several days elapsing, we find him deeply smitten with the girl to the neglect of his fiancee of whom he has not written a single line. Back to her home, they become betrothed, he presenting her with an engagement ring, promising to marry her immediately. Lawson, Jr., is a man of enormous step, and after a week or two, John is called hurriedly to his home as his father's illness has taken a bad turn. He lies dying despaired of. So urgent is the message that he does not have time to say good-by to his fiancee. His father dies and he in the excitement of the occasion has almost forgotten the little waitress, when a letter of appeal comes from her. John now taking his father's place in society and business, reasons that an alliance with the waitress is out of the question, and writes to her to that effect. This letter is a crushing blow and she goes to the boss's home in the hope that he can help her make to realize the disastrous result of his determination. She arrives at a time when there is a "Doll Party" in progress and comes face to face with John's fiancee who meets her with scorn. She receives very little better treatment from John himself, and she goes back to her furnished room to suffer alone for the trust she had placed in him. Some time later she learns that he is to be married and making one last effort takes up her baby and rushes to the home entering just as the marriage party is about to take place. Realizing condition wives for her the sympathy of all present and a feeling of scorn is directed towards John, especially from the former, who leaves a copy with her mother. Anne of course has somewhat the best of it, and as was false pride kept prevented his marrying her. Now that his dead-pointed in the undercurrent we can see the character who was to portray the character as originally planned, humble head and the good-hearted girl.

KALEM.

PURITANS AND INDIANS.—Much romance centers about the early days of the Puritans in New England and in this production the Kalem actors have given a very accurate representation of Puritan life, all details of costume and environment being historically correct.

Joseph Bennett, a pretty Puritan maid, is beloved by Ralph Allen. Ralph's suit is favored until by chance one day Joseph's father catches Ralph indulging in a forbidden game of dice. Ralph is commanded to cease his attentions to the girl and is severely chastised in meeting and the Lord's day and driven from the place of worship. He wanders disconsolate into the forest and almost loses upon a band of marauding Pequots.

In the meanwhile Joseph has taken a restless child out of the meeting to a nearby spring. The Indians are upon her and Ralph saves her at the risk of his life. They then flee to the church, where there is a fortified defense against the Indian attack. The Pequots are finally repulsed and when it is all over Ralph's sin is forgiven, and he receives the hand of the fair Joseph as a reward for his gallantry.

THE SECRET OF THE STILL.—In this characteristic story of the South we are taken to the heart of the pine forests where the chief industry is the gathering of the pitch from the pine trees and its distillation into turpentine. Throughout the pictures the various stages of the industry are shown. The story centers around a young southern girl who has two lovers, both employed in the turpentine camp. Of course she loves but one and the rejected suitor attempts to discredit his rival by having a negro to open the main vent and allow the turpentine to go to waste. His deed is worse than he counted however for the turpentine takes fire and the still is partially destroyed. As was intended the finger of suspicion points to the girl's rejected lover and it would doubtless have gone hard with him had not the negro met with an accident and confessed as he was about to die. So the real culprit is run down and punished and the lover of the girl is freed of suspicion and wins the belle.

SELIG.

BUDDY, THE LITTLE GUARDIAN.—Two sufferers for the hand of Bess and the accepting of the one who can do as many things for her as possible is the subject of the picture story of Buddy. After a serious attempt life of Buddy during which time he is blessed with a succession of fine action details. Buddy wins the hand and joy of the house yet in the former hands are substituted at the father's drinking and often away late out at late hours and pleads for his return home. Buddy no longer been worn the motherly caress and leaves home and becomes a waif. The father realizing the hopelessness of caring for Bess and the unhappiness in whose cause, decides to begin life anew. He secures work in a brick-yard.

Buddy continues to push daddy's cause and will not let a chance pass by to help him. Both succeed in a measure but His employer sends him on an errand to the city because worries Bess and while she watches Buddy has her own trouble. A runaway team is down by an automobile and taken to the hospital. The other members of the family in their anxiety for the arrival to the accident is forgotten the value of the situation and the doctor sees in Bess his former patient. It later goes by and the business of the picture.

The [illegible] upon [illegible] to [illegible] a social glass with some friends. Bess did not like to [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN.

A DENTAL DISASTER.—Two rivals for the hand and purse (particularly the latter) of a wealthy widow. These lovers do not indulge in the usual courting stage, but meet as a matter of fact with the widow by appointment. The chief interest of the picture, however, lies in a practical joke played on the unsuspecting rich widow by a mischievous boy. The boy, allowing his personal appreciation for the beauty of hands to rule, fills the lovely widow out of beauti-ful copper tools and being of an extremely artistic type applies them not into the noble-woman whose hands-omeness he admires, but into the widow's hands. The widow, unable to speak for the fun of the thing, is left to the mercy of the tools and when this is accomplished for the fun of the boy, he, knowing and is on the verge of being scratched when the dentist and the lovers rush into him, with the result that his very clothes are literally shredded from his body and he, not pitying him completely out at business.

They are found in the time by a skateboard. What glorious fun in the hands of the hand clerk. Painstaking inquiries fail to locate the owner, so, do under he proceeds to whom they belong, he decides to sell them by auction. The sale is a delightful conflict between the rivals, but the preference of either excludes the other completely, with some humor and one more is also to smile with, but embarrassment. The widow foils into his arms and is requested to be his wife, which she consents, the reason for his past reticence, surprises him by acquainting him with the fact that she, too, is a dentist, handling women with dentists' tools.

THE BATTERED BRIDEGROOMS.—Kitty Benson, on the day of her betrothal receives a message from her cousin, Jack, who is coming to see her, he and his fiancee have run away from the parents, and of opposition, and have been married at once, and in the meantime asks that she lend her consent, and in helping his lady love in her house until the minister can be found to marry them.

She assents and receives the answer requested and is immediately followed by Jack, who shows his appreciation of her good nature in good, cordial embraces. These marks of endearment are seen and of course misunderstood by the fiancee's father. Jealousy is invariably unreasonable and his is no exception to the general rule. Without waiting for explanations, he assaults Jack, who, surprised, retaliates, and the two men disappear from view, a nonsensuous mass of struggling legs and arms.

While all this is going on in the parlor, they creep back to their excited and almost hysterical sweethearts, very much the worse for wear, are repaired and bandaged by loving hands, and after a few necessary explanations, are glad to be friends and to give the other an opportunity of earning a double marriage fee.

THANHOUSER.

WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND.—May Read is the daughter of a wealthy widow. May has been blind from childhood, but bears her affliction bravely. While her mother is out of the house one day, the building catches fire. The frightened servants forget May and run out of the house. The blind girl unable to help herself, would have perished but if not been for the timely aid of Frank Lassen, who ignits his way into the house, and carries her into the street. But in so doing Frank is disfigured for life.

The young couple fall in love and the mother consents to their marriage, but the suicide of has physical affliction is an eligible man. Two years later, when the couple are possessed of a child, their family physician suggests that an operator May's best sight. Frank consents to the operation, although he fears that when she regains the sight of her eyes she will love him no more.

After the operation, which is successful, the doctor suggests May not see anyone for bandages, as it may mean that her sight will be lost again. But the desire to see her baby and her husband are too great. May removes the bandages and finds that her child is as beautiful as she had expected. Then she glances at her husband, who is scarred by the strong light. It blinds her, and she never sees again. But she knows that her baby is all she hoped it to be, and she believes her husband looks as she had pictured him. So, despite her great affliction, she is thoroughly happy.

PROMPT PAYMENT.—Jack wanted to practice law, he was eager to plead in court; but all the pleading of his life to a client was pleading for money. Clients were scarce men to whom he owed money. And it must be confessed that his arguments were almost irresistibly convincing.

Matters reached a crisis when the creditors called in a body to demand what they called their rights. Jack was in the inside office when they appeared but did not care to come out. Also they showed no going away.

But Jack, like most lawyers, was resourceful. His creditors, to while away the time, began a game of cards, and that gave Jack an idea.

For with the cards he was an expert. If legal profession were based on ability as a poker player, Jack would be the Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court.

So Jack departed by way of the fire escape, and through the aid of a friendly customer, returned looking like a perfectly unhappy creditor. And he sat in that poker game, and won a surprising amount of money to the sorrow of the others.

Then Jack excused himself, slipped out to return in a short time in his own garments. And he greeted his creditors affectionately, and paid them in full, whereat they rejoiced for Jack was an honest lawyer when if he did have to hold a bill long to prove it.

STEALING A RIDE.—Two little youngsters, Nina Reed and Johnny Ellis, are out tobogganing when they see Susie's parents start for a drive in a sleigh. The children ask to be taken along, but are refused. Unknown to their parents, they hitch their little sleds on behind the big sleigh, and manage to get a free ride. Upon seeing a good speed on an ungrade Susie loses her hold on but little sled and Johnny, trying to save her, falls off with her. Both children are left some distance from their sleigh as it goes merrily on its way. Realizing the danger of and they are unable to overtake it.

The children have to walk home and the hope nearly lost and spend an anxious afternoon together.

Later Nina discovers that the empty sleigh returns and after some distance from the town. Recognizing Susie's sled, they turn back, fearing some harm has befallen their little friend. They track the children by their footprints into the woods where they find them asleep in the snow. Their children have had a fright, but no other. Who no worse off for their experience. This time they got their wish, and are driven back home in the big sleigh.

POWERS.

THE MASQUERADERS.—Edith St. Clair, a beautiful orphan girl, heiress to a large estate is transformed from a lawyer's office boy. Harry, the young man whom her deceased parents wish her to marry has returned from college and calls on call on her. The girl wishing to make sure that the man she is to marry loves her for herself and not for her money pretends to be a maid and has her maid pretend to be the mistress. A similar idea occurs to Uptown and he and his valet change places. Harry pretends to be a valet and upon arriving when the two woman fall in love with the supposed valet and Harry falls in love with the real maid who takes a hand in the game.

A WIFE'S LOVE.—Mary Crosby is the daughter of a well-to-do villager who dislikes her sweetheart, Allen Ramsey, and forbids her contact to their marriage. The couple elope and Mary's father swears that he will never forgive her. John loses his position and becomes a drunkard. Mary goes to her father to plead for help for her husband who that she says cannot recover unless he is taken to a warmer climate and who is in debt down and driven her out. Later the distressed girl wife re-enters the room and takes from her father's desk a sum of money needed to help her husband. Her father enters and in the midst of cursing her he finds the theft of money. Realizing the girl puts back the money just as her mother enters. Imagine the poor girl's remorse when she returns to her home and finds that her mother has left money to help them. John recovers and from then on his life is a real joy. Later we find that he has left a handsome sum of money to the daughter he has disowned.

LITTLE DOROTHY.—Little Dorothy's sister has two beaux, Fred Verney and Walter Howard, Mr. Frank's discarded, a bashful fellow. Whom she decides to be man for her sister. The pranks the little girl plays on Mr. Frank bring his courtship to a quick finish. The fun increases when the little girl tries to get the two beaux to propose to her sister. Finally she hits on a scheme and writes to Mr. Backward that her sister loves him something that will be read by Walter in his sleep. Backward encouraged by the letter visits his sweetheart but little Dorothy has to bring the two together through a very funny trick.

CHAMPION.

JUDGED BY HIGHER POWER.—Judging from his friendly attentions toward her, Josie Harcourt is decided in the belief that Howard Lessels is in love with her, whereas the true object of his attendance is her elder sister, Judith. This is easily explained as her sister Howard proposes to present a diamond ring to his fiancee.

In holding out her finger for the ring, as he shows it to her, Josie receives a severe shock when the young man laughingly informs her that it is meant for her sister Judith. Left alone by her room, beset with bewildered and suffering spirits, which arouse thoughts of vengeance toward her sister.

Howard's parents are in full accord with their son's choice. They are entertained at the family's home, bringing their family jewels along with the object of offering Judith the privilege of a choice of them. Josie presents an opportune time, and, who appropriates one and secretes the jewel in her sister's hair.

Shortly after their departure, the loss of the jewel is noted and Howard is dispatched in haste to his sweetheart's home in search of it. Apprising the girls of his errand, he is met with a verbal attack from Josie for his supposed insinuation, but which was far from Howard's mind. Further declaring that she and her sister will go to his parents to denounce them as well for sending him on such an errand, Josie reaches for her hat, at the same time hauling Judith's hat to her with sufficient force to dislodge the missing jewel. The astonishment of all at its discovery in response Judith instantly denies all knowledge as to how the jewel got into her hat, but realizing her compromising position, and noting the cruel expression of doubt in her lover's eyes, she seeks solitaires his engagement ring, to the secret delight of Josie.

Immediately awaiting news from Howard, Mr. Morgan sallies up the Harcourts. Josie answers the call, and in his unmistrial haste, informs him of the discovery, and that Judith had stolen it for the sake of its flash. Rushing to the girl's room, he sky, strikes the telephone wire, and with a terrific explosion, throws it to atoms, shattering the guilty girl with flame and fragments. Hastily summoning a physician to aid the suffering child mean while employing all available means for relief, she is pronounced incurably blind.

Judged by a Higher Power for her sins against her family, Josie makes a complete confession and the sobbing of the two families, that followed the ring on her sister's finger, she gently places Howard's hand in that of Judith's, as the joy of her own suffering gives happiness to others.

ECLAIR.

DOCTOR AGAINST HIS WILL.—In order to escape from marrying Horace, and to obtain the consent of her father to marry young Leandre, Ladnah Lamar, who have been made, the whole household is thrown into confusion. Louise and Horace go in search of a doctor to cure her of such a strange illness. They happen to pass the house of Sganarelle, a woodcutter, who has just been beating his wife Martine in order to revenge herself, tells the strangers that her husband is a much clever doctor, but can only be made to acknowledge his skill by being beaten until he confesses. They proceed to beat the poor man, and tell him that he is a skillful doctor and will cure the sad case. Accordingly he does a doctor's coat and hat and accompanies the two gentlemen to the home of Geronte Lamar. After an examination, the doctor pronounces the girl dumb, and no one doubts the word of so great a man.

Upon leaving the house, Sganarelle meets Leandre, who is disguised as Lucinde and by means of a beating, and a little bribery, Sganarelle consents to carry out the desire of Leandre. He returns to the house with his pupil, and pretends taking Leandre with him as his pupil. This learned man recommends that the patient take the air in the country with his pupil, and he discusses the merits of the case with her father. Leandre and Lucinde are delighted at the chance ever, through a misadventure the whole plot is discovered. Leandre, expelled from the house, and Sganarelle bound to be hanged for "conspiracy sentation." At the crucial moment, Leandre receives word that he has inherited a large sum of money, and he no longer is just made. He hastens once more to present to Geronte his suit for the hand of Lucinde, and finds that the only further objection has been overcome, he is accepted. Thanks to the kindness of Leandre, Sganarelle is pardoned and Martine is reconciled with Mr. Geronte's anger, and all ends happily as could be desired.

LUX.

LITTLE WILLIE GOES CYCLING.—Little Willie, a tiny bit of humanity, has equally tiny cycle, and starts gaily on his way. His fond father and mother, accompanied by the nurse, mount their bicycles and follow Willie. Willie by reason of his diminutiveness can accomplish such feats as riding between two people, and between a man's legs, then rides with no apparent aid and accidents ensue. China of all sorts, barrows, and finally Willie himself, come to the crash, the devoted parents mildly bringing down the wail of a shop in their mastery to follow their little son in his flight. Willie is finally found in a most wonderful fashion, up the walls and ceiling and down again. The film is sure to be the most popular that has been released.

AN INFAMOUS SON.—The only son of a gendarme is found guilty of stealing and consequently is driven from home. This sorrow finally leads to the father's death, while Willie's mother lingers on broken hearted. Later a man is discovered seriously wounded and taken to the hospital. It is then that information is received he has been robbed by a man who he left for dead. The assailant proves to be the son of the man. Despite this overwhelming calamity, the old father does not shirk his duty, but goes to arrest his offspring. Every effort of the father is made upon the prisoner and he is condemned to imprisonment. Meanwhile the father, brooding in his home, determines to commit suicide. In this, however, he is prevented by the entrance of his chief, who, realizing him of his duty to the service, leads him to the prison cell. Entering, the chief shows him the prisoner, and offers him the alternative of committing suicide or being shot. With the courage of despair, the prisoner grapples with the chief, but the latter throwing him off, shoots him. The father enters at this denouement and thus closes the career of an infamous son.

NESTOR.

THE MAN IN 23.—Mrs. Glendon, proprietress of Hotel Glendon, as unsuspecting and sensible as she assumed was still a woman and therefore curious. In sum Nell had protested much too far examining the Howard's trunks, but Mrs. Glendon, feeling confident that father and son would remain downstairs to play a game of cards, went sauntering forward in her hunt of suspending. Until Mr. Howard's step sounded in the hall. With a spring, Nell slammed the garment into the closet, which divided the Howard's rooms, and, slamming the door, left near Mrs. Glendon to brave it out as best she could.

But none was in the air so finding herself alone and all means of escape cut off, Mrs. Glendon hastily remained behind a settee.

Nell had intended making her escape through Bob Howard's room, but as she looked through the keyhole, she beheld the young man comfortable smoking a cigar. So donning a coat and hat which she found in the closet, the girl waited until the old gentleman had turned out his light. Then stepping softly out, she made a dash for the door and proceeded in gaining her own room unrecognized.

Mrs. Glendon attempted to follow suit, but her exit was cut off by Mr. Howard springing from his bed and locking the door, so she was forced to retreat into the closet. From here she might have later on adopted Nell's method of escape, had the girl not dragged a coat hanger in for his-he and sent Bob scampering to the office to tell the boss of a "burglar" in their closet.

Armed with various weapons the party crept cautiously up to Mr. Howard's room, where the recent commotion seemed to have taken silence, but that gentleman absolutely refused to open the door until he was warned that they would break it down.

This reluctance on Mr. Howard's part was entirely misconstrued, when Mrs. Glendon was taken from the closet in a fainting condition she was only his nimbleness of foot, which enabled him to keep ahead of his pursuers, as down the stairs and around the hotel they ran. And he succeeded in dodging them, and again used upstairs only to mistake Nell's room for his own. It proved however, to be Nell who, seeing a man under the bed fled down-stairs and brought up the crowd.

But no sooner had they dragged him out, than she recognized the old gentleman and hurriedly informed her mother that they must now make a clean breast of the matter. And although somewhat uncomfortable for all concerned it proved an excellent lesson for the mischievous. Nothing could again induce her to meddle with a guest's belongings.

SOLAX.

HIS BEST FRIEND.—Lord Kilgore seated one day in his ancestral home with his best friend Betsy, at his feet, is called upon by an attorney, who shows him a copy of Mr. Hodge's will, containing the remarkable provision that his entire fortune is left to Lord Kilgore provided he will immediately proceed to America and marry his cousin, Miss Westcote, whom his lordship has never seen.

Lord Kilgore after mature deliberation decides to comply with his Uncle's wishes and departs with his four footed friend for the United States. On the ship he meets Villiers, a New York crook, to whom he confides the purpose of his trip.

Villiers conceives the idea of detaining Lord Kilgore and of impersonating him at the home of the girl whom he is going to see. Bribing the wireless operator aboard the ship to send a message to Miss Allen in New York, one of their number disguised as a cowboy meets the vessel upon the pretext and succeeds Lord Kilgore from sending the message to Betsy and to Miss Allen.

When the ship reaches New York Villiers secures Lord Kilgore, and locking him bound in a room at the headquarters of the gang proceeds to the home of Miss Allen where he is now awaiting the arrival of Lord Kilgore. Villiers reckoned however, without the faithful friend of Lord Kilgore—his dog Betsy. The canine at once takes advantage of Villiers absence from the room to gnaw his master's pencil and paper upon which he scribbles a note informing Miss of his plight.

The dog with human intelligence then ribbs herself in one of Lord Kilgore's gloves and delivers the note to Allen, having been carried there by the animal himself. The three friends then locate Villiers and a combat puts the place where Kilgore is detained his lordship is liberated and the villain arrested and all ends happily.

IMP.

MAID OR MAN.—Bundle Keene is an adept devotee of the much art of self defense and never misses a boxing match when he can help it. Bundle is a fashionable business being a dummy in the church, naturally forever upon seek affairs regarding them as brutal and demoralizing.

Bundle buys a ticket for an exhibition of this nature, but in leading out of the house to attend it, he drops the ticket and leaves without it. The ticket is picked up by the usual wee lassie it to Bundle's lessee, who regards it with interest. Dismissing Bundle's absence he goes to the place and finds that his father has it. The dummy stands no reproof friends, but with bitter words defeat into victory, he pummeling his father he unobtainable and judge will his own eyes whether or not boxing exhibitions are a pernicious form of amusement.

At the height of the bout [illegible] the curtain is rung up for the [illegible] scene in the exhibiting Bundle knows. Now in [illegible] regarding [illegible] Bundle by his father's [illegible] and [illegible] make a [illegible] of [illegible] the fun ensues [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the house and serves to disguise Trent till of Abel's village and subsequently to hallucinate everyone in the house and wind up left of him is taken by a fool's assumption.

Almost all the excitement is over. Some arrives over the border and is likewise run farewell, which Gus obtains and we doubt if Mack his pugnacious, we are to discover at once why the "banishment" had results in and becoming insanity at his industrious position he explains instructed describing his humble antecedents of the afternoon.

THE MIXUP.—Mrs. Harry Hawkins has the ill fortune to shoot her cousin purse on the street and the stiff needed satisfaction to have it picked up by Cash Peters who returns it to her in a most gracious manner. After she has thanked him and himself walks away, he grasps her purse, finding Mrs. Hawkins by her appearance and straightforward manner to be.

When she reaches her home, he again accosts her, but she escapes him by running into the house and slamming the door in his face. Cyril, however, belongs to the persistent and irrepressible order of mashers, and so running around the house and climbing up onto a snowbank, he peers into a window, and seeing her inside telling her troubles to Molly, the maid, he raises the window and entering the room, rushes to her side and declares his undying affection for her. She beats a hasty retreat, entering into the room and locking the door. He is not at all discouraged by his reception, but handing Molly a liberal tip, begs her to secrete him somewhere until he has the opportunity of meeting his mamsenals again. Molly puts him in a large closet and then, looking out of the window, sees her sweetheart, Mike Dugan, a second-rate heavy weight prize fighter. She invites him in and explains the situation to him and asks him to throw the unwelcome visitor out of the house. Before, however, she can tell him where Cyril is concealed, she is called from the room.

Then Harry Hawkins, the husband, who has been away on a trip, arrives home and as he answers to the description of Cyril, Mike "gets busy" and with a mighty heave sends him through the window onto the snow bank. Mrs. Hawkins and Molly then enter and Mike tells them that he has done what they requested him to do. Mrs. Hawkins is delighted and thanking him heartily, she rewards him by giving him a bill of a large denomination. The three of them leave the room.

Poor Hawkins has by this time gathered himself together and returned to the house, where he meets Cyril, who has come from the closet. Cyril is busy explaining that he has called on business, when Mike re-enters the room, and while Cyril again returns to his closet, seizes Hawkins and once more throws him from the window.

Hawkins is again entering the front door when he meets the expressman carrying the trunk and quickly suspecting it, he gets into it and orders the man to deliver him inside. His orders are obeyed and he once more finds himself in the trunk in the room. As he starts to raise the lid, he hears someone coming and lets it fall back into place. Mrs. Hawkins, Molly and Mike are entering the room just as the lid falls and thinking the obstinate Cyril is concealed in the trunk, Mike picks it up and hurls it from the window and Hawkins again lands on the snow bank. Then Mike recalls the expressman and orders him to take the trunk away.

Hawkins calls through the bottom of the trunk and again leaves the front door. No sooner does Mike see him than he seizes him and is proceeding to eject the life out of him, when Mrs. Hawkins rushes to the rescue and explains matters.

Then Cyril, the unsuppressible, peers curiously and gingerly from his hiding place and finding all he also goes flying through the window, propelled by the united efforts of Mike and Hawkins, and peace at last spreads her wings over the home of the Hawkinses.

RELIANCE.

THE VOWS.—Walton, religiously inclined, studies for the priesthood and becomes a novice in a monastery. Before taking the vows he thinks he should see the world, and the old monk gives his consent in believing it is a harmless whim. The youth secures employment as a reporter and is assigned to interview a famous actress—Miss Carter. Her beauty and assumed air of domesticity and innocence infatuate him. Calling at her apartments unannounced however, he surprises her in a wild gathering of stage people and fast young men and the flaming wine and frivolity appall him. With bitter disappointment he drowns his grief in drink, and in a highly dramatic scene removes Miss Carter's garment and sewed she adorns for the first time that she leaves him and the impetuous youth immediately plans for the wedding. Walton goes to tell the good father, who already knows the pure-hearted boy would be happier in the bosom of his family, and the scene changes to a well appointed drawing room and plants with Miss Carter to give Walton up but she spares him with pleasant words. Later alone she sees the wisdom of the priest, and when Walton calls she persuades him to go back to the church. This is one of the most impressive scenes ever witnessed. She accompanies Walton to the monastery, and as he kneels to receive the tonsure she takes the knife of his calling from his shoulders, and with tears streaming from her eyes passes out into the world again, followed by a benediction of the priest, while Walton, with bowed head communes with God a most touching and beautiful tableau.

BISON.

TEXAS TED'S DEFENSE.—Texas Ted loves the sheriff's daughter, Tillie, and is favored by her father. He becomes involved in a card game and catches a sharp cheating. In the fight that ensues he wounds his opponent and is pursued and captured by the sheriff and his posse who arrest him. Ted, balking at being led to prison, grabs the sheriff's gun, gets the drop on the entire crowd, and holding them at bay secures a written confession from the wounded man that he alone was to blame, having stolen cards and pulled his gun first. This exonerates Ted and relieves the sheriff from incarcerating his prospective son-in-law.

THE REDSKIN'S SECRET.—Badly wounded from a fall, White Cloud, an Indian, brings a dead buck to health by the settler and his wife, and becomes the plaything of the settler's child. While the children are canoeing the settler's family is exterminated by redskins. White Cloud takes Esther to a white settlement and some years later rescues her from the Indians. Loving her dearly, he devotes his life to watching over and protecting her. Her affections, however, finally drift to a woundhood. Esther marries a handsome white settler, and White Cloud congratulates them and, there being nothing left for him to live for, he seeks the resting place of Esther's parents and destroys himself.

ATLAS.

HIS GREAT SACRIFICE.—A demonstration of modern surgery forms one of the strongest situations in this powerful picture drama. The scene deals with a young girl who possessed a wonderful voice and rose to fame almost over night. She was one of those who lost her head when success came and forgot her dearest friend, listening to flattery of an admiring throng.

But all the while in her dressing room and the doctors had declared she was horribly disgusted for her wife, she found her admirers dropping off until she was left to suffer alone.

The loyal one, however, who had given her a musical education and watched her rise with pride and joy, was still the same true and devoted slave. Even when a great surgeon told him she could only be restored to her former beauty by skin grafting, he proved his great love by offering himself for the operating knife.

The big scene of the operation was replete with real surgical equipment, trained nurses and a well known hospital interior. Details were handled accurately and true to life.

YANKEE.

THE COUNTING HOUSE MYSTERY.—Yes, the money disappeared while every man in the counting room was present. Where that ten thousand dollars went was a subtle mystery for the police to fathom, and the only clue was a clerk who had been slightly wild at times, therefore suspicion fell to his door and the bungling law considered the case practically solved.

Nell Pierce did not accept the popular verdict, however, but unerringly hit upon a solution of the problem, which proved her wonderful power of deduction.

To work out her astounding theory and prove its plausibility entailed great danger and effort on her part, but she did not falter for an instant.

She found her quite as she saw it and struggled bravely on to victory. Bucking fate and three, next to a blind war veteran, then as an Irish scrubwoman, then as Black accomplice, and even appearing on the scene in the difficult guise of an aged policeman. Well, The Yankee Girl deserves, her laurels brought her name to fame, and not only saved an innocent boy from prison, but succeeded in unmasking one of the most baffling crimes of her career.

THE TAXICAB MYSTERY.—In "The Taxicab Mystery" we have written and produced one of the season's most baffling mysteries. There is a tale of unusual interest, but at all times leaves the audience in suspense, waiting for the clever sleuth to solve the mystery.

He is aided by a pretty stenographer who, in one scene, goes into the Turkish baths and soaks the glass with her slipper to allow the deadly fumes of gas to escape.

The scenes through New York's busy streets is both novel and thrilling, in fact every scene is a distinct departure from those usually used in moving pictures. The part of Petrosh, detective, is played by Mr. Krolmer, who is familiar to our friends as "The Italian Sherlock Holmes." A strong cast supports Mr. Krolmer, including Marine Gardiner, late star of "Death Valley," and other prominent players.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The La Vista Theater Company. Capital $5,000. Directors: D. Ashton, P. E. Hemphill and C. F. Stanley.

New York City.—The Carlfried Amusement Company. Capital $5,000. Directors, Carlfried Friedman, Abraham Carlos, Isaac Dobroczanski.

Chicago, Ill.—The Sherman Amusement Company. Capital $1,500. Directors, S. Rubstadt, J. Kaplin, D. Jetsinger.

St. Louis, Mo.—The St. Louis Motion Picture Company. Capital $85,000. Directors, Anthony C. Wagner, J. N. Arens and O. E. Goebel.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Lyric Waterville Company. Capital $5,000. Directors, M. B. Wunder, B. F. Sapp and Louis Schlafly.

Chicago, Ill.—The Milwaukee Avenue Theater Company. Capital $1,000. Directors, Fred D. Silber, M. J. Hanrahan and Charles E. Kelly.

Milwaukee, Wisc.—The Orpheum Amusement Company. Capital $2,000. G. T. Rugg, Phillip Pollack and Morris L. Mack.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Victor Theater Company. Capital $10,000. Directors, W. H. Correll, Charles S. Bell, Robert M. Scott, I. L. Huddle and C. E. Dickman.

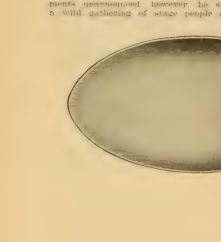
Lititz, Pa.—Messrs. J. F. Stoner and Brother, who have been conducting the Home Theater for some time, on North Broad Street, have leased the Rudy Hall and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Oakland, Nebr.—Arrangements have been filed for the erection of an up-to-date moving picture theater which will be established at the corner of Oakland Avenue and Fourth Street, which will be under the proprietorship of Messrs. M. C. Freed and Mr. Beck.

Harrisburg, Penn.—Two moving picture theater proprietors have consolidated here and will do business by the name of the Majestic Theater Company.

ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES 1 CENT EACH.

Up-to-date theaters use them for announcing future programmes, for song chorus slides when the chorus slide is missing, for business advertising slides —in fact, for anything you desire to say to the audience. They are written on colored gelatin with a pen and ink or typewriter. They look well. Anyone can make them. Takes three minutes to make slide. For three dollars ($3.00) cash with order, I send by express (charges not prepaid) as follows: 24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatine—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. F. H. RICHARDSON, No. 6 Bradhurst Avenue, New York City.



THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred
This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.
UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 2—The Two Paths (Dr.).....992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves (Dr.).....998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Dr.).....992
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Com.).....992
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.).....995
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.).....999
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.).....999
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.).....998
Jan. 26—The Poor Sick Men (Dr.).....991

EDISON.

Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep (Com.).....
Jan. 5—The Dept. of New York City (Sc.).....
Jan. 6—A Western Night (Dr.).....
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Scenic).....
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.).....
Jan. 13—The Link That Held (Dr.).....
Jan. 17—With Interest To Date (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 18—Linda's Birthday Gift (Com.).....995
Jan. 20—Make Me Mine (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.).....995
Jan. 27—The Black Hordred Letter (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.).....995

ESSANAY.

Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys (Com.).....1000
Jan. 10—The Squemaroo's Romance (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.).....990
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 21—The Border Ranger (Dr.).....985
Jan. 24—A Six Cylinder Affair (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Jan. 3—The Artful's Pay Day (Dr.).....972
Jan. 7—The Woman Who (Com.).....945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.).....758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Gordica (Dr.).....243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.).....958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.).....887
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Scenic).....158
Jan. 21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.).....965
Jan. 24—The Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.) 945

KALEM.

Jan. 4—The Bolted Door (Dr.).....975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Eaglet (Dr.).....955
Jan. 9—For Love Of An Enemy (Dr.).....995
Jan. 13—The Heart of An Indian Mother (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 18—Her Choun's Rescuer (Dr.).....980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.).....950
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.).....950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.).....970

LUBIN.

Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy (Dr.).....950
Jan. 5—His Last Parade (Dr.).....890
Jan. 8—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....900
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....950
Jan. 16—Will It Come To This (Com.).....715
Jan. 16—Faw Com (Com.).....250
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.).....975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—His Regen Uncle (Com.).....1000

MELIES.

Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Old Nourie Gal (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—A Western Wedding (Dr.).....980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.).....980
Jan. 5—The Optimum Store (Dr.).....980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L" Ranch (Dr.) 980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.).....980
Jan. 26—How Mac the Commuters (Dr.).....980

PATHE.

Jan. 2—The Misplaced Petticoat (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids (Sc.).....
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—An Intrigue (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties (Com.).....990
Jan. 9—The Pursuit of Count Toland (Sc.).....
Jan. 9—The Lyin of Bedding (Dr.).....
Jan. 9—In the Land of Bonbons (Scenic).....
Jan. 11—The Tin Soldiercito (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—Inness Rambles Takes a Flight (Com.).....
Jan. 13—So Near Yet Not (Com.).....
Jan. 13—Max is Almost Married (Com.).....
Jan. 14—The Battle At Bonwood (Dr.).....
Jan. 16—Marjorie's Devotion (Dr.).....
Jan. 16—Saved By Her Dresses (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—Trailed By An Indian (Dr.).....
Jan. 20—Sea Birds in Their Haunts (Sc.).....
Jan. 20—The Tailor's Apprentice (Com.).....
Jan. 21—The Masked Dollar (Dr.).....
Jan. 23—How Mac Were Around the World (Com.).....
Jan. 25—Caught by a Lion (Com.).....
Jan. 25—Saved By Telegraphy (Dr.).....
Jan. 27—A Squeeze (Com.).....
Jan. 27—It Happened (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Father Against His Will (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Scenic Rolls Along (Scenic).....

SELIG.

Jan. 2—The Argonauts (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Dramatist (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 16—Buddy (Dr.).....1040
Jan. 19—An Old Gentleman's Honor (Dr.).....
Jan. 23—A Rodeo Partner (Com.).....

URBAN ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair (Dr.).....978
Jan. 11—Wasted Assets (Dr.).....970
Jan. 13—Wood Carving at Eelaea (Ind.).....320
Jan. 18—By The King's Decree (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Second Bedding (Dr.).....980
Jan. 25—Scenes in Ireland (by British Scenic).....296

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 3—All Is Fair In Love and War (Dr.).....973
Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Their Nephew, Billy (Com.).....979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar (Dr.).....994
Dec. 10—Jealar Cupid (Com.).....987
Dec. 17—Where Love Dies (Dr.).....964
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.).....975
Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Dr.).....
Jan. 20—The Girl by the Wash Bowl.....
Jan. 21—Cast Up By The Deep (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Fitzmaurice Parade (Scenic).....
Jan. 27—Soul of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Daily Jokes at the South Seas.....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 23.

Biograph Fate's Turning (Dr.).....998
Lubin—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.).....975
Pathe—How Max Went Around the World (Com.).....965
Pathe—Gasoline Pat a Tonic (Com.).....964
Selig—A Rodeo Partner (Com.).....1000

Tuesday, January 24.

Edison—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Essanay—A Six Cylinderable (Dr.).....1000
Gaumont—The Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.) 945
Vitagraph—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.).....
Vitagraph—Fitzmaurice Parade (Scenic).....

Wednesday, January 25.

Edison—The Lover and the Count (Com.).....995
Kalem—The Secret of the Still (Dr.).....950
Pathe—Saved By Telegraphy (Dr.).....995
Pathe—Winifles' New Sleeves (Com.).....982
Urban—The Sailor's Return (Dr.).....980
Urban—Scenes in Ireland (by British Scenic).....296

Thursday, January 26.

Biograph The Poor Sick Men (Dr.).....991
Lubin—Father Love (Dr.).....1000
Melies—How Mary Met the Commuters (Dr.) 980
Selig—The Old Nurse (Dr.).....1000

Friday, January 27.

Edison—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.).....1000
Pathe—It Happened (Dr.).....994
Kalem—Puritans and Indians (Dr.).....970
Vitagraph—Soul of the Mountains (Dr.).....

Saturday, January 28.

Essanay—The Two Reformations (Dr.).....1000
Gaumont—Chile Nut Grocer.....
Lubin—His Regen Uncle Will (Dr.).....720
Pathe—Betty Rolls Along (Scenic).....280
Vitagraph—Daily Jokes at the South Seas.....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, January 23.

American—When the Ships Separate (Com.).....1000
Lubin—Fatima's Treasure (Com.).....
Pathe—Kill the Fox (Com.).....442
Rex—The Fan (Dr.).....1000
Yankee—The Comtes's Last Chance (Dr.).....

Tuesday, January 24.

Bison—Red Man's Means (Dr.).....
Dawson—A White Lie (Dr.).....
Powers—Lazy Lessons (Com.).....
Thanhouser—When Dad Was Bound (Dr.).....

Wednesday, January 25.

Ameroan—A Wife's Devotion.....
Anderson—Tuxedo (Dr.)—White Lie (Dr.).....
Atlas—Mother (Dr.).....
Champion—Why He Would Work (Dr.).....

Thursday, January 26.

American—Bertha's Downfall (Dr.).....1000
Imp—Phone Love (Com.).....
Lubin—The Recovering Drunk.....

Friday, January 27.

Bison—Tilda's Wedding (Com.).....
Lone Star—Wife (Com.).....
Powers—Lazy Lessons (Com.).....
Reliance—An Outcast (Dr.).....
Selig—His Better Friend (Dr.).....

Saturday, January 28.

Champion—The Sheriff (Dr.).....
Comet—Scientific Mr. Muggins Has His Revenge.....
Crystal—Mother's Influence (Dr.).....
Great Northern—Intrigue (Dr.).....
Lubin—Mr. or Mrs. (Com.).....
Powers—The Mysterious Mr. (Dr.).....
Reliance—The Lost Locket (Dr.).....

Moving Picture Supplies

We are the largest dealers in Moving Picture Supplies and Machine Parts in the United States. We are also the largest jobbers of "Bio" and "Electra Pink Label" Carbons, and always carry a large stock for immediate delivery.

WRITE FOR LIST

American Moving Picture Supply Co.
110 Fourth Ave. New York City

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write today for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

START THE NEW YEAR by Subscribing to The MOVING PICTURE WORLD
$2.00 PER YEAR $2.00

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Jan. 2—Mrs. 'Arris Uses Vaseline (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Arizona Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 12—Lady's Lover (Com.)
Jan. 12—The Borrowed Hat (Com.)
Jan. 16—The Battered Bridegrooms (Com.) 525
Jan. 19—Bandal Dressed (Com.) 450
Jan. 23—The Bandits's King (Dr.) 900
Jan. 26—Wood A Maid Be Made (Com.) 1000
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 30—The Genius (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 2—The Mexican in the Desert (Dr.)

ATLAS.

Dec. 14—Brothers (Dr.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Steak Ride (Dr.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan. 18—The Wolf (Dr.)
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.)
Feb. 1—His Legal Sacrifice (Dr.)

CHAMPION

Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.) 950
Dec. 21—His Medal (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—The Golden Grain (Dr.)
Jan. 4—Kings of the Earth West (Dr.) 950
Jan. 11—She's a Widow (Com.) 950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan. 25—Why He Went West (Dr.)
Feb. 1—Judged by Himself (Dr.)

COLUMBIA.

Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Duel (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Pampas (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.) 485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.) 480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.) 920
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Susthenes Ramulot (Com.) 478
Jan. 16—Mr Wife's Hat (Com.) 482
Jan. 20—Painless Extraction (Com.) 508
Jan. 23—Still The Fire Burns (Dr.) 442
Feb. 6—Decree Against His Will (Dr.) 984

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 25—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sec.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery (Dr.)
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence (Com.)
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)

IMP.

Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.) 995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.) 996
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.) 998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.) 995
Jan. 16—His First Patient (Dr.) 500
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.) .500
Jan. 16—Melody 996
Jan. 23—The Dream (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 26—Plume 1767 Chester (Dr.) 997
Jan. 30—Maid or Man (Dr.) 995
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement (Com.) 500
Feb. 2—The Mayor (Com.) 500

LUX.

Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.) 498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.) 387
Jan. 13—Bill As A Jockey (Com.) 465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.) 430
Jan. 20—A Dreadful Dilemma (Dr.) 586
Jan. 20—His Faithful Furniture (Com.) 950
Jan. 27—Little Willie Goes Cycling (Dr.) 296
Jan. 27—An Infamous Son (Dr.) 652

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison.")

Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess.
Dec. 27—An Indian's Elopement 900
Dec. 30—Taming the Terror 900
Jan. 3—In the Heart of the Sierras (Dr.) 900
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion (Dr.) 900
Jan. 10—An Indian Trapper's Prize (Dr.) 900
Jan. 13—The Creek Claim (Dr.) 900
Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense 900
Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret 900

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 29—The Rustic 900
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls 500

Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day 500
Jan. 5—Auburto Tosscrino 900
Jan. 7—Published As Inspector of Hygiene (Com.) 900
Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza 900
Jan. 14—The Recall 900
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination 900
Jan. 21—The Visit of a Friend 500
Jan. 24—A New Kind of an Arm Chair 500

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum As a Police-man (Com.) 500
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition (Dr.) 500
Dec. 28—Grandfather's Pipe 500
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver 500
Jan. 11—How Tweedledum Pass His Bills 500
Jan. 11—Sad and Low Bells 500
Jan. 18—A Tailor's Queer Advertisement 500
Jan. 18—The Blue Domino Disguise 500

NESTOR.

Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 28—Elsie of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 4—The Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.) 950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man In 23
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.)

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan. 3—Next Door (Com.)
Jan. 7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 10—The District Attorney (Dr.)
Jan. 10—A Trip to Husbands (Com.)
Jan. 14—Monte Cristo (Dr.)
Jan. 17—Mending Love Sores (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 24—A Widow's Love (Dr.)
Jan. 24—Little Dorothy (Com.)
Jan. 28—The Masquerades (Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line
Dec. 24—The Refuge
Dec. 31—A Sacrifice—and Then (Dr.) 900
Jan. 7—As the Shadow Orders (Dr.) 900
Jan. 11—The Hour of Fate (Dr.) 900
Jan. 14—A Kentucky Belle 900
Jan. 18—A Country Girl 900
Jan. 21—The Vows 900
Jan. 25—For Remembrance 900

REVIER.

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute (Dr.) 950
Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.)
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.)
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.) 500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.) 500

SOLAX COMPANY.

Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan. 6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing In Canada (Sc.)
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb. 3—Ring Of Love (Com.)

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers (Com.) 1000
Jan. 10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan. 10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Vote That Counts (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 17—Bertie's Brainstorm (Com.)
Jan. 20—The Old Curiosity Shop (Dr.)
Jan. 24—When Love Was Blind (Dr.)
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment (Com.)
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride (Com.)

YANKEE.

Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned To The Fold (Dr.)
Jan. 23—The Cowrie's Last Chance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—A Son of Old Glory (Dr.)
Jan. 28—The Taxicab Mystery (Dr.)
Feb. 3—The Counting House Mystery (Dr.)

The Moving Picture World
The Representative Trade Paper
$2.00 : Per Year : $2.00

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order. 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATION WANTED.

YOUNG MAN desires position in the film manufacturing industry. Willing to do anything and accept small salary for start. Inexperienced, but understands the art of acting. Might do as utility man. H. E. FOWLER, 26 West 128th St., New York City.

AT LIBERTY.—Experienced moving picture operator and theatrical Steam organ man in the business. Income or travel. Responsible managers only. State all in first letter. THEODORE RIEHL, Orangeville, Pa.

BY HUSTLER as exchange or theater manager, or traveling representative. Long experience and connections in all branches. Can furnish best references and bond if desired. Address, MAIN F. SCHERER, 6656 Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THEATERS FOR RENT.

FOR LEASE.—Moving Picture Theater fully equipped, corner of Merrick and Remsenburg Roads, Lambertville. Address, WILLIAM GIBB, Far Rockaway, N. Y.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—A Gaumont Moving Picture Camera, positively new. A bargain for cash buyer. E. M. OLSON, 656 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Send us new, Selig Polyscope moving picture machine complete with film box. Address, EDW. MANVILLIAN, 339 South Morgan Street, Chicago, Ill.

In Answering Advertisers Kindly Mention
Moving Picture World

Insure yourself against burned off lead wires by installing a pair of Sterling terminals.

Positively the best terminal ever devised for motion picture arc lights, guaranteed to prevent burned off wires.

We claim this to be the simplest and most practical terminal on the market. Merely insert wire and screw down the nut. It grips the wire like a vise.

Send $1 today for a pair postpaid. State size wire used.

STERLING NOVELTY CO.
500 Main St., Warren, Ohio
Exchanges write for proposition.

Admission Tickets

Reading 5c., 10c. and ADMIT ONE
Correctly Numbered. Good Paper

Per Roll of 2,000	$ .20
10 Rolls	1.90
20 Rolls	3.75

Dissolving Stereopticons and Moving Picture Machines, repair parts for all Machines. Carbons, etc.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 Olive Street St. Louis, Mo.

The Moving Picture Theatre Supply House of the West

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.

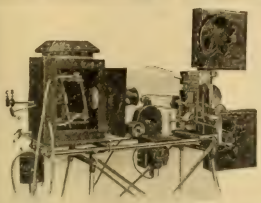
Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

The Daylight Screen

KOCH & STACKHOUSE, - Stroudsburg, Pa.

It has every essential feature of all other screens and many special features of its own.



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

LAST CALL

AT THE OLD LIST PRICE

After Feb. 1st, 1911

$225.00

Only machine approved by New York Fire Underwriters where motor is used. Absolutely flickerless.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY

101 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.

FILMS FOR SALE

after sixty or ninety days of release.
Also commercial in excellent condition at reasonable prices.

M. YSSEL

973 N. 7th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MANUFACTURERS---NOTICE!

I am now prepared to do special work on exposures, negatives, developing and printing.
Guaranteed work by my own process.
Interior work by X-ray filter system a specialty.

FRED. W. HOCHSTETTER

2726 W. Division St., Chicago, Ill.

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

LOUISE M. MARION'S
Great Novelty of
ILLUSTRATED POEMS
Patriotic and otherwise
Also her attractive comedy play
MONEY! MONEY!! MONEY!!! is a great drawing card for
THEATERS, CLUBS, ETC.
Terms reasonable
Operator furnished when desired
Attractive painted posters and slides made from life models supplied free of charge

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23d St. New York City

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR
FILM PERFORATING DIES
When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.
THE A. DEWES COMPANY
249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

Atlas Films Hold the World

OUT FEBRUARY 1
A Big Surgical Sensation
His Great Sacrifice
Powerful story, strong cast and an actual fac-simile of a skin grafting operation.
One of the Year's Big Films
Atlas Film Co. 10 E. 15th St. New York

SPECIAL DETECTIVE WEEK
MONDAY, JAN. 30
"The Taxicab Mystery"
With the Italian Sherlock Holmes
Coming FRIDAY, FEB. 3
"The Counting House Mystery"
With Nell Pierce, Detective
BULLETINS—POSTERS—FREE

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 East 32d Street New York

All Advertising Copy must be in hand not later than Wednesday Noon

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

POSITIVELY
the only way to
CHECK YOUR PUBLIC

The Jones Check Gate has been in operation at different stations in the HUDSON TUNNELS, and found to give a perfect count, with a smooth and noiseless operation.

Many of the large Theatres in New York and elsewhere have installed THE JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE, and they have favorably satisfied those purchasers.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE MAN
TO GET YOU ONE

Manufactured by JONES CHANGE REGISTER COMPANY, Inc., 18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

LIGHT EFFECTS
Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.
UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros.
PROPRIETORS
1393-5 Broadway, New York City

United States Film Brokers and Importers
41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.
Second-hand Independent Films all makes 60 and 90 days old
SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records
Complete lists sent free upon request

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B
Portable Calcium Gas Outfit
is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit
because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.
"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.
For Sale by Dealers.
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

This week, a Trade Paper wanted to know the meaning of
Rex
So the whole world may know, as well as all the readers of the World
Rex means good films
See announcement to come out before in the next issue of the Moving Picture World.
THE SALES COMPANY WILL SELL ALL OF THEM

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - ShamoKin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
Steel Frame Theatre Chairs
ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office; 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office; 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 1054th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Exhibitors in N. Mexico, Arizona and Nevada

We have secured the rights for the above States for the Exclusive Motion Pictures of the Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration held at Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Three reels of the greatest Western Pictures ever produced. An exact reproduction of an event that amazed and delighted 50,000 people at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Give your patrons a genuine treat and make some money, too. Get busy and book this big feature. Address,

THE TOURNAMENT FILM COMPANY
Box 34 Silver City, New Mexico

CONSPIRACY

is the keynote of TRUST existence. Slander and abuse through under-strappers, their stock in trade. Treachery is rewarded while honesty of purpose is condemned. The unlawful Combinations will come into their own if you will

BE INDEPENDENT

TRY THE
SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.
338 SPRUCE STREET
Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR SALE—1,000 feet late films, $5 to $15 per reel; Lubin Ex. Model $60; Powers, Edison new machines, $100. Motiograph, $125; Fort Wayne reducers, $30; song sets, $1; odd slides, $6. Moving Picture Theatres cheap; will buy same. For Rent—8,000 reels film, $1 per reel. Will buy machines, film, Passion Play.

H. DAVIS Watertown, Wis.

FOR SALE CHEAP

1 Powers machine, $80.
1 Edison machine, $75.
300 reels of films at $5 per reel.
100 sets of song slides.

J. WILSON
138 East 14th St. New York, N. Y.

Operators and Managers Hand-book $1.50

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad. last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA 733

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two hands on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-30

J. H. HALLBERG 36 East 23d St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street Chicago

UNIFORMS

FOR

USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.

We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready
The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

They do the work of expert musicians and relieve your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

Concert Pianorchestra

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 115 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR PATENT FLUTED BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses. Have your house keyboard as a extra improvement. It is an accompaniment to songs. Taunts like Bells, but cheaper. Chromatic, including resonators, dampers and five octaves, $250.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs—JUST OUT

Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Spanglume Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight, Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart Knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams.
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From the Garden of Love.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers Cameragraph No. 6 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

UNIFORMS AND CAPS
FOR
Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

Want Chairs Quick?

Stafford chairs excell all others. We use no three-ply veneers. Why? Not good enough! Five ply is best, and that is why we use them.

Chairs like cut
IN STOCK and GUARANTEED

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO-ILLINOIS

EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

DON'T run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films for the same money. We have equipped a special plant where all slightly scratched films are renovated, and all our films are as good as new. We have several openings for late service. Write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Original Nelson-Gans Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knights Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

Drop us a line.

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago. Omaha.

FILMS WANTED

Three to six weeks old. Want Films of all makes. American made preferred

If possible give prices for each week by itself

E. Johnson, Post Restante, Plainfield, N. J.

CLEAN YOUR FILMS WITH THE
Mortimer Film Cleaner, Give the public a bright clear picture. Send for our BOOKLET giving a full description of the LITTLE WONDER of the Moving Picture World.
THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.
Home Office, Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Me.

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1344 Gramercy

5c Show Souvenirs

IMPORTED CHINAWARE, Per 100	$5.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE, Per 100	7.50
TRICK MATCH BOX, Per Gross	1.75
100 AERIAL PLANS, Large Sailing, Per Gro.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES, Per Gross	2.75
JAPANESE TURKEY GLASS BOX, Per Gro.	1.50
FANCY COLORED RUBBER BALLS, Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR, Assrd Colors, Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY, Per Gro.	1.50
TRENCH HEAIR WHISTLES, Per Gross	1.25
JAPANESE FINGER TRAPS, Per 100	1.00
IMPORTED STONE STEINS, Per Gross	4.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS, Per Gross	1.25

Terms Cash Personal Checks must be Certified

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
611 and 647 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made

Most Attractive Designs

PERMANENTLY NOISELESS

More of our chairs sold than all others combined

There Are Reasons

Large stocks constantly on hand, and we can make prompt shipments of rush orders

Write for Catalog V

American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

FOR SALE OR TO RENT
Gem Theater, Little Falls, N. Y.

The COSIEST and HANDSOMEST theater in the country, located in the heart of the business section. GROUND FLOOR, FULLY EQUIPPED. Can stage any attraction. VAUDEVILLE or REPERTOIRE. Seating capacity, 500. Owners now engaged in other business.

REARDON & SHULTS
P. O. Box 575 Little Falls, N. Y.

EXCHANGES!
Save time and money by having your films redeveloped and renovated by the Hochstetter process. Endorsed and recommended by leading exchanges.

We are now prepared to install renovating plants in exchanges at very reasonable rates.

Specimen work done at our plant at 60 cents a reel. Agents wanted.

Ortho Film Co., 2726 W. Division St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

INDIANA EXHIBITORS

Barney Oldfield—Jack Johnson Auto Race
$10 per day
Belgian Cavalry - - - - 4 per day
Dieppe Auto Circuit - - - 4 per day
Many other feature films for rent

Royal Amusement Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

Sound Effects

In Picture Music the Theaters it is very essential that the pictures and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make such effects and accessories and instruments that will give the exact realization of the subject. We have manufactured Thunder, Bells, Xylophones, Drums, Whistles and Sirens.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3x10 $10.00 / Size Shell 3x8

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb screw rods. Kangaroo, Angora or Skunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F CLEVELAND, OHIO

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

Managers' and Operators' Handbook

.... BY ....

F. H. RICHARDSON

Price $1.50 Postage Prepaid

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See?	20 ft.
Hand Colored, Trick Film -	$3.00
(Same Black and White) -	2.00
Just a moment; Show only half over. 15 ft. Hand Colored -	2.00
(Same Black and White) -	1.50
Ladies' and Children's Matinee every Saturday, 10 ft., Hand Colored - - - -	1.50
(Same Black and White) -	1.00
New Pictures every day, 10 ft. Hand Colored - -	1.50
(Same Black and White) -	1.00

Send for Complete List

Any Announcement you wish made to Order. Send us an order.

Your money back if you say so.

The F. A. Film Cement

IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.

Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle - - - 25 cents
Six bottles by express - - $1.00

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison Street CHICAGO

BIO CARBONS

Let us show you how to get better results

In nine theatres out of ten, better results may be obtained without increased cost simply by a careful selection of Carbons.

It is a well-known fact among Electrical Engineers that a different size of Carbon should be used for every different current, and a different grade for each voltage, if the best results are to be obtained.

In moving picture work the range of voltage at the arc is from 26 to 55 and the range of current is from 15 amperes to 65 amperes.

Before the introduction of the BIO Carbon practically only one size and grade was used. Consequently only those exhibitors who happened to have the particular conditions suited to this size and grade were getting perfect results. The rest—a big majority—were simply getting results that seemed satisfactory because they never had the opportunity to see anything better.

Thousands of exhibitors have availed themselves of our services and are now getting better results than they had ever believed possible. Send us the stubs of the carbons you are now burning and we will make a complete report on their suitability for your purposes and send samples of proper carbons free of charge.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

39 Cortlandt St., New York

Largest importers of Flaming Arc Lamps and Carbons in America

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories

CHAS. M. STEBBINS

1028 Main St.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Large line of Edison Goods

Established 1899

"SILVERLIGHT"

Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain

Extraordinary Features Are:

Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

Everybody Works but Father

under Gen. Flimco's foxy plan. It's a soft snap to "buy" up film exchanges with promises and then "fine" the poor suckers until the office is paid for in fines. How in blazes some of you poor exhibitors can be satisfied to deal with the foxy Flimco, I can't understand. But you're waking up—many of you. And as fast as you come out of your nap, you'll hook up with me and get a film service that will tickle you to pieces. My customers are making more money than you are making. Let that roll around in your think tank for a few days and then write to me.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:

196-198 Lake Street CHICAGO

Other Offices: OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

LOCAL 162 INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE THEATRICAL STAGE EMPLOYEES

AFFILIATED WITH SAN FRANCISCO LABOR COUNCIL AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Moving Picture & Projecting Machine Operators

OF SAN FRANCISCO

ORGANIZED JUNE 23RD 1904 AUXILLIARY TO LOCAL 16. I. A. T. S. E. CHARTERED MARCH 25TH 1909

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. Jan. 12th, 1911.

Mr. F. H. Richardson,
New York City.

Dear Sir:-

I am in receipt of your Handbook for Managers and Operators and after a careful study of your work, I wish to compliment you on its production, as the only book of its kind which has yet appeared which is worthy of the name.

Many copies are now being ordered by the members of this Union, and the Executive Board who has charge of the apprentices has prescribed its careful study by them as a part of the apprenticeship they serve in this Union.

I can readily see of what great value this book will be to the operator who has not had the advantage of association with others with the protection that an organization brings, while I venture to assert that there is no operator who cannot derive benefit from its study.

Thanking you in the name of the craft for what will undoubtedly be of great assistance to better projection, and with best wishes, I beg to remain,

Sincerely yours,

W. G. Woods

Prest. Local 162 M.P. Operators of S.F.

Vol. 8, No. 5 February 4, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

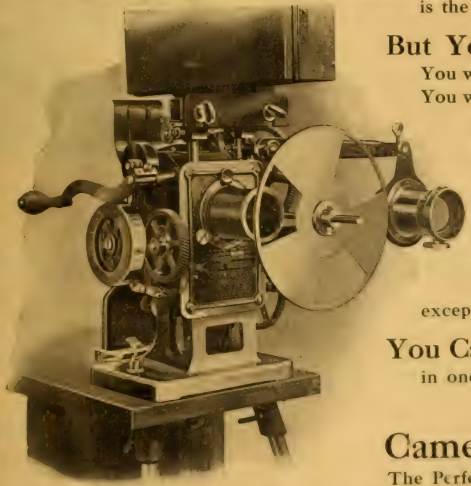
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

The Old Story—(about picture machines)

You have heard it a thousand times—flickerless, bright, steady pictures, noiseless operation. Every maker of picture machines has told you his machine is the only one for these.



But You Want More

You want long service.

You want insurance against breakdowns.

You want freedom from repair bills.

You want satisfied operators.

You want a machine that never causes worry, that requires no attention but oiling and cleaning, and does not demand a thought except when your show is on.

You Can Get All These

in one machine only—

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine.

If you are going to buy a Picture Machine, don't fail to send for Catalog G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

Call Call Call Call Call Call Call Call Call

FOR

THE THANHOUSER

WO-A-WEEK "2 4 U—AND GOOD ONES, TOO!"

Release of Tuesday, Feb. 7

How a "Belted" Earl Was "Belted"!

THE WESTERNER AND THE EARL

deals with that phase of the Foreign Nobleman Question that is best known to America—the exchange of a title for Yankee dollars. A certain English earl tried to exchange his for such of wealthy Mrs. Montague's shekels as came with the hand of her daughter. Mrs. Montague was willing. But her daughter wasn't. The scraggy-looking specimen of nobility didn't appeal to her at all, at all; the healthy, husky American type of man was more to her liking. But the nobleman schemes out a scheme to win her admiration, and, learning of it, the certain American-type-of-man schemes out a counter-scheme—and the pictures bring pleasing order out of the chaos that follows. No. 183. Code-word: Coduke.

Release of Friday, Feb. 10

Another Adventure of Violet Gray, Detective

THE NORWOOD NECKLACE

and its mysterious disappearance give Miss Gray fresh food for reflection and solution. Reflecting on the freeing from custody of a pretty female suspect, Violet decides that the police error was made in the release—and NOT in the detention—of the suspect; and the aftermath of her decision is formed in a solution of the whole necklace puzzle. The case of the Norwood Necklace easily shows bright Violet at her best, and you will admit that though her methods are odd they certainly get the results. No. 184. Code-word: Norwood.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to EDITOR, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high), GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's sake address ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

ENTHUSIASM

¶ A brainy man without enthusiasm is like a fine locomotive without steam, neither one gets anywhere. We have the brains, we have the films and we have the steam to make the independents the dominant factor in the Moving Picture Industry. That we are succeeding is shown by the fact that we have half of the business of the country, after an enthusiastic campaign covering the past eight months.

Subterfuge and trickery can never offset righteous enthusiasm and determination.

EXHIBITORS BEWARE! --- When one of the Trust's exchanges offers to extend you credit in consideration of your taking a higher priced service than you can afford, or for any other consideration, that is the entering wedge of ousting you from your business. After you are hopelessly in debt to one of these man-traps, they will close in on you and take from you a business that has cost you an expenditure of many times the amount of the credit allowed you, and much of your valuable time and effort to build up.

If any of you are thus involved at the present time, communicate with us confidentially at once.

Select your service now from the following:

UNEXCELLED PROGRAMME

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company (First release Feb. 16.)

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, January 24th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects

ALABAMA.
Dixie Film Co., 503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.
California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 614 South Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

CANADA.
Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

COLORADO.
W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.
Co-operative Ind. Film Co., Barclay Block, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
Paramount Film Exchange, 426 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 22 Le Droit Building, Washington.

GEORGIA.
Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.
Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.
Central Film Service Co., 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.
Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.
Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MARYLAND.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Boston Film Rental Co., 605 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 329 Tremont St., Boston.

MICHIGAN.
Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MINNESOTA.
Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MISSOURI.
Bijou Film and Amusement Co., 1322 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.
Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.
Empire Film Exchange, 156 East 14th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 345 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA.
United Motion Picture Co., 132 Main St., Oklahoma City.

OREGON.
Ind. Western Film Exchange, Sweetland Bldg., Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Eagle Film Exchange, 143 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Penn St., Pittsburg.
Philo Film Exchange, 903 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Film and Projection Co., 44 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Pittsburg Photo Play Co., 932 6th Ave., Pittsburg.
Sclanda Film Service Co., 925 Spring St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.
Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH.
Co-operative Ind. Film Co., 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON.
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.
Western Film Exchange, 507 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

Imp News

A distinct and radical departure from the beaten path will be found by moving picture exhibitors in the Imp release of Monday, Feb. 6th, entitled:

"At the Duke's Command"

It is one of the most richly staged and elaborately costumed efforts in the history of moving pictures and will make many new friends for your theater. The story is laid in England in the sixteenth century. The plot is wonderfully strong with human interest, and the acting will arouse the most hardened onlooker. See that you get this and feature it big!

Then a Split Reel!

On Thursday, Feb. 9th, we release a split reel containing two dandy little playlets, "The Mirror" and "When the Cat's Away." Soon after these we will release some of the Imp pictures staged in Cuba and we will simply compel you by their merit to write to us and congratulate us over and over again. If you care to get the benefit of all the coin we are spending to produce the best films in the world, see that you get two Imps every week!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., N. Y. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3x 4 $10.00 / 4 Size Shell 3x15

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut. 10 fine plated thumb screw rods. Kangaroo, Angora or Slunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial
E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. CLEVELAND, OHIO.

The F. A. Film Cement
IT STICKS

Positively guaranteed to work on any film. It don't crack, dry up, or leave any coating on the emulsion; is fire-proof, and only requires about one-half as much as others.
Ask your Exchange for it.

Single bottle - - - 25 cents
Six bottles by express - - $1.00

Send for our complete list of Film Announcement Titles

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Are you one of the easy marks who are pulling on the rope while Gen. Flimco sits on his sled and grins? Are you as easy as those exchanges that he "bought" and then fined whenever he could create an excuse? Aren't you getting sick of the game? Why don't you show your independence, give Independent films a real try-out and find out for yourself how much bigger your receipts will be? Whenever you're ready for good stuff, come to the biggest and best film renter – the one who will give you a cracking good program every week of the year!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196-198 Lake Street
Chicago

OTHER OFFICES
Omaha, Neb.
Minneapolis, Minn.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

THURSDAY

Was named after "THOR" the "GOD of THUNDERBOLTS"
We have therefore selected THURSDAY as very,
VERY APPROPRIATE FOR OUR RELEASE DAY

On that day (the day of thunderbolts), THURSDAY, FEB. 16th, we will hurl our first, with the proper spirit.

A HEROINE OF '76

In those stirring days when principals were exchanged with shots, they were all EXCHANGE MEN.

EXCHANGE MEN, ENLIST!

WITH

REX MOTION PICTURE MANUFACTURING COMPANY

573-579 Eleventh Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

WE WILL FORCE THE SALES CO. TO INCREASE ITS SHIPPING FORCE

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

ARE YOU SHOWING THE LUX-urious release in your weekly program?

If not it must be because you have trouble in getting the best. If you cannot get a LUX every time you want one, write at once to our 10 East 15th Street, New York City, Address.

Release, Friday, February 3rd, 1911

BACK TO THE OLD HOMESTEAD. Drama, 944 Feet

An excellent one subject reel in usual LUX dramatic quality. A sailor son, who tires of work on the home farm, gets into bad company, but proves the worth of his early training at a critical moment and returns with a new appreciation of THE HOME TIES.

GET LUX The Kind of Dramatic Portrayal You are LooKing For and Should Get

FREE COLORED LITHOS. SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

"LASSOING WILD ANIMALS"

In Africa by the FAMOUS BUFFALO JONES

AND WESTERN COWBOYS

A Unique and Sensational Picture, Showing the Capture of Lions, Giraffes, Rhinoceroses, Cheetahs, Zebras and other Wild and Dangerous Animals of the African Jungle, without the use of Deadly Weapons

NOTHING USED BUT THE LASSO

Rights to Exhibit this Picture Have Been Acquired by the Licensed Manufacturers. The Pictures are Made and Marketed by Pathe Freres.

LENGTH, 2,000 FEET. RELEASED SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1911

Place Your Order at Once With Any Licensed Exchange

THIS IS A GREAT FEATURE ::: DON'T MISS IT

ALABASTRA

Artificial human beings

Plastic moving picture without screen!

A Novelty revolutionizing Moving Picture business

DAILY DEMONSTRATIONS TO THE TRADE COMMENCING

Wednesday, February 1st, 10-1 A. M. 3-5 P. M.

at 10 East 15th Street, New York City

THE VITASCOPE COMPANY OF AMERICA

10 East 15th St., New York, and at

Berlin London Paris Vienna Milan Moscow

ONE OF OUR SPECIALTIES

Portable Box Offices

For Theaters and Picture Houses

WIRED COMPLETE READY FOR LIGHTING
CATHEDRAL GLASS DOME
Marble or Wood Base Any Size Any Style

The Largest Builders of
ELECTRIC SIGNS IN THE WORLD

STRAUSS & COMPANY
(Incorporated)
440-442 West 42d Street, New York
Write for Estimate and Catalogue

ENTERTAIN YOUR PATRONS WITH

The Regina
Mandolin Orchestrion

THE music furnished by this wonderful instrument is alone worth the price of admission to your show. It will draw the crowds and hold them as no other musical attraction can do. It is operated by spring motor or by electric motor, as desired, and plays upon piano strings by means of vibrating hammers, making most delightful music which combines the effects of piano, mandolin, violin and organ.

It is furnished either with or without a nickel-in-the-slot attachment and when equipped to play on the insertion of a coin has proved to be a most successful and profitable investment for use in public places.

The Regina Mandolin Orchestrion is fully guaranteed and is sold at a reasonable price. Easy terms of payment can be arranged.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a musical instrument, send for full description of the Regina Mandolin Orchestrion with prices and terms.

THE REGINA COMPANY
Broadway and 17th St., New York 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago

MANUFACTURERS OF

REGINA MUSIC BOXES
REGINA MANDOLIN ORCHESTRIONS
REGINA HEXAPHONES
REGINA PNEUMATIC CLEANERS

SOLAX'S
COMEDY WEEK

ORIGINALITY in comedy is rare, very rare. A distinctive comedy idea is an innovation. The words SOLAX and DISTINCTION are synonymous. Therefore, in the Ring of Love you will get an innovation in comedy.

RELEASE FEB. 3rd

SCENE FROM THE RING OF LOVE.

Among old relics Professor Gink finds a magic ring. Whoever shall wear this ring shall be loved. The many intensely funny maneuvers made to gain possession of this ring by the beau-less maids and the maid-less beaux will make this picture one long to be remembered in the annals of comedy.

RELEASE FEB. 10th

PUT OUT (Comedy)

It is indeed hard lines when a man is not permitted to enter his own house. The burly guardian, mistaking the owner of the house for an intruder, throws him out on his head. At his every attempt to effect an entrance he gets the "bounce". The series of laughable complications will keep the house in an uproar.

RELEASE FEB. 17th

MIXED PETS (Comedy)

Two young couples, one with a pet dog the other with a baby, get the dog and baby mixed in a highly amusing and laughable manner.

Solax Company

147 4th AVE., N.Y. CITY

Champion Films

Peering into the horizon of approaching film features, the eye becomes riveted to a comic photo-sketch, eclipsing the galaxy of kindred subjects, by its wealth of qualitative parts. Let your eye advise your hand to reach for our CHAMPFILM of Feb. 8th, 1911

"At Double Trouble Ranch"

A serial story congested in one. The disruption of home and the restoration of peace by like causes, will furnish home education.

Scene from "At Double Trouble Ranch"

Don't forget CHAMPS on Wednesday

Don't take our word for it, investigate for yourself. Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

See Release Dates for Champ Features

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfess
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at
Coytesville on the Hudson

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 28th

Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done

A smashing hit comedy—bound to get many laughs.

AND

Triumph of Intelligence

A hilarious trick comedy of how brain conquers muscle.
By all means get this reel of genuine fun.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4th

The Criminal Chief's Capture

A meritorious detective story with many exciting and thrilling situations.
A story full of real action. Book this feature now.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 13th

Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike
522 FEET
A Vivacious Little Comic, which "Hits the Nail on the Head."

2 on One

The Elixir of Bravery
424 FEET
A very Gem of the Comic Order, one that will be found Irresistible to all!

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

Moving Picture Theaters

ATTENTION!

WE ARE NOW MANUFACTURING THE

Acme Penny Candy Machine

FOR THEATER CHAIRS

The ACME is all that the name implies. It is mechanically perfect.

Simple Construction, requiring minimum repairs and attention.

Sells Standard Brands, Standard Sizes, of Chocolates, Gum Caramels and Assorted Candy.

The ACME is 90 per cent. slug proof, compact and ornamental. Slots are on top, EASILY SEEN, EASILY OPERATED.

Licensed under U. S. Coin Lock Company's basic patents, insuring against suit for infringement of patent rights.

Backed by resources of over a Million Dollars and over 20 years' experience.

Terms, etc. on application.

N. Y. Coin Operated Machine Co.

(Largest Operators of Theater Chair Machines in the World)

Franco-Swiss Building, 220 WEST 47th STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 FEBRUARY 4, 1911 No. 5

Simplicity of Theme—A Contrast and a Lesson.

One of the dramatic events of the New York season, is the production of Rostand's "Chantecler." This is a play in which the characters are supposed to be the inhabitants of a poultry yard. There is the cock, the hen, the dog, and the like. The teaching of the play is symbolical, as the readers of newspapers well know by the constant references to it since its production in Paris over a year ago, and the spectacular element is very much in evidence. You may call it a crowded symbolical spectacle. Expensive to produce, gorgeous to witness, interesting and perhaps instructive to listen to.

Nevertheless with all this gorgeousness and world-wide reputation, it is questionable, good judges think, whether the play will be a financial success. Its artistic success was assured in Paris. Artistic successes, however, are not wanted by American theatrical managers; there must be dollars and cents in their productions, or they will very soon go by the board.

By way of unconscious contrast to this splendid spectacle, for such "Chantecler" is, there was produced, the other day at the Bijou Theater on Broadway, a little play which has set all New York talking, is pleasing the critics and is attracting the public. This play has just four characters, one of whom has very little to do. So it is virtually a three-part play, in which the actor, Henry Miller, has made a great success. The story, perhaps, is not of the most pleasing kind, but it is strong. There is a woman and two men. No. 1 man is divorced from the woman, and lives with the newly married couple as their friend. But husband No. 2 turns out a bad one, and the woman becomes the stenographer of the man from whom she was divorced in order that she might pay off No. 2's debts. To repeat ourselves, it is not a particularly savory story, but it is unquestionably strong.

It is so strong that it is holding the attention of Broadway just now, and will no doubt have a triumph throughout the country. So there is the contrast. A well populated spectacle at the Knickerbocker, a four-part play at the Bijou. The latter will probably be played, when the other has become a curiosity.

Why? Because it is strongly dramatic. It held the attention of the audience from the rise of the curtain to its fall. And all it needs is four characters and some very ordinary interiors. Is this not a lesson for the film makers? Is it necessary for them to give us so much Cowboy and Indian subjects; so much scenic effect; so many people; so much in the way of rich costumes, accessories, and the like? Would it not be well for them to take a leaf out of the book of Henry Miller and give us something more tense, dramatic, than we are accustomed to get?

It has been pointed out over and over again in these pages that scenic magnificence on the crowded stage is by no means, essential to success in getting a film subject over. Of course, we must have variety of theme, and we must have novelty of theme. The latter it is told us is difficult to get. Is it? Here was this man Mr. Sheldon, the author of The Havoc ready and waiting with his little play. Somebody snatched it up and produced it. The result: Success. The probabilities are that in the moving picture field today, there are many "Havocs" only waiting production. The thing which seems lacking, however, is some perspicacity on the part of those responsible for these subjects.

The editors of the Moving Picture World would like to hear from every exhibitor what they consider was the greatest picture they have shown during the year 1910.

They may qualify their opinions by citing the picture which received the most applause and also stating which picture seemed to create the most profound impression.

Applause alone should not be taken as the criterion of greatness, as some of the dramas of the year have been received with a silence which was equally appreciative if less demonstrative.

* * *

We would also like to hear from the exchange men as to what particular film they had most recalls for. It is desirable to know what kind of film is most popular with the public.

All letters will be held confidential unless permission is given to use the name of the writer.

Many replies have already been received, for which we thank the writers. These will be published as soon as they can be classified.

JACKASS JOURNALISM.

On another page the editor of the "Trouble Department" pokes fun at the so-called "electrical expert" of a contemporary who presumes to criticise his instructions for the setting of the carbons. It is amusing to note how the editor (in name only) of the "Films Index" has tried to imitate every feature of the Moving Picture World: It is pathetic to observe the progress made in his attempts in his eager quest for an opportunity to discredit this paper he has not only displayed his own ignorance but also held up to ridicule his "expert" on electrical matters by printing a page of nonsense which should insult the intelligence of any projecting machine operator. How is this for "expert" knowledge?

> "The projector lamp is, however, provided with a condensing lens, the purpose of which is to gather the light rays from the arc. (Illustrated by diagram.) You will please take note that the arc no longer stays in the center of the carbon points; it is pushed towards the condensing lenses by the slight draught of air created when the condenser pulls the light rays and consequent heat towards itself. The arrows indicate the direction of the air circulation (through the condensers). This valuable discovery, which I made several years ago, is not applicable to its fullest extent, unless the arc is under the control of especially designed and constructed controlling devices, such, for instance, as the ——"

But in mercy we will not couple the name of the writer of the above bon mot with the name of the apparatus he so slyly advertises. Is he joking? Is he trying to pull one over on the editor, or are both trying to gull the reader? No, a whole page of the licensed manufacturer's illustrated circular is taken up to tell of this "valuable discovery," so they are evidently both serious.

The propounder of this new theory has the nerve to couple his name with that of Lord Kelvin and Thomas A. Edison, whom he pretends to honor but intimates that his fifteen years' experience as expert on arc lamps and lighting, qualifies him "to make a reply which can be depended upon as being corect." We would like to hear from our readers as to the "correctness" of his diagnosis.

Meanwhile we will inform the budding editors of the "Index" that the disposition of the arc to form on the sides of the carbon points facing the condenser is because wiser heads than theirs designed the projector lamphouse. This is why the lamphouse is open at the back where the carbon set screws protrude, when it would have been just as convenient to have this opening on the near side. Heat ascends. A strong current of hot air passes up through the ventilator at the top of the lamphouse. This air (cold) is drawn in through the opening at the back and impinges on the sides of the carbons farthest from the condenser, thereby causing them to volatilize less rapidly on that side. Careful operators will not allow the side door of a lamphouse to remain open as the side draught affects the position of the crater. But the condenser does not "pull" anything; it merely collects the rays of light that strike it on one side and bend or converge them to a focal point on the other side.

Any of our readers who want to demonstrate to themselves the value of "expert" theory or our own humble opinion can do so very readily by placing a lighted candle in a draught; then with a condenser or strong magnifying glass try to "pull" the flame. They will find that the candle will gutter on the side opposite to the draught, irrespective of where the condenser is placed.

MONOCHROMATIC LANTERN SLIDES IN MOVING PICTURE HOUSES.

More properly we should call them "plain" lantern slides, for as such, they are generally known in the trade, or we might call them uncolored slides; but although "monochromatic" is a big word, and may repel many of our readers, yet, nevertheless, it has a certain meaning which we could not convey in any other way.

In all the moving picture theaters that we have visited, in this country, colored lantern slides are shown. Strictly speaking, these are "polychromatic" or "many colored," as opposed to monochromatic, which simply implies one color, tint, or tone. Now, it cannot be pretended that these colored lantern slides meet with universal favor, although they are mostly very good, occasionally soaring to high artistic excellence. But when you come to colored lantern slides, unless the thing is extraordinarily well done, there are always two sets of opinions as to whether they are really good or really bad. The fact of the matter is, that a really high-class colored lantern slide is difficult to turn out at the current commercial rates. On the other hand, those that are shown at the moving picture theaters, give good value for the money, and are pleasing, as a rule, to look at. They please the audiences.

Let it be clearly understood that we are not depreciating the use of the colored slide in moving picture theaters. On the contrary, used as song slides, and being of high-class quality, very naturally, add to the attractiveness of a moving picture entertainment, especially if the singer be a good singer.

We want to consider the lantern slide by itself, irrespective of song slides, or even lectures, and we want to know why the monchromatic, or plain lantern slide, that is the ordinary photograph on glass, is so seldom shown. Why is it? We believe the public would welcome a good plain lantern slide just as it welcomes good plain films. There is a restfulness, after all, in monochrome. If things were the other way about, and films were mostly colored, we believe, that the average audience would welcome the plain film as a positive relief; just as the colored film is occasionally welcomed by way of contrast.

The object of this article is to encourage the making, and the projection of plain slides in the moving picture theater. We mean slides of high artistic pictorial quality, specially made slides from high-class negatives, no matter what the subject may be. The lantern slide has often been "killed," but we observe, wherever we go, that it seems to be as popular as ever.

This question, of the use of plain slides in moving picture theaters, has suggested to us that there are other branches of projection work which might very well be adopted in the moving picture theater. To these matters, we shall refer in subsequent numbers. To our thinking, not enough is made of the lantern slide end of matters in the moving picture house. Much may be done with the single lantern, besides simply projecting slides, as we shall see on future occasions.

THE MOTION PICTURE STORY MAGAZINE.

A new magazine, the dream of many minds, has at last been launched, principally through the energy of that versatile man, Mr. J. Stuart Blackton. It is a symposium of film scenarios, as its name implies, but these have been amplified by competent writers into really interesting storiettes of the approved magazine style. The first number, of over 100 pages, is sumptuously illustrated with enlarged reproductions of scenes in the film. With such a source to draw upon the "Motion Picture Story Magazine" can provide its readers with vivid and realistic illustrations beyond the reach of any other periodical. It is expected that this magazine will attain a phenomenal circulation and be well patronized by the general advertiser. Thousands who see the pictures on the screen will be glad of the opportunity to refresh their memory with the complete story, and it is to be hoped that readers of the magazine will be likewise inspired to see the stories enacted on the screen. Many exhibitors have ordered quantities of the magazine to be sold to the patrons of their theaters, and from our own experience we know that the public will be pleased to have this opportunity of reading the stories at their leisure. The magazine is published monthly, yearly subscription price, $1.50; single copies, 15 cents. Address Motion Picture Story Publishing Company, 26 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEW THEATER FOR ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A World representative attended the opening of the Victoria Theater, Rochester, on Monday night. The Victoria is owned by Maurice H. Kuhn, and will be operated by S. Lubin. A brilliant gathering attended the initial performance, which was followed by a banquet, at which addresses were made by the Mayor of Rochester, Mr. Kuhn, Mr. Lubin, and others. Further details are unavoidably held over until next week.

A correspondent of the Kansas City, Mo., Star asks that fivecent theaters have separate rows of seats for girls and women unattended. She declares she is frequently annoyed by the conduct of men who sit next to her.

The Technique of the Picture Play—III.

By George Rockhill Craw.

Art and Business.

If you have ever been connected with the publishing business, you must know of the continuous warfare that is waged between the business department, representing a publication's commercial end, and the editorial department, representing its artistic end.

The cause of this antagonism is the enterprise of the business department, which sees things largely from the standpoint of immediate gain, and which is always demanding sacrifices on the part of the artistic editorial policy.

The business end speaks contemptuously of its rival contingent as "long hairs," and the artistic end gets back at it by referring to the business personnel as "low brows."

Trade-marks on Scenery.

In a film-producing establishment the same conflict of ruthless business prowess and artistic conservation must maintain, and to reduce this inevitable internecine strife to a minimum, a proper knowledge of the needs and aims of each department by the other is necessary to the best interests of the establishment as a whole.

Now, as an example of the inroads of commercialism wrought upon art in motion picture dramas, I will cite the painting or tacking of trade marks upon scenery. We all know how it is done. If the scene is a drawing room, we are pretty apt to find a plaque, or an arbitrary design upon the wall paper, embodying the film producers' trade mark, such as a geometric design, a monogram, a buffalo or Indian head, the dome of a building, or what not.

Usually it sticks out like a sore thumb, to the delight of the film company's advertising department, for it screams, "This is a 'Bison,' or a 'Capitol,' or an 'Essanay,' or a 'Thanhauser.'"

Advertising Department Responsible.

The advertising department, the business end's right arm, doesn't realize that the trade mark also screams, "This drama is only 'make believe.' It isn't life, but just the carpentry of a picture show shop!"

Now, as I have said in my last article, the technical ne plus ultra of picture drama—of all drama, in fact—is to form an illusion, to make the audience believe that the thing really has happened as a matter of life, or is happening as such. Otherwise, why do producers go to such pains to have costumes and scenery and characters conform to the manners and customs of the time and environment of the play? It is to prevent jarring incongruities that may divert the mind of the audience from its interest in the thematic progress of the play. That is the vital reason for artistic perfection in the drama, a perfection that will create the illusion of actual life.

Trade-mark Spoils the Illusion.

But now, after our high-salaried, artistic, and experienced producer has put his brains into creating the height of illusion, a tecnique designed to keep the mind of the audience away from all reasoning as to ways and means, and whys and wherefores, but to simply accept the drama he is producing, as as life—now comes the advertising department with its "sore thumb"—its trade mark or letter or monogram, and sticks it on a wall, or cuts it in the bark of a tree if the scene be laid in the woods, and that little commercial trade mark undoes all the expense and work that art has gone to, for it spoils the illusion, and says to the audience, "This is not life; it is 'make believe.' Our studio is doing all this!"

Now, isn't it foolish for one to try to "make believe," and at the same time to cry, "This is only 'make believe'?"

Bad Practice Result of Enterprise.

Far be it from me to belittle the men whose commercial instinct and prowess has developed the trade mark in the photoplay. The same energy and the same shrewd knowledge of the economies of publicity that is responsible for it, must also be credited with the wonderful growth of the motion picture business.

I may go so far as to say that the trade mark practice is an evidence of cleverness, enterprise, and thought. But like so much business thought, which is mostly formed on the commercial exigencies of the moment, such as meeting the competition of rival firms, etc., it is superficial, and at base tremendously harmful, eventually defeating its own purpose, and resulting merely in a temporary individual gain for its originator and his immediate followers, and in the end resulting in a general weakening of all photoplays.

The Better the Illusion, the Better the Box Office Receipts.

Imagine such thoroughly enterprising producing artists as Belasco, the Shuberts, Frohman, Mrs. Fiske, Liebler, et al., putting a trade mark on their scenery, and yet in what does the end sought by any of these differ from that sought by producers of the silent drama?

They realize simply this:

The better the illusion, the better the box-office receipts.

That is the reason they cultivate their playwrights, giving them both nominal credit and large compensation for their work, for it takes work to build an illusion—work not only by the producer and the actors, but by the author as well—not mere immediate work, but the unrecompensed years of study and preparation that must always precede the doing of good work in any art.

Improvement in Stage Setting.

Producers should try to relieve the cramped appearance of indoor scenes.

Instead of the single room, wherever it is comformable with the requirements of the play, vistas should be shown beyond, either through doors or windows at the rear, opening into other rooms or upon out-of-door prospects.

This policy gives a freer atmosphere to the setting of the stage and results in a relief of the sameness of indoor scenes, a thing that is a deterrent in dramatic illusion, for the minute dramas are branded as such by their sameness, the audience fails to regard them as life.

Thus, sameness in scene has the same capacity for blighting the illusion as has the trade mark on scenery.

Haste a Bad Factor.

The tremendous pressure that is put upon the stage manager to meet the demand for films is resulting in a haste of production that results in incongruities of stage settings.

Especially is this true of firms putting out contemporary American dramas. Here the difference in scene requirements is slight as compared with the producing of historical dramas differing largely as to time and place. In the latter new scenery and "props" are entirely necessary.

In the former case, the same material, somewhat transposed is often made to answer for a number of dramas. It is here that we find the furnishings of a millionaire manufacturer's home much the same as to quality as those of the home of an ordinary bookkeeper, who was the hero of the drama that was staged just before the wealthy manufacturer was put on.

Deadly Assassins.

The window curtains that looked appropriate in the bookkeeper's home are cheap when associated with the home of the wealthy manufacturer, but the producer was rushed and had to make them do.

Now, here is the illusion spoiled when the play of the wealthy manufacturer is staged.

"What cheap curtains for a man like him" the audience says. Its mind is specifically upon the curtains, speculating about them. It is taken off the play, whereas if the curtains had been in keeping, the mind of the audience would have accepted the curtains without argument as a part of a pleasing, unconscious effect, organic with the idea of the play.

How then do the minds of the audience dismiss the disturbing subject of the curtains? "Oh, this is only a drama," they say. "These show people can't be expected to get everything right."

Truly a generous excuse for the producer, but what of the illusion? What of the idea of life that he has meant to give?

Well, it is dead—that's all—killed by a pair of bare curtains.

The Comedy of the Future.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

The first symptom of scrablitis is a sensation of restlessness such as disturbs a spectator while sitting through the presentation of a meaningless or uninteresting photoplay accompanied by "that tired feeling" and sometimes headache. This sickening disgust becomes positive resentment when the play is an alleged comedy, and the only ones who can see the joke or who seem to enjoy it are the performers themselves. When the actors in a pictural comedy slap one another on the back with a best-thing-you-ever-heard familiarity and laugh like a display ad for tooth powder, we common people in the audience feel as though we were a lot of rank outsiders. Our case is that of the deaf man in the country store when the village cut-up is telling one of the best stories ever handed down from Pharaoh's court jester. When we see humor miscarry in that abortive way, we not only get sore, but a fever enters our veins—the hot desire to write something better and show the world what a real play should be. After a period of brooding we conclude to try it; buy a lot of writing materials at the Semitic cigar store around the corner and sit down at a desk of budding immortality. Great thoughts come surging through the imagination, like rolling waves from the Infinite; we eliminate the non-essentials and ink begins to flow like black fluid from a darting cuttle-fish.

General Synopsis: Man found dead; last seen in company with hero. Hero has an empty cartridge shell in his revolver, proving conclusively that he committed the murder as murderers never reload. He is convicted of crime and about to be lynched when heroine lures villain to lonely spot and extorts confession at pistol point. Suspense consists of heroine riding horse over western roads that have a strong family resemblance to those of New Jersey, arriving at the lynching scene as the vigilance committee are hoisting the hero by the neck; heroine shoots and cuts rope; dashes up waving the extorted confession; dismounts gracefully and throws herself on the hero's bosom, and the rest give three cheers because they have not hung the wrong man. That is the result of the amateurish struggle with the picture-play problem. Thousands of these are poured out every month and shoveled in to the scenario editor's sanctum along with plays of genuine merit, very much to the injury of capable authors and to the detriment of the moving picture business. It is a relief, therefore, to see a photoplay bearing the unmistakable marks of the professional writer, produced in a masterly way, as in the case of "Will It Come to This?" a farce-comedy recently released by Lubin.

"Will It Come to This?" is a gem.

It is a burst of sunshine on a foggy day.

Author, director, and company combined to make the comedy one of the best I have ever seen, and the audience liked it just as well as I did, laughing from beginning to end. There is not the faintest trace of a plot, versimilitude is scattered to the four cardinal points of the compass; struggle, there is none; there is no attempt to follow rules and regulations; but it is plain to the initiated that an old hand wrote the play with a vigor and originality absolutely refreshing. There is nothing particularly new about the idea—that of showing what will come to us when women take our places and we take theirs—and there is nothing remarkable about the scenes as presented, though there is a laugh in each one. The essence of the thing is not obvious to the ordinary spectator, but it is there. The motif escapes the audience as it often does the overworked and down-trodden scenario editor, but we feel it, some of us with a thrill of apprehension running down our respective spinal columns. The great trouble about the scenario reader is "themitis." If he recognizes the theme, it is old; if he does not, it is new. We have had 4,000 variations of the "chase," including those of cowboys and Indians, and some producers grind out one a week. It is largely a question of skilled construction, such as enforces an idea.

There is a big idea back of "Will It Come to This?"

We men are a lot of strutting roosters, so vain that we cannot bear to have our sex weaknesses ridiculed. We scratch gravel in the barnyard, sometimes giving a choice worm to a favorite hen; we eat enough to keep alive and wear a few feathers—but what else do we do? Every time a lady chicken lays an egg, the rooster crows. The man with a new baby grabs the hand of every man he knows and invites him to drink as though it was an occasion for rejoicing, though the one who formed the little human being, who fed the new creature from her own blood, who will watch that child through trial and suffering, who will form its mind as she did its body, who will love it from the cradle to the grave, is lying white and still on the bed, exhausted from her tremendous effort. Papa goes around and does all the crowing. He is not thinking of his wife. He is eternally thinking of HIMSELF, the most egotistical animal in all creation. Included in his self-satisfaction are his supposed possessions, this means his wife, especially if she inherits, earns or saves money. Man is very lenient to self-betterment; other men are of no interest unless he can use them in one way or another.

"Will It Come to This?" with all its farcical improbability, reduces man to his proper level. He is no longer a Captain of Industry oppressing the wage-earners. He is no longer the family sourface who spends most of his time in tin-horn despotism, giving advice and trying to raise himself by pushing others down; he has to scrub, sew, and mind the baby. Men in woman's attire look like—you know—while women look fine in our clothes. This comedy is a shock to our self-satisfied sensibilities. We realize that woman gives us everything, including life, and we are so mean that we refuse her a vote. We would make a poor showing in her place, and we know it, while she makes a fine one in ours, and that is what makes the tin-horn, sourfaced, family despot nervous.

The richest field for farce-comedy is not the musty past nor the inglorious present, but the gloriously uncertain future. The Lubin playlet strikes the keynote of farce-comedy success.

I am glad to congratulate the producer and author.

A WORD TO THE MAKERS OF SONG SLIDES.

By Henry.

The World's New England representative is not entirely satisfied with the illustrated song slides that are being produced by the manufacturers. The maker of song slides has, as we view it, a distinctly important mission in this industry; apart from the pecuniary gain that is, of course, involved, the illustrated song is the most formidable opponent of vaudeville in the moving picture theater. If the illustrated slides are good, vaudeville is being successfully combated from gaining a foothold in the regular moving picture theaters; and vice versa. It seems that the market is teeming with ballads, march songs, etc. Every week shows scores of new ones in the field. For the great majority of these songs (?) illustrated slides are quickly produced. That is where the trouble is. We feel assured that there are too many—far too many—of these new songs in the illustrated slide market.

There are two drawbacks to this state of things: firstly, many of these songs are punk—the same old sickly sentimental words with "moon," "spoon," etc., as the main points and having no conception of tune or melody secondly, the words and tune are unknown to the very great percentage of the audiences. These two points are the reasons why many illustrated songs are flat in many moving picture theaters. Not so long ago we visited a moving picture theater that practically never uses either a picture or a song over three days. We noted with much interest that a certain illustrated song was held over the entire week—because the audiences showed appreciation by frequent and repeated encores. The song in question was "Silver Threads Among the Gold." When the chorus slide was flashed on the screen, the audience sang the refrain; because they were familiar with it. We ask the manufacturers to consider the question of making slides for the old-time song successes. If a song had quality some years ago, it still retains that feature. In other words, an old, good song is vastly to be preferred to a new, poor one. Several moving picture houses that the World's New England representative has visited from time to time, have used some of these old songs—without the aid of any slides, since none were to be found. In order to keep any one from thinking that the writer is making a plea for these old-time songs from sentimental reasons, such as having heard them when they were in popular favor years ago, we hasten to state that when these songs first made their appearance, our age precluded interest in such music. The plea, therefore, is made in the hope that it may be of some aid to song slide makers, and, by the same token, to the exhibitors in general. Apart from this, it is of little or no consequence to the writer whether the slides are made for new, or for old songs, provided only they are artistic and beautiful. The illustrated song, which has a real place in the moving picture theater, can be brought to a much higher plane of efficiency and usefulness by the adoption of this suggestion. Exhibitors should voice their ideas on this innovation through the correspondence columns of the World, which are always wide open for all expressions from the exhibitors.

It "Went Over."

By C. H. Claudy.

About the highest meed of praise one can give a film is the title of this tale. It "went over." It "got across." It "took."

Now, just what is meant by the term? What is "getting over" or "going across?"

Any theater manager will tell you—it is the success of the play in catching and holding the interest of the audience. If it catches them, holds their attention, keeps them still and attentive, it has "gone over." It makes no difference whether it pleases or not—the most horribly unattractive tragedy, one of the dark-brown-taste-in-the-mouth kind, which you wish you hadn't seen, may still "get over"—its success is measured in the attention it created and held, and the approval of it as a piece of work, as a play, as a plot, as a drama, comedy, tragedy, what you will, but not in the mere pleasure it may give.

About this "going over," producers are frequently in despair—not only motion picture play producers, either. The greatest care is given details, the best actors obtainable are drilled, drilled, drilled, yet, when the play is presented, it falls flat. And, naturally enough, the producer wants to know why?

Now, there are several distinctions between a photoplay and a speaking drama, and a good many different things enter into these several differences. So what prevents a photoplay from going over may not affect the same thing, acted and spoken on a stage. The present scribe would not attempt to say that he, and he alone, knew why all plays fail in getting across, but he does unhesitatingly say that he knows why a great many picture plays fail of this one thing, and that, judging by the errors they make, a good many photoplay producers or their stage managers don't know! How it happens that they don't know is one of the seven mysteries, like, how old Ann is, of the sensations of Wellman's cat, or whether T. R. can get a third term or not, and such things. But the fact remains, these producers and stage managers either don't know why their playlets fail, or else they are grossly incompetent. And, as they so often hit the mark, they can hardly be charged with the latter.

The reason so many photoplays fail utterly in getting across is due to one thing—unnaturalness. It may be unnaturalness of the vehicle, it may be unnaturalness of the plot, it may be unnaturalness of the acting, it may be—frequently is—unnaturalness of scenery, and it may be some minute detail which stands out in the spectator's mind as utterly unnatural

Motion picture audiences are getting educated. Producers are producing better and better plays, and giving more and more attention to details. But they are going to improve more in the next three years than in the last ten—or many of them are going out of business—for what the public stood for last year it won't have this, and what it accepts now it will laugh at—unpleasantly—a short time hence. So the producer, instead of reviling me as a knocker, will please say "thank you," prettily, and believe—which is a fact—that this story is not written with any other idea than to show him where he has fallen down, and the renting public, why some films didn't "pull" as they ought to. And I make no claims to being an authority—I am just on of the mass of people who pay my little nickel—and what I see and criticise, the other people are apt to see and criticise, also.

Kalem has produced an Indian drama called Winona. It is the familiar thing—white woman, prisoner, lover rescues her, chase, capture, escape, happiness. Regular formula, but very well done in most of its scenes, and beautifully photographed But about the middle, the producing stage manager made an error, which absolutely ruined the play, as far as consistency was concerned—from there on, it wasn't Winona and Strong that we saw, trying to escape, but a clever actor and actress, gesticulating in front of a camera. The thing failed to "get across," because it was grossly unnatural. The mistake was this: Winona has been captured by Indians when a little girl She has grown up an Indian maid. Strong pursuades her to escape. Either to get on the other side, or to throw the Indians off the scent—the action doesn't make it clear—which Strong finds it necessary to get in a stream of water. Instead of getting in it, that absurd trapper takes off his shoes and stockings—all the while expecting instant pursuit, remember!—and then picks Winona up in his arms and carries her.

Now I submit (1) that a trapper doesn't mind getting his feet wet; (2) that if he did mind it, he wouldn't mind it enough to delay an escape from Indians, by taking off his shoes and stockings; (3) that if he was going to carry the lady, either across or down-stream, he knew he would have extra weight on his feet; (4) that speed was an essential (though you wouldn't think it); (5) that no one can walk the bed of a stream as fast barefooted as shod—on account of stones; try it if you disbelieve—and (6) that Winona, an Indian maid in education, would have jumped in that water as readily as her preserver should have done, and that for him to carry her, to save a foot wetting, while pursued by Indians, was the height of absurdity.

But Kalem isn't half as bad an offender as was Bison, in that utterly idiotic playlet called the "Girl Cowboy!" It runs this-a-way: Girl and man, in love, engaged. Girl wants to make man jealous—reason not stated. Method—get another girl to dress up as a boy, and have man catch them in tender attitude. Man, expected to take this as joke, retires to ranch. Girl, heart-broken, follows him and becomes a "cowboy" on his ranch.

Now, then, any fair-minded person will admit that one doesn't, even if a broken-hearted girl, travel out West, get a cowboy outfit, and secure employment on a ranch while asleep. One would think about this thing rather carefully. We will cheerfully grant that girls have been, with nerve enough to do this. One refuses absolutely, however, to believe that a girl with nerve enough to do such a thing, would faint with terror at the sound of a pistol shot—yet the whole absurd action of the whole absurd show, is based on this "brave-to-recklessness' girl, being terror-stricken at the cowboys, and falling from her horse and fainting at the sound of a shot. By the same token, of course, the lover doesn't recognize her as long as she is a cowboy, although her face is not disguised, but when she cries, then he knows her!

And they wonder why their plays don't "get over"—these people, when they get out such hideously false-to-life things as this!

A little reflection will tell anyone who sees many picture plays that it is seldom the plot which decides the success of a photoplay. The slimmest, slenderest plots "go" with a whoop—the most involved and complicated plots fall flat, and all the beautiful costumes, handsome girls, and wonderful scenery can save them. What was it in Biograph's "Banker's Daughters," which held audiences spellbound, and brought forth hand clapping? Was it the very ordinary plot of a planned burglary, of the usual ruses of getting men out of the way, of the necklace, the police, the final arrest? Not a bit of it. Those things have been done before, and will be again. But this outlaw of melodramas "made good" from the jump, because, and solely because, there was some attention to details and faithful, natural acting, almost all the way through. The daughter who saw the man in the trunk, just her head for a moment, then recovered and schemed. The sick daughter didn't do as she was bid, like a lamb or an automaton—she did just as anyone would do in her place—thought her sister's warning was a joke—until she investigated for herself. The burglars were not villainous, dangerous looking characters, all rags and dirt, they looked to be men with brains enough to plan such a robbery. Anyone will have to admit the possibility of this plot, and anyone who knows anything of poor acting or poor production can see how easily it could have been spoiled.

It wasn't spoiled, simply because it was naturally done.

As the present scribe has said before, he doesn't know much about foreign parts, and how they do abroad. Therefore, he may be in error in thinking the plot of "Saved by Her Dog" (Eclair), to be more or less commercial melodramatic, without any saving grace of feeling and generally not worth while. But he cheerfully takes off his hat to Lunaires' trained dog, and bids him bark a time or two here, merely to proof that what he says is right—this unnatural play "got across" in spite of its defects, because the dog did his part so naturally, so unaffectedly, and so beautifully.

It was perfectly idiotic, to see the kidnapper rowing away with the little girl, and make no attempt to prevent her from lifting the dog in the boat. He might so easily have hit him over the head with an oar. But he didn't. The stage manager wouldn't let him. Nor had the stage manager brains enough to make him either paddle, pole, or row backwards, any one of which would have kept his face away from the pursuing dog. But, there you are. The dog, and the good photography of the water scene, carried the play.

Melies recently put forthr "Uncle Jim." It got there. It got there with both feet. It got there in spite of a beard that had "false" written all over it, and the fact that the little lady who played Jim's pal's wife, passed through eight years—in the film—and didn't age a single day! It got there because it was a heart story—simple, probable, unaffected, and because the little lady played her part so well, so simply, so naturally, that one is inclined to wonder whether or not she hadn't had some such trouble of her own? I wish I knew whom I was writing of. She isn't a statuesque beauty—like some of the leading ladies of the various companies—she isn't tall, or commanding, or dashing or sprightly. But she has a charm which "gets across" every time—because she allows herself to be natural.

Errors? Of course they made errors. Who ever saw a perfect play? Evidently, the man who produced that, never stood by the mouth of a mine pit and saw women go insane over the bodies of their men. If he had, he'd have known it isn't a sight men like to see. He wouldn't have allowed the other miners to gaze at the little lady, with curiosity written large all over them, to see how she did it, when she was first brought to her dead father and husband. It was a jarring note. It only remained for her to rant a little to make the audience laugh. But they didn't laugh. Some of 'em cried. I saw, too, women at it—and that shows you it had gotten over, for some at least. Nor do I, personally, think it artistic to reward Uncle Jim for eight years of faithful love because he went over a cliff in a rope-sling to get his little daughter. But that is, by the way, probably only done to string it out, anyway. The point is, the story got across, because mostly it was intensely natural, possible, human—where it failed, the sincerity of the acting carried it along.

And then—Oh, the host of little things. A play goes from outdoors, where everything is natural, to an interior that they'd laugh out of a Bowery playhouse. Rich society people have their habitat in rooms so small they can barely turn round, and furnished with ten-dollar-a-week taste. Half a dozen prominent firms show their trade mark in the room. How would you like to see a Belasco play with a great big B in the middle of the backdrop of every scene? If it is necessary to mark every picture to avoid piracy, let that trade-mark be inconspicuous, down in one corner—we don't thank you, Mr. Producer, we motion picture audiences, for forcing down our throats, the knowledge that this is only a screen and a picture—we want to think its the real thing.

When a character writes a letter, he qualifies, always, for a speed-penmanship contest. They can write a whole page in two seconds. It isn't natural. I would like to fall upon the neck of the producer who managed to show a letter in a real hand-writing—I saw it the other day in some Independent house or other—so often "for the sake of clearness" they are almost printed. They can have character, you know, Mr. Producer, these handwritings, and still look like handwriting!

From the beginning of the Irish drama, there has been one standard gesture to denote intense amusement. You first raise both hands to Heaven, follow them with your eyes, then bring them both down—hands, not eyes!—on your knees, which you bend for the purpose, while you open your mouth and roar. I confess I never see men laugh that way, but it has good old stage tradition behind it.

Now, translate this to a motion picture play, and watch the clever little Vitagraph boy do the same thing! I tell you, it hurts; actually hurts, to see a fine play, a fine plot, a fine company, and fine scenery, all run by a fine concern, make such fine, such very fine, mistakes! And not until the public insist on more naturalness will we have it, I suppose; but, take notice, Mr. Producer, and Mr. Exhibitor, too; the public is going to demand it, its going to demand naturalness, its going to demand nothing but plays which "get over," just as it demanded, and got, clean plays, without morbid or salacious interest; just as it has demanded clean, new modern, up-to-date playhouses, and got them; just as it has begun to demand decent music, and is getting it!

THE "PEERLESS" IN BROOKLYN.

The new theater on Fifth avenue, near Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, named the Peerless—the fourth in a chain of theaters owned by Mackenzie & Lane—is a valuable amusement addition to that part of South Brooklyn. The building is a typical moving picture place, well suited to its purpose, tastefully decorated, and in all a most attractive interior. The entertainment consists of half vaudeville and half pictures, much to the credit of the latter, as the pictures measured up to a higher standard than did the vaudeville. The redeeming feature of a combination of this kind lies in the fact that the vaudeville provides more humorous incidents. There are times in which human nature must laugh. Amusements, besides pleasing, must exhilarate, and as laughing is so exhilarating and healthy besides being a great reliever from the burdens of daily toil and care, people seek laughter, and if the pictures do not give it the vaudeville must; hence the combination; but for genuine interest the pictures easily win.

From the standpoint of a moving picture place, the Peerless must be commended for its musical accompaniment to the pictures. With a piano and violin (and no military drum) and sympathic players, the music was most agreeable and acceptable, adding much to the value of the entertainment as showing what a good moving picture place should be when proper musical instruments are used.

PATENTS CO. TRY TO REPLEVIN FILMS.

On Wednesday last, a Patents Company lawyer, accompanied by deputy sheriffs and a wagon, swooped down on the Swaab Film Exchange, in Philadelphia, armed with a writ of replevin for about 300 reels. Mr. Swaab is some fighter, also he is convinced that he has some equity in the films he paid for, even if on a license agreement. He lost no time in getting his lawyer on the scene, and a lively set-to resulted, which ended in Swaab retaining possession of the reels until the case is argued before a judge.

OUR CHICAGO OFFICE.

We extend to exhibitors a cordial invitation to visit our Western display room: 160 Washington street, Chicago, Ill., where they will find the following demonstrations:

Miniature Theaters—These two theaters are equipped with the same kind of a screen, yet while one screen looks a perfect white, and shows out the picture in full details, the other has a cream-like appearance, and is dull. The difference between the two screens is due to the colors of the walls and of the ornaments. These miniature theaters have been a great revelation to many exhibitors and architects and builders, who had no idea that the colors of the decorations could play such an important part on the picture.

Mirror Screen—A specimen of the well-known mirror screen is also on exhibition, and will be fully demonstrated with films and slides.

Wall Papers—Specimens of the Robert Graves Co., of New York, are displayed on the walls, and show at a glance, what fine decorative effects can be obtained with these artistic wall papers.

Safety Exit Door—A sample of the celebrated Van Duprin self-releasing, exit door is also on exhibition, and will fully demonstrate how, in case of fire or a panic, a mere child can release the exit door, and save many lives. These doors are becoming so popular that in the state of Indiana, they have been officially adopted for the school buildings and many factories and amusement halls have placed orders.

Film-washing Machines—We have in operation, one of these machines from the National Water-proof Film Co., and exhibitors, who have watched the film unroll from a lower reel, pass through a tank of water and soap, between brushes, and around many reels covered with absorbent cotton, to rewind itself on the upper reel, are fully satisfied that if all the films were water-proofed and washed once in a while by the exchanges, we would have better screen projection.

Brass Frames and Easels—The McKenna Bros. have placed on exhibition, one of their most attractive brass frames, with easel of same, and they are certainly a great ornament to any theater.

Indirect Light—The latest addition to our Western display room, is the indirect light, and it is considered by everyone, the most desirable method of lighting a hall. The light is so well diffused and soft, that no one would think it was artificial light, unless they look at the ceiling to see the fixture. With this indirect light, the rays cannot strike the screen, consequently the auditorium can be lighted without injuring the picture.

To these important features, we have on exhibition, catalogs and samples of many other goods pertaining to motion pictures. —J. M. B.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

FOR THE GOOD OF THE CHILD.

Probably one of the greatest steps ever taken in modern advance along social and educational lines, is the unique "Child Welfare Exhibit" now being held in the great Seventy-first Regiment Armory in New York.

The problems of the millions of children all over the world, who, because of the lack of all the normal conditions of child life, are growing up in ignorance and vice, while surrounded by all the advantages of this enlightened ages, are rapidly being solved by the great army of social, religious, "settlement" and other great moral agencies now at work in all the leading cities. London and New York have made great strides in dealing in a thorough and systematic manner with the many and various problems, the exhibit in New York shows, what a marvelous success has resulted from these efforts, revealing a veritable transformation in the life, homes, and culture of the large and much neglected class of young people.

Opportunely at this time the Cinematograph has proved the most valued assistant in this great movement, in the first place it has become the agent long needed by the workers who always felt a lack of power to both illustrate and explain in a sufficiently clear, and emphatic manner that knowledge they sought to import. Differences of language, that lack of ordinary education which made it difficult for the majority to understand many ordinary terms, to say nothing of technical terms, has now been overcome, as the reproduction in the living pictures of these things whereby instruction could best be given by the living example is now a common feature.

In the next place the people (parents and children) are enabled more quickly to grasp the full purpose of the teaching, often being instantly enabled to grasp some valuable knowledge and, what is perhaps of equally great importance, larger numbers can be instructed at once, as that which before could only be shown to a small number in a house or classroom, can now be shown to thousands in a hall of almost any size.

The Management of a Home on the Screen.

This is literally the great boon the Cinematograph has brought to the poor and consequently unfortunately ignorant people in crowded centers. The care of a child from birth to its "teens" as depicted by nurses and workers of experience is a wonderfully instructive course so that it is practically impossible for anyone to be any longer ignorant in these things; herein the Cinematograph has become the banisher of ignorance, even as the sun drives away darkness, the illustrative scenes of pure and perfect life have driven away the causes of much distress and will result in the saving of thousands of young lives.

The furnishing of a home, no matter at what cost, the food and clothing necessary, the preparation for school, school life and recreation are all here depicted as performed by experts making it only possible in the future for ignorance to be classed as a crime, as without doubt, (thanks to the Cinematograph) knowledge has and can become so universal that lack of it will be as wilful a piece of criminal negligence as can possibly be imagined for it will indeed be the actual guilt of "closing the eyes lest they see the light."

The amusement part of this unique exhibition is composed of pictures of such a class as proper for young people to see, still continuing along instructive lines the class of playlet permissible as of course valuable, but here little more than the laying down of certain rules which govern the censorship of picture can be given; these however are sufficient to give an intelligent idea upon which a maturer judgment may develop. Taken as a whole, the child welfare exhibit is a success along its universal lines which the Cinematograph has been able to bring out from its obscurity and limitation and place in the broad field of a thorough educational power.

W. H. J.

EDUCATIONAL FILM PROGRAMS.

In answer to many inquiries, we will say that an educational film bureau is about to be realized. The General Film Company has for some time been working on the plan, but no details as yet ready for publication. Meantime we are authorized to say that clergymen, teachers and others, who may desire to give exhibitions that do not compete with the theatres, may rent same from any of the licensed exchanges. Those who desire to purchase the film outright may do so through the manufacturer, under a special license agreement. The General Film Company, in Fifth avenue, or any of its branches, will cheerfully send catalogues to parties giving educational programs.

An Independent Chautauqua Film Exchange has also been started in Chicago.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Mr. W. O. Riddell, Superintendent of Schools, has the following to say of the moving picture as related to school work: "I believe that the picture is one of the best in the world for instructing the pupils in the lower grades, and it will be so long before the picture machine as a means of education will be adopted by the schools all over the country."

New Britain, Conn.—A moving picture machine has been installed here in the hall of the Sacred Heart Parochial School on Lead Street. Rev. Lucien Bajmowski will devote three evenings a week to the regular show he intends to give as a part of his educational work.

Chicago, Ill.—The purchase of moving picture machines for the "Social Center" idea adopted by the Board of Education was authorized January 9th by the special committee for that purpose. The committee also provides for the purchase of several portable or rolling machine booths that can be pushed into.

Knoxville, Tenn.—At a meeting of the Old Gold Literary Society, in this city January 9th, Miss Kate Ogden read a most able paper on "The Effect on Our Youth of Modern Plays and Moving Picture Shows." It was contended by the majority that the moving picture shows were helpful, rather than harmful, when rightly supervised and directed, and that their educational influence is not to be questioned.

New York City.—Dr. Herbert D. Pease at the Laederle Laboratories launched his spring education campaign against the house-fly, at a meeting of the Women's Municipal League. Dr. Pease is using the "Fly Pest" moving picture to illustrate the germ-carrying capacities of the six-legged parasite.

CRAZY PEOPLE ENTERTAINED WITH MOVING PICTURES.

One of the strangest audiences that ever gathered in a theater in Maryland attended a moving picture show in the City Opera House in Frederick, Friday afternoon, as guests of the manager of the theater, George List; the audience consisting of about 200 insane persons, inmates of Montevue Hospital, near Frederick.

Upon the invitation of Manager List, Superintendent Gregg, of the hospital, brought to Frederick on a special train over the Frederick Railroad all of the insane persons in the hospital except a few so violent that it would have been dangerous to have taken them along. Marshalled by the superintendent and warden, the queer party was marched down Market street from the railroad and taken into the opera house, where the different divisions—white and black, male and female—were seated in groups. Besides the insane patients and the attendants, there were present Dr. Harry P. Fahrney, physician to the hospital, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Dixon, one of the directors of the hospital, Treasurer William C. Spivly, of the Board of Charities and Correction, and a few others.

Silence was maintained almost undisturbed throughout the performance, though a picture of a negro stealing a chicken caused loud chuckles and a few "ahs" in the section of seats occupied by the colored men. Keen interest was manifested in the pictures and when a party of women in a part where they worked across the screen waved their hands to the audience, a whole row of the female patients waved back at the picture.—Baltimore (Md.) Herald.

Since I last figured on this page, I have, something like Ulysses of old, seen "many cities and strange men." But I have not been far afield. My journeys have not extended beyond a radius of twenty-five miles of New York City. If I have not been exactly in search of adventure, I, at any rate, have been in search of opinions about the picture, mixing with all sorts and conditions of men, women, and children. One afternoon I sat amongst a large group of children from a High School in a New Jersey city; then, later in the day I sat amongst a very large audience, drawn chiefly from the industrial class. And yet again I have sat several times amongst superior persons—members of the "hupper succles." For there are "hupper succles" in the democratic United States. We have in fact the same strata of society here as exist under monarchial regimes.

* * *

What I wanted to find out particularly was the feeling of the public, or of a public, towards the classes of picture chiefly shown. I exclude from my public small children under thirteen or fourteen; those who have not arrived at the age of reasoning. Much is made by some writers of childish preferences for the picture, but I think we can ignore this sort of thing as a serious factor in the picture situation. I prefer the opinion of those of whom I wrote of in On The Screen last week; those who have reached adolescence, or those who, like myself, are within sight of distance of middle age. For though small children unquestionably do spend (far too) many nickels in the theater, it is the adult who, after all, has to be chiefly considered in this connection.

* * *

Audiences vary. The audiences of the Bijou Dream, Fourteenth Street, New York, is something of a curiosity. It is composed of daily transients and is probably never exactly alike two days in succession. So probably is the audience of Mr. Gane's Manhattan Theater, or indeed of any theater in the great arteries of a metropolitan city. The very varied and casual nature of this audience, then, rather depreciates the value of any data that you might build on your experience of it.

* * *

So with the purpose of satisfying myself as to the attitude of what I will call the middle class element in the community towards the pictures, I spent one whole day in and about the picture houses of a highly respectable New Jersey town; studying the audiences, and individual members thereof, and questioning intelligent people in the community as to their attitudes towards the picture. I am bound to say that I got very valuable pointers from what I was told.

* * *

We, who live in large cities, are rather apt to be working in ignorance of the hearts and minds of those at a distance. We are too near the center of things. When you get near the center of things, and see all the machinery that is at work, you are apt, consciously or not, to become satiated by them. Satiety we know produces a reaction, if not a revulsion, of feeling which is easily converted into pessimism. Just as it is good for us occasionally to get away from ourselves and look at ourselves as we are away from our daily grove; so it is good to get out and mix with our fellow man and learn his views of things. I was surprised at the very high opinion which my suburban audiences seemed to entertain of the industrial and scenic pictures that were shown. I saw Swiss views, Canadian views, Italian views. I saw some of Pathe's exquisite industrial subjects. All these were received not merely with applause, but with interest, showing as I said last week that people who have done with their school days are still desirous of learning something about the manners, habits and customs of people at a distance.

* * *

The film of late King Edward's funeral, beautiful and imposing though it is, went without a hand, showing that in this country, at any rate, out-of-date events are not wanted on the moving picture screen. Americans have no use for "back numbers" even in such a gorgeous affair as a royal pageant.

* * *

In the particular town where I passed my day, a movement is afoot to attract the cultured classes to one of the theaters. I mean by "cultured classes," those people who are too "chesty" to pay ten or fifteen cents in an ordinary moving picture house. In the theater where the experiment is being tried, it is carried out by the agency of well selected moving pictures; well selected, that is, in so far as any selection can be made.

* * *

Unquestionably, then, the evidence that I gathered on the occasion of this little tour of investigation was this: That there is a growing and appreciable demand for pictures of an educative agency. The good scenics are always welcomed amongst high class picture audiences. The good industrials, namely, those which convey information on technical, scientific or manufacturing topics, are always welcome; films, in short, which impart information, which teach and instruct primarily, while entertaining in a secondary sense.

* * *

I discussed with a prominent theater man in the particular town that I visited, an exhibitor's lament that he was unable to appeal to his public in his own way by exercising his own choice. His public is a cultured one. It will not stand for the vapid, the inane, the chase or the melodrama. It wants informative films; yet by present political exigencies this exhibitor is unable to fill his bill in the manner in which he wishes.

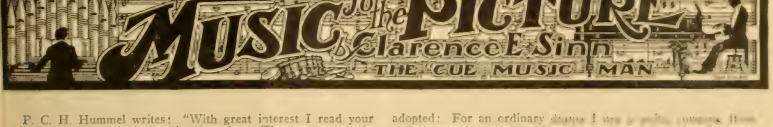
* * *

Incidentally my experiences point to the desirability in film manufacture of an open market, of the elimination of the incompetent manufacturer. By the incompetent manufacturer I mean the one who is unable to rise above the melancholy level of the cheap drama or the comic chase. All these pathetically stupid subjects which I have time and again denounced in these pages. These people have little or no right in the business.

* * *

If the moving picture business is ever to be properly uplifted, it will only be done by the erection of very lofty ideals. We must have one, once and for all, with the prurient, the inane, the stupid and the vapid, and while giving the public good comedies, dramas and the like, to also give them good and accurate history and other branches of science. These themes have been asked for in these pages over and over again. I, for one, do not ask for religion on the screen; my personal opinion is that this sort of thing can be best dispensed from the church, but I do think we can do without many of the inanities that at present disfigure the moving picture screen. By all means let us have humor, sentiment, pathos. But do also let us have cleanness, perspicacity and common sense. These attributes can very well come in the form of educative pictures.

Denver, Colo.—The Chateau Lafayette, Denver, Colo., was the scene on January 2 of an enjoyable banquet given by the management of the Princess Amusement Company, of that city, as a slight token of their appreciation of the efforts and assistance of their employees and friends in the successful results obtained in the new Princess venture, launched October 11, 1910. The managers of their various other theaters were also present. Mr. Arch Gifford represented the Theatorium, Denver; Mr. Frank Kelley represented the Bijou, Denver; Mr. M. C. Farnsworth represented the Lyric, Cheyenne, Wyo. Owing to the distance, the managers of Colorado Springs and Wichita, Kan., houses were unable to be present. Mr. Greaves was unanimously chosen as toastmaster. This selection proved him to be the right man in the right place. Among the others present were H. T. Nolan, G. H. Greaves, E. A. Shields, J. Gerbose, Bud Graham, C. E. Merter, G. H. Clark, G. S. Stewart, B. Pepper, J. L. Durkee, S. O. Erickson, Arch Gifford, Frank Kelley, A. P. Markey. A very enjoyable evening was spent, and good fellowship prevailed until the last word was spoken. A vote of thanks was given to the Princess Amusement Company by those present, which was responded to in a few well-chosen words by Mr. Greaves. A vote of thanks was also given to the William H. Swanson Film Company for their efforts in providing the service, which in no small measure brought about the results obtained. This was responded to by Mr. Nolan in an appropriate manner in behalf of the William H. Swanson Film Company.



P. C. H. Hummel writes: "With great interest I read your article dealing with the motive question. The innovations in harmony peculiar to Wagner are due to the free use of chromatics. Besides bold chromatics and enharmonic progressions, he constantly employs chromatic anticipatory changing and passing notes which have a melodic significance only. With the first conception of the characters and situations at every early stage in the growth of the work, certain musical phrases suggest themselves; these are the 'leading motives.' 'Germs' and main principles of Wagner may be found in 'Peri,' 'Gluck,' 'Weber,' and 'Monteverde.' " " " Wagner has made of these leading motives the very framework of his music dramas. He developed and applied them leading motives, the typical melodies and characteristic harmonies which accompany each of the dramatic personæ throughout the work " " " with such multiplications as the situation calls for. To those interested I will mention that in Wagner's 'Ring of the Nibelungen' there are ninety distinct motives. 'Rheingold' has thirty-five, 'Walkure' twenty-two, and 'Siegfried' twenty.

To give an example of how Wagner applied the leading motive I will give 'Siegfried's Funeral March' from 'Gotterdammerung.' First grave and solemn comes the motive of the 'Heroism of the Volsungs,' which we heard when Siegmund at the opening of the Walkure sadly tells his misfortunes. Next comes the motive of 'Compassion' representing the unhappy Sieglinde, and the motive of 'Love,' the love of Siegmund and Sieglinde, which was to give birth to Siegfried. Then we have the 'Sword of the Volsung' in its entirety, which in a rapid movement of the basses joins the funeral cortege in the same way, as the weapons of the deceased are laid upon his coffin. The 'Sword' motive is still there, guttering and flaming, having become heraldic in the luminous glow of C major, which only appears at this single moment. Finally comes the one motive above all others of the hero Siegfried, the 'Guardian of the Sword,' twice repeated in an ascending position and followed by the motive of the 'Son of the World' again singularly extended, which assumes a sacred memory of Brunnhilde, his first love. So much for the motive question for today. I have much more interesting matter to bring forth, but will wait till I hear from others on the subject, for, as you say, there is much promising material for thought and discussion. We are never too old to learn, and we can always learn by exchanging thoughts."

In a previous issue I commented on Brother Hummel's suggestions of the Wagnerian "leit-motif" theory as applied to moving picture music, and said he could probably give a more convincing illustration than was conveyed in my brief remarks. There was doubtless in answer that the above was written. I do not believe Brother Hummel is advocating such an elaborate system for us in present conditions, when so many of us have a change of pictures daily, and most of us must adapt our pictures at the first or second "look." It is not impossible that today may come when the best of dramatists will write the music to order, and the best of composers will use these themes. Until that time ever come, we might reasonably expect to hear the thematic method carried out to its logical development. Music for the pictures is still in the formative period, and we are all working, each in his own way, to give it the definite shape.

I hold that under present conditions the simpler form is the more practical for general use. However as our correspondent says, "We can learn by exchanging thoughts" and all side-lights on the question are worthy of consideration, whether we accept them or not.

* * *

R. of W——, N. C., says: "I have very recently been making your articles in the Moving Picture World as portion of all I ask something that can save already astounded. What I want is your ideas about playing of the way through a picture. I am situated in a vaudeville theater and we run two reels and two acts on an hour or a little over. The assistant manager, who plays in a very handsome-looking piano-player, would like considerable work if they tried to play throughout the numbers; they therefore play what they consider the 'important' parts, i. e., where there is a clear opening for one piece. This is a very good plan, but the first ten-reeler I came to which I played required continuous music. This is the plan which I adopted: For an ordinary drama I use a suite, choosing from one instrument to another, so as to create variety for the scenes on the screen, and inserting cue music wherever possible. For a bright child picture, of course, I generally use a gamble of melodious four-four movement. For a storm, of course, I use marches, working them up in accord with the excitement. In this way I do not think, as some one suggested, that too much is a sentiment spoiled and causes a tendency to put aside some of it. I also understand that one tune for the singer of same would be a great; however as one tires of one thing quicker than the performer himself, and I expect there are very few with that fault. Also, what about hymns and sacred selections for funerals, as in "A Summer Sacrifice," the opening in the old parish church of Agen? The scene would have been a tragedy, but as it best to portray the sacred ones, rather than make the brightest of the mysteries? I shall appreciate your suggestions and directions others would, but if you have not already written, see the subject."

As to the continuous music idea, there seems to be a great diversity of opinion on the subject. Conditions vary so much in different places that I presume each must adapt himself according to circumstances, but for my own part I think the music should be continuous, or nearly so. There are times when a stop is effective. The play you follow is all right and will not develop it as far as you wish. In answer to your last query I certainly believe in playing the music suggested by the score whether it be doleful or otherwise. I know some vaudeville managers object to plaintives and dirges during the pictures, yet book emotional playlets that are filled with the "heart interest" idea. If you should attempt to "ragtime up" one of these you would probably hear something unpleasant from the actors. If a manager "books" sentimental pictures it seems to me he should not object to their proper working up. However, I presume this is another of those conditions where a fellow must adapt himself to circumstances.

* * *

J. Whitely (Minn.) says: "In your answer to Miss C. (Jan. 24) you say, 'When a picture is filled with long melodies I don't see any objection to making a pause between each number.' How about this?" I should have added "If the scene permits." It was my fault, so I can't blame the pianoleader. In "Cast Up by the Deep" (Vitagraph) you can open with a waltz—something like "Symphia's till "He tells his mother he is going to marry Katie," then "Apple Blossoms" once through, followed by "Evening Dreams" till close. I suggest the break between the last two numbers merely to avoid the monotony of repeating one throughout the picture. In advance of no thematic treatment as applied to the characters, all you can do is to work to the main idea, the tension or pitch being pretty much the same throughout. A slight pause at the place indicated may not seem to take away from effect the picture, though it should be for only a few seconds. (I wish the readers would take note of the musical numbers I suggest here from time to time. I am in constant receipt of inquiries regarding titles of music, and though I do not care to make a musical catalog of this page, I must confess a surprise occasionally if I think it is appreciated. So you will be well to save them.)

Montrose, Colo.—Edw. J. Cooper writes: "I opened the Montrose Opera House on Friday evening, Jan. 15, supposed to be a business night. I had even paid advertising at 10 cents and 20 cents. How is that for a business? My attraction was two vaudeville acts and two reels of pictures. For the opening night I selected Vitagraph's colored high class pictures, 'The Watermelon Contest,' and a quiet reel entirely, called 'A Dull Razor,' and 'There Is No Place Like Home.' I enjoy the World and would like to have the time to get better acquainted with you in person."

Complete Mr. Cooper's opening was anything but a success, and we hope that his attendance will increase as the season progresses. He certainly has made a good program. He must be a busy man, as by manager, treasurer, operator in Colorado. He is one who hopes to see the Film Service and the Film Commercial Departments in the World continued. We agree with him that the absence of the above are often unnecessarily long.

From the Other Side of the World.

LETTER FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

At a distance of 10,000 miles from the principal base of operation of the cinematograph, the writer has been studying, chiefly, through the medium of the Moving Picture World, the progress of Manila moving picture, particularly as to the part taken by the manufacturers and exchanges in the United States. With the utmost interest, the writings, pro and con, relative to the subjects presented, have been followed—censure and praise, present status and the future outlook—in fact nearly everything treated in the journals covering the field. There is such a depth to the subject that it is impossible to cover it, not that it is the intention to even try. The moving picture has moved so rapidly, and has encircled such an area of unforseen conditions, has brought up questions on social conditions—and is still burying itself into our social life—to such an extent, that we know not where the end will be. The subject at first, and until even recently, was looked upon as a fad; people said that it would soon die, and pass out of our lives, as many another such had done; but thanks to the foresight of strong, earnest men, this idea is fading away, and we are now looking forward to the picture as a future educator and moral guide.

For the good of the order, there will be shown a case where this idea prevails among exhibitors, very strongly. We have heard from the African and Japanese promoters, but it is doubtful if there is any place in the world where this stand has been taken more firmly than in the Philippine Islands. In the city of Manila, there are, at present, some 25 cinematograph shows. The exhibitors are, in nearly every case, Americans, and their tendency is toward the American makers and exchanges. These exhibitors have taken this stand—a stand for strong and educational subjects—because the people, mostly Filipinos, demand such. These people love a good comic, and a good laugh, as well as any other, but they also require that they shall be shown subjects teaching them the manners and customs of other nations, their industries, etc. They also love to see a good strong drama. The name of Toribio (Itala), on a film, means to them a good healthy laugh; the human nature, as expressed in "Sweet Sixteen" (Biograph), appeals to them strongly; the depth of passion and artistic settings of "Nero" (Ambrosio), is a chapter from history that is real to them; glimpses of nature from Kearton's camera, the scenics by the daring fieldmen of Pathe, appeal to them educationally and artistically; the "Life of Christ" (Pathe), and the "Life of Moses" (Vitagraph), appeal strongly to their reverence for the religious. In short, they want the best, and they know what it is. Their cinematograph is their playhouse, the actors to them, are real; the plot is the truth, and a poor subject, or a rainy film, will be received with howls from the gallery gods—woe be to the operator who loses a good clear light—the whistles and cat-calls of those gallery gods leave no need for the manager to call his attention to his work.

Now, how successful have these exhibitors been in their dealings with the American manufacturers, or rather, exchanges? In the vast majority of cases, they have been handed the worst junk that was ever handed to anyone in any line of business. The exchanges have said that it was in "fine condition," and from their point of view, it might have been good enough to use in the theaters in the United States. It certainly did not come up to the standard required in the Philippine Islands. Take a single instance of a shipment of 30,000 feet, comprising about 50 subjects, one among many others that came under the writer's notice. In this shipment, there were five subjects that had titles, 40 subjects without endings. Ninety per cent. of all so badly cut to repair damage (what on earth do you call operators there?) as to necessitate the omission of entire scenes, to say nothing of the most careless splicing, and every subject taken on a very, very "rainy" day. This caused the exhibitor to look for films elsewhere, but he had to pay for the shipment, nevertheless, as the exchange said it was in fine condition. This was probably the worst shipment that ever came to the islands, but all the films received from the United States exchanges have been far from what they should be. It is well to state, yet it is a fact not known or understood by the general public, that the subjects that have been received are those made years ago, even a year ago. The impression, therefore, has gone abroad, in this field, that the American film is not to be compared with the European.

There are two sides to every story, and while the Philippine exhibitor has been cursing his luck, and making connections wherever he could, and at the same time driving at the American exchanges and manufacturers, to get their late goods, because he believed in them, the position of the exchange and factory cannot be overlooked. Every exchange and factory of repute in the United States has been so rushed with business that the former could not consider the question of rentals until their own circuits had been supplied, while the latter, apparently, were too busy to consider the sales, owing to the points of policy and territory not having been looked into. The exhibitor, therefore, did his best by offering higher prices, by having agents on the ground in the United States, in every way possible within his means to get the best possible. The showing has only been fair. For the past year, the struggle has been on, the struggle for the presentation of American ideas on the fitness of things. During this struggle the exhibitor has been pushed into a great many markets and, as a result, nearly every make of film in the world has been shown, being obtained from every conceivable source, the junk-dealer, the exchange, the jobber and the factory, yet the one goal is aimed for.

Not wishing to particularize any one manufacturer, much less on any one film, a single instance cannot be foregone which did much to encourage the exhibitor and uphold him in his belief in the supremacy of the American manufacturers in these islands. This was the presentation of the "Life of Moses" (Vitagraph). These films were run in the Majestic Theater, owned by A. W. Yearsley, for two consecutive weeks, and were seen by not less than 50,000 people. The capacity of this theater is 2,500, and is used solely for Cinematograph purposes. It was jammed full every night. The adverse criticisms meted out to this production, as regards certain details, by a number of writers, are well known. The defects were seen just as plainly by these people as by those at home. The picture, as a whole, cannot be viewed as a masterpiece, yet as such, the populace looked upon it.

As a sample of how films are handled in this country, let us see how this particular one was presented to the public. In the first place, circular letters were sent to the leading people of the city, giving a description of the subject, telling of its author, an idea of its cost, etc.; next came half-page ads in the English, Spanish and Tagalog papers; an electric sign over the theater, and to increase the interest, a 16-page program, publishing all data, etc., in Spanish and English; then a church organ, accompanied by a 16-piece band and violin orchestra—we believe in music, that is, good music. Perhaps there is no new idea in this; however, it is presented for what it is worth.

The success of this production caused Mr. Yearsley to place orders for new releases, and it is understood that some of the manufacturers have accepted his orders; if so, it is a step onward.

It may be true that this field, at the present time, is hardly worth considering; it is true that it has no equal as to difficulties as to opening it up, but it can, and will, be opened up by these same pioneers who are peculiarly well fitted for the work, and the makers who are on the ground at the first turning of the sod, will be the ones to be present at the harvest. The point is worth considering.

It was intended to present only the difference in which a Cinematograph is viewed in this country, as compared with that at home, and in doing so, we have been carried afield along the lines of film-makers, but it leads to the end. Our people here, will not stand for a poor subject any more than they will a poor show, as said before, the acting to them are real; their acting must be natural to the part, and the entire execution must be of the best. Enough has been said to show the standard required here, and it is believed that human nature is pretty much the same all over the world, and that if this standard was required by the people at home, the manufacturers would pay more attention to the details of their productions.

The Orient is now about to be opened up, and as is the case with many other enterprises, it will be the future market for our goods, but the Oriental will not stand for a stupid representation of his customs and, in saying this, we have in mind several Cinematograph productions. Take the case of "Momotaro" (the Japanese peach boy). The film is not a Japanese on earth, it is believed, who does not know the story from "Mukaski jiji to baba ga arimash'ta down to "inu saru kiji ni mo wakete yarimash'ta." The story for them contains strong principles moral and patriotic. These were omitted, and we see a "Nippon-ichi no" kissing, and an actress taking the part of the girl who, on the day of his birth, picked up the washbasin and dashed it to the ground. This is only a single case of many such, in treating of things Oriental, and where the people at home have been misled, and a good subject turned out a farce in this part of the world. Why not stay within our limitations? At this stage we cannot afford to let this field go to others. Some day we will need it, it may then be too late. When the Orient moves, it moves rapidly. Two months ago it was rare to see a Chinaman without a queue, today thousands are without them.

There may be points in this article which hurt, but as headed, it is for the good of the order, and it sums itself into this, whether the American manufacturer wants this field or not, whether or not he is prepared to study the Asiatic enough to cater to him, those who are in the field here, are striving for the best. Will they be supported? Can they be given good subjects? In spite of journalistic knocks, they believe so. The one film mentioned above, which ran for two consecutive weeks in the one playhouse would, it would seem, be sufficient to tell some people that their fellow creatures have just as great a tendency toward the moral, and even the religious, as they have to the primitive; that they have a greater tendency toward the clean, than toward the immoral, and that a greater number may be reached by things educational through the Cinematograph than otherwise would be possible.

Our manufacturers, we believe, are with us along these lines, and we are backing them in our belief.

—J. J. ROBINSON.

AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

Sydney, N. S. W., December 25, 1910.

With a capital of $500,000, and a controlling chain of theaters throughout Australasia, the J. D. Williams Company (Ltd.), of Sydney, New South Wales, is one of the largest, if not the largest, amusement enterprises operating in the antipodes. Mr. Williams has just purchased a plot of ground in the city of Melbourne, at a cost of $125,000, on which to erect one of the finest moving picture theaters in the Southern hemisphere. The company has also begun operations on a new theater in the city of Brisbane, Queensland, and they are, at the present time, putting up a very fine theater in Sydney, on a plot of ground, immediately opposite their present theater, to be known as "The New Colonial Theater No. 2."

This theater will be 65 feet from the ground floor to the top of the roof, and will contain all the finest improvements known in theatrical art in building. This company is showing now to more people than any moving picture enterprise in Sydney. Visit the Colonial at any time, you will find the house full, and in the evening it is a matter of impossibility to get your nose inside the place, the attendance is so great. Moving pictures have come to stay on this side of the world, and at the present time, there are no less than four large theaters in the course of erection, to be devoted to this class of entertainment. Mr. Williams will, in the course of a very few weeks, commence the alterations to the front of his present theater in this city, making the main entrance twice the width of the present one, and giving it an up-to-date American air in appearance.

This company owns the International Film Service, as well as the theatrical side of the business, and they have a large number of employees in this branch kept hard at work from morning till night, to serve their ever-increasing clientele, and all I have conversed with, that are being supplied with films from this place, are loud in their praises of the class of films sent out to the various suburban shows; Mr. Williams confining his films to the Motion Picture Patents Company's output.

There has been a meeting called of the film buyers in this part of the world, but Mr. Williams declined to become a member, giving as a reason, that it would place too many makers' products on the Australian market, and right here let me say that there is no better part of the world for a man of push, and with capital, to get next to a good thing that will give to the Australian public some of the Independent products. At the present time, most of the films being shown are the products of the firms comprised in the M. P. P. Co., and it is seldom that you see any of the other films.

Mr. C. Spencer's new Lyric Theater, is fast approaching completion, as far as the masonry is concerned, and will, in the course of a few days, be handed over to the finishing trades, for the finishing of the interior, of which Australian marble will enter largely, and when completed, he will have a theater to be proud of. Due notice I will give you of the opening of the same, and also send you both exterior and interior views, as well.

The new King's Theater, on George street, is a very pretty and cosy picture theater, with dress circle and orchestra chairs, entrance on George street, and the pit entrance on Harris street, just round the corner from the front of the theater. They have their own generating plant for supplying all their light for the theater; billiard room, and also their tobacconist's and hair-dressing rooms, and are now running as a continuous show on the same lines as the Colonial.

West's Pictures Limited have purchased a site just on the edge of the suburbs, and started work on their new Olympia Theater, which will be absolutely the finest theater for moving pictures south of the Equator. The cost of land and buildings will be $375,000, and the theater will contain a lot of features new to this side of the world, in the heating, lighting and cooling. Messrs. West expect to have the theater portion ready for the opening on February 28th. It will make an ideal site for a theater, being on the main line to the best and wealthiest suburbs of this city, but I myself confess that I am somewhat of a pessimist as regards the wisdom of the choice of this site, but the times change, and so do the people, and who can tell what this enterprising firm of moving picture entrepeneurs will do; and, as their work from the beginning has spelt success from the start, I am the last person in the world to advise them, or to offer them any in any form whatsoever. I was very pessimistic as regards the venture of Mr. J. D. Williams, and would have bet him twenty to one, when he started, that he would fall down flat, but I confess, that I was wrong and that he was right, and he was an optimist from the start. Messrs. Wests' new Olympia Theater will have a grand site for its location, with plenty of exits, and the house can be emptied in less than three minutes, so it will succeed, I think, all right. There is no doubt in the world but that this is the most gigantic combination in the world, when it comes to moving pictures, and I think that I voice the whole trade, when I say, that all who have come into contact with Mr. T. J. West, or any members of his company, will acknowledge that they pay not the slightest heed to what others are doing in the business, but pursue the even tenor of their way, and get there all the time. I think that it is sufficient evidence of what they are doing, when I say that in Australasia they have no less than thirty-four places of amusement in this line, open nightly, in Australia and New Zealand, as well as ten in the British Isles, and showing to over 200,000 people weekly, so if that is not going some, and some, then I do not know.

Wests' new Olympia Theater, in this city, will not only comprise a moving picture theater, but it will have a lot of stores for rental, and also a building devoted to flats, for residential purposes, and will have frontage, to Oxford street, of 180 feet, so that will give you some idea of what an enterprise they have on hand. They are also the owners of the Bijou Theater, in this city, that is open nightly and Sundays, as well, but they do not let this fact be known to the Australian public, as it is right alongside of the other hall, in the Glacterium, the summer home of Wests' pictures; but as this place is devoted to ice skating, for four months in the year, it makes them have to shift just when their business is in its very height of attendance, so I presume that is one consideration that has induced them to build, so there may be a shift or no shifting about in their entertainments. They have also companies on tour doing the smalls, and I do not count them in giving the number of places open, but only those that are permanently located and open nightly to the amusement loving public. As there is a ground plan, and also a general outside view, and a full description of their new theater in the papers sent you, I leave you to extract such matter from them as you may deem of sufficient interest to your readers.

Tonight the Annandale Open Air Picture Palace will be officially opened by the mayor of that burg, and I must confess, that it is one of the finest places for summer entertainments that I have seen, and it is my purpose to attend the opening tonight, and see how the entertainment comes off. The films shown will all be M. P. P. Co.'s supplied by the International Film Exchange, shown by aid of a Powers No. 6 Cameragraph.

This, in the past, has been one of the deserted burgs that I ever saw in any part of the globe, but at last, she has woke up, and cast off her Rip Van Winkle ideas, and is now going ahead by leaps and bounds, and were this city in any American state, would be run down the place it is now. Sydney has a harbor that for natural beauty I place second on the list for first place I give the palm to Rio de Janeiro, and second to Sydney. In my next I will give you some of the doings of the other places, but I think that I have written all that your space will allow me.

WILLIAM H. H. LANE.

Operators.—The editor of this Department has the names of a number of operators in various parts of the country who send in excellent references and whom he believes to be good men. The names and addresses of these men will be sent employers upon application

Insulted.—Mr. C. C. Lee, Bartlesville, Okla., submits the following in January 14th issue. Mr William May makes the statement that there is only one 'crank turner' in Bartlesville. Well, I am the crank turner, and I think Mr. May might as easily have said that there is but one operator in Bartlesville running by hand. By common usage the term 'crank turner' signifies an incompetent operator. I believe there are just as good men running their machines by hand as by motor."

Really, Neighbor Lee, I had to laugh when I read your letter. I think Friend May had no intention of slurring you when he spoke of the crank turner. I didn't take it that way and do not think he meant it so, though, as you say, the term is commonly used to designate the incompetent operator. Personally, I am opposed to the motor and am a firm believer in the operator running his machine by hand, mainly for the reason that high class work is not usually found where motors are in use. It is quite possible to do as good work with a motor as by hand, but the temptation to "let the motor do it (all)" is ever present.

Stereo Slides.—Park City, Utah, writes: "I am an interested reader of the Trouble Department and am at present making slides for our local merchants. Have been very successful with black and white, but have been unable to secure suitable tints with colors. Any information as to where I can secure colors suitable for this purpose will be appreciated. I enclose $1.50 for Handbook."

Any dealer in photographic supplies can furnish you with lantern slide colors. Elmendorf's aniline tints, Dunne's water colors or Revoli's tints are all good for the purpose.

Two-Wing Shutter.—Mr. Walter Turnpaugh, Fort Worth, Tex., writes that his father has purchased the Colonial Theater, Wichita Falls, also a Powers No. 6, with both of which purchases Friend Turnpaugh is highly pleased. He consumes two pages saying kind things about his new machine and then says that he is having trouble with his three-wing shutter getting in synchronism with the alternating current and asks for dimensions of a two-wing shutter; says he is having trouble with his current controller and that it does not deliver more than 30 amperes of current from the highest contact. Friend Turnpaugh then consumes considerable space in roasting one of our esteemed contemporaries who recently took a slap at me. Among other things in this connection, he says: "A paper that will descend so low as to knock the best friend the operator and manager have ever had in the business has most certainly ceased to work for the good of the business." He winds up by saying: "I would like to know who wrote that bunch of rot in the ————, anyway. I believe if he were to alight in Fort Worth his wings would be scorched by some real show men, and that in a hurry, too."

Friend Turnpaugh, I would like to quote your letter in full, but its terms are too strong. I have shown your letter to the Nicholas Power Company and they have notified me they will send you a two-wing shutter. As to the compensarc, I think you had better take that matter up with the manufacturer. The compensarc is a very good transformer and, if I remember right, should deliver 50 amperes on high contact. Perhaps you have one wound for a higher voltage than you are using, in which case you would, of course, get a reduced amperage. I am sure the Fort Wayne people will be glad to make anything right that is wrong. As to the paper you refer to, while I thank you for your loyalty, still at the same time men who push ahead and try to improve conditions have got to expect things of that sort, and I have long since learned to pay no attention to them. You may have noticed that until the Moving Picture World led the way not one of the trade publications gave the operator any representation in their pages. The Moving Picture World is now devoting four to five pages every week to projection, otherwise, the operator. This has forced the other trade publications to attempt a similar department. The fact that they do not wish to do this, and only did it when forced by the World to, taken in connection with the further fact that their efforts have not met with any large degree of success probably accounts for their overweening desire to discredit the editor of this Department. But, as I said before, the thing is not worth bothering with, much less wasting valuable space over.

Several Things.—Mr. Geo. H. Clay, Caney, Kan., compliments a recent article in the Department concerning exchanges and machine companies selling machines to men with no knowledge of projection, telling the customer, "anybody can run them." Friend Clay then asks how about the ads one sees in the different amusement papers making statement that through a correspondence course operating may be learned and a salary of $25 to $50 weekly secured. Also Neighbor Clay takes a crack at the operator who teaches a fifteen-year-old boy to be an "operator" through a couple of weeks' tuition in the operating room. Continuing, he says: "And now I shall tell you how I take care of my cement bottle. I take two pieces of heavy scrap tin, the first piece about 1½ inches wide by 3 inches long, bent in the center so as to make a little shelf; the second piece I cut about 2 inches wide by long enough to go around the cement bottle and tack it to the wall on both sides. I then get a glass stopper suitable for the cement bottle and with a drill and some turpentine I drill a hole in the bottom of the stopper for the brush, using plaster of Paris to hold the brush in the stopper."

The things you speak of, Friend Clay, that is to say, the advertising that a man can become an operator through a correspondence course and the teaching of boys or men, either one, through a two-weeks' course in an operating room, is reprehensible in the extreme. Operating cannot be taught by correspondence courses, though the operator himself may, with benefit, take such a course. As to the cement bottle stunt, it is all right, particularly the glass stopper part, provided it won't stick fast in the neck of the bottle.

Condensers Again.—Mr. Alfred S. Cory, Somerville, N. J. writes: "I believe most operators agree that one 7½ and one 7½ condenser make the best combination. They seem, however, to disagree as to which should be used in front. In a recent issue you very wisely said that it mattered not, inasmuch as the focal length of the combination remained the same. That works all right for moving pictures, but when showing slides the 7½ inch lens should be placed in front, for the reason that the longer length lens has the greater covering power of the two and insures the slide being illuminated clear to its edges. This was explained to me by a professional photographer known for his fine work on enlargements and I pass it on for the benefit of my fellow operators."

Theoretically this sounds plausible, Friend Cory, but practically the covering power is governed by the equivalent focus—not that of any one of the combinations. However, like you, I pass it on to our readers for their consideration. A 6½ and 7½ combination is only best for certain lengths of objective lenses.

Pleases Him.—Boston, Mass., orders the Handbook and writes: "I have read the Trouble Department right along and only regret we did not have it six or seven years ago. I hope you will be able to keep it up in the years to come."

Well, Boston, we shall certainly make an awful struggle, and as those years go by we hope the Department will improve and its readers improve in knowledge along with it.

Various Things.—San Francisco contributes the following: "I recently tried setting my condensers with the convex sides towards the screen—that is to say, the convex of both lenses towards the curtain—and I believe my light is much better and the spot at the aperture plate much sharper. One of my machines gave a picture which was blurry on the left side. After several unsuccessful experiments I followed the advice given in the Trouble Department, put my machine in line from arc to the frone end of the lens and the picture is, in consequence, much improved. My throw is 40 feet, picture 17. Do you believe it possible to obtain a sharp picture all over the screen with a 3-inch E. F. lens? I have tried my best, but am unable to obtain the same results, as with the longer focus lenses. Is it good practice to belt a motor to the fly-wheel of a machine? I have seen several machines run this way and they did not seem to be in bad shape, either."

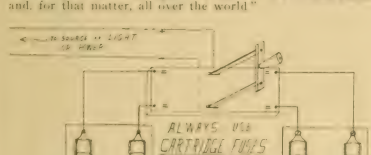
Glad to know that the advice given in the Department has been of benefit to you, Frisco. It is difficult to get a lens of that short a focal length which will give sharp definition all over the screen. The Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co. can furnish you with such a lens, but they cost more than the ordinary, because they are more difficult to grind. No, I would not attach my motor belt to the fly-wheel, though I do not mean by this that there will be any serious results from so doing. I prefer attaching it elsewhere, however, since the pull of the belt is hard on the light shaft and bearing which carries the ordinary fly-wheel.

Some Good Drawings.—Mr. C. W. Bennett, Crystal Falls, Mich., sends in some excellent drawings and writes: "I submit these drawings as a help to operators, but do not wish to have you or them think I am a 'wise guy.' I trust I shall not be considered a 'dope,' but still I have knowledge enough to realize that I have more to learn than I already know, which, I think, is true with all of us. I am always glad to accept as well as to give suggestions that might be of benefit to the business. I have been a reader of the 'Moving Picture World' ever since I knew it existed and can compliment it on the work of all of its Departments, especially the Trouble Department. I know that the latter had helped many a struggling apprentice and has also opened the eyes of many of those who profess to be operators as well as a great many who really are operators. I am a firm believer in unionism. I do not believe, however, that the union card is always evidence of competency, though I do believe it should be. On my visits to Chicago I was astonished at some of the projection viewed in that city. One man in particular I remember had the petrified gall to project his own picture on the screen when he started the show, together with the information that he would entertain the audience with first class projection. My word! you ought to have seen it! I sat in misery for at least half an hour, hoping and expecting from moment to moment to see some improvement, but—nothing doing! I wish to compliment those men who, through the Department, have set forth ideas that have been of benefit to operators all over the United States and, for that matter, all over the world."

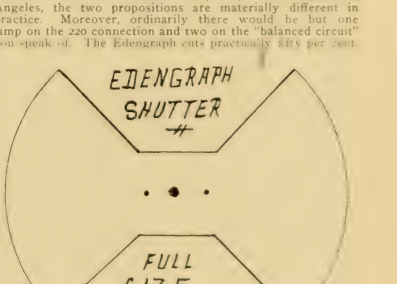


We are indebted to Neighbor Bennett for the drawings upon which he evidently has spent much time and care. They will all be reproduced in good time, the one this week illustrating a very excellent method of connecting circuits on two sets of fuses, so that if a fuse blows, it is only necessary to throw the switch over to the other side. Friend Bennett's sketch had to be redrawn, because it was on thin ruled paper, with writing on opposite side.

Light Rays, Etc.—From our good friend, W. L. Wright, Los Angeles, Cal., comes a letter on light rays which is very good and shows much care in its preparation. We have, however, decided some time ago not to print any more letters on that particular subject unless they be very brief, until an alternative article has been published, which we hope will be in the very near future. We thank Friend Wright for submitting the letter which may be printed later on.

220 Volts. Referring to article Sarrasani in the January 7 issue, Los Angeles writes: "You say I am too indefinite, so I will trouble you with diagram of three-wire, balanced circuit in theater referred to. You say 'the rheostats will be overloaded, delivering about 33 amperes.' Nuff ced! By the 'Little Drive,' I meant the grove pulley on end of lower sprocket shaft. I did not try to be sarcastic. What part (fraction) of the light does the Edengraph machine cut off? I have in mind a theater using 45 amperes with first class lenses but not getting a clear, white picture, while another, using a cheap lens, a rectifier and thirty amperes gets the better picture. Size of picture and throw about the same. The latter shutter cuts off half the light. Carbons burn as per sketch."

The "balanced circuit" matter was clearly a case of misunderstanding. I referred to one lamp working between the two outside wires, hence on 220 volts. In small towns they frequently compel one to use the two outside wires from the fact that both dynamos are already overloaded and they wish to distribute the arc lamp load between the two machines. Of course when two lamps and two rheostats are connected to a three-wire system, one on either side, they really do burn in series the same as though connected to the two outside wires, but, nevertheless, Los Angeles, the two propositions are materially different in practice. Moreover, ordinarily there would be but one lamp on the 220 connection and two on the "balanced circuit" you speak of. The Edengraph cuts practically fifty per cent.



of the light. Sketch shows exact shape and size of Edengraph shutter. The Edengraph folks are about ready to equip all arc machines with a somewhat different shutter. They have narrowed the flicker-blade and made the other blade just that much wider. I take it one house referred to was using A C and the other D C through a Mercury Arc Rectifier. That would explain matters, since better light would be had with 30 amperes D C than with 45 A C. The sketch, however, shows D C crater in both cases. The 45 ampere crater is far and away the best crater from any and every point of view. If your sketch is correct the Rectifier man has his lower carbon too far back while the other fellow's set is ideal.

Drawings.—Those who send in really excellent drawings which could be used just as they are, frequently render them worthless by using colored paper, paper which is not white or ink some other color than black. Also many there are who make the drawing on thin paper and then write on its back. The writing usually will show through. Make all drawings with BLACK ink (preferably, though not necessarily, india ink). Use WHITE ruled paper, though sketches in pencil are O. K. as I will get them to shape BUT they must be complete enough to convey the idea FULLY. Remember that you may be many miles away and I cannot guess at what you mean. It is better to explain too fully than not fully enough.

Condensers.—Washington, D. C., writes: "How long do condensers last and how may a good grade be distinguished from a poor?"

The first query cannot be answered at all. It depends on too many things. I have had them break two minutes after I put them in and I have had them last six months. When using strong current, say 45 amperes or more, they soon become roughened by minute particles of unconsumed carbon. This is particularly true at short focal lengths since the arc is then very close to the lens. A good grade may be distinguished from a poor by the quality of the glass. The glass of high grade lenses looks white and brilliant. It looks white even when you look through the lens sidewise. Cheap, poor grade lenses have a decided greenish tinge. The high grade lens is a better finished, better polished and in every way better looking article.

Letter Mislaid.—Rochester, N. Y., writes at considerable length setting forth various experiences and then continues: "The reason I write all this is that I notice a party in Kentucky wishes to secure a first class operator at a salary of $18.00 per week. I don't believe a really reliable, experienced, first class man can be had at that figure. I would like to get in touch with a Board of Examiners somewhere near Rochester. We have an Edison grid rheostat which was out of commission when I came here. I took it apart and found four of the grids broken. I removed them, put the thing together again and it works all right, giving a little brighter light. Am using between 50 and 60 amperes 110 volt D. C. Did I do right?"

This letter was dated January 8, and somehow was mislaid. I, too, don't think Kentucky will get a good man for that figure, Rochester, and I told them so. It takes BRAINS to produce high class projection and brains are not ordinarilly purchasable at that figure. Removing the four grids was all right, but if the rheostat now gets red hot you should order four new grids and install them at once or the whole thing will soon burn out.

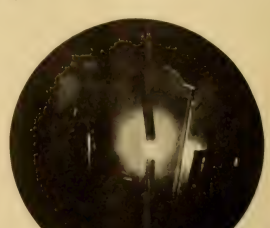
That Frisco Letter.—On the back page of last week's paper appeared a photographic reproduction of a letter from President Woods, of San Francisco M. P. Operators' Union. I am proud of that letter from the fact that it shows that the one operators' union in these United States which has secured a salary scale of thirty-five dollars per week for its members has prescribed the study of my Handbook as a necessary part of its apprentices' curriculum. And right here let me say that, if I am correctly informed as to the Frisco apprenticeship rules, the Frisco union has absolutely the RIGHT DOPE. My information is that an apprentice is placed on a salary of $20.00 per week and is given six months in which to qualify for a position as regular operator at $35.00 per week. By that time he must qualify or get out! I would like to ask the Frisco union to furnish us with full details as to their practice in these respects, also as to their demonstration room practice, etc., all for publication in this Department.

Lens Trouble.—Onaway, Mich., sets forth the following: "When a lens is near its termination of focus (for example, a 60 ft. lens being used for a 63 ft. space), should the object seem to emerge from one point and should they seem to be emerging from something which made them look as if they were being shown on a large globe and not on a flat curtain?".

I do not understand what you mean, Onaway, by "termination of focus" and a 60 ft. lens being used for a 63 ft. space. Lenses are not figured that way. A lens will project a picture at any distance beyond a certain point called its optical center. For instance, an ordinary objective lens of any focal length would project a picture at, say 30 feet, 40 feet, 60 feet, 100 feet, and so on, a perfect picture being projected at each distance, but the picture gradually increasing in size with the distance from the lens. From the last sentence of your letter, however, I take it that the picture is not in proper definition on your screen. This might be and probably is due to one of the combinations of the lens being misplaced. Take out the front factor and if they be not cemented together see to it that the greatest convex of both lenses is towards the screen. If the two be cemented together then the one lens thus obtained should be placed with the greatest convex towards the screen. Next take out the back factor of the lens and see that the greatest convex of both lenses is towards the screen. Examine carefully and see that there are no finger prints, oil or anything of that sort on the lenses. Wash them carefully in alcohol and polish afterwards with a clean white cloth or chamois. If this doesn't remedy the trouble, please try to describe it more in detail.

Interesting Photo.—Mr. Alfred S. Cory, Somerville, N. J., writes: "Looking over some old kodak negatives recently I discovered one which was rather odd, which, however, might interest you. I do not know of many attempts having been made to photograph the electric arc. This picture, however, is quite vivid. I am using 40 amperes of D. C., with the carbons set quite accurately, as you will notice, although not at the angle you most highly approve. I have, however, always secured the best results with the set here shown; but I am always careful to get them very exact."

On behalf of our readers, Friend Cory, I thank you for the photograph, which is, indeed, interesting, though I believe somewhat deceiving in that it shows the crater apparently in the center of the upper carbon. This I take to be by reason of the fact that the lower end of the upper carbon and upper end of the lower carbon—that is to say, that portion of them which was incandescent—does not show in the photograph, being included in the white central halo of light.



Wiring Diagram.—Toronto, Can., crosses the line with the following: "Kindly give me your advice as regards the following: I have two conduit outlets in my operating room, one 220 A. C. and one 250 volt D. C. If possible, I should like to continue using D. C. current for operating the moving picture machine and dissolving stereo. outfit; also another machine in the same booth. Would appreciate a wiring diagram."

You have got a tough proposition there, Toronto, if you wish to use D. C. The use of 250 volts through rheostats would be exceedingly expensive, whereas 220 volt A. C. through a reformer would be quite cheap. There are some direct current savers on the market, but I have no personal acquaintance with them and absolutely will not recommend articles with which I am not acquainted. For alternating current there are a number of good transformers such as the Mercury Arc Rectifier, sold by the General Electric Company, the Powers' Inductor, manufactured by the Nicholas Power Company, 115 Nassau Street, New York City; the Compensarc, made by the Fort Wayne Electric Company, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; the Kosmic, sold by the Kleine Optical Company, 52 State Street, Chicago, Ill., and others. D. C. is, of course, much the best for projection, and I think in your case I would look into the matter of installing a mercury arc rectifier thus turning the alternating into direct current, securing the advantage of D. C. at a minimum operating expense. The mercury arc rectifier is made by the General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y. It is an excellent appliance and the reports from users are satisfactory. So far as the wiring is concerned, I should be very glad to show diagram, but it is hardly worth while until you decide what you intend to do, since the wiring diagram designed for the use of rheostats would be of no use if you use transformers and neither the wiring diagram for rheostats or transformers would be of use if you use a rectifier. As soon as you decide what to do you send me a diagram of your operating room showing the position of the different machines and the conduit outlets and I will fix up wiring diagrams for you. Or, if you want them without waiting for publication through the Department, I will for a fee prepare them and forward by mail immediately upon receipt of your letter. In general, however, I may say, you should have a cut-out block for each machine. You will, of course, attach the wires coming from the conduit outlets to one end of each cut-out block and from the other end of each cut-out block you will run a circuit to the various lamps as follows: Run both wires directly from the cut-out blocks to the operating switch. Then, when using reostats, from the other end of the operating switch run one wire to one binding post of the lamp, using No. 6 asbestos cord for the purpose. The other wire you will run from the operating switch to one binding post of the rheostat and from the other binding post to the rheostat run directly to the other binding post of the lamp. The dissolver lamps should be connected in the same way, using separate rheostat switches and wires for each lamp just the same as though the other lamp were not in existence. There must be a separate cut-out block for each lamp. The wires coming from the conduit outlet should be large enough to carry the current consumed by all of your lamps when they are all burning at once. If you use transformers, then you will have to have a special wiring diagram, since you will use one transformer for two machines, or possibly one transformer for all of your lamps. If you use a mercury arc rectifier, diagrams will accompany it.

Small Light Plants.—Bowling Green, Ky., asks: "In small electric light outfits for moving picture work where 50 to 60 volt generators are used, is any rheostat or resistance required? Also would it be an infringement of patent to use on a certain talking machine a sound box of different make, or one made by a different company from that originally supplied with the machine?"

With a 60 volt dynamo, there would be some slight resistance required, but not very much. I do not know whether a 50 ft. dynamo would work successfully on a moving picture arc or not, but if it did there would be no resistance required. I cannot answer your second request authoritatively. But I do not think anybody would try to interfere with your using a different sound box on your phonograph even if they could. The patent laws are something fearfully and wonderfully constructed and I do not propose to undertake their interpretation on any question whatever, but if I wanted to use a different sound box on my phonograph, I would use it and take chances on having any trouble about it.

Good Dope.—Mr. James Goff, Secretary-Treasurer, I. A. T. S. E. No. 156, Danville, Ill., writes: "Find enclosed money order for Handbook. I have been experimenting on the carrying capacity and amperage of two ¾ or a ⅝ cored and a ½ inch solid carbons on 110 volt D. C. If it will be of any benefit to the Department readers I shall be only too glad to submit my experimental dope."

We shall be very glad, indeed, Neighbor Goff, to have you set forth the result of your experiments and they will no doubt be both interesting and effective.

Motor Drives.—Mr. Geo. Cox, President L. U. No. 176, I. A. T. S. E., Joplin, Mo., writes as follows: "Have been watching the Trouble Department for more than a year. Have seen some mighty fine sketches, but none concerning running a machine with a motor. I am sending you a rough sketch of the way I have my motor connected to an Edison machine, which I trust will be of some benefit to the Department readers. As it is shown on the sketch, a $40 complete, with a ½-horsepower motor. I specify ½ horsepower because a smaller one is too light to carry the load."

Many thanks, Neighbor Cox, for submitting the sketch. The subject is a good one and your intent was all right. The sketch, however, was not quite complete enough to use. Please draw another showing as well as you can the reducing gear. Also is the field connected in a shunt-field circuit or is it in series with the same as would appear from the sketch? As a general proposition, I am opposed to driving a moving picture machine with a motor, but inasmuch as it is a quite common practice the thing might as well be done right as wrong. Therefore, your sketch is of value.

Thanks.—L. A. Davis, Perry, N. Y., encloses check for Handbook and says: "If you put as much time and thought into it as you must put into the Trouble Department each week, the Handbook will surely be worth much more than the price asked."

Many thanks for your complimentary words, Neighbor Davis, but I like the wind-up of your letter best of all. It reads as follows: "Yours for good pictures and good operating;" that's the dope.

The Editor Takes a Turn at the Crank.—The editor of this Department has been twisting a crank himself during the past two weeks and it seemed like old times. Mr Paul J. Rainey, the millionaire explorer, who goes to Africa next month for a two years' go 'round with the elephant, lion and other sociable creatures of the jungle, recently returned from an expedition in the Arctic Circle. Mr. Harold Hemment, son of Mr. J. C. Hemment, New York's expert in fine photography, accompanied Mr Rainey for the purpose of taking moving pictures and altogether six reels were secured. These reels of film were taken, some of them, by the light of the midnight sun. In that latitude light is very poor at any hour of the day, therefore, the films are, in some places, exceedingly dense. Mr. Rainey has been showing these films free of charge in various places and upon the request of Mr. Hemment, the editor of this Department consented to project them. Altogether seven "shows" were given as follows: Princeton Club, Harvard Club, University Club, the Presbyterian Church (the pastor of which was Mr. Rainey's Sunday School teacher many years ago), and the Hotel Plaza, here in New York City. The audiences for the most part, consisted of wealthy clubmen, many of whom were men of national reputation. On Thursday, January 19, we went to Albany and showed these films in the Executive Mansion before Governor Dix, and 200 invited guests, the projection being done in the large double parlors, a picture 10 feet wide being all we could manage. On Saturday, as this paper goes to press, we will be in Washington, D. C., showing the films to President Taft, and Washington notables. The editor of this Department is rather proud of the fact that, while he has worked under great difficulties, particularly in the Executive Mansion, the films, after all, have been shown with a fair degree of brilliancy, and at no time has any part of the film been too dim to be clearly distinguishable. The films were of intense and exceeding interest, consisting for the most part in showing the peculiarities of the Eskimo, the spearing of walrus from small boats, the hunting of musk oxen, and, most interesting of all, a lengthy chase of three polar bear cubs. This latter picture was taken while the steamship plowed through the pan ice, the cubs swimming from one pan to the other and running across the pans themselves, of course. Anything exceedingly interesting, though very dense scene, was an enormous polar bear running across the ice. With each show I also exposed something like 100 stereopticon slides of arctic scenes showing icebergs, scenes in Greenland, scenes of polar bears while being captured and enmeshed in the ropes, and various scenes of Eskimo life. Mr. Rainey lectured in conjunction with the films and slides, his talk being of absorbing interest.

Troubles.—Ohio (name of town suppressed), writes: Enclosed find $1.50 for Handbook. My carbons appear to be in line, but the light spot makes two distinct circles unless it is exceedingly strong. This causes a ghost on the screen. I use one 7½ and one 6½ condenser, the 7½ being next the light. My picture is 9 by 13 and my throw is 85 feet. Are the condensers right? Although in the experimental stage, I have a plan which I think will stop condenser breakage. I believe more lenses break in the cooling than in the heating. I have, therefore had a large tin box made to rest fit over my lamp house. This keeps out cold air and currents and allows the lamp to cool down slowly. I use a Fort Wayne compensarc and after trimming my lamp I let it burn a few minutes on low amperage, which gradually heats the lenses. I do not advise anyone to try this and then blame me if it does not work right, as it is merely an experiment. When through at night I put on the tin cover and it has worked fine so far."

As regards the two circles of light, Ohio, it would, I think, indicate a reflection from each one of the craters; that is to say, from the crater of each carbon. The fact that the one circle eats a little to the side of the other doesn't necessarily indicate anything more than that the two craters are not burning precisely in line with each other. I would advise you to look carefully at the diagrams of carbon setting in the Handbook and read the matter on pages 84, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, and 91, which will answer your question far more completely than I can take space to do so. The column. As to the condensers, they are all right, if you are getting the best possible result. I should say, however, that in all probability two 7½ condensers would work better. As to the lamp house cover, it might work all right if very carefully handled. My own preference has always been however, to have the lamp house open just as much as possible at all times, where that method is not prohibited by law. The matter, however, is passed on to our readers for their consideration and our thanks are returned for its contribution.

A Bundle from Toronto. Toronto, Can., writes as follows: "I have a ghost in the center of the picture. How can I remove it? Am using bicycle current through a choke coil, about 60 amperes. This latter is guess-work, but 60 ampere fuses won't last more than a week. Our picture is to be 12 with a 28-foot throw. Am using two 7½ condensers. Have tried 6½ and 7½ together in every conceivable way, but found the two 7½ gave the best results. I can eliminate the ghost by moving the lamp house back from the condensers, but the spot thus obtained will not completely cover the picture and I prefer a little ghost to sell box edges. The ghost and edges are very light centers. Moving the lamp house backward or forward has the same effect. The screen is white plaster. The only remedy I can think of is the use of a longer focal length condenser. Do you think this would help. I use 14 Hemrich cored carbons and an Edison Type 'B' lamp. Carbons are set exactly as you recommend in your Handbook, which method I have found to be the best after several months of experimenting trying to get a really steady arc with A. C. Can you tell me what is the cause of picture seeming to jump out of the frame (I mean the moulding frame on the wall surrounding the picture), every time a splice in the film goes through? The film does not climb the sprockets, but seems to jump out of focus for the fraction of a second. Can you enlighten me as to why the film buckles in front of the aperture plate. I noticed one week you gave several reasons for this. I promptly put in a new aperture plate and spring, but it still buckles a little sometimes, especially are the Kalem films troublesome in this respect."

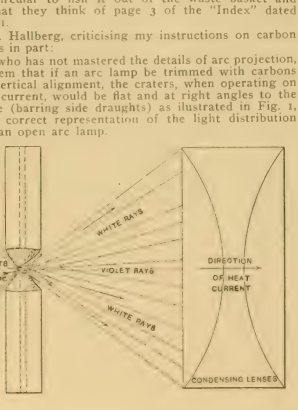
As regards the ghost, Toronto, two 8 or 8½ inch condensers would probably fix you up in the ghost matter, but they are higher in price and rather hard to get. Moreover, two 7½ inch condensers ought to work all right, since you have only about 5½ inch equivalent focus lens, and I have used two 7½ inch condensers with good effect on lenses considerably longer than that. I would suggest that you can make the spot as large as you want to by moving the lamp closer to the condensers. If the sliding ways of your lamp will not allow this, then the ways should be fixed so that they will. As to the film jumping out of focus when a splice goes through, I should say this would only occur when it was a heavy, thick splice. I do not think you would have trouble with an ordinary splice. The only way you could stop it would be to go over the film and cut out all the thick joints, which, of course, involves a lot of labor. As to the picture apparently jumping out of the frame when the splice goes through, it is, I think, for the reason that the thick splice, striking the tension springs, pulls them down slightly, thus letting the film slip a trifle lower than it should be. When the springs return to their normal position the film returns also. From what you say, it would seem that the cause of the film buckling over the aperture lies more in the film than in the machine, since if it were the fault of the machine one make of film should not buckle more than another. You might examine your tension springs, however, and see that there is no possibility of their moving from side to side a little. This would cause the film to buckle, and it is a fault which may possibly be present, though I hardly think so. From what you say, I take it the fault lies in the splice and not in the machine.

Well, I'll Be Squelched!—In the latest issue of that illustrated circular, otherwise known as the "Films Index," an attempt is made to discredit the work of the editor of this department. The editor (in name only) of the "Index" not only holds himself up to ridicule in so doing, but he allows a gentleman for whom I have hitherto had a high regard to rush into print and proclaim his ignorance of projection matters in a way that must discredit the value of the weekly dope he furnishes to that paper. Space is too valuable for me to quote in full his lengthy harangue, but, for the fun of it, it will pay readers of the World who may get that free circular to fish it out of the waste basket and tell me what they think of page 3 of the "Index" dated Jan. 28, 1911.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, criticising my instructions on carbon setting, says in part:

"To one who has not mastered the details of arc projection, it would seem that if an arc lamp be trimmed with carbons in perfect vertical alignment, the craters, when operating on alternating current, would be flat and at right angles to the vertical line (barring side draughts) as illustrated in Fig. 1, which is a correct representation of the light distribution from such an open arc lamp.



The projector lamp is, however, provided with a condensing lense, the purpose of which is to gather the light rays from the arc, as shown in Fig. 2. You will please take note that the arc no longer stays in the center of the carbon points; it is pushed towards the condensing lenses by the slight draught of air created when the condenser pulls the light rays and consequent heat towards itself. The arrows indicate the direction of the air circulation. The carbon points are no longer flat or at right angles to the center line of the carbon. They are open or slanting towards the condensers. This valuable discovery, which I made several years ago, is not applicable to its fullest extent for projector arc lamps unless the arc is under the control of specially designed and constructed controlling devices, such, for instance, as the Hallberg Economizer."

The above is the meat of the article in question, the other half being consumed in setting forth the information that, while I (F. H. Richardson), do not know enough to come in when it rains, he (J. H. Hallberg), is really the true source of all real electrical knowledge! We live to learn, it is said, and surely here is a bundle of information to be locked away in a safe deposit vault, lest it be mislaid and lost. THE CONDENSER "DRAWS" THE LIGHT, DRAWS THE HEAT AND THUS CREATES A GENTLE ZEPHYR WHICH WAFTS THE CRATER OVER IN FRONT, RIGHT WHERE IT WILL DO THE MOST GOOD! Now don't you laugh! Don't you DARE laugh, or Mr. Hallberg will slap you on the wrist with one of those deadly hot-air draughts. You just set your carbons central with each other, and straight up and down, and the "draught" will do the rest—dear me, no! I nearly made another "mistake!" Not so. Nothing doing—unless you have a Hallberg transformer. Mr. Hallberg has the left hind foot of a rabbit, killed at midnight in the dark of the moon, in a country g-r-a-v-e y-a-r-d, concealed in each of his transformers. (Economizers), and that's what does the trick. Only condensers used in connection with the Hallberg rabbit's foot transformer will draw the crater! Other condensers are mere imitations, and,not at all capable of creating the mysterious hot air (nothing personal in the "hot air" reference, dear Hallberg) draught. Moral is, of course, get a Hallberg rabbit's foot transformer. None genuine without the hot air flue. It is to laugh! Seriously, however, if Mr. Hallberg can produce one scintilla of evidence from any authoritative source, in support of his somewhat startling assertions, I will apologize. His cut shows the "hot-air" draught as passing through the condenser lens. Imagine air passing through about two inches of glass! Mr. Hallberg says his "Electrical Talks" will be issued in book form. The book ought to be worth any reasonable price, I take it, as a joke book—judging from the sample herewith presented.

In direct contradiction to Mr. Hallberg's theories, Mr. Henry Phelps Gage, who conducted an exhaustive series of tests for the Physical Laboratory of Cornell University, and for the General Electric Company, at Schenectady, in the year 1910 (the tests were to determine the candle-power obtained from projection lamps with various amperages and with the electrodes—carbons—set in various ways), says, the most favorable condition was found to be when the lamp was angled, the same as we use it for D. C. But Mr. Gage probably did not have a Hallberg rabbit-foot transformer to "draw" the light and heat and create a gentle "draft" through the condenser lenses, thus drawing the arc out in front where it belongs.

ADDRESS WANTED.

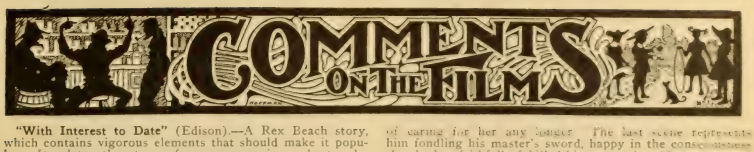
Would some reader of the World send me the address of Chas. D. Cutter, of Springfield, Mass. We had a check for $18 returned from the Third National Bank of Springfield, on March 18, 1910, marked "not sufficient funds." All efforts to locate him have failed.

We previously accepted a check from him, which was O K. We desire his present address that we may inform him of the fact.

The American Film Exchange,
630 Halsey street,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

COOL HEADS AND BRAVE HEARTS.

By addressing the crowd and playing a march, until the patrons left the place, Lewis Cummings, proprietor of the Orpheum moving picture show, Fort Worth, Texas, prevented a panic when a kerosene stove in the box office exploded and ignited the skirts of Miss Bird Perry, cashier, and spread to the floor above. The loss was $600, three reels and the machine being saved. The cashier lost her hat, purse and set of furs and was slightly burned.



"With Interest to Date" (Edison).—A Rex Beach story, which contains vigorous elements that should make it popular. It relates the story of a young engineer, beaten by a prominent firm, and his method of securing a large contract, by having one man impersonate the head of the house giving out the contract, and ask for a large sum of graft. This, of course, advances the price, and the young engineer is enabled to underbid his rival, secure the contract, and incidentally the hand of the girl he wanted. The story is clearly told, the acting is all that could be desired, but whether the influence of the picture is all it should be, depends upon the point of view the audience accepts regarding that graft proposition. The picture apparently teaches that such a method of obtaining a contract is honorable; but, of course, that is open to question. Reputable business men would scarcely tolerate anything of that sort, and the moral influence of the film may therefore be on the wrong side. If it is intended as an illustration of how things are sometimes done, that is another proposition; but the story does not emphasize that fact. If this point were made a trifle clearer, there would be no criticism of this film.

"A Water Contest" (Gaumont).—A picture of some lively water sports in the south of France, including what is trmed tilting, in which one man attempts to push another from the bow of a boat by means of a padded spead.

"Uncle's Birthday Gift" (Edison).—An eccentric uncle sends his niece a birthday gift of a ruber plant in the pot of which is concealed a valuable necklace. The messenger bosses the plant, and before he finds it, the uncle's arrival is announced. The messenger boy buys a fern. The uncle's note that comes with it indicates something else, and there is a hurry and skurry to get something to take its place. Ultimately the difficulty is settled and the niece gets her necklace.

"Her Chum's Brother" (Kalem).—A love story with the scenes laid in Florida and Cuba. The brother of a girl falls in love with her college chum. The scheming sister straightway begins a matchmaking proposition in which she is successful. Some of the scenery is exceptionally good, both Florida and Cuba being represented in the picture. It is well told for a love story, but after all possesses no marked feature.

"Trailed by an Indian" (Pathe).—A Western drama by the American company, representing a child stolen by two discharged cowboys, trailed by an Indian, who kills them both. The picture has one feature of merit, the typical Western scenery through which the scene leads. Stolen children is not to be commended and the bloody work of killing men can scarcely be condoned. The picture has scenic merit, but little else to commend it.

"Sea Birds in Their Haunts" (Pathe).—A series of photographs of shy sea birds obtained under extreme difficulty in their almost inaccessible haunts. The photographers were in peril all the time they were taking the pictures, either from danger of falling from precipitous cliffs or because of exposure to severe weather. While the pictures are interesting, they also serve to show the intrepidity of the cinematographer.

"By the King's Order" (Urban-Eclipse).—A picture of Medieval France, with the men at arms, the retainers, the castles, with secret passages, intrigue, the king's order for an arrest, followed by a pardon, a battle around a castle, a beautiful girl in love with a man supposed to be a villain, and all the romantic glamor which surrounds and permeates a story of this sort. Why try to criticise it? Few know whether it is accurate or not. It has action. There is a love story running through it. The clash of arms and the thrill of onset. What does it matter how the elements are arranged? The inexpressible something that attracts and pleases is present. And it is made all the more notable by reason of excellent photography. The combination is good. It satisfies the audience. What more can the exhibitor desire?

"His Trust Fulfilled" (Biograph).—A story complete in itself, yet really a continuation of the earlier release of the week, showing the negro expending his savings for his master's daughter, sending her to school until all are gone. But she is happily wedded, relieving him of the responsibility of caring for her any longer. The last scene represents him fondling his master's sword, happy in the consciousness that he has faithfully fulfilled his trust. A noble motive well portrayed.

"A Brother's Redemption" (Lubin).—A home drama, which touches the heartstrings as few motion pictures are able to do. Two brothers are conducting a prosperous business together. One does his work as he should; the other does not, resulting in the wreck of the firm. One saves enough to start in business for himself, in a modest way; the other becomes a tramp. Years after, the older brother has a sweetheart. The tramp arrives at her house, and while eating the food she has given him, hears his brother tell her he has been drafted to go to the war. Realizing that here is an opportunity to redeem himself, he gets hold of the papers, and is accepted in the brother's place, ultimately dying in battle, yielding up his life a sacrifice for his brother's sake. As he closes his eyes for the last time, he sees a vision of his mother, his brother and wife, all happy and at peace. Such a picture needs no criticism. It goes deeper than mere words. Each person will feel its subtle influence and each person will interpret it according to his own experience. But the heart interest is there, and its influence is plainly manifest in any audience. Whether the dramatic motive are maintained or lost, the picture will appeal strongly to a majority of those who see it.

"Changing Cooks" (Melies).—Cowboys are notoriously hard on cooks. After they made it so uncomfortable on this ranch that a number left, often without much preparation, a woman came who was received with a cordiality that surprised her. At her first meal the trouble began, but so far from being disturbed by the boys, she subdued them so effectively that they ate out of her hand, and she stayed on indefinitely.

"An Englishman's Honor" (Selig).—Tells of an Englishman who, supposing he had money, drew liberally, but when gambling debts overwhelmed him, and the truth came out, he departed for America, made a fortune, paid the debts and returned to England in time to prevent his sweetheart marrying an unscrupulous rival. The story is clearly told, the characters perform their parts well, and the photography is clear. It is a pleasant narrative, but lacks strong dramatic interest.

"Mike, the Miser" (Edison).—The story of a messenger boy, who turns miser, so his sister can be cured of some illness. His fellow messengers revile him, and make life a burden for him, until one day he is hurt, and the letter he writes to the superintendent, asking him to hold the place, and saying why, is seen by one of the boys. Then comes a reversion of feeling, and they contribute the sum required, march up to Mike's home, and very solemnly and very formally present the purse. The sister rises to the occasion, and presents each boy with a kiss. The picture is full of pathos and humor, well expressed and sympathetically acted.

"Robbie and the Redskins" (Kalem).—A semi-humorous film, detailing the adventures of Robbie who hides in a clock and traps a party of Indians. The sister goes for aid which makes it extremely interesting for the Indians when it arrives. And the boy is discovered safely hidden in the big clock.

"A Modern Light Battery in Action" (Kalem).—A graphic representation of one of the important arms of the military service. Considering the subject difficult, because of its rapid movement, the picture is well photographed and gives a good idea of the way such a battery manoeuvres.

"The Tables Are Turned" (Pathe).—To keep flirty at her practice her father placed a mirror so it reflected the interior of her room into his. Suspecting that the mirror would serve quite as well for other purposes, he confided with the maid, and flirty quickly brought him to terms. One word will give an adequate description of this comedy.

"The Girl in the Film" (Vitagraph).—He falls asleep with his camera beside him. Two girls come along and amuse themselves by making faces at each other. When developed he falls in love with one of the faces. The second is long search, at last rewarded, and now they are engaged.

"The Border Ranger" (Essanay).—Bud, a ranger, captures the leader of a band of Mexican smugglers. The smugglers retaliate by capturing Joe's sweetheart. They declare they will never give her up until Bud gives up Joe. Bud refuses, and goes after her, but is captured himself, and subjected to torture to make him give up. The girl escapes, informs a posse where the smugglers' rendezvous, and they arrive just in time to save Bud's life. The picture is intensely melodramatic, but not impossible, consequently carries more interest than some of this type.

"The Kleptomaniac's Repentance" (Gaumont).—A lady lays down a valuable ring. Another picks it up. A housemaid is accused, but protests her innocence, but the thief, fearing detection, slips the ring in the unfortunate's pocket, and she is led away to prison. When her term expires, she is rejected by her husband. Eventually her innocence is proved, and the now repentant husband loses no time in taking her back. Not much to be said in favor of this film.

"The Marked Dollar" (Pathe).—Through a marked dollar, a little girl discovers the man who took a large sum of money from her father, traces it to the man's house and induces his wife to give it up. Her father is restored to his place on the ranch, after being admonished to mend his ways and choose more desirable associates.

"Cast Up by the Deep" (Vitagraph).—Wooed by a wealthy lover, a poor fisher maiden, married another, but the first one remained true. Years after, when she was a widow, and he still a bachelor, he wrote a note to her, and putting it in a champagne bottle consigns it to the waves. It is cast up at her feet, even as she was dreaming of him. Her companion gets the bottle, breaks it, and in doing so cuts his finger. Full of sympathy, because of the injury, the girl fails to read the note—destiny is too strong. Some of the scenic effects in this picture, particularly, and the graphic presentation that even so slight a thing as a cut finger can prevent the desired working out of one of life's problems. The suggestions in the picture are, perhaps, more dramatic than what is shown.

"The Link That Held" (Edison).—A domestic story, telling how a young wife is almost led astray by her husband's employer, but is saved by their child from actually committing wrong. It is a film difficult to describe, because so much of it is in the facial expression and the acting. It is dramatic, in the deepest sense, because it touches those springs of human nature which lie far below the surface, and are only occasionally stirred by what may go on around one. The finale, where the little family is reunited and happy in each other's affections, is a pleasant close to what promised to be a disagreeable story.

"The Heart of an Indian Mother" (Kalem).—An Indian mother is befriended by some white people, and when the Indians plan a raid upon the settlement, she shows her gratitude by warning them in time, so they can secure aid and save the settlement. An Indian funeral is reproduced, with close fidelity to the original, and other scenes depict Indian life, with care in the detail.

"Max is Almost Married" (Pathe).—He would have been quite, only his fiancee's dogs broke from their kennel, and chased him to the roof of a building. Undoubtedly this is funny. It must be, else it would not have been released as a comedy, but some of the actions of the characters are so improbable that they cease to be humorous.

"So Near, But Not Quite" (Pathe).—A comedy of the chase variety, with bicycles performing all sorts of stunts. Eventually the thief if permitted to help in carrying a policeman he has put "hors du combat" into the station and is rewarded with money for his kindness. It may be funny, but it is wildly improbable.

"Water Lilies" (Vitagraph).—A love story among the water lilies, tender and pathetic enough to satisfy the most exacting critic. It tells how the girl saved the love for a man stricken by blindness, and how their love, begun before the affliction, among the water lilies, was afterward continued there when she came, despite his refusal to allow it, to reclaim him. It is very sentimental, but not improbable, consequently it possesses an unusually strong appeal.

"Fate's Turning" (Biograph).—Not often is a picture put on the screen as bald in its exhibition of the sins of this one. Often enough it has been hinted that a girl has loved, not wisely, but too well, but this is the first time the visible result of such loving has appeared to the responsible man at his wedding to another. This is an intensely dramatic scene, and so out of the ordinary that it will attract, perhaps, more than the due share of attention. The bride-to-be, naturally, departs, and the man, suddenly confronted with unmistable evidence of his perfidy, has a revulsion of feeling and marries the unfortunate girl. Perhaps the fact that in modern parlance, a spade is called by its name, is sufficient justification for the presentation of this subject in this way, but undoubtedly many will look askance at the picture and express their doubts of the advisability of presenting such unpleasant truths in such an altogether vigorous manner. Deftly portrayed, it is another Biograph sermon on the screen.

"Father Makes Himself Useful" (Lubin).—Often, mother-in-law has been called in to settle disagreeable or fancied difference between fond young couples, but probably this picture is the first on record where father-in-law has been summoned to make the son good. The novelty of the combination is irresistible, and the complications that follow, while father is endeavoring to soothe the disturbed young wife, will keep any audience in rare good humor. The climax, when the young man tells his father what he thinks of such outrageous conduct, is very funny. In truth, there is plenty of fun all through the film.

"How Max Went Around the World" (Pathe).—A comedy, has some claims to consideration in its presentation of a novel scheme to get away from home for a time. But the fun is based upon the old, worn-out assertion that men spend most of their time thinking up schemes to deceive their wives. This is so ancient that whatever it might have been at one time, it has long ago ceased to possess humor.

"Gasoline for a Tonic" (Pathe).—The best that can be said of this is that it is short. It is pure drivel and does not even amuse. When a producer makes sport of a cripple, even by representing him as cured, the picture deserves no attention.

"A Robust Patient" (Selig).—A travesty, upon sanitariums, which will undoubtedly appeal to a large number. The experiences of this robust patient are humorous, at any rate, and the vigorous way he takes of escaping from his thralldom will add zest to any program.

"An Eventful Evening" (Edison).—Adapted from Richard Harding Davis' story "Miss Civilization." Telephoning for a special train while burglars are entering the house, is a novelty which would be possible only in modern times. That much is certain. The way the girl takes to hold the burglars in the room where they will not disturb her mother until the men arrive is quite as distinctly feminine as any of the old-time girls could have done. Here are the two types strangely contrasted in the same picture, yet it must be confessed that the author has only depicted the modern woman. The Edison players have caught the spirit of the piece and have interpreted it in a way which will have a strong appeal for any audience. The lighting effects are to be especially commended. In short, all the features of the film are such that they add materially to the strength of the story.

"A Sin Unpardonable" (Essanay).—The scene of this play is laid in the Canadian lumber wilds where primitive passions sway men's lives and where each man is strongly disposed to be a law unto himself. This fact must be clearly understood to make the meaning of the picture clear. It is only natural that when the friend makes loves to his wife that should go out with the avowed purpose of killing the false one. That he doesn't was not his fault. The novelty in the play is in the fact that the supposed dead man staggers into the cabin and asks forgiveness for the wrong he has committed. The exhibition of honesty and manliness is extremely pleasing when the forgiveness is granted and the man is allowed to go on in peace. As a picture of the primal passions of human nature in their purity, this picture is one of the strongest that has appeared in months. The players show a dramatic earnestness which helps wonderfully in making the picture attractive.

"Twilight of a Soldier's Life" (Gaumont).—It is quite within the province of possibility that a daughter-in-law might make life uncomfortable for an old veteran, but the picture represents her as repenting afterward and allowing the old man to come back. The first part of the picture is true to life. But it is to be feared that the last part is added as a sort of Sunday school idea, merely to make the picture attractive to the growing class of moralists. It has little strength and almost no interest.

"I Did Look Suspicious" (Vitagraph).—A mixup over a diamond ring which is supposed to be humorous, but after all only succeeds in being slightly funny in places. Its most striking characteristic is its illustration of the forgetfulness of a man and the dire consequences that followed. Aside from this it possesses no strength.

"The Firemen's Parade" (Vitagraph).—The immortalizing of the volunteer fire department of Freeport, L. I. It shows a good body of men and the photography is excellent, while the stunts they perform would do credit to a trained department.

Frank Lanning

Frank Lanning, "the Indian star of the moving picture drama," is one of the few male actors who, by sheer merit, has found a warm place in the hearts of the motion picture public. He has probably successfully portrayed more Indian characters than any other man, notably in "The Call of the Blood," "Big Elk," "The Legend of Scar Face," "Winona," "Black Foot's Vindication," "Indian Pete's Gratitude," etc. He is of Irish extraction, but when seen in Indian regalia it is hard to distinguish him from the real article. In fact, his strong features and athletic build are so characteristic of the Indian race that he needs no disguise, and in "Spotted Snake's Schooling" he takes the part of Spotted Snake without any wig or make-up whatever. Mr. Lanning had the advantage of several years' schooling with Belasco, having been cast for a prominent part in "The Darling of the Gods," also in "The Girl of the Golden West." While his specialty is Indian characterization, of which he has made a profound study, his repertory is by no means limited to that field. He is an expert horseman and a valuable member of the Kalem Company, which is now operating near Los Angeles. Of a studious nature, he is deeply in love with his work and believes in the power of the silent drama. When asked what was his opinion of the secret of success in moving picture acting his characteristic reply was: "One cannot express more than he really is. If we wish to really broaden and ennoble the nature of our audiences, we must first become acquainted with, harmonize and ennoble our own nature and unconsciously we will express these qualities at all times." With such principles governing his efforts we hope to see more and more of Mr. Lanning's capabilities.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never S

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

Order Now!

Release of Wednesda

"THE BRI

A Western Idyl, Capitally Played and Ca

COMING! Wednesday, March 8th, 1911 COMING!
"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS"
The Greatest Military Play of Them All

For Bulletins Write
146 Fourt

Scene from "T

Just Two Instances of the many "taking ways" which help to prove that "IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD"

NESTOR'S	ONE OF THE TRUST'S
"The Law and The Man"	"THe Law and The Man"
Wed., Sept. 14th, 1910	Tues., Dec. 13th, 1910
"Elda of the Mountains"	"The Girl of the Mts."
Wed., Dec. 28th, 1910	Tues., Jan. 17th, 1911

Comparisons are odious!
Comments are superfluous!!!

For originality, newness and goodness

GET NESTOR FILMS
RELEASED EVERY WEDNESDAY

For Release
Wednesday, Feb. 8th, 1911
A Foto-Dramatic Sensation

"The Transgressor"

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Ban

FILMS

rpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR FILMS — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY

ebruary 1st, 1911

L TRAIL" Order Now!

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

dly Photographed—Length, 1000 Feet.

TORLIST 1009"
N. Y.

al Trail"

COMING! Wednesday, March 8th, 1911 COMING!
"IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS"
The Greatest Military Play of Them All

Exchangemen and Exhibitors

Don't wait! Now is the time!
Increase your business!
Let NESTOR FILMS do it!
NESTOR FILMS will do it!
Remember! There's but ONE NESTOR A WEEK!
Always a corking good feature!
"Good Things" in Motion Pictures are scarce!

Get Nestors regularly if you would have

ONE GOOD THING A WEEK!

RELEASED EVERY WEDNESDAY

For Release
Wednesday, Feb. 15th, 1911
The Very Essence of Pathos

"The Light Beyond"

Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

"The Son of the Executioner."

Some Typical Illustations of the Dramatic Prowess of the Great Northern Film Company

The work of this Danish Company has a peculiar fascination for the picture fan, like ourselves. There is such a wealth of detail visible in the beautiful photography, so much evident care is given to the settings, the plots are worked out so methodically, the sturdy-looking Danish actors and plump and pretty actresses perform their parts so naturally, that one feels wholly satisfied. Especially is this so when they present a story that is intelligible without the aid of those funny sub-titles, as is the case with the "Son of the Executioner." The branded son of a public executioner decides that the job is not to his liking, and runs away to seek his fortune. He finds it, and a wife into the bargain, by performing the thrilling rescue of a princess. The scenes provide ample opportunity for the display of the gorgeous settings for which the Great Northern Film Company are famous, and enough action and thrilling escapades to please any audience. With a large and competent stock company, and unlimited facilities, this concern is now turning out much excellent work, that is not seen here by the single-weekly release, and as soon as the demand for Great Northern warrants a double release, they will be forthcoming, which we trust will be soon.

COMMENTS ON THE FILMS.—INDEPENDENT.

"A City Wolf" (Atlas).—Deals with the adventures of a young and unsophisticated Canadian-French country girl in the hands of a city libertine, who sought to ruin her. There are many country characters who seem familiar, so natural are they. There is some country scenery of surpassing beauty, and there are property reproductions of more than ordinary merit. Dramatically, the picture runs the whole gamut of human emotion, revealing almost the very soul in some of its presentations. The actors have seized upon the salient facts in the drama, and have interpreted it with an appreciation which is but please. This picture will take rank with one of the best of the month. It tells a story that will appeal with irresistible force to all who see it. The emotions are aroused and played upon until they respond unconsciously to the appeal and the vicissitudes of the characters are followed almost as though they were watching friends.

"Why He Went West" (Champion).—Believing the girl he loved, false, he went West. There he found another one who at least loved him. In some way, the first one found him, and they are all brought together in a group on Christmas Day, a year afterward. When the time comes to make the choice, he selects the newer and the younger love, leaving she, whose perfidy seemed unable to go back to her home broken-hearted and alone. The story is clearly told, a merit worth considering, but it is pointless. Photographically, it leaves little to be desired, and the actors have performed their parts with sympathy and discretion.

"The Bonanza King" (American).—A Western drama, full of the dash and spirit of the breezy country it purports to represent. The actors display a sympathy in their work, and an appreciation of the possibilities of the story, which makes the film exceptionally interesting. The work of the American Company has improved in a marked degree of late, and promises even better things in the future. To correctly interpret the life of the West, requires a minute knowledge of the land and its people, which can be obtained only by first-hand study. The actors are to be congratulated upon their good work.

'His First Patient" (Imp).—The young doctor falls in love with a nurse, but his father objects to the marriage. However, when the father breaks his leg, and the young man cares for it so well, as to win commendation, the wished-for consent to the wedding is not long in coming. A pleasant story, clearly told, and developing a degree of human interest, which will make it popular.

"A Dreadful Dilemma" (Lux).—A girl's lover kills a gamekeeper, because of jealousy, and her father is accused of the crime. After trying in vain to induce her lover to tell the truth, and save her father, she tells it herself, releasing her father, and sending her lover to prison. The strength of this picture lies in the mental anguish, graphically portrayed, by the girl when she is trying to decide what to do. The intense center- there, and it is indeed good acting on her part.

"His Faithful Furniture" (Lux).—A trick picture, representing the furniture of an unfortunate, whose belongings had been sold for debt, marching back to take their place in his rooms. Some surprising effects are produced in the march of the furniture back to its old place.

"A Reporter's Romance" (Solax).—A girl reporter, sent out to describe life in the under-world, is discovered in the act of attempting to open safe, but when the proprietor learns her identity, he side tracks the police, and allows her. The story is well told, and contains interest, because of its scenes among the habitues of the under-world.

"The Trunk Mystery" (Great Northern).—A detective story that holds the interest, even as the printed story, with to go. Eventually a love affair develops, and they marry. The snappy sentences, holds the interest. The hiding of the man in the trunk, is not novel. It is the keeping him alive after he has been hidden there, that introduces a new element in a common enough story. The detective's work is effective, and there is surprise with no element of uncertainty in it, when the conspirator is captured by the detective, just as he is about to hurl the trunk into the sea.

"The Visit of a Friend" (Itala).—In the crowd that saw this, more than one person expressed very forcibly the one word—silly. And that is about all that can be said. The senselessness and unlikelihood of blowing up a house because the friend didn't happen to be at home, is too much for even a motion picture audience to swallow. It is such pictures as this, that bore an audience.

"An Animated Arm-chair" (Itala).—Not a new subject. Whether it is likely, may be passed, since it is supposed to be a fool comedy, anyway. What little effect it might have, is spoiled by the obvious way the mistress of the house sets on the supposed chair. Then, follows a rough-and-tumble chase, in which the only really humorous feature is the drubbing the man of the house gets, when the crowd, seeing the chair cover on him, mistake him for the real culprit.

"A Noble Heart" (Powers).—Nobleness is a state of being which is differently manifested by different persons. There are dramatic scenes, but by far the best is where the country girl implores the city woman to give back her sweetheart, and she, having suffered from desertion herself, sympathizes, apparently deserts him, and he goes back to his first love. The acting is sympathetic enough to appear convincing.

"The Vows" (Reliance).—Sometimes it seems as though any picture in which Marion Leonard appears is certain to be good. There are degrees of goodness, however, and the Reliance Company, while it has made a good average record, releases uneven reels. "The Refuge," for example, was unworthy the company. "A Sacrifice—and Then," was remarkably good. "On Kentucky Soil" was uneven. "The Vows" has scarcely an instant from the time the young man leaves the kindly monks to go out into the world "to do men good," as he expressed, to the closing scene, when the girl he loves, and who loves him, puts the habit of the monk about him, and goes out into the world, leaving him kneeling enraptured before the altar. The development of the plot from the time when the young reporter, the novitiate goes to interview the actress and is attracted by her assumed domesticity and infatuated by her beauty, both the girl and the man do what seems wholly natural. The scene where he enters and finds a rival in progress, and drives them out of the house, impresses with the man's masterful personality. The dramatic unities have been well maintained, and the two stars have risen to the opportunity presented in each instance, producing a film well worth the attention of those who want to see a film drama above the ordinary. Undoubtedly this can be safely called the strongest independent release of the week.

"Their New Minister" (Nestor).—Much subtle and altogether different humor is depicted by the young reprobate, who is mistaken for the new minister and has wit enough to seize the advantage offered for a lark, and make the most of it. The succession of scrapes which follow, are sufficiently apparent to keep the audience in good humor. And even when the real minister arrives, the young reprobate's fortune does not forsake him. He has been, and is such a jolly companion that he is forgiven. The photographs in the Nestor films deserves more than passing notice. The operator is an artist in producing what may be termed, bold effects. He suppresses detail in many instances, but he has a knack of emphasizing his characters which stamp the films with an individuality not attained by any other operator. Some of the action taking place on the tops of mountains, or the edges of precipices, allows opportunity to produce striking effects. And this is done. Strong figures, standing out boldly from the landscape around them, constitute a series of unusual pictorial effects.

"The Girl and the Burglar" (Solax).—A burglar succeeds in getting the upper hand of a man, who holds him covered with a revolver while he telephones for the police, but is in turn handed over as the burglar when the officers arrive. But the young man's fiancee had entrusted him with a sock, face to have repaired, and when later the real burglar makes love to her, and presents her with the necklace, her suspicions are aroused, and it leads to the unmasking, release from prison, and the apprehension of the real burglar. Not very dramatic, but a plausible story.

"Bill, as a Jockey" (Lux).—Bill is presented with a horse, but a stipulation accompanies the gift, to the effect that the horse shall never leave him. Naturally this leads to innumerable amusing complications.

INSIST ON
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS
Released TUESDAYS, SATURDAYS

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

Release Monday, January 30th.

"The Genius"

A Comedy Drama. Replete with dramatic situations tempered with a few laughs. A good reel.

Length approx. 965 feet

Release Thursday, February 2nd.

"The Mission in the Desert"

A Western Feature Drama. A sensation. A reel you will repeat and repeat. Made in Arizona.

Length approx. 985 feet

Release Monday, February 6th.

"A Pittsburg Millionaire"

A dramatic film intense in its appeal. An exceedingly interesting story. A decided feature.

Length approx. 985 feet

Release Thursday, February 9th.

"On The Installment Plan"
"Too Much Aunt"

Split reel comedy. Both hilariously funny. A laugh-making reel from the first foot to the last.

Lengths respectively 560 feet and 430 feet.

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

How About the Slides that Move?

GENRE MOTION SLIDES

Made under A. S. Spiegel's patents.

"Skeptics are everywhere, and we can expect a general laugh at the title 'Motion Slides.' Many will say 'impossible.' We have seen them."—(From M. P. World.)

GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO., Sole Mfgrs. for U. S.

507 North Clark Street - - - - - Chicago, Illinois

"That is My Name" (Lux).—A comedy, based upon the fact that there are, in reality a large number of people of the same name. It shows the comical complications which often follow.

"Painless Extraction" (Eclair).—A questionable comedy. Time and again it has been pointed out that the representation of almost any method of thievery might cause some weak minded person to undertake the same thing, or something similar to it. Just where the fun is in a film of this sort, it is hard to say.

"Kill the Fly" (Eclair).—A lively comedy, presenting the difficulties of an irascible old colonel, who cannot enjoy his siesta because of a fly. The ungainly soldier's awkward attempts to catch it, are funny enough, and the end is even more so, when it escapes and he goes to the guardhouse after all.

"When a Man's Single" (American).—A comedy, with a good deal of snap, detailing at some length, and with much appreciation of humor the adventures of a man who had no use for married life, at first, but eventually decided, after a sufficient number of moving incidents, that it was quite the proper thing.

"The Dream" (Imp).—Maybe, if some means could be devised for making erring husbands to see this sort of vision, after drinking too much champagne, there would be fewer divorces. At any rate, the proposition appeared different, when he dreamed his wife tried it, and the end was a contrite man and plenty of lovey-dovey business, as recompense for the past misbehavior.

"The Convict's Last" (Yankee).—A drama that will appeal strongly to very many, because of the clever acting of a child and her interposition just in time to save a burglar from arrest. The suggestive character of pictures like this, cause each one to read something different into them, yet in each instance touching something in their own experience or that of some one of whom they have heard. Incidentally, the picture graphically presents the utter hopelessness of the future of an ex-convict, under ordinary conditions. That this man was given a chance was due to favorable circumstances. The picture will, however, be a consideration of the fate of the others whose fortune was less favorable.

"A Wife's Love" (Powers).—A strongly dramatic piece, albeit rather too gloomy for a motion picture, since it does not amuse, nor instruct. The scene where the young wife, driven to desperation, visits her father's house, and is detected in the act of taking money from him, would be quite strong if the father were not allowed to die. That seems unnecessary, and leaves the impression that the girl will always carry the feeling that she was responsible for her father's death. And this impression is intensified when his will discloses the fact that he has left a substantial sum to the young couple, even though he did not like the husband. The main thread of the story makes a good picture, but if the father could be restored to consciousness and relent, the effect would be much better. The unreasonableness of the present form is somwhat intensified when it is found that the mother has helped while the daughter was absent.

"Little Dorothy" (Powers).—A pretty comedy, with the principal part acceptably played by a winsome little girl. Bashful lovers may well watch and profit by this, that their sweethearts have a sister as wise as this girlie. There isn't a dull moment in the picture, and the audience follows every change closely from beginning to end.

"Red Man's Wrath" (Bison).—An Indian picture, calculated to afford a view of one side of an Indian's character. The idea of the film, the red man's wrath, is acceptably carried out. There is an impressiveness to it which cannot fail to interest. Recent releases of this company have shown long steps forward in the direction of perfection, and this one is no exception. The motive of the plays has improved while the mechanical effects have kept pace with the other features.

"When Love Was Blind" (Thanhouser).—When this picture was passed the wonder arose long to the memory whether the wife would have loved her husband just the same if she had seen him in the three times when her affection was alienated. And ? must be admitted that the producers have added materially to the dramatic interest of the film in leaving that question unanswered. The baby was pretty, and allowing her to see that, confirmed her partially-formed impressions of what a baby looked like. She had pictured her husband as beautiful, too, without realizing the disagreement on his countenance. Seeing the baby and catching only a fleeting glimpse of the man, would naturally think that the man was as handsome as the baby, and thus live on in blissful ignorance of the true facts. A simple subject, clearly understood, has been handled in a masterly way. The air of mystery which adds interest to all scenes of this or any other character, has been maintained, and there is little question that the audience joins in this speculation as soon as the film leaves the screen.

FREE POSTERS WITH REELS

How to be done away with is the daily problem of the exchanges in the popular verdict of the independent film manufacturers, for the reason that the fame (that of giving free posters) has been wished to such an extent, that an exhibitor running a thirty-day reel, or older, is unable to secure posters for his show. In a very recent instance, the manager of a large house was observed passing a tip to the poster-boy in an exchange for the privilege of receiving a week's supply of posters in advance. When it is known that this same house ran a three-reel show, with seven changes a week, and insisted on getting three posters per reel, it is obvious that this in itself was quite an item. Sixty-three posters a week for one theater, and no returns. The idea at present, entertained by the manufacturers, is to have the exchanges charge every exhibitor ten cents per poster, and allow a rebate of five cents for every one returned in such condition as to warrant its being used again, thus eliminating the shortage, at present felt in that department, and also enabling the exhibitor with the ninety-day show, or anyone desiring to run a reel from one to three months old, to secure posters for same.

ARTHUR MARVIN DEAD.

Arthur W. Marvin, for many years a trusted employee of the Biograph Company, died in Los Angeles on January 18th. He was a brother to H. N. Marvin, vice-president of the company. The body was sent East for interment at his birthplace at Warners, N. Y. His age is given as 53 years.

REX.

Is Rex to be the king of them all? Many have wondered what is behind this monosyllabic title which has been advertised for several weeks in the trade papers. Well, behind it is a strong company who have adopted the mystic word as the trade-mark on a new brand of films that will be on the market very shortly. They have issued an announcement that Mr. Edwin S. Porter, for many years a director with the Edison Company, is the director of the Rex pictures. In the circular a list of Mr. Porter's successes while with the Edison Company is given, which, by way of inviting comparison, speaks well for the confidence the Rex Company has in the quality of their product. A theatrical paper announces that the Rex Company occupies the studio formerly occupied by the Champion Film Company on Eleventh Avenue, New York. This is not so, and casts an unjust aspersion on the Champion. It is the former studios of the defunct Camera-phone Company which the Rex people occupy and the premises are large enough for them to handle two releases per week with ease.

IMPS TO DANCE.

Tickets are out for the annual ball of the employees of the Imp Company. It will be held at the Lenox Casino, 63rd street and Broadway, on February 14th. Music will be furnished by MacArthur's band from the Manhattan House of Lexington. Tickets 50 cents may be obtained from D. MacDonald, secretary, care of Independent Moving Pictures Company, 102 W. 101st street, New York.

ASK FOR
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS
Released TUESDAYS, SATURDAYS

THE PRINCESS THEATER, OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

The accompanying cut of the Princess Theater represents an investment of $25,000 shouldered by the Messrs. Harding and Goldberg sixteen months ago, and declared by them to be one of the safest and most profitable ventures they have ever entered into, which proves beyond a doubt the popularity of the moving picture in the West. The Princess, a large, well ventilated house under systematic management, seats 500 very comfortably, has standing room for 100 persons and gives a straight picture entertainment with one admission price of five cents. The show consists of three reels and an illustrated son, changed daily, viz.: two first run and one commercial picture with the song between shows, same being run from 12 o'clock noon until 11 p. m. The equipment of the Princess consists of two No. 6 Powers cameragraphs, one Beseler dissolver and a mirror screen. According to the report of Mr. H. A. Van Housman, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, in Omaha, Neb., from whom the Princess receives its service, the Powers cameragraph is meeting with unlimited success, he himself having sold an average of one No. 6 per day for the past two or three months. All the large houses throughout the western portion of the country are selling or exchanging their old machines and installing this latest model of Powers' creation. That Mr. Van Housman possesses hustling ability and salesmanship and has the interest of his firm at heart is evident from the volume of rentals and sales consummated in his office daily.

LOCAL ADVERTISING.

Excellent missionary work is being done by some exhibitors in drawing to their theaters a class of people who have hitherto looked upon these places as merely providers of amusement. One man who deserves credit for what he has done to advance the photoplay is Montgomery "the moving picture man," formerly of Memphis, Tenn., and now of Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Montgomery recently sent us a copy of the Jacksonville "Evening Metropolis," in which he had a four-column advertisement, equal to a half page of that paper. It was an impressive advertisement, giving many interesting facts of the growth of the business and quoting largely from the Moving Picture World in calling attention to the quality of the modern picture and the large percentage of films of a highly educational nature. Costly advertising like this can hardly have immediate returns in gate receipts, but it carried into every home in which the "Evening Metropolis" was read a convincing argument that Montgomery's theater was a fit place to send the children to and a profitable place for the adult members of the family.

How He Got Them Coming.

Original methods, or those methods which are original in the place of their adoption, are quite likely to catch the populace. Sometimes these methods will supply a hint for others elsewhere, requiring modification, it may be, to suit the exigencies of local conditions, yet none the less valuable for that reason.

D. C. Hayden, proprietor of the Royal Theater, in Hackensack, N. J., is an astute young gentleman. He has given evidence of this in two ways. His was the second theater in the town, which has about 15,000 inhabitants. Instead of following the first one and using licensed films of uncertain age, he adopted Independent pictures and his show is kept closely up to date. Moreover, he studies his public and has his exchange send him the films he thinks his public wants. So insistent is he upon having what he wants that he is called the worst kicker his exchange has. It may be noted, however, as an illuminating comment upon this declaration, that the patrons of the theater do not kick. They come back the next day and bring their friends. Perhaps this observation may indicate a course worth while considering by other managers.

Not long ago he put on a special show. It cost him some extra money and naturally he wanted extra money in return. Accordingly he devised a scheme for taking advertising in the local daily. Possibly he was favored by circumstances, one important one being that the daily has an unusually large circulation in its home town. The result was he packed his theater to overflowing from the time it opened until it closed. Bright advertising of this character paid him. It will pay others.

The next week he ran specials all the week and used extra advertising of this character each day, and his theater was filled all the time. Now he is negotiating for a specified number of lines a day for a year. It might be proper to add that he carries a small display advertisement regularly and changes it twice a week, advertising his Wednesday program for three days and his Saturday program for three days. The success he is meeting can be had by others.

LOS ANGELES LETTER.

By Richard V. Spencer.

Little Bebe Daniels, the well known professional child actress, lately appearing in Bison Stock, has given up picture work for the present, and is now attending the Dominican Sacred Heart School. Those who have observed the child's work in the pictures concede for her a brilliant future when she leaves the school and again takes up dramatic work.

Miss Phyllis Griffin, of Bison Stock, has written a vaudeville playlet, entitled: "The Bells of Jaurez." The sketch is to have an Orpheum hearing, and will probably be booked over the Orpheum circuit as a headliner.

Mr. Ben Turpin, representative of the Imp Company, who had spent several weeks in the city looking for a studio site, has gone back East. While here Mr. Turpin began the erection of a studio at the corner of Lake Shore Drive and Temple Street, about a mile from the Edendale studios. Shortly afterward, for some unknown reason, work was called off, and Mr. Turpin went back East.

Miss West, lately with the Biograph company, has joined the Pathe forces and will soon be seen in Pathe pictures.

Mr. Joseph De Grass, formerly stage director with the Belasco Theater, and also with the Girton Stock Company, has signed with the local Pathe studio to play character leads. Mr. De Grass is a well known figure on the local Rialto, and his work in the pictures will be watched with interest by his many professional friends.

The Essanay Western company, under the management of John B. O'Brien, have left San Jose with their private cars, stage paraphernalia, and company of thirty people and are now in Redlands, some sixty miles away from this city. A temporary studio is now being erected in the Santa Ana "wash," between the city of Redlands and the mountains, where the company intend to stay three months taking ranch and western pictures.

The Selig company are soon to release a remarkable scenic reel of pictures taken in Los Angeles and vicinity. The reel will show among other scenes, the recent Pasadena Rose Tournament with the tremendous rush of spectators to the Crown City; the Roman chariot races at Tournament Park; a trip up the scenic Mount Lowe railway; San Pedro harbor activity; mid-winter scenes at the beach resorts; a trip to Catalina, Jewel of the Pacific, and midwinter street scenes in Los Angeles. Several of Los Angeles' many scenic attractions have been shown on the screen before, among which may be mentioned the Biograph views of "The Pigeon Farm;" the Selig view of "The Ostrich Farm," and the "Alligator Farm." These scenes are visited by approximately 100,000 tourists annually, and when seen on the screen by them will revive memories of past winters spent in a big modern city with a climate not excelled and rarely equalled on earth. The days the scenes were taken were cloudless, and the film should be an example of perfect photography.

Mr. V. L. Duben, a director of the California company, has arrived in the city after a trip to San Francisco on business. He brings word that the recent industrial film taken by the company is a success. The pictures have been expressed from San Francisco and when received will be exhibited privately before the Fire Commissioners and city officials of Long Beach.

* * *

EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION.

Southern California moving picture men will meet in Long Beach on January 31st, and February 1st, to organize an association. The convention will be held at the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, and the visitors will be entertained by the Chamber of Commerce officials, and local officials of the California Motion Picture company, who are establishing a plant in that city.

* * *

AMONG THE LOS ANGELES EXHIBITORS.

The Star Theater, a five-cent house, located on East Fifth Street Los Angeles St., has been closed, and is now for rent. The theater ran both Independent and Licensed film, but could make a success with neither. Competition was evidently too much for them, there being ten theaters within a block of them.

The Liberty theater, which for the past few months has been using first run Independent film, have switched back to Licensed films. The house did not formerly use posters, but now blacks of them adorn the lobby.

The Shell theater, on South Broadway, formerly featured five first run Independent films and an illustrated song for a ten cent admission price to all parts of the house. The admission has now been cut to five cents, and the theater has switched to Licensed films, using five old pictures, an illustrated song, and three piece orchestra. Patrons certainly get their money's worth here.

The Hermann Theater, another five-cent moving picture theater, located at 556 South Spring St., is being torn down to make way for a modern twelve story office building. The theater used Independent films, and before its destruction used to [illegible] time the S. R. O. sign.

Fire recently destroyed Fisher's Pasadena theater. The fire is believed to have been incendiary, since it started at three o'clock in the morning. The fire department responded promptly, and by herculean efforts succeeded in saving part of the building. The loss will approximate $5,000. The first [illegible] somewhere beneath the stage, all of which, together with the [illegible] rugs and dressing rooms and costumes, were completely destroyed. So far no one is able to give a plausible cause for the fire. The Plumbing Inspector states that defective wiring could not have been the cause, and no explosives or combustible material was stored about the place. The building was entirely vacated at ten o'clock the night before the fire, and the watchman states that he turned out every light and that there was no fire in the building.

Mr. Fisher, Mr. Jessee, and McDonald & Co., the agents of the building, say that repair work will begin at once and rushed to early completion. The theater was a ten-cent house, featuring moving pictures and several vaudeville acts, and has been playing to very good business.

W. H. Clune, owner of Clune's Broadway, has had his sign limit petition denied. The legislation committee of the City Council has denied his request to have the Clune electric sign stand as erected. The sign is thirty feet high, ten feet in excess of the city ordinances. Chief Eley, of the Los Angeles Fire Department, registered strenuous objection on the ground that the tall electric signs were hazardous to firemen during fires. Building Inspector Backus declares that the sign must be chopped off by at least ten feet, or that he will order the arrest of all offenders who maintain law-breaking electric signs.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

J. E. Plonghe, of Chicago, has leased the Bijou, at Lawrenceville, Ill., from George J. Nunn.

The Gem, at Easton, Ill., is now using electricity, the town having attained the dignity of a lighting plant.

The Scenic, at Manteno, Ill., recently held a contest, offering a prize to the person who drew the best picture of a house. It is presumed the winning sketch was shown on the screen in Manteno, it may be noted, is a small town.

The George R. Benton Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000 to operate an opera house. The incorporators are G. R. Benton, W. L. Benton and Sada J. Jane.

William Englert will build a new vaudeville theater, to cost $30,000, at Iowa City, Iowa.

Frank L. Marple, of Aurora, Ill., will be the leading light it is said, in the Palace Theater Company, which is to be incorporated for the purpose of forming a moving picture and vaudeville circuit. Marple already owns several houses.

A. M. Culon, of the Bijou, at Wilmington, Ill., was hit by a scarlet fever epidemic, which forced him to close temporarily.

E. J. Parker, of St. Louis, has leased the hall at Averyville, Ill., and will operate a moving picture show, when other attractions do not conflict.

Announced plans of Frank Tarbell, of St. Louis, call for the construction of a moving picture theater, which will seat 1,600 persons in the parquet and balcony. The front, at 15-17 South Sixth street, will be of white Italian marble.

"Father Don't Get Stewed Any More," "Love Jones," and "Sugar Moon," were the song numbers which the Vaudette-Springfield, Ill., announced. Nine Baker, character singer, would feature at evening performances. Baker, who has been given undue prominence by Manager Watts, has a voluminous and not unpleasing voice, but the absence of music is frequently poor for a house which should cater to women and children. It is possible he could be a profitable entertainer, but it has been the misfortune of the Watts representative to be at his worst on an unfavorable night, or in a nervousness at the readiness, or usually entertaining grasp of his subject. Some of the leading questioned chances.

Lacombe and Powers helped out in forces the piano in the balcony at the Royal, Springfield, recently. "If That Be Denied" and "Dreary Coast of Monte Carlo" were expressed despite the grind, what could have been done by an appreciative audience? Why do managers try to have a piano up over the heads of theater patrons, ignoring all ideas of acoustics? Three others in Springfield are latting their patrons in this manner.

It was a stirring surprise to walk into the Vaudette, Springfield, Ill., the other day and see the entrance in Lubin's "Last Parade" coming toward you to the accompaniment of a fair representation of martial music by the four-piece orchestra. This part of the film was creditably handled by the quartet, and at other times they were silent, rather than playing something inappropriate. When the veteran quietly went to sleep, it seemed that there was an attempt upon the part of the violin and piano to play upon the emotions, and they no doubt would have succeeded with a little more study of the music. The drummer occupied spare moments in the course of the pictures, with practice on the xylophone, and what appeared to be a nervous idle clashing of sticks.

Just to show how the Powers Six is instilled into the minds of the public I quote the following from the Arcola, Ill., Record-Herald: "The new No. 6 Powers Cimerograph picture machine at the Olympia theater is truly a wonderful invention and does away with the flicker so common among many moving picture machines."

Holding that selling theater tickets, ushering people to their seats and operating moving picture machinery is "labor" and within the meaning of the law, Judge McNamara of Keokuk, Iowa, found ten employees of moving picture shows in that city guilty of laboring on Sunday, and assessed nominal fines of $1.00 and costs each. The defendants gave notice of appeal to the Iowa Supreme Court.

The ordinance committee of the Kewanee, Ill., City Council, tabled an ordinance, presented by the Kewanee Ministerial Association requiring the closing of theaters on Sunday, and recommended that the question be left to a referendum vote of the people.

Herman Strimont has purchased from Henry Myers, the moving picture show at St. Anne, Illinois.

—F. H. M.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

The year was ushered in by a delightful gathering of moving picture people at the home of Mr. Maurice Davis, proprietor of the M Street Theater. Congeniality and good fellowship was the spirit of the evening, while songs, jokes, and a delightful rendition of "Ostler Joe" by the genial hostess helped to make the hours speed on. Of course "shop talk" had to come in somewhere, but it was talk in which betterment and assistance held sway. As autos were in free use on this occasion, the dispersing of the company in the early hours held no inconvenience to the guests, even for those living at a distance. Manager Davis is one of the most up-to-date moving picture men in the Capital City. Some have called him "nervy" in attempting to carry into effect new orders of things or in clinging to set rules (such as pictures only); but Mr. Davis has always come one victorious. He is a stickler for refinement and courtesy both to and from his patrons and this is one of the chief reasons why he has succeeded.

The change of the Moore Film Exchange to the General Film Exchange, under the licensed organization management, has consolidated and assisted the distribution of reels in this vicinity greatly. Mr. Moore was retained as manager of the local office when the transfer of hands took place, for the asso iation realized that it would be no easy matter to secure another man so well informed of the needs of the trade in this section and through the South as Mr. Moore. Besides, the personality of the man meant something to be retained in the business. The General Film Exchange has opened its new career most auspiciously. New customers have been added, the territory has been better systematized, and there has been but little adjustment necessary in the change of hands of ownership. Mr. Moore has grown up in the moving picture business and was the first to venture in exchange work in the capital. He has in his time had a finger in every branch of the work, from delivering the films, running the reels, helping in the vaudeville act, to general manager of his own concern. He has been burned out twice with heavy losses, but he has risen above all circumstances and difficulties and this has all been accomplished by work—honest, hard, stick-to-it-ness work. Mr. Mack, who has been Mr. Moore's associate for some time, has also been retained in the office here and things are running on just the same—only better.

It is a noticeable fact that the general tone of the pictures being presented in Washington has vastly improved within the past two months. There are not so many of the aimlessly silly pictures and an entire absence of those in which crime is triumphant. Even the dramas in which vengeance is the keynote end with this passion being conquered or softened. The dramatic and wholesome comedy predominate. The Washington theaters have made a stand to weed out the trash and they have about succeeded.

Manager Walker, of the Paramount Film Exchange, is very busy—so busy that we can't get much news from him, but business is more important than news, we know.

The Baltimore and Washington Film Exchange, under the management of W. H. Bradley and J. Boys Dexter as managers, have outgrown their temporary quarters to such an extent that some customers have to wait on the outside while others are being served. This will never do, for nobody likes to wait on the outside. The managers fully realize this state of affairs and have selected more commodious apartments and just as soon as they are put in readiness there will be a big change and everyone can come inside, even if they do have to wait their turn. Personality in a business helps a "whole lot" and this is a large factor in the success of the B. and W. concern.

Tom Moore provided the inmates of the U. S. Prison, at 10th and B streets, with a three-reel show on Wednesday, Dec. 28. This is the first moving picture show to be given inside a jail so far as we know. It was highly appreciated by the inmates, who registered a vote of thanks to the donor.

W. H.

PENNSYLVANIA NOTES.

I spent a very enjoyable evening inspecting the "Iris," a new moving picture theater erected by Mr. M. J. Walsh at Kensington street and Allegheny avenue, Philalelphia, Pa. It is a very large house with an extensive balcony, giving a seating capacity of some 1,600 chairs.

The "Iris" is the new type of fireproof theater and when the State of Pennsylvania will have more of such houses, the legislators at Harrisburg will have to find something else to divert the attention of the public than to enact arbitrary laws against the motion picture theaters. Because the legislators have been bored to death with the scandal of graft on the New Capitol, they had to attack the moving pictures to make believe that they were attending to State business. With theaters built of concrete like the "Iris" the legislators and fire underwriters will be at a loss to find something at fault. The floors are concrete, the balcony is solid concrete, so is the operating booth, and the stairs are of stone. Although the "Iris" has been opened for a couple of weeks and is doing a good business, we will have to wait until the exterior is completed, to give a better description of the house.

Mr. M. J. WALSH

Lancaster, Pa., has a new moving picture theater, the new Hippodrome theater, which opened a week or so ago. It would be a credit to New York, as I do not know in the great metropolis of a more commodious theater devoted exclusively to motion pictures. The lobby is simple in decorations, yet very tasteful, no cheap ornaments, but something artistic and attractive. The posters are neatly framed on brass easels. A feature of the new Hippodrome is to have between the lobby and the auditorium a very large waiting room handsomely decorated with palm trees, brass railings and a fountain in the center. The auditorium is high of ceiling with an inclined floor and over 900 chairs and everything as neat and clean as possible. Another feature of the Hippodrome of Lancaster is to have the operating booth on the outside of the building, a perfect safety in case of fire. Mr. Howard E. Doan is proud of his Hippodrome theater and he should be, as it is the best looking house of Lancaster, and is a great attraction on the main street. J. M. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Bijou Amusement Company, of Philadelphia, gives notice that it will on February 13 apply to Governor Tener for a charter incorporating the company to conduct a general theatrical business, also a business of motion picture theaters and vaudeville. The applying incorporators are Ernest E. Prevost, A. E. Moore and Edward J. Kirchner, all of whom are credited with being "captains of industry."

Benjamin F. Keith, Walter J. Donovan and Joseph H. Taulane, through counsel, have given notice that on February 13 they will apply for a charter incorporating the B. F. Keith Theater Company, of Philadelphia, which will conduct a general theatrical business. Mr. Keith, as known, is getting on in years and is placing some of his responsibilities and cares upon the shoulders of others—hence the above incorporation move.

At a cost of $12,000 B. F. Miller will have the Hall building, at 747-753 South street—in the heart of the "Ghetto," remodeled into an up-to-date moving picture theater. Mr. Miller is now interested in several such houses.

City councils of Philadelphia want experienced and capable-to-do-it members of the fire department to inspect local theaters. The Bureau of Building want additional building inspectors appointed, asserting that there are hardly enough firemen now to do the work of that department and that none can be spared to inspect buildings, etc. So far it has been decided to appoint additional inspectors. A new schedule of fees for inspecting theaters, etc., has practically been decided upon and the rates are higher than under the present ordinance.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

John J. Cahill, of McCue & Cahill, is no doubt New England's most prominent and popular "picture personality." The concern is connected with many houses hereabouts, some of which are: The Ward Street Theater, the City, and Sheedy's Theater, all of Brockton, Mass.; the New Bedford Theater, New Bedford, and the Newport Opera House, Newport, R. I. Some of the theaters are associated with W. B. Gross, a local theatrical man. Mr. Cahill personally supervises the selection of all pictures used in his houses, while Mr. McCue attends to the vaudeville. Cahill holds the unique position of being the only manager booking films from the General Film Co., who uses the entire licensed output. The Ward Street Theater, being the only house using no vaudeville, usually receives the pick of the releases. Cahill is commonly held to be the best judge of moving pictures in New England, and is often asked his opinion as to the merits of a picture by rival managers, to which a truthful and impartial answer is always given. Such things as these earned Mr. Cahill the name of "the most popular New England picture man" among the trade, as well as one of the ablest. Mr. Cahill is a firm believer in and reader of the World, which always accompanies him when he visits his film exchange. The houses use 9-day-old service.

Messrs. Delmore & True, who are running moving pictures in the Rockland Opera House, Rockland, Mass., have decided to show their films 3 days weekly, instead of 2 days as formerly. The house has just installed the Powers No. 6. These two managers are Boston men, and are making good on their venture.

The Palace Theater, Fall River, Mass., is now using licensed films. Mr. George Graham, who recently acquired this house, also operates one in Bristol, R. I., which uses trust service. Mr. Graham wished to book his films for both houses at one sitting, and accordingly changed the Palace over to the trust side.

Mayor Charles A. Burns, of Somerville, Mass., has announced his decision not to grant a license for a moving picture show in the building formerly occupied by the West Somerville Congregational Church. This property was sold about two years ago, and remodeled for a moving picture and vaudeville house. Ex-Mayor John M. Woods had also refused a license, after a protest had been made against such an action by nearby residents. It was thought that the new mayor would grant the license. Now that all idea of a license has been put aside, a negro congregation has installed itself in the church. The same people who kicked against the license are now trying to make the color line against the negroes. Seems as if those Somerville people were a pretty fussy bunch!

M. T. Lucus, proprietor of the Star Theater, Newport, R. I., has presented the local Board of Aldermen with a petition to run Sunday shows at his house. The clergy have immediately taken the matter up as against the idea, and the question has not as yet been definitely decided.

BOSTON.

In the issue of January 7, the World's New England representative, when speaking of the acquisition of the Olympic Theater from the Realistic Moving Picture Company, who control the Jolliette Theater, stated that, inasmuch as the Olympic was a licensed house, and the Jolliette on the Independent side, some change of service would be required. Both houses are now Independent, receiving service from the Boston Film Rental Company.

The World's New England representative submits a copy of a letter received by Boston and New England moving picture managers, from the Vitagraph Company.

> Dear Sirs:—We have received many complaints lately from New England regarding the inability of theaters on that section to obtain Vitagraph reels for their exhibitions. One theater writes as follows: "The patrons are constantly inquiring why we do not show Vitagraphs and the popular call for Vitagraph productions exceeds that for any other make."
>
> Another manager says: "It may interest you to know that we have had but one Vitagraph reel in the last nine shows, received from Boston." Still another states that only seven Vitagraph films were received by him during eleven weeks.
>
> We are now investigating this matter and would like to have you write us a letter by return mail as you know you are not getting your share of Vitagraph films. As you are aware, we release three reels per week and there should be therefore no scarcity of Vitagraph subjects.
>
> Upon receiving replies from all New England theaters with whom we are now corresponding, we will take up the matter with the General Film Company.
>
> Yours truly,
> The Vitagraph Company of America,
> SIGMUND BLACKTON,
> Vice-President and Secretary.

We find that the very great majority of those who received the above letter answered the same, and advised the company that the General Film Company's Boston office were at all times very willing to hand out the vitagraph. The great majority even went so far as to offer the unasked for information, that the main trouble with the Vitagraph was that the recent releases had been far from the usual standard. This is all the more noticeable, some wrote, because, prior to this slump, the Vitagraphs had been really excellent. As a side light, the World's New England representative will add that the Vitagraph "Three Men and a Maid," released Tuesday, Jan. 17, was refused by every first run house in Boston. Seems as if the questions should have been altered.

The General Film Company expects to enlarge its present quarters in order to add a larger room in which exhibitors choose their programs. As the General Film Company has two Boston offices, the films have been shown to the managers in both places, henceforth the pictures will be run only in the one office.

A bill introduced into the State Legislature intended for the "legitimate" theaters will hit several Boston moving picture theaters. The petition calls for two firemen to be in attendance at all theaters seating 500 persons.

—HENRY

CHICAGO NOTES.

A Little Sunshine

Mr. Julius Birck, owner of the Annex Theater, 2nd and Halstead streets, and his manager Mr. Max Schwartz are the proud recipients of the following letter:

"Dear Friends:

"Everybody has been sending down word to me from the upper floors to write and to thank you and your friend for the great pleasure which you gave us the other day, indeed it was fine. I don't know when I ever saw an many of the poor cripples overflow with joy, as they did after that show. Those that would not come to the show heard all about it from one or another, and as they got some entertainment out of it, and looked one and all could you means many thanks and great blessings. We had the time of our life at that show. We all hope we will see you again before very long. Excuse more, but my arm aches, as I have two abscess on it and it is my left arm too.

"Again thanking you, your old time friend,

"Maude Excell."

This letter was written by a lady paralyzed on the right side, minus her right leg and forced to write with her left hand. This lady has been an inmate for 10 years at the Home of the Incurables, 56th street and Ellis avenue, Chicago. Mr. Birck, believing in practical charity, gave a moving picture show at the above-named home and both Mr Birck and Mr. Schwartz claim that while the poor cripples greatly enjoyed the show, themselves had still more pleasure in realizing how they had brought a little sunshine in this home of pains and aches. We heartily thank Mr. Birck and his able manager for having arranged a moving picture show at the Home of the Incurables, as we have always advocated that a little amusement given in the hospitals would benefit the patients. A little sunshine like this does more than the best medicines. We are not of the class that believe that sickness can be cured by mental power, but at the same time we believe that if we could find enough rich persons to donate a motion picture outfit to every hospital or home, they would help the work of the doctors and accomplish more good than in donating for fountains, organs, libraries, etc. Messrs. Birck and Schwartz tell us that they had tears in their eyes at the sight of the great enjoyment of these poor cripples and that the pleasure experienced by them had fully rewarded them for their time and the cost of the show. Let us hope that other exhibitors will imitate Mr. Birck and that these individual shows will prove to the rich supporters of hospitals, the possibility of motion pictures to help the cure of many poor sufferers. —J. M. B.

"THE CHRISTIAN MARTYR:" ANOTHER GAUMONT CLASSIC.

Mr. Geo. Kleine is still pursuing his ideal to bring up the Gaumont films to the head of the list of artistic merit. "The Christian Martyr," to be released in the near future, is another masterpiece of Gaumont, in which the splendid settings give to the picture the artistic effects so much lacking in everyday productions. In this age of education and of progress, the poor, like the rich, want the details and the finishing touches and the Gaumont pictures supply such wants.

In a previous article on "Scenarios" I said that the scenario writer is not always the one to be blamed, as too many producers can ruin the very best scenario, while others can make a master production from a simple story. This is the case in "The Christian Martyr"; a very simple story, perhaps too simple to interest a manufacturer. Albanus, the son of the Prefect, is lonesome, is sad and cannot be amused with the pleasures provided by his fond father. This sadness is a love affair and a love affair that will be condemned by his father, as his love is for Fabiolo, a Christian girl. Love converts Albanus to Christianity; he is happy, but his happiness is to be of very short duration, as a potter, also in love with Fabiolo, revenges himself by denouncing the hiding place of the Christians. The Christians are captured, brought before the Prefect and sentenced to death, even Albanus is not spared, although it is a terrible duty for the stern father to condemn his own son.

Such a simple story, treated by most of our present producers, would fall flat; but, in the hands of the Gaumont people, it has been made a success and will not only call for much admiration, but will help to uplift the motion picture to the place it demands in the realm of art.

The film of "The Christian Martyr" is colored in the Gaumont style, which means the best. The settings are distinctive of Gaumont; they are rich and correct in every respect. The acting is natural and perfect and while the action is sustained all through the film, there is no lacking of interest, no over stretching of scenes, nothing languishing.

It is a beautiful film; a picture that should be shown in every church, to show how men should have the courage of their convictions. The condemnation scene, where we are shown the early Christians sentenced to be thrown to the lions, is a sermon in itself. They do not fear death, they frankly confess that they are Christians and go to their doom fortified in their faith. "The Christian Martyr" is a notable addition to the already large collection of historical and religious pictures of Mr. Geo. Kleine for educational and church purposes. J. M. B.

Motion Picture Handbook 160 pages, $1.50 postpaid.

ON THE ROAD.

South Bend, Ind.—A day spent among the theaters in South Bend, inspired the wish that one of your critics would visit the town. It is an elegant show town, but cannot boast of one real moving picture show. There are about seven so-called theaters. A live man will drop in there some day and put one over on them all. The vaudeville business was on a par with the moving picture end of matters, when Chas. Allardt, from Terre Haute, came along, and leased a building on N. Michigan street, about three squares out of the business district, and opened up a vaudeville house, with the best acts obtainable. While his house was in course of construction, his competitors had great sport, and talked of a "fool and his money," but now their tune has changed, as Allardt has practically taken all their trade. I got a tip that Brentlinger and English, also of Terre Haute, have secured an option on a location in South Bend, 30 by 110 feet, on which they intend to erect a $20,000 strictly moving picture theater. They have the money, and have made a great success in Terre Haute. Mr. E. Rhodes, a wealthy lumberman of South Bend, who has been buying up a string of theaters, has leased the place occupied by the Surprise Clothing Store, and will remodel it into what he will call the Surprise Theater. He expects to open about the end of February. Robert Codd has leased a portion of the new Keller Block, in which he is establishing a moving picture theater with 350 seats. Wm. Johnhon has also leased a store, and will convert it into a moving picture theater by February 1st.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Wm. Johnson has leased a store, and will convert it into a first-class moving picture theater by February 1st. The theater business has never been overdone in Kalamazoo, on account of the difficulty in securing locations. There are only two theaters, the Colonial, managed by Mr. Johnson, and the Gem Vaudette, owned and controlled by C. Barnes, and they have always done a lucrative business. The Gem is now independent. —F.P.B.

Calgary, Alta, Canada.—Our friends across the border are evidently fully awake to the possibilities of the high-class moving picture theater. In November last the Majestic Theater was opened in Calgary by Charles Engebrit, who has ten years' experience in the picture line. This house seats 700, has a seven-piece orchestra, and is equipped with the latest in everything. Showing the newest and best pictures, the Majestic has been enjoying big business, and easily ranks as one of the best moving picture theaters in Western Canada.

Bloomington, Illinois. Manager J. G. Gesell, of the Nickeldome Theater, was a Chicago visitor, and made arrangements for improved film service. Mr. Gesell is the pioneer in the picture business of Bloomington; he also reports good business.

Pekin, Illinois. A. L. Sinclair, manager of the Dreamland, is making arrangements for the remodeling of his theater, but he states that he don't know when the work can be done, for as he is showing to capacity daily, he dislikes closing down for any length of time. "Tonie" has only been in the picture game a short length of time, yet he is surprisingly well posted as to the details of the business, and the success of the Dreamland is due in a great measure to his pleasing personality.

Fort Wayne, Indiana. Sprague Green, manager of the Lyric, has installed a decided innovation in the shape of a huge electric sign 8 x 11 feet, which contains only the wording "5c." This sign can be read from a great distance, and looks very attractive at night with its hundreds of lights blazing out in the darkness.

Mansfield, Ohio.—The Mansfield Amusement Company, of this city, was incorporated for $10,000, under the Ohio State Law, October 10th, by Fred. L. Spellman, former owner and manager of the Star; D. Spellman, James Hilton, recent partner of Mr. Spellman, and Assistant Manager A. Hilton, and Joseph Hilton. Mr. Spellman was elected president and general manager, and no doubt, with his years of experience in the amusement business, will make a good one. Since their incorporation, they have added many new stockholders—all of Mansfield. They now own the Star Theater, of this city; Star, at Shelby; Mansfield Film Exchange and Prize Shooting Gallery. Mr. Spellman reports he has several new theaters in view, and while so young, they were able to declare a dividend of 3 per cent. the first of the year. Mr. Spellman reports a very successful season, and hopes to soon have a chain of shows all around Mansfield. Everything run on the square-deal principle is their motto.

EXTREME WEEK
MONDAY, FEB. 6th
FOILING THE CAMORRA
An Italian Detective Film

FRIDAY, FEB. 10th
WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?
An Emotional Drama

ACTION PICTURE SUPPLY CO. MAKERS YANKEE

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 East 32d Street New York

READY FOR DELIVERY—Moving Picture World
BOUND VOLUME No. 7
July to December, 1910
TWO DOLLARS, EACH, $2.00 Express charges collect

LOUISE M. MARION'S
Great Novelty of
ILLUSTRATED POEMS
Patriotic and otherwise
Also her attractive comedy play
MONEY! MONEY!! MONEY!!! is a great drawing card for
THEATERS, CLUBS, ETC.
Terms reasonable
Operator furnished when desired
Attractive painted posters and slides made from life models supplied free of charge

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23d St. New York City

Ornamental :: Indestructible
Fire Resisting

THEATRE AND STAGE FRONTS
ARTISTIC CEILINGS
Designs Suitable to Any Building.
Blue Prints, Suggestions and Estimates Free. Ask for Our Design Book M.
The Kanneberg Roofing and Ceiling Company, CANTON OHIO

Model 1911
Lense
Lamp

IT CAN NEVER BIND

For spot or Flood instantly

THE GLOBE ELECTRIC SPECIALTY COMPANY
383 West 42nd Street, New York City
Everything Electrical for the Theatre

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND
Moving Picture Men
to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. It is advised, will make it still more.

Write us for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
50-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

THE DETERIORATION OF MOVING PICTURES.

The Editor, the Moving Picture World.

Sir: In your capacity as reflector and recorder of the moving picture business on the North American continent I beg to bring before your notice a few facts that have impressed themselves upon me during the past three years, during which time I have been actively engaged in managing and owning theaters in this city. I take this course entirely out of regard for the welfare of the picture business, believing that you are actuated by the same interest, and if my observations find any endorsation through your medium they will have achieved the object I have in view.

In this first place, then, the general complaint I have to make is embraced in the heading to this letter—deterioration. This applies not only to the photography, but also to the class of subjects and the method of production. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, and I have every reason to congratulate the Edison Company for the excellence of their subjects, the dramatic representations of Rex Beach, Richard Harding Davis, Dickens and others' works being highly praiseworthy, reflecting great credit on the stage management. The same remarks are also applicable to the Vitagraph Company and Pathe Company's productions, which are always characterized by careful attention to details and due regard to the natural limitations of the plot involved.

When it comes to the former prominent film makers, however, there is a different story to tell. I have handled a very large number of the Biograph, Lubin, and Selig reels, and have no hesitation in saying that what they are now putting out is inferior in every way to their former efforts. Included in this catalogue also is the Essanay Company. The Selig Company so long as they portrayed Western subjects were in their proper element, but I consider their entry into the civilized field as exemplified in "Queen of Hearts" and "Widow of Mill Creek Flats" was a failure, both from an artistic and photographic standpoint. The Essanay Company in serving an intelligent public with "A Honeymoon for Three" must have been suffering from mental obfuscation if they expected such unnatural and far-fetched idea to meet with appreciation. The absurdity of this subject was only exceeded by the imagination of the author of "The Marked Trail" with the pill dropping episode. The Biograph Company seem to have tried all sorts and conditions of drama, the predominant note of which is more or less morbidity. Take, for instance, "The Broken Doll," which carries no conviction with it; the grotesqueness of "The Chink of Golden Pass," the maudlin sentiment bordering on burlesque of "Song of the Woodland Flute," and the impossible situation and morbid influence depicted in "The Banker's Daughter." The list could be extended ad nauseam, but the above will give an indication of what is intended to be conveyed. As one of the worst, I should not forget to mention "The Love of Lady Irma," with the face-slashing scene as depicted by the Biograph, and which was absolutely repulsive.

Now, I have been a loyal supporter of the General Film Company business for three years past and have three theaters in operation in Vancouver today, but I protest against having to accept a lot of second-rate film which can only be described adequately by one word—rotten. The make-up and acting in some of this stuff is so poor that it actually makes the audience smile. It may go in the Bowery of New York, but it certainly won't go out here. Of course, the "trust" may argue that they control the situation and can afford to dump a lot of "punk" stuff in with the good, but they are fooling themselves. The public cannot be fooled all the time, and evidence is not wanting today that unless the film business is placed on a superior level and the intelligence of the audience studied, there is going to be a reaction against the moving picture business which will compel the producers to sit up and take notice or else go to the wall. There has been far too much morbid element introduced and not enough sanity. People are getting tired of the everlasting Wild West-cum-Indian drama, with its false ideals, holdups, shootings, rescues, and other foolishness. A little goes a long way. As for the maudlin sentimentality, it is too crude for words.

As last we stated the General Film Company may have the belief that they are indispensable, and perhaps it is better to let them so believe. If any evidence were wanted to the contrary, however, it can be furnished right in this town where more than one theater is doing well and using Independent film. The same applies to Seattle, where two big theaters I know of are making as much money as any using the Trust output. In conclusion, I may say that I heartily endorse the recent article in the Moving Picture World by "Luce Graphicus," and am glad to see that there are influences at work which have for their object the elevation of the moving picture business. As a matter of fact, it will have to be elevated or else go to the wall under pressure of public sentiment.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 7, 1911. JOHN CHUNE.

"JACKASS MUSIC."

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 23, 1911.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Sirs—I would like to say a word or two in answer to the letter entitled, "Jackass Music," which appeared in your paper, the Moving Picture World, January 28, 1911.

The person who wrote that article is entirely in error as regards the music which he says he heard played in the largest picture theater in Allentown, Pa. I am the leader of that orchestra, and in justice to myself and the other musicians, I must contradict his statement.

Firstly—he says that I do not start the music until the picture is nearly over, and that I end abruptly when the picture is through, not even ending the strain; both of which are absolutely untrue. I, as a professional pianist, would not be guilty of such gross carelessness, and as to not playing the comic pictures, that is the rule of the house, as those pictures have a better effect without music. As to his remarks about the length of time in finding suitable music, the picture he referred to was a sad one, entitled "The Refuge;" the house was dark, the music plaintive, and the only conclusion I can come to, is that he must have fallen asleep, and woke up in time to see the end of the picture.

The selection in which the song occurs, "John Took Me Home to See His Mother," was played for a Thanhouser comedy, called "Looking Forward," and "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland," was played along with "You Taught Me How to Love, You Now Teach Me How to Forget," for a Reliance picture, called "A Woman's Way," which was not shown on the day mentioned, which proves the traveling man must have been in the theater more than once.

When a man writes an article to a popular and reliable paper, he should take lessons before posing as a critic. He has unwittingly paid me a compliment, when he praised the young lady who played the piano at the small picture house which he says he went to. I would like him to know through your valuable paper, that the lady piano players at the two picture houses were my pupils, and were taught the business by me. —MRS. BUTTERY.

THE SLOGAN OF QUALITY.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 5, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I wish to congratulate you on the persistency with which you keep up the good fight for quality in the film production. I have installed and opened ten picture and vaudeville theaters in the past three and a half years and have paid thousands of good dollars for miles and miles of poorly conceived and badly produced junk. It seems to me incredible that the manufacturers do not more fully realize that quality and quality alone must win and nothing can prevent the manufacturer of quality film from winning out. Since the advent of the press agent the producer is frequently hypnotized by his own bunk, but the exhibitor is not; he looks to his audience for criticism and they know a rotten picture when they see it and have no hesitancy in saying so in this part of the country. Hoping that there will be no let up in your quality warfare, I remain, sincerely yours, —H. J. BROWN.

"THE TRAGEDY OF COMEDY."

Washington, D. C., January 9, 1911.

Editor, The Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir: Having read with interest Mr. Claudy's article on "The Tragedy of Comedy," in a recent issue of The Moving Picture World, I wish, if possible, to say a good word for the brighter side. Although I am not commercially interested in the photoplay, I have been following its growth for some time, and have felt greatly encouraged by the constant improvement shown by the films. It is undoubtedly true that, for some time, real comedies have been, to say the least, rare a condition which the manufacturers explain by saying that genuinely humorous scenarios are almost impossible to obtain. Yet while this state is as sad as it is true, I am sure that the clouds are not all dark, but that here and there the light shines through.

In the past two weeks I have seen three comedies, each a recent release, which belong, in my opinion, to the first class. These are "A Family of Vegetarians," "Sleep, Gentle Sleep" (Edison), and "The Artist's Pay Day" (Gaumont). The two Edison films were marked by an abundance of genuine, refined humor, their many clever points being well brought out by the excellent cast. Our old friend, Bumptious, was as strong as ever in facial expression, winning the usual laughs. And in both films there was a complete absence of horseplay and cheap wit. The Gaumont subject came as a welcome surprise, for the Gallic idea of a joke seems often widely different from ours. But here there was no buffoonery, only brisk, snappy comedy, with a sustained story which held one's interest clear to the end. Vive la Gaumont!

In conclusion, I would say that I heartily agree with Mr. Claudy in his denunciation of slap-stick comedy, and hope to see the day when its place will be completely taken by films like those mentioned above.

Yours very truly,

SHIPLEY W. RICKER.

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE.

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 13, 1911.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—In your issue of January 14, 1911, in reference to the Alhambra Theater, on page 82: You speak of the Ornamental Plaster Company as designers of this house. I wish to correct that error, and place the credit where it belongs. Every part of detail in this theater was constructed from original designs, made in our office from full-size working drawings, which were furnished to the Ornamental Plaster Company, who had the contract to get out this part of the work. I made a special effort as to the design of this particular theater, as I am interested as part owner.

Yours sincerely,

—C. C. TAYLOR.

PRIVATE AND PUBLIC INTERESTS AT STAKE.

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 10, 1911.

Editors Moving Picture World.

Gentlemen—I am advised by a reliable source, that it is proposed to introduce into the legislature of Ohio, a bill which will eliminate all films and manufacturers who do not print on non-inflammable stock. Of course, you understand fully the situation, but the public in general, I am sorry to say, are especially ignorant in regard to the manufacturing, sale and rental of films; also the using of films by the exhibitors. They do not take into consideration, that it is almost impossible to have a fire in a picture show, when it is properly wired. In case a law of this kind should be passed, it would work a hardship on every exhibitor in the United States, not only those using Independent, but also those who are using licensed films.

The General Film Company now own nearly all of the licensed exchanges, and if they could possibly, through legislation, eliminate the independent manufacturer, they would then absolutely control the situation, and every exhibitor throughout the world would be at their mercy, and that means that no one, only General Film Company would operate moving picture shows. I have, and am, urging the exhibitors throughout the country to organize. It seems that a great many of them cannot, or will not, grasp the situation. Through the connivance and scheming of some of the manufacturers and some of the film exchanges and their interests, they have been able to mislead the exhibitors and keep them quiet; and whenever a man realizes the conditions and protests against it, and works for an organization, they immediately, through misrepresentation, seek to destroy his influence.

Every time an organization of the exhibitors has been attempted, through a mysterious influence, the exhibitors have been discouraged, the leaders misrepresented, and a failure to organize has been the result. Now, it is up to the exhibitor whether he is intelligent enough to properly conduct a business along business lines, or whether he will again listen to the siren voice of those who are growing fat and rich at his expense. The Sherman law, in restraint of trade, should be applied to every trust. Notwithstanding that the trust is trying to hide behind a few patents, so claimed.

This letter is not intended as a fight upon anyone, or any special company, but if possible to arouse the exhibitor to the fact that he, at the present time, has nothing whatsoever to say in and about his own business, and all of those who continue to remain so stupid as to be controlled by scheming manipulators, it will only be a short time until they will be out of business entirely.

I have learned that the licensed interests are bringing pressure to bear on the owners of the best theaters throughout the country to compel them to sell out. They own the exchanges they seek to own or control the theaters. Will the public stand for this, even if the exhibitors will? Once they have the complete control in their hands, with only such competition left in the field as they may decide necessary to evade the anti-trust law, what incentive will there be to progress? The competition on lines of quality will cease, inventive genius will not be welcomed and the monopolists will serve the public with anything they choose. To maintain and promote quality, you must have competition—not only among the manufacturers, but among the exhibitors. Therefore exhibitors and the public in every State should watch out for and frustrate any attempt to slip through the legislature any law that would jeopardise their rights.

Very truly yours,

M. A. NEFF.

NO HEADACHE

Do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use the modern scientific germicide. Test how the OZONE (active air gen) it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at ONE CENT PER GALLON.

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,

2 Rector Street Phone 9 Rector N. Y. CITY

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant for the Theatre

AROMA FOAM

Aroma Foam is manufactured expressly for use as a spray and is the most effective and agreeable method of purifying and disinfecting. Manufactured in four permanent odors: Lavender, Violet and Azure. Send 40 cents in stamps for Sample Quart with Atomizer Spray or send $1.00 for four quarts and your own choice in quantity the perfume which may be most pleasing to you. Write for price in quantities.

SANITARY SERVICE CORPORATION

80 Wall Street, New York City

The

Independent Film Exchange

of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

A. S. DAVIS, Manager

415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

STORIES OF THE FILMS

ESSANAY.

A SIN UNPARDONABLE—Young Jim Scott, a lumberman, his wife, Martha, and his two children were happy in their home even though it be a rough habitation in a country where the struggle for existence is hard and trying. One evening Jim, returning from an old friend in Joe Taylor, who is working at a nearby lumber camp, and Jim, on his way home, hospitably invites his friend to his cabin for supper. Joe accepts and the two wend their way through the woods to Jim's home. When Joe is left alone with Martha and the children, while Jim is looking after duties outside, Joe makes love to his friend's wife, but is repressed by her, who begs him to remember his friend. The scene is interrupted by Jim, who returns, and the family seat themselves at the table. The next morning, after Jim has gone to work, Joe passes by Jim's cabin, and begs Martha for a cup of water. The young woman brings it to him, and after Joe has drank, he seizes the woman in his arms secure in the belief that as an old friend of her husband, now that her husband is not about. But Martha, smarting under the insult, resists him sharply. That night, when Jim learns of the state of affairs between his friend and his wife, his rage is impotent, he seizes his gun and, thus out of his right, determines of no gift the man who had proved so treacherous. The fight in the woods with their bare fists is the finest assault of anything ever published. Joe leaves Joe, apparently dead. An hour later the fearstricken survivor of the combat is discovered to flee from the country across the door to Joe, a battered, broken wreck, who has gained consciousness, and dragged himself to Jim's cabin. Upon Martha's plea, Jim accepts the apology of Joe, this summons his thanks and leaves the house forever.

THE TWO REFORMATIONS.—Young Frank McLain loses his position in the East, and decides to go West on prospect for gold. Arrangements are made that he leave his wife at home, and send for her later on, once he has found a location. Frank's prospecting proves a failure, and he is without funds, when his plight is made more severe by receiving a letter from his wife, stating that she also is out of money, and is threatening the mortgaging of their home by the landlord. It is at this moment of despair that an escaping bandit, one "Bad" White, as he is known, gives Frank a cabin, together with gear from the sheriff and posse, who are in hot pursuit, promising Frank a bag of gold if he will secret him some place about the prospector's quarters. Frank hesitates but a moment, and, finding the temptation too strong to resist, does. The sheriff enters, and asks Frank if he has seen White, and then leaves when Frank says he has not. Later, Mrs. McLain receives a letter from her husband, and decides to go West without notifying Frank. She arrives at the stage-coach to Snaketown, a mining town, unaware that her husband and "Bad" White have made plans to hold up the very stage upon which she is a passenger. White, however, learns of her arrival in time to forestall the hold-up, and later, when Frank and his wife leave the two together to give up the game of outlawry, happy at having escaped the disastrous end of Frank's romance, which would surely have occurred had the hold-up happened.

SELIG.

THE LITTLE CIRCUS RIDER.—Jim and Bertha are boyhood sweethearts—Bertha, budding into womanhood, has higher ambitions than the simple country life, and wanders off to join a show that is circus day, and all was excitement. Reginald Black, a city chap, calls to take her to the big circus. Jim is sent by her father to keep an eye on them.

She is persuaded to leave with Black for the city. She leaves a note for her father, telling him that she and Black are to be married when they reach the city. Upon arriving, Black finds the instincrity of Black's promise, and, realizing her mistake, goes away and applies to the circus manager for work. She is given a chance. Jim secures a position as hostler with the same show that he may look after Bertha. Upon making her entrance to the ring, she is hurt in a fall—picked up and cared for by Jim, who takes her home where she is nursed back to health.

THE SPY.—General Lee finds it necessary to dispatch one of his trustworthy young officers into the enemy's lines to gain valuable information, to enable him to anticipate the movements of his wily foe. Gerald Malmes, a scion of one of the aristocratic families of the South, is the man selected for the perilous undertaking. The opening of the story shows him returning from his mission. He has papers upon his person that would bang him as a spy, should he be captured. Suddenly he is brought down by the enemy's fire and wounded—rescued by little Joe Wheelock a boy too young to participate in actual warfare, but whose heart and soul is wrapped up in the cause of the South. Pursuit of the reckless boy by the infuriated trooper, ending up with the escape of little Joe. The wounded Confederate is helped in the cabin of an old negro mammy, who ministers to his wound until the family of the darling spy as named by little Joe hasten to the cabin and his ride overlook by the home. The escape from this house is made in a most thrilling manner, and after many perilous adventures, Gerald Malmes stands before his beloved General, and receives the warm praise of that grand old man for his loyalty and devotion to his country's cause.

A ROBUST PATIENT.—Jones is sick and a friend tells him he should go to a sanitarium and recommends one. Jones is somewhat unwillingly taken from his wife good-bye and is off for his health—arrives and is received by Dr. Crow who promises great things. He is assured that he is in a very serious condition and must diet and from doors is shown his room, is disgusted and writes his wife as follows:

Dr. Crow's Rug House.

Dear Wife:

This is no place for me this is a dippy factory. I tried to leave but they won't let me out. I am on diet and drain down. I can see my finish now.

Farewell,

WILLIE.

Watching his chance he makes his escape. Arriving at his quiet, peaceful home he confesses he writes the Doctor the following touching testimonial:

Dear Dr. Crow:

Your institution is a wonderful benefit to mankind. If you are in the sanitarium line and is seeking health, I will take great pleasure in recommending him to try your nut college.

Yours truthfully,

JONES.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S HONOR.—Nigal Drayton thinks himself rich but unbeknown to him his cousin, Gwendolin, with whom he is in love, supplants his affections. Finding himself loser at cards and on the Derby, he continues his requests for money. Sir Reginald, having become enamored with the fair Gwendoline, finds it possible for Drayton to learn the secret source of the fund he thought was his, and upon realizing this, his indebtedness asserts itself. Nigal flees to America. He meets Blodsoe, an old prospector, who saves him from the lynchers at the hand of the miners and cowboys. The old prospector finds a rich pocket and Nigal is rewarded for his previously generous act of need—given half interest. Things go well and Drayton becomes comfortable and sets sail for England. He arrives in time to participate in the proposed wedding of Gwendolin to Sir Reginald. He returns to America with his bride and meets with a hearty welcome from his cowboy and miner associates.

MELIES

HOW MARY MET THE PUNCHERS.—Mary is from Boston, and she doesn't just take to the cow punchers as she would to the "rah-rah boys" of the East. Bill, who is a fellow of no small caliber, is looked upon by his companions as a sort of leader, feels a little miffed, but acknowledges she is the real thing and has some occasion to feel proud of herself; at the same time is wary and for her safety.

The punchers await developments and make up their mind what can't be cured must be endured.

The Captain, a classy chap, from a neighboring ranch puts in his appearance, and asks Mary to go ridin' with him. She agrees, and they start on a wild ride across country. Some distance from habitations they are attacked by Indians. The Captain and Mary stand them off for a long time. The Captain takes Mary's skirt, hat and coat, making a man of the fair sisters. It ain her horse's back, and starts the animal on a run. The tribe of Indians start in pursuit. When the Captain goes for help, but the cow punchers, led by Bill, see the Indians, get after them, and soon capture the lot.

They recover Mary's clothing, and go in search for her. They find her behind a hill, and, after a little explanation, she and Bill ride off, gets her skirt and comes over to the punchers with entire confidence in them, and with apologies for her coldness to them. She warmly and admiringly looks into Bill's honest face and tells him he is her hero and a man after her own heart.

VITAGRAPH.

IT DID LOOK SUSPICIOUS.—Circumstances did look suspicious, this is the explanation. Mrs. Dingley's diamond ring is too large for her finger and she asks her husband to have it fixed. He takes it and lays it beside his plate on the breakfast table, and goes to his office. The maid brings in the morning mail and, after looking at the letters, Mr. Dingley suddenly realized that the hour is late, puts on his hat and coat, hastily picks up the ring, puts it in his coat pocket, and hurriedly leaves the house. On his way to business he pulls his handkerchief from his pocket and drops the ring.

A few minutes afterwards the milkman who serves the Dingleys happens by on his rounds. Seeing the ring, shows it to the cookman, and goes back to Dingley's house and gives the ring to the maid, with whom he is very much in love. The maid, delighted with the gift, shows it to the cook.

Mr. Dingley, toward evening happens to think of his wife's ring, discovers his loss, hurries home, and tells his wife he left it on the table at breakfast.

The police are notified, a detective comes to the house with the policeman of the beat who, by the way, is crossed on the poetry mood. All the servants are summoned into the dining room and questioned. The cook tells of seeing the maid showing her the ring in the kitchen, and the maid with the rest of the servants are taken to court. The milkman is arrested, he tells the judge that he found the ring, and the salesman saw him pick it up. The milkman is brought in, he corroborates the statements and the mystery is solved.

The judge lectures Mr. Dingley on forgetfulness and carelessness, gives Mrs. Dingley her ring, dismisses the case and amicably discharges the accused maid and milkman, who leave the courtroom arm in arm, smiling and happy.

THE GIRL OF THE MOUNTAINS.—Harold Brandon, a young broker, seeks rest and recuperation in the mountains. He is welcomed into the home of David Lewellyn, whose daughter, Gwynneth, takes upon herself the office of nurse and companion to the invalid. He is attracted by the athletic beauty and wholesome nature of the girl, and it is not long before he becomes very fond of each other. She accompanies him in his strolls and whenever his strength fails she is at his side to administer to him. He grows stronger every day, and at the end of three or four months he returns home quite a strong man, morally a weak one.

He promises to write Gwynneth, but the fact is he is engaged to be married and soon forgets the girl of the mountains and all his fair promises.

Six months later Harold marries the society girl. A friend of his wife extends an invitation to her and Harold to visit the friend's summer home at her mountain home. Harold has never told his wife about Gwynneth. They visit the mountain home of the friend, located in the same region as the Lewellyns. Harold and his wife, taking a long ramble through the mountains, are caught in a storm and lose their way. Night fast approaching, he goes in search of help. Unexpectedly he comes upon the home of Gwynneth, to whom he appears for assistance and begs her to save his wife. Notwithstanding her indignation, she goes out and rescues his wife safely to her home and shelters them for the night.

On the following day she directs them to their friend's home and scornfully rejects all recognition of her kindness, reflecting upon the weakness of man's moral cowardice.

KALEM.

THE SHERIFF'S SISTER.—On the death of his mother, Sheriff Bob appeals to his widowed sister and care for his orphan sister. In carrying out this promise he forbids his sister Elsie to see and accept the attention of Enrico, a Mexican whose bad reputation is known to Bob, and who has been posing in his neighborhood as a bandmaster. One afternoon, while Bob is absent the Mexican calls upon Elsie, and on Bob's unexpected return an altercation takes place and the Mexican is knocked down. Struggling to his feet he is ordered to leave the house immediately and never to return. The next day Enrico returns to Elsie and partly to revenge himself upon the Sheriff persuades the infatuated girl to elope. Elsie placing a few clothes and a number of keepsakes in a grip, writes a note and leaves it on the dining room table for her brother. She goes to meet Enrico who is hiding in a nearby road with two horses. They mount and ride to the home of a clergyman in a nearby town. At the ceremony is about to take place the minister calls in his wife and a neighbor woman to act as witnesses. The second witness when entering the room casually glances at the couple about to be married and recognizes Elsie as the girl husband who abandoned her some three or four years before. The deserted wife, fortunately for Elsie, had been taken in and comforted by the kindly old minister and his wife. The wedding is stopped and Elsie is rescued from her sad plight. Heartbroken and almost prostrated on the exposure of the Mexican's despicable conduct rushes from the house and upon her way to her home. The Mexican attempting to follow is stopped by the indignant old clergyman and compelled to delay his departure until Elsie has reached her home. In the meantime Sheriff Bob returning to his home after hunting about for Elsie, finds her note. In desperation he searches the neighborhood and tries to learn of the direction taken by the eloping couple. Late in the evening he completed he returns broken-hearted. He opens the door and staggers in, his face white and set, looks around the room as if half hoping to see Elsie, goes to her bed room and stands looking within, then goes to his own room a tired and forlorn man. He scarcely enters his room when he hears the sound of an opening door. Returning to the dining room he confronts his sister, who has just entered the house. She stares at him with bloodshot, hollow eyes. All the severity leaves him and with the wave of tenderness which

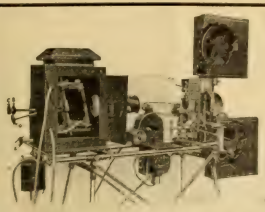
THE DAYLIGHT SCREEN

Screen now being demonstrated at the Greater New York Film Rental Company

116-118 East 14th Street, New York City

Noted for its brilliancy; non-cracking; flexible; cuts light bill. This screen has been thoroughly tested for a year and has proven satisfactory in every way. For prices, address

KOCH & STACKHOUSE, Stroudsburg, Pa.



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

LAST CALL

AT THE OLD LIST PRICE

After Feb. 1st, 1911

$225.00

Only machine approved by New York Fire Underwriters where motor is used. Absolutely flickerless.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY

101 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.

FILMS FOR SALE

after s'xty or ninety days of release. Also commercial in excellent condition at reasonable prices

M. YSSEL

973 N. 7th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"SILVERLIGHT"

Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain

Extraordinary Features Are:

Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

Hand Colored Slides

Photo Specialty Co., Keeseville, N. Y.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

sweeps across its face he holds out his arms whose protection Elsie quickly accepts. Intrusts into fears and tells him of her unfortunate experience and that she has discovered Burley's duplicity and his real character and asks Bob if he can forgive her and take her back into his heart.

THE TRAIL OF THE POMOS CHARM.—On the occasion of the feast where our story starts, the Big Chief lifts the charm which on high. All assembled bow their heads. The chief throws the melon down and all on of the broken parts. Dressing Bear, the chief's son, starts to leave the scene. Blue Bay, an Indian brave looks upon him with regards. Supposing the chief to be him that he loves his daughter. The Chief calls the girl back and tells her that Blue Bay wants her for his squaw. Signifying her pleasure and consent the Chief gives her to Blue Bay and the happy couple once take a bit of the melon. A few days after the melon feast a wandering Indian family, including the beautiful maiden Nawona, joins the tribe. The Indian chief bids them welcome. Blue Bay, who is in a group around the chief stares eagerly at the sight of Nawona. Drooping Eyes, who is near at hand, watches Blue Bay with jealous eyes. A few days later, while hunting over the nearby hills and plains Nawona meets Dick, an unsuccessful mining prospector. Both are unconsciously drawn to wards each other, during their meeting Dick informs Nawona of his ill success. She attempts to cheer him up when suddenly remembering the piece of charm that hangs on a string in front of the Big Chief's wigwam, she tells Dick she can help him. Returning to the village they find the Indians are away on a hunting expedition and no one in the vicinity of the Big Chief's wigwam. Being all shut her, Dick has no trouble, removes the charm and quickly takes her way back to where Dick is working. Handing the charm to the prospector she tells him it will surely bring him good luck. Nawona, however, did not get away with the charm unseen, the aroused jealousy of Drooping Eyes, on account of Blue Bay's open admiration of the girl, caused her to surreptitiously watch Nawona. Drooping Eyes arouses Blue Bay who is still in camp and he follows after Nawona and sees her give the charm to Dick. Returning to camp he tells the Indians who have returned from their hunting expedition that Nawona has stolen their charm. A number of Indians are immediately sent out to attack Dick and recover the charm. Nawona, who, in the meantime has returned to the village, informs Dick of his danger and goes to the nearest cattle ranch, tells her story and urges a number of cowboys to attempt Dick's rescue. Coming upon the prospector as he is sorely pressed by the attacking Indians. A rough and stiff fight follows, the cowboys eventually succeeding in driving the Indians off. Dick thanks the ranchmen for their aid and asks them how they can be of his trouble. They told him of the Indian girl's warning. Mounting the backs of the cowboys' horses, he goes to the Indian girl, and taking both her hands in his, tells her that the charm did indeed bring good luck.

PATHE.

THE ESCAPE FROM THE TULLERIES.—The Comte de Champcenetz is a prisoner of the Tullories at the time of the Reign of Terror. He is warned by his friend, Madame Elliott, that the palace is to be sacked in a few days, but he will not leave his post. In the riotous scenes which follow, he escapes in the dress of a Red Republican and is hidden by a kind-hearted woman of the people. Later he makes his way to Madame Elliott's, and, as her house is searched by the police and the Committee from the National Assembly, she hides him under the mattress of her bed, and affects to pretend to be asleep. When the searching party has gone, the Comte makes his escape, disguised as a thus disguised drives Madame in her carriage across the frontier to safety.

HEARTS, HUNGER, HAPPINESS.—Billy is in love, but he thinks he's broke, so he calls in the doctor who quickly recognizes what is the matter with the lad. Thinking that there is no real harm to scare him a little, the doctor tells him that he must fast for three days. This Billy does faithfully and grows thinner by the minute. On the third day he gets a note from his sweetheart asking him to attend a birthday party. He knows that what is necessary to find a great big dinner awaiting the guests, which he, of course, cannot eat. Rather than alarm his friends, he puts his food in his pockets, and, when these are full, into the pockets of his neighbors. How he gets in touch with the object of his love is worked out and pardoned is too good to tell. See the picture and learn for yourself.

THE SERF'S REVOLT.—Alissa, a Szrian maid, the sweetheart of Gurzzl, attracts by her beauty the attentions of Ramsess, the King of Egypt, who has her carried off to his palace by his slaves. Gurzzl interferes but is cast over a cliff. When he recovers, he vows to be avenged, and finding a way into the palace, he takes his place among the slaves, inciting them to a revolt at the proper time. He does not see Elissa, who has regained all the advances of Ramsess, until the day of the great feast, when many slaves, he among them, were needed in the banquet hall. When, after the meal, Ramsess amused himself killing slaves, Elissa begs a dart from him, and turning quickly buries it in the heart of the monster. This is the signal for the revolt, which ends in the reunion of the two hearts so evidently intended for each other.

A COWBOY'S DEVOTEDNESS.—Bud May learns that his sister has been bounded by a compunches and seeks him to make him apologize. Failing to find him, he sends him a note telling him that if he does not do this he will horsewhip him. It put daylight through him. On receiving this the cowboy goes to the girl's home but we make excuses. He draws his gun threateningly and the girl struggles with him to get it away. In the struggle the gun goes off and the man falls dead at her feet. With Bud's note in the dead man's pocket suspicion naturally falls on him, and rather than have his sister implicated, he assumes the guilt, but makes his escape, and in a distant town marries and settles down. After five years he is discovered and tried, and is about to be convicted when his sister, having heard of the trial, arrives from her home and goes to court where in a dramatic scene she confesses her share in the matter and Bud is freed just in time to catch his dying sister as she sinks unconscious to the ground.

GAUMONT.

THE TWILIGHT OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE.—An old veteran who lives at his son's home is not only neglected but made very uncomfortable by his daughter-in-law. Unable to endure her continued scoldings and insults he prepares to leave and find shelter in a public home for retired soldiers.

Through his grandchild's winsome intervention the woman is forced to see the pain her unkind ness has caused, and the old man is prevailed upon to remain.

TWILIGHT OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE.—An old soldier, living as a boarder at a boarding house is letter from his son to the effect that he has returned to his native country, his wife and children, and is coming to see his father at once. The visit is made, and the young man, seeing the poverty of his father's surroundings, asks the keeper the home, and come to his home, but the daughter-in-law does not view this plan with approval, and the father refuses to accept the invitation, that she can think of. He is made to take his meals in the kitchen owing to his table manners being rather crude. When the son finds out how he is treated, he upbraids his wife, thus causing a breach between them. Finally, the father resolves to leave the house and writes a letter explaining why he has done this. But before he has been away long the woman sees reproachful in her actions, and the film ends with the family united.

THE BABY FORTUNE HUNTERS.—It is months ago that Farmer Jones's daughter left the fields to dig and rake and hoe—when we first catch sight of the two tots. They are seated at a table in front of the farm house.

The mother and father speak to the children before leaving for their toil.

No sooner are the youngsters left alone than their dispositions are changed. They talk hurriedly between each other, the elder boasting of his ability enter the farm house. Articles of apparel and food for a journey are packed into two tiny bundles and off they go, little knowing what fate has in the following morning.

They wander for a farm house is reached. The farmer is brought to the door by the boy's knock ing and questions them. "We want work" is the response. The kind farmer calls the boy's mother and both enjoy the novelty of the incident so much that they laugh unrestrainedly and end it by engaging both children.

Early the following morning, all traces of their journey worn off by refreshing sleep, the children, the farmer and his wife, and a yoke of oxen attached to a plough are viewed in the barnyard. Immediately he is readiness for the youngsters to show their worth as ploughboy and ox boaler.

Now, maybe you think that the youngster can't plow. Just watch him. The heavy work, however, tells on the little steps the oxen amid the boy and his team, and helps his sister and himself to a draught of red wine. He is a kid-hearted little fellow, and while well at home, he does not see him put the oxen during the rest, knowing that they also are weary.

The approach of the runaways, in the meantime, have been scouring the country far and wide for them, and the police have been instructed to find them. One day, while the youthful workers are threshing in the barnyard, they are taken in charge by two gendarmes from Rheims.

The reunion with their parents forms the closing scene, and both children seem glad to be home again. Though the little boy has contributed to the family money earned by himself and sister, and as he counts the coins his father and mother as proudly look on.

GORGES OF THE BOURNE, FRANCE.—About two and a quarter miles beyond the town of Villard we enter the Gorges of the Bourne, a narrow rocky ravine of great beauty, through which the Bourne dashes. The road is sometimes high above the torrent, and in places is hewn out of the rock, in others supported on projecting galleries, and in others carried over bridges, through tunnels.

We next take the direct route to Pont en Royans, descending the valley, passing a second gorge beyond. We now come to Pont de Goule-Noire, the second bridges in the Gorges of the Bourne, and from here are led to the Gorges of the Vernaison, which are fully as fine as those of the Bourne. The first gorge is known as the Grands Goulets, the second, further on, as the Petits Goulets.

LUBIN.

FATHER MAKES HIMSELF USEFUL.—Fritz Grunshaw was an ideal husband and was much in love with his young wife, Irene. But his disposition was such that he did not show many of those little attentions and caresses usual among love. After a time, decided that she was neglected wife. She wrote to her husband's father complaining of Fritz's neglect. His father thought over the problem and then had a bright idea. He packed his grip and in due time arrived at the home of his son and daughter-in-law. There he told Irene of his scheme and she entered heartily into it. When Fritz came home he found his father very attentive to Irene. At first he took no notice of this but father's attentions increased at an alarming rate. Finally Fritz remonstrated. Then he became angry, then suspicious, and at last jealous. He told father right there in pretty strong language what he thought of his actions. Things were getting pretty serious when Irene and father explained the whole scheme with the result that Fritz and his wife "lived happily ever after."

FATHER LOVE.—A young musician who had been hired to play the violin at a reception, saw and fell in love with Miss Hayes, daughter of a millionaire. His love was returned and when her father tried to separate them, they decided to elope. About one year after their marriage, the mother died leaving the father with a little girl baby. When this father became paralyzed. Though it cost him the keenest pang, he sent his child to her grandfather, preferring to reveal the fact that he was crippled. Many years later the child, now a beautiful young girl, happened to be in a music store when an old and decrepit man offered for sale a few of his compositions. They were rejected and the old man was leaving the store when the girl stopped him, bought his compositions herself and giving him her card, told him she would buy any that he might write in the future. The man looked at the card, noticed the name, questioned the girl and found she was his own daughter. She was equally delighted to find the father she had never known and their delight was made complete when her grandfather gladly received her father into his home.

BIOGRAPH

A WREATH OF ORANGE BLOSSOMS.—The dressmaker's pretty daughter becomes the object of her mother's patron while on an errand to deliver a dress. The son is attracted by the girl and later promises marriage, which she gladly accepted. This seems to be a dream to her, but its realization in marrying the young man. Although the mother of the boy strongly objects to the marriage, still she makes the best of it, and receives the girl in her home as her daughter-in-law. The girl, coming from her humble surroundings, is dazzled by her new experience and seeing rather attractive, elicits the attentions of many of the male acquaintances of her husband's family. She gradually falls into a flirting affair than the others and loses no opportunity to place herself in her way. This simple girl is, of course, pleased with these little attentions, particularly as her husband is in a mild state of depression owing to business affairs. The husband knows this and becomes assiduous in his advances, which are more mildly repulsed by the wife who feels that her husband is in danger. Later, during the crash comes, and the husband is ruined. Everything has to be given up, and they go to cheaper quarters. This is decidedly irksome to the wife as the taste of luxury has, in a measure, spoiled her. She is in a mood of despondency when the tempter again appears and she becomes an easy prey, consenting to his plea for her to go away with him. Just as she is about to leave her grip, she, while gathering her effects, comes upon the wreath of orange blossoms she wore when she was married. The sight of these blossoms awakens memories of the past and impresses her with the enormity of the step she is thinking of taking. In her mind's eye she sees herself arrayed in her wedding attire, standing beside the man who loves her with an unselfish, honest love she could not hope to find in the man she would take this awful leap with. This decides her and she dismisses the tempter and all thoughts of him. Meanwhile, the husband has been down town where he has met with success in recovering a sunshine now hovers over the little home, where a few hours before, was gloom.

THREE SISTERS.—Mary is the youngest of three sisters and of an impressionable nature. She and her sister Florence are living at home with their widowed mother, while Adele travels on the road with a theatrical company. Adele returns from the road at the end of her season, and is not home long before she realizes that her place is with her mother and sister. She finds that they neglect their home and mother, running off to dancing parties every night, and what is

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

Moving Picture Supplies

We are the largest dealers in Moving Picture Supplies and Machine Parts in the United States. We are also the largest jobbers of "Bio" and "Electra Pink Label" Carbons, and always carry a large stock for immediate delivery.

WRITE FOR LIST

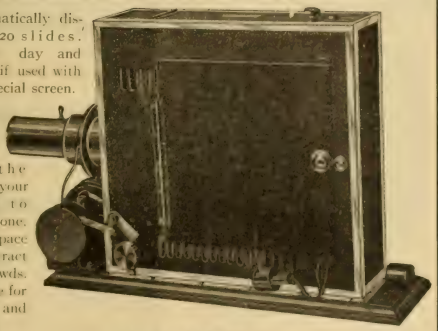
American Moving Picture Supply Co.
110 Fourth Ave. New York City

Annual Subscription to Moving Picture World, $2.00

Up to the Minute Every Minute

THE ADVERTOGRAPH

Automatically displays 20 slides. Works day and night if used with our special screen.



Be the first in your town to have one, sell space and attract the crowds. Write for terms and prices.

H. A. MACKIE
853 BROADWAY Cor. 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

Expert Machine Repairs All parts furnished
Edison Kinetoscopes in stock

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write Today for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

Are You Looking for GOOD FILM SERVICE

THE KIND THAT SATISFIES?

If so, get in touch with us. We've got it and guarantee satisfaction.

An immense stock to select from. All the best Trust and Independent reels in our stock. Banner and poster service free. The only real independent Film Exchange in New York. Drop us a line and we will have our representative call on you.

ACME FILM CO., Inc., 12 E. 15th Street, New York

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
142 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK CITY

ALL REAL EXCHANGES BUY

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

Release Days, TUESDAY, SATURDAY

worse. Associating with a class of infatuous to way conducive to their moral health. Adele, who is older and more experienced, decides to stay and Watch and listen. To better effect her plan she hires a hall and opens a dancing academy, thereby affording her sisters a chance to enjoy many fascinating pastime under her eye. She is pleased to see that Mary is receiving the attentions of one of the most worthless scamps left that frequents the place. The only reason for his presence at the Academy is to lure innocent girls to their destruction. A scandle is given at the academy and during its progress the investigating committee closes it. A young man who is one of the party and he runs quite an attachment for Mary, and appreciating the danger of her present surroundings, resolves to save her from the impending danger, but his interest has ripened into love. However, despite all of Adele's urging Mary will have nothing to do with the minister. Her ideal is the young good-for nothing, who has only to snap his fingers to separate them. Becomes more urgent and suggests Mary's going away with him. Mary, of course, objects, for he has only to suggest and she tackles. Adele, upon her return from the dancing academy is amazed to find Mary preparing to leave with the unscrupulous scamp. By subterfuge Adele gets Mary into her room and locks the door. She is determined to save her sister at any cost, but how? An idea. She hires the fellow to make love to her and at the proper time the other sashes relegates Mary to go with the unscrupulous dog her choice is. He has in a manner translated his attentions to Adele. The scheme works and Adele, when Mary has gratified acquiesce the door. The minister arrives and after a deal of soft persuasion wins Mary over.

EDISON.

THE LINK THAT HELD.—There is a foolish little wife who is dissatisfied with her humble estate and if state of affairs continue in a way loses her pleasing husband and pretty little baby, to fit from hands. The husband is one of those passive but fundamentally true-natured men, whose economic position is such that he feels he must save as risks which might spell ruin, by availing well for his little family. His employer, a man about town, meets the young wife and becomes attracted by her beauty. He places her for a ride in his automobile and brings her to the office, where her husband is at work.

On another day when she comes with the baby he takes her into the inner office to show her paintings and statuary and to create a first-class impression. The little girl, who becomes restless, is left in the outer office. The little girl, who becomes restless, is left in the outer office. The little girl, who becomes restless, is left in the outer office

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—About 350 second-hand opera chairs, first-class condition. J. M. LENNEY, 208 North 14th St., Harrisburg, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Full equipment for a moving picture theater, including 250 opera chairs, single pin Edison machine, etc. Full particulars on application to TWIN CITY AMUSEMENT COMPANY, 16 East Seventh Street, St. Paul, Minn.

FOR SALE—Good as new, Selig Polyscope moving picture machine complete with film box, $95.00. EDW. MAXMILLIAN, 339 South Morgan Street, Chicago, Ill.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR LEASE.

FOR SALE—The only exclusively five-cent theater in Staunton, Va., one of the best small cities in the State. Population, new census, over 12,000. Seating capacity, 200. New piano, opera chairs and Edison machine. Now running daily and doing good business. Reason for selling manager has other interest that needs his attention. Write or wire. SAVOY THEATER, Staunton, Va.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 100,000 to 125,000. Best location in the town, on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—Theater in Massachusetts city of 120,000. Seating capacity 600, equipped for playing pictures and vaudeville. Good location and business, price low. Must sell at once. Address, Time "S" Co., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—A profitable moving picture and vaudeville theater in the busiest section of New York City. Reason for selling other business. Long lease. Inquire H. J. GATES, Crown M. P. Supply Company, 138 Third Avenue, New York City.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 259, Washington, D. C.

FOR LEASE—Moving Picture Theater, fully equipped, corner of Merrick and Hempstead Roads, Lynbrook, L. I. Address, WILLIAM GEIS, Far Rockaway, N. Y.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—To buy, rent or build. Picture theater. Give location, competition, population, price, house capacity, average receipts, expenses. Must be good proposition. Give full particulars and facts in first letter. Address BOYER, Moving Picture World, Chicago.

WANTED—Picture theater. Location must be good. State full particulars. Box 193, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WANTED—Position as illustrated song singer by A1 soprano of experience. Prefers to work in Pennsylvania. Address MISS LOIS HOLCOMB, Box 96, Sunbury, Pa.

HALLBERG

THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES twenthirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-40

J. H. HALLBERG 26 East 23d St. New York City

In Answering Advertisers Kindly Mention
Moving Picture World

LIGHT EFFECTS

Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros.
PROPRIETORS

1393-5 Broadway, New York City

Cornet Only 15 Cents a Day

This great cornet, the world famous Buescher "True Tone," Only $2.

free trial for a long catalogue. Write today.

LYON & HEALY, 28-67 Adams Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

At Last

it is possible to secure comfortable, even illumination throughout a theatre without a brilliant light in range of vision.

¶ The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination is a notable success in the lighting of Moving Picture Houses.

¶ Theatres in all sections of the country installing this inexpensive and very desirable electric lighting system.

¶ You are undoubtedly interested in this important matter.

¶ Write us for full information. Our engineering department on receipt of particulars, will furnish, free of expense, report and recommendations.

Sold by Electrical Trade Generally

WRITE TODAY

National X-Ray Reflector Co.

227 Jackson Boulevard

CHICAGO, ILL.

THE KODOGRAPH

A "STANDARD MOVING PICTURE MACHINE"

The only machine in the world showing a picture by a dry battery. A new system of reflection, and a specially made 4 c/p Tungsten Lamp, in conjunction with a patented reflector, projecting a clear five feet, 100 c/p picture. Price $7.50, including film. Send for circular.

HOME MOTION PICTURE CO.

Hartford Bldg., 41 Union Sq. West

NEW YORK CITY

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service. Write, wire or phone

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN.

THE BORROWED FLAT.—Percy and Bobby are companions. Percy is in debt and Bobby is in love. Percy enters, crowd outside have been pawning him. He cannot understand why until he gazes at the calendar and sees it is the first day of April. He looks and finds a "Please kick Me" sign on his back. He is down and out. The janitor hands him a letter from his aunt, the contents telling him that she would not forget him in her will. Percy is overjoyed at the news, looks around the room and decides it would never do for the aunt to see some of his enemies. Soon the pictures of two women very much resemble. He decides to change them. He takes them down and reverses them, getting a right bright, he writes on the back of one, "What is Home Without an Aunt?" And on the opposite one, "Love Your Relations."

Percy hears someone at the door, goes hurriedly to meet his aunt, throwing his arms around Bobby instead. Bobby wonders the use of Percy's room to meet his fiance in. Percy gives consent, and Bobby writes a note to his fiance, places it back at the addressed envelope, glances at the calendar and laughs. He removes the letter from the envelope and addresses another envelope similar to the washwoman. He gives the letter to the janitor. Percy then leaves Bobby to meet his affinity, alone. A rap is heard and Bobby thinks it is his sweetheart, goes to the door with arms outstretched to receive her. Instead the aunt enters. Bridget fall into his arms, who tells him she came to marry him and shows the letter. Bobby tries to explain to her. She cannot and falls into the trunk. Bobby closes the lid. He looks around for some place to put the trunk, and decides to throw it from the window.

Bobby, vowing vengeance, goes to the table, spies letter heads it, and decides he will impersonate Percy's aunt. He finds an old maquerade costume, makes a quick getaway just as Percy enters very much excited. His aunt has not arrived. He has bought a present for her, looks at it, and it fails. He gets down on his knees and looks for it. Finds a pistol under the table. Percy peeps from under the table and discovers the joke that Bobby intends to perpetrate. Percy crawls from under the table and begins to disrobe. He hears someone coming and goes to the door when, instead of his aunt, enters his own aunt appears. Percy begins a decided rough house play with her. Bobby enters. Percy turns and sees him, and is astonished to see that he has been abusing his real aunt. He goes down on his knees in pardon, but she refuses to listen. Bobby has removed his female wardrobe and proceeds to take the Aunt's part. He offers her his arm and starts toward the door. Percy pleads. Bobby turns and kisses his hand to Percy. Percy turns to signs, tears the door and smashes it and is about to smash the other when the real washwoman enters and gets it full force over her head. She falls to the floor, she holds her hands out to him imploringly and Percy sees no way of escape, throws up his hands in despair and dives out of the window.

THE BONANZA KING.—Lillian Randolph, the daughter of an old New England family, has two suitors for her hand, Arthur Neville and Chester Hawley. Neville (the favored one), is addicted to the use of liquor, and is frequently seen under its baleful influence. Hawley, on the other hand, while of excellent character, is finally rejected in favor of Neville.

Smarting under the sting, Hawley devotes his time to spying upon Neville, who, despite his sacred promise to reform, is continuing in his downward course, after his marriage to Lillian. While on a prolonged debauch, Neville is seen by Hawley, helplessly intoxicated in a low dance resort. He sends a letter to Lillian, apprising her of the fact, and telling her where her unfortunate husband can be found. Lillian hastily dons a wrap and goes in search of him. She is seen pleading with her husband to return with her to their home and little child, when Hawley comes into the scene and brutally reproaches her with rejecting him in favor of such a drunken, worthless wretch. Neville, in his half-crazed condition through his long debauch, sees his old rival sneeringly calling his wife's attention to his helpless condition. He draws a revolver from his pocket, rushes from the room in pursuit of Hawley, who has tauntingly left the place. He follows him to his home, bursts into the library, revolver in hand, only to be confronted by a man who are at work looting the home of Hawley. As he appears through the door, he is seized, disarmed and pinioned upon the floor. The burglars again resume their work, when another interruption comes.

Hawley appears upon the scene. He discovers the intruders at work upon his safe, interrupts them, and is shot with the revolver, which was taken from Neville's hand and placed upon a table. Neville recovers consciousness, finds the body of his rival, sees his own revolver on the table and imagining he did it, rushes from the scene. In a fit of remorse, he seeks his wife, tells her of the murder of Hawley, and flees from justice.

He seeks a refuge in the Far West, and after suffering untold agony and remorse for five years, he accumulates a large fortune through mining interests he has acquired.

He returns to the East, under an assumed name, instituting a search for his wife and child, whom he finds living in abject poverty and about to be dispossessed by the very man who committed the murder, which he believed himself guilty of. An accident brings him in contact with one of the "Big Six" burglars, who is engaged in looting the safe of Hawley's safe, and an accidental kindness to the man causes the latter to relent, and he tells the first step of Hawley's murder, and discloses the rendezvous of the crooks.

His wife and child have been rescued from their direful poverty, and are transformer to Neville's home with every luxury money can purchase.

Neville is taken to the rendezvous, where the principal offender, the murderer of Hawley, confesses his guilt to Neville. He is released, and Neville is reunited at last with his wife, child, and his old family retainer, James, the servant, who has remained loyal through all their trouble and misery.

WHEN A MAN'S SINGLE.—One particular morning, of a particularly cold winter in fact, or at least some men, he quarreled with his spouse at breakfast, for no other reason than that he was feeling out of sorts with himself; she was sweet and considerate, as all wives are, until sweetness ceased to be a virtue, and she decided to leave him to wake up to housekeeping and she left him to return to a girl's first, and most stable love, her mother. Her young husband was somewhat non plussed on his return from the office the same evening, to discover that his wife had made good her threat to leave him, but he waited and all, but man-like, thought for a brief spell, that freedom was bliss, and he commenced operations in the kitchen, led in that direction by the gnawings of an empty stomach, he succeeded in doing his best to back up housekeeping and most of the available crockery and kitchen utensils, and, after finding out that a crust of stale bread was decidedly cold comfort, he sought assistance of the employment agency.

The applicants came in for his approval, did more than anything else to bring him back to a normal condition of mind, and in despair he bets his wife will return, which she does, accompanied as a nigger wench. On viewing her orderly household in the state of disorder it happens to be in, she very naturally faints. On sighting reproaches, to his astonishment, he discovers that her complexion is quite dark, and even though under the black he sees the wife of his bosom, who is as well pleased as he is to fall into his open arms. Upon leaving some hours later, on his face, but that is a small matter. He promises to be good, kind and considerate, and just like the good, considerate husband he will clean, and they begin all over again, with little fear that by contrary venture, experiment again.

BERTIE'S BANDIT.—Bertie is a young corporate botanist. He is pottering with some flowers in the garden, when Nell, the idol of his dreams, appears. He starts up when he sees her pleading, soulfully with her to marry him. Nell is a full-blooded girl, and tells him she cares nothing for Bertie for many things, she prefers a real man for a husband.

News comes from Nell's uncle, in Red Cloud, that he is going to sell out his store, and go back to Vermont. Nell and her mother set out for Red Cloud, and Bertie determines to prove himself a man, accompanies them. At Tucson he stops a late arriving train, leaves Nell and Bertie start out for Red Cloud on foot. Bertie purchases a burro to pack their baggage, and it happens to be a burro belonging to the famous of "Tiger Jack," the lone bandit, who has caused the community to quake with fear.

The "Tiger Jack" mail coach is held up by "Tiger Jack," and with the property of the passengers he makes off into the hills.

Bertie and Nell and the burro are plodding along toward Red Cloud, Bertie's time is divided between making love to Nell and brandishing over the botanical specimens along the way. He does not observe the disappearance of the burro, and eventually is forced to desert Nell while he goes in pursuit of the wayward animal. Unfortunately he runs into the hiding place of "Tiger Jack," and, a moment later, Bertie encounters the bad man. Bertie is think until "Tiger Jack" recognizes Bertie as Nell's hat, which is on the burro's pack-saddle. Then, the botanist loses his temper and wallops the bandit. He is putting the finishing touches upon the bandit, when Nell comes up. She is amazed at the powers of her lover, and lavishes congratulations upon him. He takes it in a matter-of-fact sort of way, and calls for a rope.

When the sheriff's posse rides up, a few moments later, "Tiger Jack" is helplessly bound. The sheriff informs Bertie that he is entitled to the $5,000 reward offered for the capture of the outlaw, and the story closes with the botanist enriched by a bank roll and a bride.

THANHOUSER.

ONLY IN THE WAY.—When Mrs. Gage's little savings were swept away and she found herself penniless, she naturally turned to her only son for support. Unfortunately for her, the son married and his wife objected to the introduction of a mother-in-law into the household. At first her objections were overruled, but after the unwelcome guest had been dandelled with them for some time, she induced her husband to send his mother to a home for the aged.

But, in the meantime, the sweet-faced old woman had won a firm friend in the person of her little granddaughter Marie, who found "Granny" to be just the friend she needed, and when the old lady was sent away, Marie refused to be comforted. "Granny's" only fault seemed to be that she was more or less helpless, and little Marie was a cripple. If a good woman like "Granny" could be treated that way, the child argued, what could she expect?

And so the little one decided to run away; and what was more natural than that, she should go to the old person whom, like herself, was "only in the way?" So after leaving a farewell note she started.

Her childish note of farewell touched the hearts of her parents. Their selfishness was brought home to them and when they found the two helpless ones, together and happy in each other's love, they did not have the heart or the desire to separate them. From that day on neither of them was "in the way," and, best of all, they were made to feel it.

ADRIFT.—Jack Thorne, a young artist, finds his efforts unappreciated, and he and his wife and little daughter are on the verge of starvation. The final blow falls when he is painting, and while he had built much hope, was rejected by a rich man, whom an artist chum kindly brought to the impoverished studio.

Jack decides that he can struggle no longer. Guess he will end it all. He writes a note, puts it in his pocket and goes out, intending to end everything. But the little daughter had watched him; she follows him and calls on him in her prayers and entreaties bring him to a realization of what he is about to do, and he returns to the loneliness ones that would be left behind. Penitent and remorseful, he accompanies his child back to their poor home.

There he confesses to his wife that it was only the child's timely interference that saved him from ending it all. Overjoyed that he is back once more beside her child, and clasping her in her arms, raises grateful eyes to Heaven in a prayer of thankfulness. At this moment, the artist sees a beautiful group of mother and child, with a light as if from Heaven upon them. Realizing that here is the inspiration he has been for which he has sought in vain, he calls for them not to move, and at once begins the delightful task of them, which brings him fame and wealth.

But with wealth, the artist becomes dissatisfied with his wife, and infatuated with a beautiful society woman, who begins to lay siege to him. The couple, happy in poverty, are now rapidly drifting on the rocks of matrimonial misery, and the child saves them. She is weeping one day when Miss Brent, the society woman, enters the room. Miss Brent, who has designs on the artist, forces, asks the cause of her sorrow, and tries to comfort her. The child tells her, and Julia's heart is filled with hatred, resolves to countervail the mischief the wife, she feels that she can not ruin the life of the husband, except with the aid of the child. On the spur of the moment, she writes a farewell note to Jack, gives it to the child, saying that it will end all her sorrow. Then she goes out of their lives forever.

Jack realizes, when he sees that his child is the messenger, that he has been broken with, that an outsider had made a sacrifice to save the future of little Marie, when he, her father, who had always loved her, had nearly forgotten his duty. Remorsefully he tears up the letter, and destroys the painting, not angrily, but as a symbol that he has cast the temptation out of his life. Then he makes peace with his wife and daughter, who are forfully happy in their love, and tells them that love will keep him in the right path for the rest of his life, and that the lesson he has been taught will never be forgotten.

LUX

BACK TO THE OLD HOMESTEAD.—Jack, a sailor lad, arrives at his home and is greeted by his family. When the novelty of his surroundings has worn off he goes to the beach, and calls to his father that he cannot work on the farm like his brother. This is a cruel blow to the old farmer. Jack, after leaving under favorable skies his mother, sets off for the town, and the next day commences to search for employment. But he finds that he is required. Eight days elapse and Jack, who has been turned out of his lodgings, sick at heart, goes down to the riverside. A slim, placid surface of the water attracts him, and he is about to end his troubles forever when a man drags him back. A new friend has appeared to cheer him up and introduces him to a friend. Then, for the first time, Jack learns that his rescuer is a thief, and he is asked to join in a proposed robbery. At first he refuses, but yielding to his new companions' enticement, he consents. Arriving at a large house the burglars, together with Jack, enter, but at that moment the owner enters the room. Stealing behind him one of the burglars is about to plunge a knife into the unsuspecting man when Jack, spurning forward, receives the wound himself. Startled, the two thieves make their escape, while the owner has Jack carried to a room. At length he is convalescent and confides his story to the kindly owner. The latter assures him that everything will be all right, only he must return to his home. At first Jack refuses, but, urged by his benefactor, he at length consents. The latter accompanies him to the old farm, and entering, informs the family of Jack's return, and the wanderer comes in. For a time the old farmer stands aloof, but at length his love for his son conquering, Jack is seen folded in his arms, and then in those of the family. Arriving at a quiet spot on the farm the farmer makes his son promise to remain true to his old home, and Jack, sinking on his knees, kisses his father's hand and vows never to wander from the homestead again.

AT THE DUKE'S COMMAND.—The scene opens at the termination of a dance where the Duke of Chatmoss is supported by his nephew and his daughter to the throne, the daughter occupying the place of honor by his side.

One of the court maids approaches and the Duke's nephew, Edward, falls in love with her instantly, and his love is reciprocated. The aged Duke notes the beautiful maiden and he also smitten by her charms. In his infatuation he sends his bunchbacked serf to her apartment commanding her immediate appearance before him. The cunning bunchback discovers that his master has been forestalled by the nephew, who is the accepted lover of Irma, the maid. His master, the Duke, is apprised of this fact, and when the girl appears before the Duke the old gallant immediately overwhelms her with his attentions, but she, in her righteous indignation, repulses him.

The Duke is wrathy, and in his rage vows to win the frightened girl. She runs immediately to Edward and tells him of the occurrence. Edward is indignant and strides into the presence of his uncle, the Duke, demanding an explanation. There is a war of words, the nephew and the Duke growing excited, the bunchback fearing harm to himself stands aside with a drawn sword. The Duke easily tells Edward he must renounce all hope of winning the maid. Angered to desperation, Edward draws his sword to attack the Duke, but is prevented by the bunchback. The Duke summons the guard and commands them to disarm his nephew and take him to the dungeons and torture him. To add to the cruelty of his purpose, the Duke has Irma seized, and taken to the cell where Edward is confined, and there a mock trial is held, and the nephew ordered to the torture-chamber. During the time of torture the bunchback is pacing quickly to and fro between the dungeon, reception room and the girl's chamber.

The Duke informs Irma that the price of the lover's life is herself. She refuses, and the trap-door is opened, showing the agonized girl her lover on the rack being seared and tortured. She consents to sacrifice herself and the torture ceases. The Duke is satisfied at the result of his diabolical method of winning the girl.

The bunchback is commanded to bring the girl to the apartments of the Duke. She appears before him in a fit of desperation, scars her face with a red hot poker, horribly disfiguring her beautiful face. She accompanies the bunchback into the presence of the amorous old Duke, wearing a veil. The Duke lifting the veil is horrified at the face of the woman, who was once so beautiful. In disgusted, all pursuit of her and consents his nephew to appear in the audience chamber, where Irma is still veiled. The Duke announces to Edward that he must marry her, being possessed of the idea that the girl will be won aside by Edward's display of games on her once beautiful face. Edward is all too willing, and raising the veil is shocked at the result of her sacrifice, but draws her closer to him in a fond loving embrace and leads her away, loving her in spite of her blemished face.

THE MIRROR.—Dorothy is beloved by Dick and Paul, who are both persistent in their attentions. Dorothy is apparently unable to decide between them and quite naturally regards the latter's financial in her favors, but the young men press her for an answer.

She is walking alone when she passes the residence of a fortune teller and is possessed of a happy thought. She will consult the fortune teller's way out of her dilemma. She goes in and crosses the palm of the dclver into the paul and future and is enlightened.

Dick sees her enter the house and, simulating her mission, gains admission to an adjoining room by bribing the woman in waiting. He hears the instructions of the fortune teller, who informs the girl that if she will rise at midnight, descend the stairs to her sleeping robe, walk a certain number of steps, turn the required number of times, and hold a candle to the mirror, she will see the face of the man she is destined to marry.

Dick is made acquainted with this by listening at the keyhole and is elated. At midnight he gains entrance to the home of Dorothy by adopting burglar's methods, climbing the trellis like an ordinary burglar. Paul discovers his actions and, under the impression that Dick is about to enter surreptitiously in some way, summons help and they enter the house.

In the meantime Dick clad in his stocking feet, has taken a position near the mirror to await the coming of Dorothy, who soon puts in an appearance. She follows the instructions of the seeress to the letter with Dick, jubilant, imitating her movements. She gazes in the mirror, and the fortune teller fainted better than she knew, for the face of Dick is photographed on the mirror. Dorothy turns and is too quick for Dick, and his little ruse is discovered. The humor of the situation dawns on the girl and, of course, Dick is forgiven for his deception, just as Paul and the policeman break into the scene, Jay bribing the officer. Dick turns the attention of that worthy on Paul and the copper marches off with the lover who lost, and there is a pretty scene in which Dorothy and Dick are the principals. Paul realizes that he is outwitted and Dick radiantly happy at the result of his little strategy.

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY.—Mr. and Mrs. Parker leave their apartments to the care of their servants, Riley and his wife, while Mrs. Parker pays an extended visit to her mother, and Mr. Parker makes a business trip.

Riley assists at the going away and the furniture is covered with care, he being admonished to take excellent care of the apartments, which he proceeds to do.

Riley finds the need of some ready money, and he resolves to turn a penny his way by letting the apartments in the absence of his master and mistress. He tacks up a neat sign and awaits developments.

Mr. and Mrs. Strong, strangers in the city, happen to pass, see the sign and make application to Riley for the use of the apartments. Riley is open to a deal and he is paid a month's rent in advance. Mrs. Riley is overjoyed at the arrangement.

In the meantime Mrs. Parker's stay is cut short by receiving a telegram from her husband calling her home. Her arrival is most inopportune, Mr. Strong is seated in Parker's favorite easy chair and she is overjoyed to see her accepted husband. Appreciating Mr. Strong she passes her hands over his eyes, and he, thinking it is Mrs. Strong steps out to the hall, where the meeting is accomplished. Mr. Parker and Mrs. Strong happen to sit side by side. The mistake is quickly seen and the master immediately engages in a hair pulling match. Happily the situation is soon straightened out.

The passages explain fully, but the Parkers soon convince them that they have a prior claim on the premises by reason of ownership. Riley is summoned and finds himself in a predicament out of which he encounters somewhat downcast, for he is compelled to refund to Strong his rent money and is fired by Mr. Parker.

NESTOR.

THE BRIDAL TRAIL.—Two lovers tied been a wedding about to take a bride and the companionship of being both farmer and partner to the girl consigned sure enough upon him.

As present appeared upon consigned Ben Darwin, was Gilbert friendship for Frank Board man a stranger to these parts.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The* Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue : : CHICAGO, ILL.

To keep the young man from the house was quite simple, but would the girl not come? Him outside? An himself was not for her own little home in the mountains. Worse from abandoned her usual frivolities and soon pudding. It was sore that Gilbert found it hard for to meet him at the common lovely spot in which their lovely was prepared.

But before the old man could be persuaded to give his consent, the elder Boardman arrived, and learning that the son was on the verge of marrying the granddaughter of his bitterest enemy, he made a bitter attack on which Frank deserted to don't love and had no intention of marrying. The girl in question, "The girl in question, however, was Miss Grace Darwin, and accordingly Mr. Boardman knew like a flash what he considered his interference with the affairs of his son. Grace, worse with rage and despair, informed Gilbert that daughter of common snake and that she never her name and refused to have anything to do with him. Gilbert, however, made a powerful and pleading appeal to Grace, but she refused to hear him out. Then sending the unconsoled father up the road at a point of the gun, Grace left the house.

Of the incidents that followed [illegible] of the [illegible].

But marriage [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ATLAS.

KELLY, U. S. A.—Now, Kelly was a soldier but in time away of Uncle Sam's army. He had led a fine life until they gave him a tub and a washboard and made him official cleaner of the soiled linen. From his feeling that he was a prisoner and he silently stole away, only to be chased by Swedenmals and finally captured as he clung to the cowl of a friendly tree.

If Wilbur Morgan had only left her money in the bank, the bandit's gang would have failed to had her losing place and the theft would never be committed, but she didn't and the tramp sought all the booze he could carry and went to sleep.

Kelly made another get-away and this time eluded his followers. Then he grew hungry and walks in search for food, stumbled upon the sleeping thief. Kelly was quick to notice that his uniform must be discarded. He changed clothing with the tramp and ran away.

The sheriff had a good description of the thief and his deputies owned good horses. They caught Kelly and found some of the Wilbur Morgan's money in his clothes. Kelly cried and confessed to being a deserter rather than go to jail as a common thief, so they rounded up the culprit and Kelly returned to the fort in time to gear the sunset gun. He likes to be a soldier now.

YANKEE.

A SON OF OLD GLORY.—Margaret Luther Abercrombie, missionary to Egypt for the American Tract Society, is accompanied by her nephew, a handsome young man of twenty-five. Among her converts, Miss Abercrombie shows more than common liking for a young orphan girl, beautiful of face and figure, whose supervisory guardian is negotiating with a soulless Jewish slave-trader for the sale of the girl.

Clifton meets the girl when he calls to escort his aunt to their lodgings and is struck with her wondrous beauty. An old duenna, Leota's faithful friend and companion, has overheard the guardian and the slave-trader bargaining for the girl and has warned her to be on guard at all times. Leota, overcome with anxiety, determines, as a precaution, to dispatch a note to the American, giving him the name of the slave trader and asking him to search for her should she suddenly disappear. Ayhasa delivers the note returning just in time to see Leota hurried away by the Jew and his men.

When Clifton is informed of the girl's plight he goes at once to the Jew's slave market and there finds a sale in progress, Leota being among those soon to be placed on the auction block. Soon the auctioneer comes to "the fairest in all Egypt" and Clifton determines the best and easiest manner of saving Leota is to bid the highest and buy her himself. A wealthy Nabob in the crowd saving permanent peace at Double Trouble Ranch, evinces great interest in the girl and Clifton finds a sudden rival in the bidding.

But his American blood wins up and he forced the Nabob to retreat under fire of his reckless assistance and Leota was rescued ever to Clifton as his own property.

The Nabob decided to show the young Yankee upstart an oriental trick he did not know. While out walking with Miss Abercrombie, Leota was suddenly seized by strong men and hurried away. The latter's assistants communicated with her nephew and told him what had happened. Clifton led his men, who were waiting for the girl's abduction and straightway went to the Nabob's palace and demanded her release. He was thrown into a dungeon for his pains, but subsequently rescuing him there, Leota sinks to the floor, drawing the cross, given her by the missionary, from her bosom and pauses to the Christian God. An old retainer in the palace, noticing the cross, flings to her side and whispers to her that he is secretly of the same faith and that he will help her. Keys are stolen from the cuinch in charge of the dungeon and Clifton is released. While Miss Abercrombie spirits Leota away, the young American literally fights his way out of the palace, through the streets and down the harbor, where the women have preceded him, and there he finally secures protection on board an American steamship bound for the United States.

Leota became a dutiful and lovable wife and long after her Yankee Knight had left behind some husband, both of whom sacrificed ambition and their chosen calling that she might be saved from a life of misery and shame.

FOILING THE CAMORRA.—It remained for the fearless "Italian Sherlock Holmes" to run down the bold and most merciless band of kidnapers ever recorded in the annals of the Black Hand. Headed by a Sicilian camorrist, who had escaped from Italy and became a leader of her bands some husband, both of whom sacrificed ambition and their chosen calling that she might be saved from a life of misery and shame.

New York, this gang of terrorists had been levying blackmail on the wealthy Italian merchant who showed signs of prosperity until the police were thrown into confusion by the succession of bomb explosions and kidnapings which followed which a victim failed to respond.

Finally, a young Italian police lieutenant, Victor Petrosino, began a chance to break up the gang. He was given the opportunity and the story of his wonderful experiences and dangers he encountered, we have told in pictures.

Not only do we show the Italian Sherlock Holmes" fighting against terrible odds at the risk of his life, but the scenes incident to the rescue of the kidnaped children, the capture of the wily Black Hand leader, and the return of the children to their grief-stricken parents, but we illustrate another notable exploit, which leave Petrosio was honored for his daring by the entire Department in the presence of his brother officers and representatives of the press.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?—A waif of the poorer class is secretly adopted by a well-to-do woman who longs for a baby. Her husband, a physician, returns from a sojourn abroad and is told the child is his own, which information he receives joyfully.

At the age of seventeen, the girl has grown to lovable girlhood and is much adored by those whom she believes to be her rightful parents.

Her real father, a depraved and dissolute sot, suddenly appears in the doctor's absence and demands the return of his child. In an effort to rid herself of the wretch, Mrs. Van Sant offers him money. Increasing amounts are refused and again but he is obstinate and clearly indicates he wants the girl to support him. If not with honest toil, then by blackmail, the innocence which he would market to the highest bidder.

The distressed woman, thinking only of saving Millicent from a fate worse than death, and fearing her husband might learn of the deception she has practiced so many years, drugs him with brandy and gives it to the brutal father, apparently conspiring in his scheme, even to pulling him where the young girl is sleeping peacefully in her bed-chamber, then advising him to return for a second day.

On his way out the man reels and falls before reaching the door and Mrs. Van Sant, fearful that her crime will be detected if he dies in the house, summons a physician friend of her husband's and they succeed in reviving him just as Doctor Van Sant returns. The drug is recognized and the poor woman finally decides to confess everything and rely on her husband's good heart for forgiveness.

She is cast off, much to her surprise. Instead of receiving a verdict of approbation. Finally, the distracted woman again visits her sleeping charge and bravely and anguished farewell—silently glides away to the entrance where the doctor keeps his most deadly drugs.

BISON.

AN INDIAN TRAPPER'S PRIZE.—Examining his set traps, Swiftwater is amazed to find that he has caught a beautiful Indian maid. Swanfoot, who, in gathering roots and herbs has grasped upon one of the rabbit traps. Swiftwater frees the girl and carries her to her village, incurring the enmity of Wounded Knee, a suitor of Swanfoot who attacks Swiftwater and is ordered arrested by Long Jingle, chief of the tribe and father of Swanfoot. This merely little romance ends in the wedding of the lovers.

THE CREEK CLAIM.—Driven off his claim by the gambler's wife, a once wealthy prospector is in sore straits. Mrs. Rogers starts to stake the claim by filing the papers with the U. S. office in Long Island. In search of a pick to dig the claim is overtaken by the gambler's wife. By a ruse she persuades the latter to take her to town and quick action foils the gamblers plot.

GREAT NORTHERN.

MR. MUGGINS HAS HIS SEWING DONE.—Muggins feels she wants the sofa and had many delicate and he proceeds to it and do a little mending himself. In sewing a patch to his trousers after making white cotton thick by dipping it in an inkpot, he includes the carpet in the patch. As his performance does not seem very satisfactory, he cogitates upon some better means of getting his sewing done. An idea strikes him and he puts the following advertisement in a newspaper: "Wanted, a wife; must be able to do sewing, and give good references." There was a great many applicants for the position, furnishing numerous amusing complications that will not fail to make just as many laughs.

THE TRIUMPH OF INTELLIGENCE.—Mr Smith has extraordinary hands and shows off to his weaker friend, who has rather a rough time. The friend exercises his ingenuity; brain conquers muscle, and Mr. Smith has to give in.

CHAMPION.

AT THE DOUBLE TROUBLE RANCH.—Rather unenviable is Peter Forge's inference at the Bush-House because of the turbulent and aggressive disposition of his elder son, Bob. The possession of an equally meek and obedient son Charles, might tend to alleviate conditions, but Bob is unbearable at times and Peter rejoices in the opportunity to present his two sons to Widow Walker.

Strangely enough, the same situation prevails in the household of Widow Walker. The elder of the two daughters is the mistress of a terrible temper while is quite a troublesome factor in the maintenance of a peaceful home, and the presentation of Foster's sons is a Godsend towards the riddance of the girls.

It is generally conceded that opposite natures are more likely to meet. Therefore this is upheld when Blossom, the elder and shrew, permits her affections to be gained by Charles, and Bob selects Sally, the younger and compliant sister as a mate.

The unions are effected shortly at one and the same time, following which they install themselves at the Foster's, the household having been partitioned in twain. Bring now free from cares and quarrels. Peter concludes that the widow is a welcome prize. He pops the question, is delightedly accepted, and his happiness is unbridled.

Three happy couples—but—well, after a year's acquaintance, one isn't extra careful of one's choice of language or line of action in the conjugal state; and the ferocity of a risible temperament is not to be supposed by the possessor of a meek or a retiring nature. Bob and Blossom lord it over and predominate in the government of home affairs, and in their exuberance try to direct others, ultimately dig their own pitfall.

Blossom exhorts Sally to throw off the yoke and assume home control as she, Blossom, does, and her advice is to commence at once. Bob counsels Charley in the same tenor, and the uprising results, in a cyclonic outbreak between husband and wife. Astounded by the surprise and suddenness of the upheaval, the erstwhile aggressive lords of home become humble supplicants for mercy. Forgiveness is extended readily, thus in-

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR

S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

THE MOTIOGRAPH MOTION PICTURE MACHINE is destined to become THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE.

DEALERS SEIZE THIS OPPORTUNITY! Some choice territory open, Write us.

DO YOU KNOW our sales for 1910 were 2½ times greater than in previous years

THERE IS A REASON FOR this wonderful increase. THIS GREAT INCREASE IN SALES OF THE MOTIOGRAPH is a result of our policy of giving value received, also it is due to our infinite capacity for taking pains and our purpose to produce THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE. THE MOTIOGRAPH idea combines a thousand details that show some real thinking. The design is remarkable for its beauty and strength, simplicity of operation, accessibility of parts.

NOTHING LIKE IT HAS EVER BEEN OFFERED BEFORE

THE 1911 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH means feature. Some the lettering and name of concern, letter

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agent, 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City — I. H. KEMP, Agent, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif. — J. F. BROCKLISS, Agent, London, Paris and Berlin

FOREIGN SPEAKING MOVING PICTURE MEN

REALIZING that among our readers are many who speak one or more European language and who would undoubtedly find much of interest in some of the foreign Moving Picture Papers, the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be glad to forward the subscriptions of any of its readers for any of the following weekly publications. Yearly rate is given and applies to either new or renewal subscriptions in United States.

Canadian Exhibitors will add 50c. for Postage when ordering Moving Picture World with either of the foreign Papers.

Moving Picture World and Cine-Journal [French]	$4.40
Cine-Journal [only]	2.50
Moving Picture World and either The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly or The Bioscope [British]	$4.00
Either of the British Papers [only]	2.10
Moving Picture World and La Cinematografia Italiana [Italian]	$3.60
La Cinematografia [only]	1.70
Moving Picture World and Nordisk Film Tidning [Swedish]	$3.10
Nordisk Film Tidning [only]	1.20
The Moving Picture World and Der Kinematograph [German]	$5.00
Der Kinematograph [only]	3.15

KINDLY NOTE FOR FUTURE REFERENCE

Moving Picture World

Box 226 Madison Square P. O., N. Y. City

READY FOR DELIVERY

Moving Picture World

BOUND VOLUME, No. 7.

July to December, 1910

TWO DOLLARS EACH, $2.00

Express charges collect

ONE OF THE MANY

R. Oates — WONDERLAND THEATER — F. O. Williams
Oates & Williams, Props.
Licensed by the Motion Picture Company of New York
[illegible] North Lindsey Street
Ennis, Oklahoma, Dec. [illegible]

Chicago Song Slide Exchange,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

Words of Dec. 20th to hand and contents duly noted.

In reply I wish to state that it was the great pleasure to deal with a house of your kind. Most houses would, when their first slides were misplaced, and the customer was on tenters for the answer would not attach their attention.

When your last shipment reached me there was a statement enclosed stating that they had a balance of 6c cents against me. I got no statement for the shipment that I received that day. Now I send you in the amount of 6c cents, and thank you for same. I have had some of your slides for [illegible] and assuming no fault, I have kept a record of your slides, whether used or not. I find that I have used 4,000 times. From now on I am paying for my slides in advance. This is perfectly satisfactory to me and will continue to be so if my shipments are always equal to the last one I received. I am also sending a record of all slips used in my service.

Wishing I were near you, and wishing with a house like you have proven yourself to be I remain my best wishes for prospering business.

Your service is unsurpassed anywhere. I intend to stand with it to the end. It gives me a fine feeling to know that there [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Com.).....392
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.).....695
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.).....396
Jan. 19—The Trail Trifled (Dr.).....989
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.).....998
Jan. 26—The Poor Sick Man (Dr.).....991
Jan. 30—A Woman in Orange Blossoms (Dr.).....995
Feb. 2—Their Second Love (Dr.).....997

EDISON.

Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Scenic).....
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.).....
Jan. 14—The Long Hunt Heir (Dr.).....
Jan. 17—With Interest To Date (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 18—Grandpa's Birthday Gift (Com.).....995
Jan. 21—Mike the Miser (Dr.).....998
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.).....995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.).....995
Jan. 31—Rampageous as Reuben (Com.).....
Aug. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.).....

ESSANAY.

Jan. 10—The Spaniard's Romance (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 13—The Girl of the West (Dr.).....995
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 20—The Border Ranger (Dr.).....995
Jan. 24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Gilded Joker (Com.).....995
Jan. 31—Hawk and Hawk (Com.).....
Feb. 4—Carmencita, The Faithful (Dr.).....995

GAUMONT.

G. Kinée.

Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.).....938
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.).....837
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Scenic).....168
Jan. 21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)..995
Jan. 24—The Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.).945
Jan. 28—The Ruby Fortune Hunters (Dr.).....982
Jan. 28—The Gorges of the Bourne, France (Sc.)293

KALEM.

Jan. 4—The Bolted Door (Dr.).....975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine (Dr.).....995
Jan. 11—For Love Of An Enemy (Dr.).....995
Jan. 13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)1000
Jan. 18—Her Claim's Brother (Dr.).....980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Bloodhound (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.).....950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.).....970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charun (Dr.)..1005

LUBIN.

Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come To This (Com.)...715
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....
Jan. 9—Spring Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....950
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....990
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come To This (Com.)...715
Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.).....250
Jan. 18—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)..975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.).....1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Com.).....1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.).....990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.).....1000

MELIES.

Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.).....980
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scarf (Dr.).....980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L L" Ranch (Dr.).980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.).....980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Dr.).980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.).....

PATHE.

Jan. 23—How Max Went Around the World (Com.).....633
Jan. 23—Gasoline for a Tonic (Com.).....361
Jan. 23—Saved By Telegraph (Dr.).....720
Jan. 25—Whidles' New Sleeve (Com.).....282
Jan. 27—Il Trovadore (Dr.).....964
Jan. 28—Father Against His Will (Dr.).....720
Jan. 28—Betty Boils Along (Com.).....289
Jan. 30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.)1000
Feb. 1—Hearts Hunger Happiness (Com.)..722
Feb. 1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Ind.).279
Feb. 2—The Shave's Revenge (Com.).....722
Feb. 5—Rice Industry in Japan (Ind.).....256
Feb. 6—A Combo's Devotedness (Dr.).....922

SELIG.

Jan. 2—The Argonauts (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 13—The Rival Dramatist (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 16—Buddy (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 26—The Spy (Dr.).....
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider (Dr.).....980

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair (Dr.).....978
Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.).....970
Jan. 11—Wood Carving at Brienz (Ind.).....320
Jan. 18—By The King's Order (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.).....689
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey of the British Isles (Scenic).....296

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Dr.).....
Jan. 20—The Girl in The Film (Com.).....
Jan. 21—Cast Up By The Deep (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Florence's Double (Scenic).....
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Jones Jones in the South Seas.....
Jan. 31—Jean Rescues (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Society and the Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day (Com.).....

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Jan. 16—The Battered Bridegrooms (Com.)....525
Jan. 16—A Dental Disaster (Com.).....450
Jan. 19—The Bonanza King (Dr.).....990
Jan. 23—When A Man's Single (Com.).....1000
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—The Genius (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 2—The Mission In the Desert (Dr.).....
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.).....985
Feb. 9—In the Installment Plan (Com.).....590
Feb. 9—Two Much Aunt (Com.).....495

ATLAS.

Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.).....
Jan. 22—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Hills Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....

CHAMPION

Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.).....950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—Why He Went West (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Fairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Jan. 23—Painless Extraction (Com.).....508
Jan. 23—Kilt The Fly (Com.).....442
Jan. 30—The Emperor's Lunch (Com.).....503
Jan. 30—The Elusive Kiss (Com.).....373
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.).....984
Feb. 13—The Paddlewagg in a Strike (Com.)..528
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery.....424

GREAT NORTHERN.

Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence (Com.).....
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....

IMP.

Jan. 16—Melody.....995
Jan. 23—The Dream (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 26—Sealed Lips (Dr.).....997
Jan. 30—Maid or Man (Dr.).....995
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement (Com.).....500
Feb. 2—Mix-Up (Com.).....500
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—When the Cats Away (Com.).....500

LUX.

Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.).....438
Jan. 20—A Dreadful Mistake (Dr.).....588
Jan. 20—His Faithful Furniture (Com.).....380
Jan. 27—Little Willie Goes Cycling (Dr.)....236
Jan. 27—Infamous Deception (Dr.).....622
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison.")

Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense.....900
Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret.....900
Jan. 24—The Red Man's Wrath.....980
Jan. 27—Trials of Red Brown.....900

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza.....900
Jan. 14—The Recoil.....900
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination.....900
Jan. 21—The Wife's Friend.....500
Jan. 21—A New Kind of an Arm Chair.....500
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture.....900
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty.....900

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 11—Clouds and Ice Fields.....500
Jan. 18—Speedy Failure's Advertisement.....500
Jan. 18—The Blue Domino Disguise.....500
Jan. 25—Tweedledum.....500
Jan. 25—Tweedledum Within a Cask.....500

NESTOR.

Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.).....950
Jan. 13—Their Wedding Day.....
Jan. 25—The Man In 23.....
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—The Transgressor (Dr.).....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Jan. 14—Monte Cristo (Dr.).....
Jan. 17—A Mamma's Love Story (Com.).....
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.).....
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—Wife's Love (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Little Dorothy (Com.).....
Jan. 28—The Masqueraders (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Jan. 14—On Kentucky Soil.....900
Jan. 18—A Country Girl.....900
Jan. 21—The Vows.....900
Jan. 25—For Remembrance.....900
Jan. 28—The Last Image.....900
Feb. 1—A Brass Button.....900
Feb. 4—The Command Unto Galilee.....900

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....500

SOLAX COMPANY.

Jan. 28—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.).....
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Hue Of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 10—The Out (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Mixed Pets (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 17—Bertie's Brainstorm (Com.).....
Jan. 20—The Old Curiosity Shop (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Where Was Blind (Dr.).....
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment (Com.).....
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride (Com.).....
Jan. 31—Only In The Way (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Adrift (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Jan. 20—Returned To The Fold (Dr.).....
Jan. 23—The Cost Is Last Time (Dr.).....
Jan. 27—A Son of Old Glory (Dr.).....
Jan. 31—Jacob Jasper Jessery (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—The Counting House Mystery (Dr.)....
Feb. 6—Foiling the Cameera (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 30.

Biograph—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.).993
Lubin—His Bogus Uncle (Com.).....1000
Pathe—The Escape From the Tuileries (Dr.)..1000
Selig—The Little Circus Rider (Dr.).....

Tuesday, January 31.

Edison—The Try Out (Dr.).....995
Essanay—The Gilded Joker (Com.).....640
Essanay—Hank and Hank (Com.).....336
Gaumont—(Title not given)
Vitagraph—Jean Rescues (Dr.)

Wednesday, February 1.

Edison—Rumptious As Romeo (Com.).....
Kalem—By The King's Order (Dr.).....1000
Pathe—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (Com.)....722
Pathe—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Ind.)..279
Urban—(Title not given)

Thursday, February 2.

Biograph—Three Sisters (Dr.).....997
Lubin—Will It Ever Come To This (Com.).....640
Melies—Only a Sister (Dr.).....
Selig—(Title not given)

Friday, February 3.

Edison—Selling Old Master (Dr.).....
Pathe—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.).....722
Pathe—Rice Industry in Japan (Ind.).....256
Kalem—The Trail of the Pomas Charun (Dr.).1005
Vitagraph—Society and the Man (Dr.).....

Saturday, February 4.

Essanay—Carmencita, The Faithful (Dr.).....995
Gaumont—(Title not given)
Pathe—A Combo's Devotedness (Dr.).....922
Vitagraph—A Queen for a Day (Com.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, January 30.

American—The Genius (Dr.).....1000
Eclair—The Emperor's Lunch (Com.).....603
Eclair—Kilt The Fly (Com.).....373
Imp—Maid or Man (Dr.).....995
Yankee—The Tasteah Mystery (Dr.).....

Tuesday, January 31.

Bison—A Tough Tenderfoot (Com.).....
Powers—(Title not given).
Thanhouser—Only In The Way (Dr.).....

Wednesday, February 1.

Ambrosio—The Return from Seaside Bathing..
Ambrosio—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports...
Atlas—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Champion—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)....
Nestor—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....
Reliance—A Brass Button.....900

Thursday, February 2.

American—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)..
Imp—An Imaginary Elopement (Com.).....500
Imp—The Mix-Up (Com.).....500
Itala—The Coronation of a Villain.....

Friday, February 3.

Bison—A Squit's Bravery.
Lux—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944
Solax—Ring of Love (Com.).....
Thanhouser—Adrift.....
Yankee—The Counting House Mystery (Dr.)..

Saturday, February 4.

Great Northern—The Criminal Chief's Capture (Dr.)
Itala—The Feast of Foolsbrad.....
Powers—(Title not given).
Reliance—The Command from Galilee.....900

Coming Wed. February 8th

An Irish Comedy

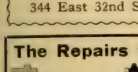
"KELLY U.S.A."

The story of a soldier's life

ATLAS FILM COMPANY

344 East 32nd Street, New York, N. Y.

The Repairs that are TALKED About



Cam Star Arbor and Sprocket	$12.00
Intermittent Sprockets	3.50
Feed Sprockets	2.50
Set of tempered Punches for removing Taper Pins	.50
Mitiol Block to support arbors to keep from springing out of true while pins are being driven in or out.	.50
Two Pin Machines changed to One Pin, etc. Testimonials Furnished.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY

249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 3344 Gramercy

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

DON'T run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition. We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and films come out as good as new. We have several openings for very late service, and if you are interested write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Nelson-Dixon Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knights Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.

MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS
564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.00	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.00	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples — Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
Steel Frame
Theatre Chairs
ABSOLUTELY
Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office; 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office; 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester, Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

"Arco" Biograph CARBONS

None Genuine Unless Stamped "Arco-B"

The Leading Carbon for Motion Picture Machines Made Expressly for the Purpose

Flame Carbons—Enclosed Carbons—Carbons of All Kinds for All Makes of Lamps

WRITE FOR PRICES BEFORE ORDERING ELSEWHERE

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Sole Importers
232-234 Greenwich Street, New York

Uniforms
Stylish
Nobby
Cheap

Coat and Pants like cut $ 11½ as low as $7.50.
Caps, $1.00.

Send for our catalogue of Uniforms and Caps, samples of cloth and prices for measuring ourselves.

R. W. STOCKLEY & CO.
810 West Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Mfrs. of Uniforms and Equipments

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

Concert Pianorchestra

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1818 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

NEW SLIDES

For the following Songs—JUST OUT

For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight. Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams.
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams of You.

De WITT C. WHEELER

120 W. 31st St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers Cameragraph, No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 4405 Madison Square

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good, melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE, 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1st discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

TWO HUNDRED REELS of FILMS for sale. Send for list, including posters. Answer

Box L. A. C.,
Care Moving Picture World.

UNIFORMS
FOR
USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.

We are originators of style and design
Catalogue "M" is ready
The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors west of Broadway

OUR PATENT ELECTRIC REELS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses; you turn a keyboard as a new instrument; it is an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-two Reels, two accessories, illustrated, including reconstruction, organized and keyboards, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

UNIFORMS
AND CAPS
FOR
Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

BIO CARBONS

Let us show you how to get better results

In nine theatres out of ten, better results may be obtained without increased cost simply by a careful selection of Carbons.

It is a well-known fact among Electrical Engineers that a different size of Carbon should be used for every different current, and a different grade for each voltage, if the best results are to be obtained.

In moving picture work the range of voltage at the arc is from 26 to 55 and the range of current is from 15 amperes to 65 amperes.

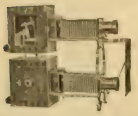
Before the introduction of the BIO Carbon practically only one size and grade was used. Consequently only those exhibitors who happened to have the particular conditions suited to this size and grade were getting perfect results. The rest—a big majority—were simply getting results that seemed satisfactory because they never had the opportunity to see anything better.

Thousands of exhibitors have availed themselves of our services and are now getting better results than they had ever believed possible. Send us the stubs of the carbons you are now burning and we will make a complete report on their suitability for your purposes and send samples of proper carbons free of charge.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

39 Cortlandt St., New York

Largest importers of Flaming Arc Lamps and Carbons in America



DISSOLVING ERK-O-SCOPE A PERFECT STEREOPTICON

Has been used for five years by the most successful Moving Picture Theatres in the country.

Its special features, such as first quality, well ventilated condenser mountings, high light-tight lamp houses, large doors, new centering device and easy carbon feed, place it beyond competition.

Price Complete with Rheostats, $95.00

We make other Dissolving Lanterns from $50.00 up

ERKER BROS, OPTICAL COMPANY, 604 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo

Moving Picture Theatre Supply.

All advertising copy must be in hand not later than Wednesday noon

From the Patrons View Point

What Causes People to continually patronize one Picture Theatre in preference to another? Of course, location, appearances, films, etc. have a great deal to do with it, but quality of the picture is what builds up a steady patronage that makes the business profitable.

This depends largely on your light and if you are using any other device than a to step down your current you are not getting best results.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

With our machine you can produce a clear, white, steady light that won't worry your "house" by continuous flickering and will surprise you with the difference it makes with the films.

It is the only device that can be changed instantly to any of the three intensities without breaking the circuit between adjustments.

But this is not all. We will guarantee that our Compensarc

Will Cut 65% from Your Light Bill and we'll send you one on 30 days' free trial to prove it.

We have a little 22 page booklet that explains all the reasons why If you want a better light at ½ your present cost, send for it today. It's free.

FT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS

1402 Broadway, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

WE OFFER YOU

the cleanest, newest, best and most satisfying

PROGRAM

in America and

WE CAN PROVE IT

14

Reels a Week and each one

A FEATURE!

CLASSY

POSTERS

FREE!

WASHINGTON

Paramount Film Co.

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

Our Machine Helps Pay Your Rent

WE are NOW installing the "Inter-State" THREE slot PENNY vending machine, the most simple, perfect, and efficient slot machine on the market

BEHIND THE CHAIR

Three Kinds of Merchandise in each Machine

BEFORE THE PUBLIC

Gum, Chocolate and Confections 65 Pieces in all

The ONLY slot machine operating on a three chute system that PROTECTS the PUBLIC by refusing to accept coins when empty :-: :-: :-:

SIMPLE to operate, and allows absolutely NO cause for BOX-OFFICE COMPLAINTS COIN SLOTS on the FACE of machine, directly in FRONT of the EYE

We operate under our OWN patents, and offer thorough LEGAL PROTECTION to our customers. We particularly invite your inspection for purposes of comparison regarding

EARNING CAPACITY SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION
EXCELLENCE and PURITY of CONFECTIONS

OUR OFFER { We are willing to make all contracts for installation subject to test and approval. } THIS SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

INTER-STATE VENDING COMPANY

Marquette Bldg.
Chicago, Ill.

Columbia Theater Bldg.
701 7th Ave., New York City

Vol. 8, No. 6 February 11, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

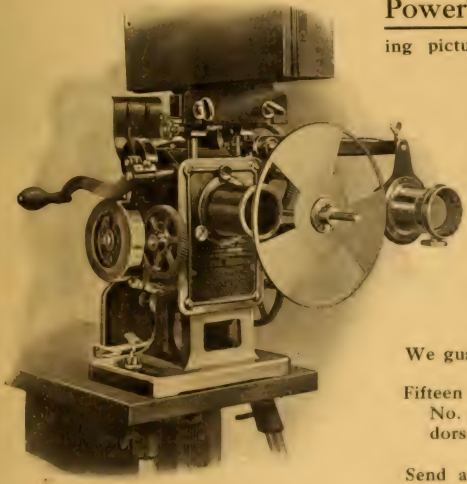
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

THE PERFECT MOVING PICTURE MACHINE

When you buy a moving picture machine, you want to get your money's worth.



Power's No. 6 is the biggest value in moving picture machines ever offered,

BECAUSE

It projects perfect pictures:

It never breaks down:

It will OUTLAST TWO machines of any other make:

We replace free of charge any parts that break or wear out in one year from date of purchase:

We guarantee complete satisfaction:

Fifteen hundred purchasers of the No. 6 in the past year will endorse all we say about it.

Send at once for CATALOG G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines

115-117 Nassau Street New York

OUT TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 21—THE GREAT GEORGE WASHINGTON REEL THE PATRIOT MAID OF '76

Insist Insist Insist Insist Insist Insist

ON

THE THANHOUSER

WO-A-WEEK "2 4 U—AND GOOD ONES, TOO!"

Release of Tuesday, Feb. 14

A "War Story" with a STORY!

FOR HER SAKE

IN this you have the best kind of war subject, that which passes over pretty effects long enough to play up a plot. Certainly, brilliant settings don't make a good war story, although they help a whole lot. But, after all, a stirring theme is the main thing, and it may be worked out in spectacular settings. The beauty of the present theme lies largely in its simplicity. Is there anything simpler to imagine than that the death of a mutual loved one should bring together enemies? With this as the central idea, the picture tells a moral that is worth something. No. 185. Code-word, Sake.

Release of Friday, Feb. 17

"CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE EXPOSED"

"CHECKMATE"

carries a message and a lesson to those who value the "circumstantial evidence" process by which so many convictions are obtained in our criminal courts. The reel demonstrates how easily evidence of this sort may be made to entangle and ensnare a totally innocent man, and how it may leave him without a jot of hope for the vindication that should be his—that will drag his good name, and that of all who claim relationship to him, down into the mire of calumny. So the worth of "circumstantial evidence" is to be carefully weighed and considered by all fair-minded people, and we are glad that this reel will bring some attention to it. No. 186. Code-word, Check.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high), GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For System's sake address ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

OUT TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 21—THE GREAT GEORGE WASHINGTON REEL THE PATRIOT MAID OF '76

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company
EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories
EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company (First release Feb. 16.)
EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thauhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.
EVERY SATURDAY
CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

CALCULATION

The man in business calculates from the time he's up in the morning until he closes his eyes in slumber.

The exhibitor is a sharp calculator. Here's a little calculation for him:

If each one of you feeds the infant monopoly the financial nourishment for which it is wholly dependent on you, how long will it be before the monopoly outgrows your combined power and makes YOU dependent on IT?

As a matter of cold business calculation the solution is that you must seek means of escape from the menace N O W.

THE SOLUTION

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company

111 E. 14th St., New York City

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4th

The Criminal Chief's Capture

A meritorious detective story with many exciting and exceedingly thrilling situations. A story full to the brim of real action. Photography unexcelled.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11th

Found Again

A well acted dramatic story of theatrical life.

The Bear-on-the-globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Now Get These Two

"IMPS"

"HER DARKEST HOUR"

(Released Monday, Feb. 13)

Those exhibitors who know the drawing power of "Little Mary" will be delighted to learn that she appears in almost every foot of this splendid reel! It is a story of a girl, her efforts to make a living, her troubles and her final happiness—a story so very simple, so direct and so human that it will strike a responsive chord in the heart of every man, woman and child: Make a note of the release date and begin right now to make arrangements to get "Her Darkest Hour."

"THE CONVERT"

(Released Thursday, Feb. 16)

This is great! It is intensely dramatic. It deals with a young lieutenant and his sweetheart; the lieutenant is sent to the Philippines and is erroneously reported dead. His broken hearted fiancee enters a convent and takes the vows. The lover returns. And from that point onward the action will simply enthrall the most calloused moving picture "fan." Imp films are supreme in every point. See that you get them, not occasionally, but every blessed week—and twice each week.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

Solax

GET THE BEST FILM MADE NEXT FRIDAY

AND I'LL GUARANTEE YOU THE BEST AND FUNNIEST PICTURE RELEASED SO FAR THIS YEAR. WE HAVE DECIDED TO RELEASE THIS EXTRAORDINARY PICTURE

"MIXED PETS" Feb. 10th in place of "PUT OUT as previously advertised

RELEASED FEB 17th
in place of "MIXED PETS"

CORINNE IN DOLLYLAND
(comedy)

Little Corinne falls asleep over her wooden toys. In her dream these toys are brought to life. She sees the little dolls and animals in the circus ring doing all sorts of acrobatic stunts. This unique picture is characteristically SOLAX---something novel, interesting and laughable.

Scene from "MIXED PETS" not reproduced

RELEASED FEB. 24th

LOVE'S TEST
(drama)

To test her love for him he tells her he has lost all and will not be able to keep her in luxury. She proves to be true-blue, however, and they take up their abode in Poverty Row. After proving to his entire satisfaction her love for him they again take up the life of luxury and ease, happy in the knowledge of each other's true love.

SOLAX COMPANY, 147 Fourth Avenue, Cor. 14th Street, New York City

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

GEORGE WASHINGTON THOUGHT INDEPENDENCE WORTH FIGHTING FOR. IF YOU cannot get it otherwise, we want you to fight for this week's Lux and we believe you ought to fight for Lux every week. It will pay you.

Release, Friday, February 10th, 1911

The Orphan's Friend. Drama—711 feet
A pathetic little drama that will please every one in your audience, but especially the children and all lovers of man's dumb friend, the dog.

That Horse Did Run. Comedy—212 feet
A truck comes with action, thrills and laughs that will bring the tears. See the "chase" in this, it is a sure cure for the blues.

A Split Reel of Quality and Variety for the Best Programs.

GET LUX

SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone, 4427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

HAVE YOU BOOKED IT?

The Famous Buffalo Jones Pictures

Lassoing Wild Animals

IN AFRICA

A Unique and Sensational Picture, Showing the Capture of Lions, Giraffes, Rhinoceroses, Cheetahs, Zebras and other Wild and Dangerous Animals of the African Jungle, without the use of Deadly Weapons

NOTHING USED BUT THE LASSO

Rights to Exhibit this Picture Have Been Acquired by the Licensed Manufacturers. The Pictures are Made and Marketed by Pathe Freres.

LENGTH, 2,000 FEET. RELEASED SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1911

GET IN TOUCH WITH YOUR EXCHANGE TODAY

DON'T MISS THIS, THE GREATEST FEATURE of the YEAR

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 20th

"The Heart of a Warrior"
683 FEET
A Stirring Tale of a Great Love, Triumphant over all Despair—Every Scene a Heart Throb—As Tender as it is Strong!!.

2 on One

"Hospital for Small Animals"
286 FEET
A Most Interesting Subject—Something Quite Out of the Ordinary!!!

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price:

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film..... $2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50

Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00

Next Show in Five Minutes—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats so Others Can See? 20 ft.
Hand Colored, Trick Film - $3.00
(Same Black and White) - 2.00

Send for price on our 1- A Film Coupon.

French American Producing and Manufacturing Co.
918 Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

In Answering Advertisers Kindly Mention
Moving Picture World

The Perfecto Calcium Light is the Light for You

It is the Cheapest and Best
$25.00 Complete with Burner.

About ¼ the cost of others. But that is not all. The chief feature is the low cost of maintaining it. It costs far less to maintain the Perfecto than any other calcium light on the market, and it produces a steadier and brighter light. If you must use a calcium light, your ideas of a Calcium Gas making outfit will be better realized in the Perfecto than in any other. You get a brighter, steadier light for less money per hour and the initial cost is about ¼ the cost of others. It is a boon to the traveling exhibitor and all users of portable lights.

Write for more particulars or will ship C. O. D. upon receipt of deposit. Prize complete with burner, $25.00.

THE P. & W. SALES COMPANY
Temple Court Building, Chicago, Ill.

The Spirit of '76 Overthrew the Yoke of a King Who Was Not A NOBLE MAN

"A Heroine of '76 [Our First Release, Thurs. Feb. 16th] Marks the Coronation of A Real Blue-Blooded King of Film---Rex

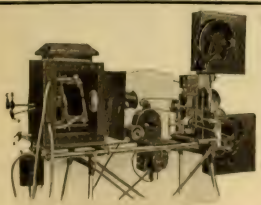
A REPRODUCTION OF ONE CONVINCING INCH OF

"A HEROINE of '76"

There are 909 feet and 11 inches more of the same calibre. If it doesn't make you enthusiastic we'll eat the Reel. Order now in order to get it, or you're out of order.

MR. EXHIBITOR:— Just say "Rex" to the Exchangeman and he'll pass the password to the Sales Co. Then you'll get it,—and the business.

Rex Motion Picture Manufacturing Company
573-579 Eleventh Avenue NEW YORK CITY



THE "STANDARD"

The Machine That Gives Results

FULLY GUARANTEED

Our entire output sold in the United States. Orders for one hundred and thirty machines from one concern in past two weeks. Don't be misguided by flaring advertisements. We are not handling play-things. Just a big, solid, durable machine. Write for Catalogue W, giving full particulars.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY
101 BEEKMAN STREET - - - - - NEW YORK

THE PATRIOT MAID OF '76.—Thanhouser Washington's Birthday Release.

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (1⅜ in wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 FEBRUARY 11, 1911 No. 6

Reform the Individual

Every so often a wave of pious indignation moves to action the numerous Civic Betterment Societies of all sorts against the moving picture. The moving picture is a standby of the reformer. Somebody will write a scourging article in some magazine that has a wide circulation and immediately upon the heels of it come a thousand echoes in the shape of articles by persons who have read the original one, and have used it as their evidence. Then moving pictures are denounced roundly and soundly. We are told again with wearisome infinity how the moving picture is debauching the child mind; how children are made thieves; how they are made immoral, and all the rest of the horrid things that can happen to a child, besides the measles, the scarlet fever and the whooping-cough. Moving pictures are to blame for all these, and, therefore, should be abolished, is the cry. Or if not abolished, regulated, censored or tinkered in some way to render them "antiseptic."

* * *

In all this cry against moving pictures, we hear very little direct, specific complaint against any one person in the business. Criticism is usually general. They seldom mention names in denouncing this dangerous pastime. They generalize. In speaking to reformers on this topic, before now, we have asked these guardians of public morals why, if such a terrible state of things exist, they do not make some arrest and attack the problem from an individual standpoint. Meaning by that, that there may possibly be some exhibitors who are not fit to be in the moving picture business, but that there are many more in the business who are gentlemen and perfectly safe to be trusted with any one's children for an hour or more.

* * *

The usual reply from these moral brethren is that the moving picture is too great, too large, to ever hope to regulate by keeping tab on any one individual in the business. We are reminded by them that in every city there are many moving picture theatres, and that throughout the nation there are at least 10,000 moving picture houses which would render it practically impossible for them to treat with the individual as such and therefore they are obliged to attack the business as a whole, while they piously deprecate the fact that the innocent must suffer with the guilty, which, alas, is no fault of theirs, etc.

We have been thinking a little about that matter of individual regulation of theatres or their managers, and to us it does not appear that the individual regulation of theatres would be such a monumental task as would seem at first glance. For instance: There are infinitely more saloons in every city than there are moving picture shows. These, while not strictly regulated in every community, come nearer to being treated individually than the moving picture shows. In some communities only a certain number of saloons are allowed, and the character of the proprietor must be well vouched for before he can secure a license. But saloons are not a fair criterion to judge by.

* * *

Let us take the matter of divorce. In our courts every case must be heard specially, and its merits and demerits gone over thoroughly by a high-salaried judge who is retained by the community for that purpose. In the city of New York there is a court known as the Court of Domestic Relations that has been created for the sole purpose of regulating domestic discord. As many as 100 cases per week have been adjusted in this court, and it is safe to say that during a year at least 2,500 cases are heard at length in this court.

* * *

Now, there is no city on the face of the earth that has as many as 2,500 moving picture shows. New York, at a very liberal estimate, has no more than 500; therefore, to investigate the entire number of New York managers would take a comparatively short time. We have special courts for children where each child's case is taken up, and considered at length, and if necessary, the child is sent to an institution which is built to take care of individual cases of neglected children. In other words the community actually pays the board of orphan children, but cannot investigate its theatre managers individually.

* * *

Every blind man is looked after by the city or county. He is given food and clothing, and attendants are paid to look after him. Lunatics also are housed and fed and attended by the county. Then take for instance a horse on the street; let a driver beat that horse, and immediately there springs into view some officer of the Humane Society who is ready to make an individual case of the matter and prosecute it to the utmost. Let a child appear upon a stage in the city or State of New York, and at once an agent from the Children's Society puts in his appearance, arrests the manager, and takes the child into his custody, paying its board, etc., making each case an individual matter.

* * *

These cases cited above are so numerous and require such a vast amount of money to carry on, that it is surprising how it is ever done so well as it is. Yet, when it comes to weeding out the undesirable showman, it seems an appaling job to every community. There are only a handful of picture makers in America. They could be easily prosecuted if they were such a menace as people are led to believe. But they are not arrested and prosecuted for a very good reason which will appear later in this article. The United States Government is relentless in its pursuit of counterfeiters and bank wreckers. They will send detectives to any corner of the earth to bring back the man they are after. The Federal authorities never tire in their determined pursuit of a postal thief. There are always state police and city police from our different cities in America on the high seas, some bound to foreign countries after fugitives (Detective Petrosino for instance) or returning from far off lands with prisoners.

* * *

All of these cases which are here touched upon are individual matters. A thief is pursued around the world. They make an individual case of each one and there are thousands of them, yet when it is found that there is a man running a picture show who is a menace to the community and in league with the white slave traffic, it does not seem possible to arrest him as an individual and close up his place as a disorderly house. This is because of the exaggerated idea that there are too many picture houses to regulate. So, instead of that, they condemn them all, the good with the bad; the fit with the unfit.

* * *

Every operator, to run a moving picture machine must be examined individually by the city. This is a very easy matter. They examine him for his character and his knowledge and if he looks like a "degenerate," he will certainly not get a license. Logically then, there must be one manager to every operator, and yet it seems utterly impossible for the authorities or the Civic Society to investigate the personality of a manager, the same as they do with an operator. We are sure that the reader will agree with us that there is a great deal of "poppycock" about the whole thing.

* * *

We spoke a paragraph or two back about a very good reason why the exhibitor is not examined as an individual. The reason is analogous, in a way, to a true story as to why the North Pole was not discovered for so many years. We knew an exploring gentleman who went several times with a well-known Arctic explorer in quest of the North Pole. He said they made several trips without success, and then with a sly twinkle in his eye admitted that there were many fishing smacks that went further north every year than they did with their expedition. We ventured if that was the case, why should not the North Pole have been discovered long ago. In reply he said, "We don't want to discover the North Pole. It is too good a graft. The minute we discover the North Pole, there will be no more money in going up north exploring." Thus with moving picture reformers. It is too good a graft. Just as soon as moving pictures are regulated to the satisfaction of everybody, there will be no more money in it for certain parties.

Hunting With the Camera.

In our issue of September 10th we printed an article on "Cherry Kearton and His Work," the mighty hunter with the camera who trailed the Roosevelt party and also the Buffalo Jones party through the wilds of South Africa. The Roosevelt pictures have had their day. It was lucky for the purchasers of the negative that the Roosevelt series was released while the Colonel was in the heyday of his popularity. With the Buffalo Jones series it is different. Buffalo Jones is as popular today as he ever was, only more so. He is besieged on all hands by offers from wealthy globe-trotters to organize hunting expeditions, and he informs us that it is very likely that he will soon start out again at the head of a hunting expedition. The Roosevelt pictures showed a mighty hunter in his exploits of bagging game. Nothing remarkable, nothing particularly interesting. The Buffalo Jones pictures have, however, a value peculiar to themselves alone. They show the mastery of the wildest four-footed animals of the forest by man, unarmed.

We were present as the guests of the Press Club on Friday evening, September 16, 1910, when an exhibition of the complete pictures he had obtained was given by Mr. Kearton to Colonel Roosevelt, who was the special guest at the Club. Following the exhibition of the Roosevelt pictures, Mr. Kearton showed on the screen, at the request of Mr. Roosevelt, a section of the Buffalo Jones pictures. It is to the credit of the ex-President that, when the Buffalo Jones pictures flashed off the screen, Roosevelt arose, and, going over to where Buffalo Jones was sitting, slapped him on the shoulder and said, "Great; I did not believe it was possible that a man could tackle these wild animals with nothing but the lasso in truly wild Western style." He then addressed the assemblage as follows, which is a notable commendation of the Buffalo Jones pictures:

"I think I can say that I am acquainted with all notable lion hunts from the days of Tiglath-Pileser to the present time, and I speak with absolute accuracy when I say that in all that period there has been so much feat as that, the portrayal of which we have witnessed to-night, and, above all, no such feat as the portrayal itself. To tackle those beasts with the rifle is one thing, but to tackle them with the rope the way that Buffalo Jones and those two cow-punchers—those two New Mexican cow-punchers—did it, is a perfectly marvelous feat.

"I was out in Africa when word was brought to us that Buffalo Jones and the two cow-punchers were coming out there to rope the animals. Everybody laughed at the thought. They didn't believe that there was any seriousness in the proposal. I said, 'You don't know those cow-punchers, and there is nothing they will not try to rope.' I did not believe they could accomplish the feat. I didn't believe it possible to rope a lion or a rhinoceros as they did, and to have caught their pictures with a cinematograph is a thing that has never before begun to be approached. You have witnessed a really phenomenal record of a really phenomenal feat, and I congratulate Mr. Kearton with all my heart on what he has done, and I congratulate Buffalo Jones and the cowpunchers."

The negative has been very largely improved upon in the laboratory of Pathe Freres at Bound Brook, N. J., where the work of printing has been going on for some time, and the whole has been cut down to 2,000 feet of the most interesting, entrancing and exciting pictures ever thrown upon the screen.

Sacramento, Cal.—Local exhibitors have agreed to donate the receipts of several performances to aid the City Mission in clearing a debt of $600 which has been hanging over the institution for a long time.

Marquette, Mich.—For the second time a jury disagreed in the case of C. S. Sullivan, proprietor of the Royal Moving Picture Theater, who is under indictment for giving Sunday shows in violation of the law. The people of the town want Sunday shows, but two of the local ministers do not. A case of "Simon says thumbs up." It is not believed that a jury can be secured that will convict.

Cutting Off the Heat Rays.

Those of our older readers, who are familiar with optical lantern slide projection, will remember that in the earlier days, there was devised a simple method for cutting out that part of the light which heated the slide. Formerly it was known that the spectrum was divisible into two parts, the actinic part, and the heat rays. The actinic end of the spectrum, of course, is the blue violet; the heat rays so called, are the orange, red and infra-red rays. Of course in modern times, different views of the properties of various parts of the spectrum prevail, and chemists and physicists no longer talk of heat rays.

But, at any rate, the phenomenon exists, and the result is that even the rays from the electric arc produce a considerable amount of heat. Years ago when oil, gas or lime-light were employed in projecting slides—of course we write before the era of the moving picture—a trough containing a solution of potash alum was often placed in the path of the light. This alum solution absorbed the heat rays, so that, when the light had gone through this solution, it was cooler in temperature. This idea was first put forth by the Rev. J. B. Reade in the year 1838. Some such idea may be worth attention in these days of moving picture projection, if it is found desirable to diminish the heat from the arc that impinges on the film.

This article is suggested by an article in the "Literary Digest" for January the 28th, which gives a translation from an article in La Nature, Paris, in which a French inventor is credited with devising a means of projecting pictures by "cold" light. In drawing our attention to it, a correspondent asks for further particulars. No doubt if the device is made commercial, it will find its way on the market. Meanwhile, the inventor is said to use "a light that flickers so rapidly as to be steady to the eye, yet remains dark enough between its luminous periods to cool off completely." According to the description:

> "M. Dussaud does away with the projecting lantern, simply placing a double lens before and behind the positive slide. Back of this he puts his 'cold-light box,' which contains a metallic-filament bulb operated by a small strong battery with a commutator that breaks the current periodically. This discontinuous current determines in the filament 'pulsations,' during each of which it becomes luminous. The periods of brightness succeed one another so rapidly that this 'pulsative light, appears absolutely steady to the observer's eye. Besides, as a consequence not less important, the lamp filament rests during each interruption of the current, and according to the inventor's theory, the slight heat that it has acquired during the working period has time to disappear. Thus, a current of lower than normal tension may be sent through the lamp without causing continued heating that would volatilize the filament."

The above description is applicable to lantern slides. In using the idea for moving pictures, "two bands of pictures are used, containing alernate views; while one is on the screen, the other is dark, thus keeping the light cool while the pictures appear so rapidly as to seem continuous." The invention, it is said, has also great significance in connection with color photography, though we fail to see how this can be. Those of our readers who are further interested in this idea are referred to "The Literary Digest" of January 28th for fuller particulars.

Of course in the practical sense, it seems to us that there is no great call for such an invention, because, the light is allowed to impinge on the picture for such a short space of time that it can hardly cause it much damage.

* * *

A moving picture has been taken of a real duel between two French editors. The prayer for more comedies has been answered.

Aerial Projection.

Ever since the lantern slide was made popular by optical projection on a plain white surface, such as a whitened wall, or the familiar fabric screen, attempts have been made to improve the roundness, the relief, or the stereoscopic effect of the picture. For this purpose, metal surfaces consisting of silver or other substances have been used.

What applies to the ordinary lantern slide in this connection, applies, in greater or less degree, to the moving picture. Hence it is that we have the Mirror Screen and the Simpson Solar Screen, both of which are designed to heighten the effect obtainable. It is probable that much remains to be done in experimental work of this nature. It is not generally known that even the clouds themselves, may be, and indeed have been, used for the purpose of projecting a lantern image at night. Of course the clouds, or the vapor of which they are composed, must be tolerably near the earth, and it is plain that a good long throw is necessary. This is merely an experiment of curiosity, hardly practicable for moving picture purposes. Nevertheless, it may interest the reader to know that it has been done.

What the effect would be like in an ordinary theater, however, is open to conjecture. We believe that suspended strands of fibrous fabric have been used, the image being received on a series of lines, so to speak, which add relief to the picture. Indeed, this very idea was suggested to us recently for the purpose of getting a stereoscopic-like effect in moving pictures on the screen. Black and white line threads it was argued gave greater relief.

There is no doubt that by projecting a picture on an intaglio surface, that is, a surface not dead smooth, but broken up, much like the cross line screen, used in photo engraving, heightens the effect of relief, and does away with the flatness complained of in the moving picture. Of course this flatness depends very largely upon the nature of the film. If the scene photographed was comparatively distant from the lens as well as the characters in the scene, then you would get comparative flatness. If, however, as is mostly the case, figures or objects are tolerably near the camera, then the projection of the moving picture imparts a sense of apparent stereoscopicity. With subjects like that you do not need any special thing in the way of screens for heightening the illusion of relief. Let us illustrate what we mean by referring to page 248 of the World for last week. There you have some cuts illustrating a Great Northern film, entitled "The Son of the Executioner." Note the composition of these pictures. You have figures right in the immediate foreground. The stage, in fact, is well filled. When these pictures are projected on the screen you will have the effect of relief, almost of reality, the figures and horses standing out so markedly.

It will be seen, then, that provided a picture and its composition are satisfactory, you do not need much artificial aid to heighten its stereoscopic effect, though the Solar Screen and the Mirror Screen certainly perform a useful office in heightening up the picture.

We write this article without prejudice to any method that may be before the public for brightening the life-like effect of the picture.

Two hundred Italian track hands went Strondsburg, Pa., on a strike because they were taken out of range of any moving picture shows. Viva Mova da patch!

* * *

At last report they were still passing moving picture laws at Los Angeles. Los Angeles boasts of more moving picture laws than any city in the world.

Too Much Acting.

By C. H. Claudy.

There is a growing cry against poor acting before the camera. The motion picture is unquestionably in the process of a swift evolution. It has changed so much for the better in the last few years, producers have striven so hard and so successfully to improve scenes, plots, stories and pantomime that it is fair to believe the ultimate result will be as far beyond the results of today, as a well-told story delineated by Pathe, Edison, Vitagraph, Biograph, Kalem, etc., today is beyond those earliest dramas of a decade ago.

But—and it's a big But—no one ever gets anywhere without criticism. The trouble with the criticism of moving picture dramas is not that there isn't plenty of it (the Lord forbid!) But that it isn't always intelligent criticism. As in Washington, D. C., where half a dozen prominent men have undertaken to give their views to a daily paper about the motion picture houses and their shows, many rush in to criticism who know absolutely nothing about the game at all. These worthy gentlemen, educated, clever, holding positions of trust and responsibility, have, nevertheless, no knowledge of photography, little of acting and less, apparently, of plot. Health officers and Directors of schools may be expert in their lines and still not know a good picture from a poor one. But this is by the way.

Much unintelligent criticism is directed towards the so-called "poor acting."

"We want better character work—give us actors and actresses who are not sticks—who can display human feeling—who act their parts" say these.

With perhaps no more license to criticise than any one else, it yet seems to the present scribe that what is wanted is not so much better acting and better actresses and actors, as less of it! Many a picture play is spoiled for the man who really knows good acting when he sees it, by the overdoing of a part in the picture. Producers have argued to themselves—"we have everything but color and speech. Color we can disregard, having good photography and plenty of tonal value, as well as infinite pains in details to make the scenes lifelike. Speech we can make up with pantomime. And the result is that in the effort to "get the plot over"—push it off the screen and ram it down the throats of the members of the audience, we have pantomime done to death.

To particularize. And no offense is meant to any one, and let me say that for these criticisms I went to the nearest picture shows several days running and made notes of what happened to be shown. No film here named is picked out above any other film for criticism save for the sole reason that I happened upon it.

Kalem recently released "Big Elk's Turn Down." It is a simple story of an Indian, Big Elk, who first tries to buy Mabel, a trapper's daughter, and, after being refused, raids her home, and carries her off. He leaves her guarded in a tepee, she is sentenced to death and tied to a stake to be burned in Big Elk's absence, he returns and rescues her and again puts her in the tepee whither she escapes. She gets in a canoe, is pursued and finally rescued by father and lover.

These may have been French Indians. But no other kind of Indians that the popular mind conceives, ever gesticulated so violently, so rapidly, so much. They lose all dignity, all realism, when they spend most of their time with their arms in the air! The unreality of any Indians condemning a young and lovely girl to death, is obvious, and needs no criticism. It was a part of the story, apparently, simply to lengthen the reel, and as such, perhaps, necessary. But, why do Indians never guard the back of their tepees? I don't know how many escapes I have seen under, through and around the backs of unguarded tepees!

Mabel was well done, mostly. But Mabel, like every other character in every moving picture play ever staged, who has to run across or through the scene, pursued or pursuing, stops, after she has made her escape, sways back and forth about a tree, then dashes on. The father and lover, when starting for the rescue from their cabin door, exhibt the same characteristic. Lover examines tracks, raises hands to heaven and flies. Father shakes gun in air, waves arms violently about head, loses several seconds in, apparently, calling heaven to witness what he's going to do to 'em and then, he flies. The Indians, who, of course, discover Mabel's escape the instant she makes it, though she had time to get away safely enough, also gather together, point, raise arms to heaven, and then run! They do too much acting. They try too hard with pantomime to "get it over." They don't leave anything for the intelligence of the audience, although what, in the name of Thespis, the producers intend the audience to understand by this never neglected pause, hands in the air, and slight stagger, followed by a swift crouching run, no one knows. Desperate Desmond barnstorming fifty years ago had the same motion!

Well, when Mabel gets the canoe, she finds no paddles. She doesn't step into the canoe and push off, as any normal human being would, if she wanted to get away, she falls in and snuggles down. Leaves on the water and bubbles, show it to be a stationary pool. But the canoe obligingly whirls away in the "current" which is so evidently a string as to be funny.

The Indians have no trouble finding paddles for the other canoe, nor of catching up with Mabel. Indians are supposed, usually to be pretty fair with the paddle. But the way those three mismanage their paddles and the canoe would do credit to a beginner. To a canoeist, "it is to laugh." They are in so much of a hurry they forget that any one in the audience may have ever seen a canoe before . Finally, to cap the climax, the lover, from the shore, shoots all three Indians with one shot—at least the canoe tips over and they all disappear, whereupon he swims out to Mabel and tows her back again! I'm not quite sure whether this is altogether too much acting, now that I've written it—it seems as if it might be just a bit too little common sense on the producer's part!

Not infrequently the producing company is badly at fault in putting up to their often very capable companies, situations so unnatural, that no matter how hard they try, pathos is the result. Take, for instance, Pathe's "The Stigma" a playlet so full of contradictions and nonsense that one is more than surprised to see the yellow rooster tacked onto it. A burglar who burgles in a room so light that every object is plainly visible, a room light enough to make a photograph, and one which is indicated to be dark only by a blue-green dye, can hardly be excused for crashing into the furniture or for staggering around at express-train speed. If it's dark, he would feel his way cautiously. It it isn't dark, he wouldn't blunder into everything, thus bringing back the ocupants of the room to discover him.

The poor devil of a paroled convict who cannot get work because of being a jail-bird is intended as a pathetic figure. His discouragement is so great that he shrugs his shoulders and uses a tragedian's walk with every step he takes. No wonder he is discouraged, when the same police who have liberated him for good behavior, inform his employers that he is a jail-bird! So contradictory a course would discourage anyone!

Again, Lubin's recent Clown and Minister production, not only strains, but absolutely busts wide open the audience's credulity! It is very lovable and nice of him to take the clown's place on the boards because otherwise the cowboys would "shoot up the place" but, in heaven's name, why do either clown or minister care if they do shoot up the place? Both are concerned with the child sick at the minister's house, yet both care so much for the manager's despairing message that the minister dons the clowns rig and—makes a failure of the part.

As for the sick baby—who ever heard of putting a child, ill unto death with fever, into bed, with all her clothes, even her shoes on, and covering her up with quilts? Who, furthermore, ever heard of a doctor, able to bring so ill a baby through so dangerous a crisis as this is intended to be, who, five minutes later, would allow a horde of cowboys to come into the room, and present her with money, pistols, and such?

It is but another attempt to get something out of nothing—to manufacture a story, out of material which won't hold the water of possibility, let alone probability.

As for the fights which take place on the screen, the high-priced actors which some of the best producers employ seem a little too careful of their skins. One sees too much 'punching him in the jaw" which is obviously only a punch in the shoulder and much, much too sudden droppings to the floor in a cold knockout, from a blow that would merely irritate a good healthy mosquito. In this I must take off my hat to the Champion Film Company—in "How the Tenderfoot Made Good" they put up one of the loveliest scraps any one would want to see. A cowboy pours some water down the tenderfoot's back and he goes for him, good and hard. The resulting fight is so full of realism that it brings the audience right up on its feet. They really fought, these two men, and there wasn't the immediate, "virtue-triumphant, vice-laid-in-the-dust" result which so often offends the eye and taste. Also, it's a great comfort to see a fight which is a fight with nature's weapons once in a while instead of this everlasting pistol popping, with the guns carefully elevated to the upper air so the flame won't hurt any one!

There is entirely too much sameness in heroes on the screen. Heroines get away with it a lot better—the feminine stars, of the Florence Lawrence caliber, seem much more numerous than their male vis-a-vis. It is seldom that any male actor puts enough character into his interpretation to be remembered. A striking exception must be noted here; the man who was "Little Boy" grown up, in Selig's production of that name was both original and clever. There was nothing particularly attractive about his nervousness, or the way he continually jerked at his collar and "perked" his chin, but he did manage to "get across" the idea that here was a young man of a highly organized nervous system, one who would take a disaster calmly and go all to pieces over it later. One who would be cool and calm under stress, and give way to choking passion, afterwards which was exactly what he did do! The point to be noted is that he gave his character with his actions, before he had those actions to perform. By the same token, let us give praise where praise is due and say that his mother in this same production was very unusual. She looked like a mother, not like a show girl dressed up—and she aged her necessary twenty years so that she looked twenty years older, which is a mighty hard thing to do, and get away with. If the actions are aged the make-up is visible—if the make-up is good the passing years have, apparently, not affected walk, gesture or actions, all too often. In this Selig mother both have been done far and away ahead of the average.

A case in point is Vitagraph's "Her Adopted Parents" an unusually well acted, clever, simple, pretty little play, of the "homey" variety. The little old lady—frail to the point of blowing away, acted her part. But to those who see Vitagraph plays often—and they are almost always worth seeing—the little lady who plays the young girl in so many plays, was too plainly evident under her wig and make up. She acted old and looked the little girl dressed like Grandma.

Failure to have Letitia a young and extraordinarily handsome young woman was clever. No reflections on either the age or appearance of Letitia are intended—she looked the part she took, of a well-along spinster and her actions were as good as her looks. It seems to the present scribe as if producers are arriving at the point where they recognize that there can be too much beauty on the stage—that some characters are better for a human homeliness. When they also find out that the average audience is about ten times as intelligent as it is supposed to be, and that it isn't necessary for a lover to grab his vitals and grin like a Cheshire cat to show he is in love, or a woman to tie her face into a vapid smile and suck her diamond to show she is pleased at getting a ring, and all the rest of the timeworn, worked-to-death pantomime, laid down by rule as expressing certain things, the sooner they will get to the real picture play, which looks like the real thing.

Yes, they do it sometimes—No, most emphatically no, they don't do it often. The picture plays which will stand critical examination of acting, of scenes, of accessories, of plot and of photography, all five, are few, very few and far between. Audiences, like producers, are in a chrysalistic stage. But they are learning, and learning fast. Just as the tank drama is less and less a money-making proposition as the years roll by and bring good plays to the fore at small expense, so is the tankily-acted picture play, if I may coin such a word, getting less and less approval. The much simpler production, with a much less involved plot, but with that plot carried out with force, feeling and natural gestures, is growing in popularity.

Scene from
"HER THREE PROPOSALS"
Champion Release for Wednesday, February 15, 1911

THE "IMP" STOCK COMPANY.

We reproduce here an excellent photograph of the Imp Stock Company, which was taken expressly for the purpose of giving the trade a glimpse of this well known company of players in their every day habiliements. They are all well-known to thousands of lovers of moving pictures all over the world for their excellent work, whether in character or straight part. There is little need of much comment as this excellent picture speaks for itself and there is little else for us to do except add their names: First row—Geo. L. Tucker, David Miles, Mrs. Smith, W. R. Dailey, T. Gaudio; Second row—W. E. Shea, Mrs. David Miles, F. MacDonald, H. S. Mack, Mrs. F. MacDonald, W. Harvey; Third row—Thos. Ince, Owen Moore, Mary Pickford, King Baggot, Jos. Smiley, Isabel Rae, John Pickford, Lottie Smith.

EXPLORATION AND THE PICTURE.

Mr. Paul Rainey, the multi-millionaire traveler, leaves this week for a trip through the far East. He will be accompanied by Mr. J. C. Hemment, the well-known photographer, of New York City, who will have charge of the making of moving pictures illustrating the trip.

It will be remembered that Mr. Rainey, recently returned from a trip to the Arctic regions, on which occasion moving pictures of Arctic life and incidents were made by Mr. Hemment, Jr. These pictures have been recently shown at Washington and New York City, Mr. Rainey having lectured to them.

It is worthy of note that no great traveler nowadays ventures on a distant journey without being accompanied by the moving picture camera. This is a fact that is all to the credit of moving picture photography. Ignorant people ascribe to the moving picture camera the reputation of being only a means of providing cheap amusement for small children. The moving picture, as we are constantly pointing out in these pages, has far higher uses, and the spreading of a knowledge of remote parts of the earth is one of them.

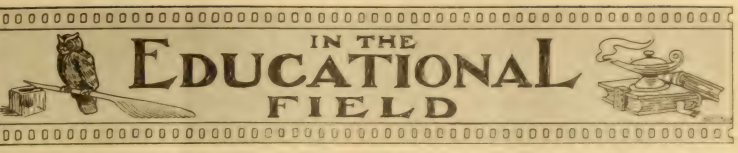
The Mayor of Indianapolis on Sunday Opening.

"I can go to church in the morning and attend a moving picture show in the afternoon," said the mayor, "and feel that I have committed no moral wrong.

"As long as I am mayor I do not intend to insist on the enforcement of the usual vocation law. Why, I know poor devils who get up before daylight and get home after night. The only chance they have to get on a starched shirt is on Sunday, and they want some amusement. You can't legislate those fellows into church, and I am in favor of them having a little amusement."

The mayor was reminded that the employees of moving picture theaters must work on Sunday so that others may have enjoyment.

"Well," said the mayor, "I guess those fellows knew what they were doing when they accepted the jobs. Street car and railroad men have to work on Sunday, and so do many others. A delegation not long ago insisted that Superintendent of Police Hyland stop the milk wagons on Sunday. I would sooner step down and out of my office than attempt the enforcement of any blue laws or the usual vocation act."



THE KINEMATOGRAPH IN FUTURE EDUCATION.

"I see so tired of those pictures ..." This comment was made by an invalid boy concerning the pictures hanging on the wall in his room. When asked why he was tired, he said: "Because they don't move; they are always the same." So we see that a monotony is manufactured out of the pictures with lights and reflectors brought about the magic lantern, and as subsequent developments. What a truth is revealed in this childish experience. Here the growing mind seeks a greater development of those things around it. No matter in what age of progress the child is born, as a man he dies in a much more advanced age, tiring always if things do not move along and upwards to a higher and better sphere. Pygmalion longing for Galatea to move into life was but a type of the normal mind seeking for a perfecting of those imperfect things around.

"I am tired of those slow methods!" will soon be the plaint of the schoolboy when he realizes the powers and possibilities of the new and increased facilities for learning brought about by the kinematograph; no longer will "crowding" and "coaching" be the means of "topping off" an education, but enlightenment and inductive possibilities will take the place of "cram."

At this season of the year the city schools are graduating their male pupils and much note is made of the more conspicuously successful ones, giving various causes for their distinct advance beyond the great average of their associates. In a study of some of these cases it reveals the fact that the use of certain faculties is responsible for any particular success rather than any other or unusual cause, also that some special cause aroused these "certain faculties."

What a splendid argument for and illustration of the suggestive power of the synonymous use of as many faculties as is possible at one time.

Lack of concentration is often given as a common cause for many deficiencies; what is lack of concentration but the evil of mind and various detractions which diversify the faculties and uselessly spread over a large surface with much waste those powers which if concentrated would produce greater results. An illustration of this given in the case of a blind boy in one of the New York City schools who not only stood at the head of his class, but was able to crowd two years' work into one year. This is urged to prove the power of increased concentration granted but only as because of the decreased powers of distractions. It must therefore naturally follow that the full succession of all faculties, concentrated because the possibilities of detractions (undivided attention) is removed, must necessarily secure and prove quicker, better and more thorough progress in learning. All this proves in advance along educational lines the timely advent of the cinematograph has graved the greatest aid in concentrating the use of the faculties, and while at present proof has only been thoroughly made in special classes of those unfortunately backward be lack of normal powers, this very proof is conclusive of the greater value where full normal powers and faculties are capable of concentrated use. To illustrate, the speech has always proved a powerful aid to the understanding, from the baby's picture book to the scholar's magazine, from youth to maturity without degree or limit, corrective, by whatever ratio this method may be increased and advanced, so by a similar ratio shall be the educational progress resulting.

It is often said that "we are living at fast times" but this should not be interpreted that the speed is beyond the faculties and is therefore a fault; rightly interpreted it means that the speed is within the laws and powers of the constitution, and that man who is "fearfully and wonderfully made" has never been duly tested as to either his capacities or his possibilities. The standard of universal requirements is always ahead of fulfilments and "the speed" is drawn by the power of being able to meet the situation." In educational circles a boy does not want his examination mark to many lines, because on that the teacher was handicapped and the school must "cram" if the required standard must be attained. By the aid of the cinematograph the educational training of the youth of the present day will be greatly facilitated, the greatest possible success will be made subservient to the requirements of even the most primary uses. [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ...

As one who has passed through most branches of stationary photography, from wet collodion or, as it is known in this country, the lantern type to the folding pocket kodak, I have often wondered whether the same parallel would be preserved in moving picture work. Whether, in other words, we should reach the hand camera, or kodak stage. It is clear that a moving picture hand camera, if it could be made really practicable, would be of enormous value. Just consider the convenience of following your prey, whether it be a procession, or any moving object on terra-firma, with a moving picture hand camera, just as you do with a kodak or any other type of hand camera.

* * *

Of course the practical difficulties are enormous—at first sight they look almost insurmountable. The very idea of having a long length of film, say 200 feet, held in a hand camera, and so actuated as not to show movement or tremor in the resulting image might well give an inventor pause. It hardly seems feasible, does it?

* * *

Yet Mr. Birt Acres and others identified with moving picture work, about the years 1895-96 went a step on the way towards making a moving picture hand camera. They made very small cameras, taking short lengths of film, one-half the width of the present film, and giving smaller pictures. These cameras were placed on very light tripods and were for amateur use. Nothing much came of the idea, although no doubt in course of time, it will be made more practicable.

* * *

This subject was in my mind when recently turning over the foreign exchanges that come my way. It seems that Mr. Prosynski has patented both in this country and in others, a moving picture camera which is operated in the hand just like an ordinary hand camera. In The Kinematograph of January 5, 1911, there are given three photographs of Mr. Prosynski at work. In one he is pointing the camera towards the sky; in another he stands in a carriage, while he holds the camera at his chin; in a third he is on horseback.

* * *

So far as can be learned from the brief description available, two main principles are called into operation in the camera. The exposure of the film is actuated by a motor on the compressed air principle which revolves the mechanism automatically, developing great energy in spite of its light weight and small dimensions. In order to overcome vibrations when the camera is held in the hand, the gyroscopic principle is said to be made use of in the instrument. This avoids any shaking and consequent imperfection in the pictures. Mr. Prosynski is said to have photographed birds in the branches of trees, and to have followed the flight of birds. He seems, according to this very brief description, to carry an air pump which fills the camera's reservoir.

* * *

This is called an automatic Kinematograph camera. If it is a really practicable instrument, and the description points to the fact that it is, inasmuch as the camera was presented to the French Academy of Sciences, and approved by that august body, we are clearly on the eve of a revolution in moving picture negative making. At one stroke it removes the necessity of turning the handle. A man in the studio can work presumably by pressing a bulb. If he works in the open air again presumably he presses a bulb, just as he does with an ordinary kodak.

* * *

The use of such a camera opens up a wide vista of practicable applications. An automatic moving picture camera will do for moving picture work what a hand camera or the kodak does for stationary work. We all know what that means. We all know that the illustrated papers to-day could not very well exist without the co-operation of the press photographer with his reflex or other instrument. We have to wait further particulars of Mr. Prosynski's invention before pronouncing a final opinion upon it. To me, at any rate, the description of it and especially the fact that it seems to be vouched for by Professor Gabriel Lippman, the eminent worker in natural color photography, carries great weight.

Novelty in moving picture camera construction is in the air. People are asking for something new. Probably this camera will fill, not the long-felt want, but the very much-felt want. Does it read too much like the dreams of a dreamer to look forward to the time when we shall all be carrying moving picture hand cameras just the same as we carry the kodak to-day? That we shall make our exposures at home or abroad, and bring them home to have them developed and then turned into positives and projected on our own domestic moving picture screen at our leisure? The trend of invention seems to point in that direction. Those of us who have passed through most of the stages of stationary photography will recall the time when, if anybody said that rollable film in the cartage form would have been used in small folding pocket cameras which were loaded and unloaded in daylight, he would have been smiled at. Similarly I am risking the smiles of my readers by predicating the time when moving picture hand cameras will be, if not quite, as common as ordinary hand cameras, at least fairly common. Mr. Prosynski's invention points the way. Meanwhile, if any of my readers want to know more about his invention, let them refer to the Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly for January the 5th, 1911.

FLICKERS.

Cameraman marries a girl who got into a film by happening to cross the street at the psychological moment. Without any personal reflection, we are reminded that for many years the camera has been a party to matrimonial bunko.

* * *

A moving picture manufacturer is sued for breach of contract, by an actress, whom he discharged. He testifies that she hypnotized him into signing the papers. A man is never safe.

* * *

Demand for cowboys, in moving pictures, is driving Western ranchers into raising wheat, instead of cattle. The spectacle of a ranchman paying ten cents to see cowboys killing valuable time, doing stunts and making love, shows how great has been the fall of the mighty.

* * *

With the German government showing battle scenes, in moving pictures, to stimulate patriotism, it becomes quite clear that Andrew Carnegie must look elsewhere for support for his peace ideals.

* * *

Citizens of Wilmington, Del., are peeved because the Pennsylvania Railroad has decided not to install a moving picture show in their station waiting-room. Wilmingtonians should be consoled, by reflecting that the P. R. R. installs them for people who want to get out of a town; not for those who want to stay there.

* * *

After all, this talk about moving pictures being a stepping-stone to the reform school, we elevate our eyebrows in surprise, as we read that the State Reform School, of Greendale, Ky., is entertaining the children there with the self-same moving picture.

* * *

Lincoln J. Carter, the "Unlimited Male," is going to manufacture moving pictures. There is no need of any advance dope on the kind of subjects he will provide.

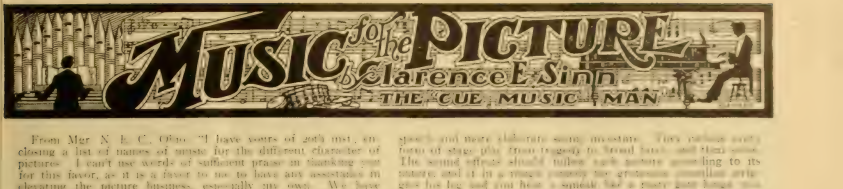
* * *

Lady, reading a paper on moving pictures, before a meeting of Sunday school teachers in Stroudsburg, Pa., was heard to remark: "It is here, in the dark, that the white slave agent spots his victim." We wish she had explained whether the operator turns his spot-light on the "victim," or whether the white slavers carry their own spot-lights.

* * *

Mayor of Brockton, Mass., delivers himself in statement as follows: "There will be no more 'sacred concerts' or moving picture shows open Sunday night, while Harry C. Howard is mayor."

L'etat, c'est moi; or, in plain English "I am the State." Harry, we wish you "Mal de Tete."



From Mgr. N. E. C., Ohio: "I have some of each mst., enclosing a list of names of mste for the different characters of pictures. I can't use words of sufficient praise in thanking you for this favor, as it is a favor to me to have any assistance in elevating the picture business, especially as ours. We have made the music and sound effects for the trap drummer the features of our show, and we are making a hit with it. In the first place I have a good pianist and trap drummer—the best I could get in this vicinity. My piano player has been with me almost three years. Still I find I have so much to learn per and always will have so long as I remain in the business. Being in a small city, however, we haven't the facilities of getting just what music we would like to have for our business. I am on the mailing list of Witmark, Haviland, Remick and others for professional copies of the latest stuff they have. I am this day writing to Witmark for quotations on the music you mention. I have some of it already. I will surely appreciate any favors in the future on the music or any other matter pertaining to my business. I read your columns in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD every week and enjoy them very much. I then give the number to my piano player and drummer, then to the operator. We use nothing but licensed stuff here. Again thanking you for your interest in my behalf I am, very truly yours."

Here is a progressive manager. One who not only takes an active interest in his music and sound effects, but gets the best material available for procuring the same. It's a safe bet that he is equally particular in regard to his operator and projection, which means he is trying to have a good show. I want to say that I am not confining my lists to any one particular publisher, but recommend any and all number which in my judgment are adaptable for this work. The only game I am trying to "boost" is the picture game. I am sending a few more to the above correspondent this week. Let us hear from you again, N. E. C.

Another from the Progress State: "Some time ago I read an article in the Moving Picture World criticising a drummer for snaking a roll and crash in a picture of a man sliding down a snowbank. I don't know what the picture was, but reading the article prompts me to ask your opinion regarding a certain point. I am a vaudeville drummer of six years' experience and am now working in combination both vaudeville and pictures. Now in straight vaudeville it is the custom for the drummer to "catch the falls." In fact it is a part of his business to do this. Now why will not the same thing apply in picture work? I am making a practice of doing this and if I am wrong I would like to know why. Please do not print my name or that of the theater. Hoping for an early reply I am, yours truly, L. W., Ohio."

I do not remember the article you mention, but in answer to your question I will say one should use judgment in this as in everything else. Much liberty is allowable in comedy pictures, especially those of a farcical nature, but in the straight dramatic pictures nearly effects should be as nearly as possible the real sounds which would naturally be heard in a real scene such as the picture portrays. Now a person sliding down a snowbank would scarcely produce such a sound as that of a drum roll and crash—honestly now, would he? If the scene shown in a dramatic picture or even a light comedy, you can readily see that an approximate imitation of the real sound I don't believe it were best to call attention to it at all; scarcely not with heavy crashes (which I believe are generally understood to include cymbals). But when you have a sound carried inside, where the sound is the only thing to be considered, I think it should be handled exactly as best suits the knowledge as a vaudeville or burlesque act, regardless of actual sounds as they would naturally be heard. All the "slap-stick" stuff and absurd noise effects you can work in will usually help the scene also—that is to get laughs. Now I know many will not agree with me in this last assertion; in fact I not acquainted with several "picture fans" who hold that the only sound effects which should be given are those which would naturally occur in an actual scene of which the picture is a portrayal. It all depends on the point of view. They argue that the audience is supposed to be looking at the real thing. No audience ever supposed it was doing any such thing. The moving picture house is a theater and the shows therein are stage shows differing chiefly from ordinary stage performances by a lack of speech and more elaborate scenic investiture. They possess every form of stage play from tragedy to broad farce and their scope. The sound effects should follow each picture according to its nature; and if in a rough comedy one grotesque comedian gets good hot leg and you hear a splash like a heavy pail of water and find its properties in the hands of the comedian of the knockabout stage. These exaggerations are traditional in certain lines of the business. They provoke mirth by their absurdity, and that is all they are intended to do.

I have also expect to get four Pathe crosses. D. Tavaretti."

I suggest a plan to play pictures and the accompanying music at the same and it possible to get it early enough to enable them to look it over carefully before seeing the picture so as to familiarize themselves sufficiently to permit them to glance up occasionally for the titles, as these indicate the changes from number to number. It will soon repay their trouble and is a good collection to have in stock. There are twenty-seven pages of music full piano size, clean print on good paper and the titles (which are the "music cues") are in large type easy to read at a glance. The music is all selected from standard opera and the compiler knew how to adapt it to a moving picture.

Here are a few suggestions for record numbers:

FATHER LOVE (Pathe).

1. Open with a low strong chords like the beat of a funeral number, then a light waltz to the end of scene. Will You Love Me To Play?" Then:

2. Light neutral (Lento and Grazioso) till "Love's Young Dream."

3 Pathetic (Con Bastro or Bella) till "The Same Love."

4. Pathetic (Tranmoso) till "Sorrow Over Love." While this title is on play a few strong and chaste chords and end at a point and stop with player. The little touch of comedy introduced here is toughened by making a distinct pause until the scene the piano says and her own hand which is not to be imitated. Then:

5. Same as number two. Change guitar till scene is over, note then chorus at some assisted ballad to increase piano tinny player in background till change of scene.

6. Same as number 4 (Pathetic) to end. N. B—Do not introduce "take cross" in this picture.

SAVED BY TELEGRAPHY (Pathe).

1. Intermezzo or Sonatine (The Sands Rock by Beach) Till door of vault is closed after they enter it. Then:

2. Light agitato till the scene fully recovers from sobbing and strikes vault door; change to:

3. Agitato a little more so gradually increasing toward the end till they come out of vault and girl falls in chair. Then:

4. Light (Pastoral) or a waltz hesitation till close.

N. B.—There are two scenes especially essential in this story. Telegraph instrument as first scene and some thing use vault sound when story exchange telegraphic signals to vault.

CHILD DEMANDS EXPRESSIVE MUSIC

Even the child is pleading for appropriate music in the picture house. In the letter letter contest conducted by the Fitness Exercise at Fort Hill, Miss Ella Clara Cotton secured the piano playhouse because of the judgment shown in accompanying films. Her letter in answer to the question "Why are the films shown at the Princess Theatre the best in the city" was as follows:

"I have been in every picture house in the city and in a number of other cities in the state and I will say that I haven't seen as nice a lot of good, clean moral pictures anywhere as in the Princess. I will give you several reasons why I think your pictures are the best.

"The manager and his assistants at some theatres purchase any old thing of your pictures which is a number and shown to the public. I believe you have the best operator in the business.

"You have the best singer and organist I have ever heard. His playing seems to almost make any professional song the pictures are showing. They have the best of orchestra to choose from for his organ selections, which are very beautiful.

"The way in which you show your scenics and pictures takes away the strain from continued pictures and rests both eyes and brain. You have the nicest and brightest curtain of all I have seen."

F. U. M.

Scenario Construction.

By R. V. S.

The World's New England representative wishes to be placed on record as stating that he believes that the plot of the average moving picture has not improved in the direct ratio to the photographic and pictorial qualities of the films.

The statement, emanating from a comprehensive viewpoint, is quite correct. An analysis from the professional scenario writer's point of view tends to show that the fault is not so much the scenario writers, as it is the fault of parsimonious film makers' attitude toward scenario writers in general.

The technique of scenario construction is in itself a distinct art, just as intricate and painstaking as the technique of any other form of literary creation. To go back to the beginning of the moving picture scenario, we find that it has not been so very long ago that the directors wrote and staged all the scenarios, week in and week out. Then came the two a week releases which has much to do with the changing of the system, inasmuch as it overtaxed the directors' creative ability, and took from him time necessary to proper directing. This in turn, necessitated the advertising for moving picture plots, and employment of scenario editors to consider the reams of manuscripts that began to pour into their offices from unsuccessful playwrights and short story writers, who, in many instances, sent not scenarios, but complete novels, plays, and short stories, most of them no more adapted to moving picture production than five wheels would be on a wagon. Out of these has evolved the modern scenario. "How should a scenario be written," is a question that has been asked many times, and has received little attention. Every writer entertains his own opinions of this interesting question. First of all in importance, in the writer's opinion, is the theme. It may be of love, self sacrifice, honor, or any of a score of others. Many scenario writers think of, or have suggested to them, a strong climax, and using that as a base, work out the business of the scenes leading up to it, writing the ending last. The scene business should be concise, and brief as possible to tell the story clearly. Be careful in description and analyze carefully every action and motive. The number of scenes in full reel films vary anywhere from ten to as high as thirty-five. The average is about fourteen. Use great care in the selection of themes, and remember that the Board of Censors and most of the scenario editors refuse to consider scenarios dealing with brutal or wilful murder, highway robbery, suicide, kidnapping, theft, or kindred crimes, though at times, some of the above are suggested, but the crime itself rarely shown on the screen. Other classes of scenarios tabooed are those containing scenes of an immoral or suggestive nature, inconsistent melodramas, heavy tragedies (except in rare instances), risque pictures, risque farces, and most costume plays, unless the plot is clean cut and original. The scenarios most in demand are those containing bright, snappy, original comedies of modern life, high class Western comedies and dramas, high class Indian stories, and occasionally a clever consistent war story, society dramas, and refined rural dramas depicting modern American middle class life. Sub-titles should be avoided except where it is absolutely essential to the understanding of action to follow. Always bear in mind the limitations of the camera and do not expect it to perform impossibilities. The manuscript should be double spaced, typewritten on one side of the paper only, leaving margin space for notation, with scenes numbered in rotation. The manuscript should be prefaced with a brief synopsis of the scenario, and on the title page should be placed the author's name and address. Slowly, but surely the amateur and the novice are being weeded out of the scenario competition game through the medium of discarded manuscripts, their exeunt giving place to the modern newspaperman and magazine writer, who, when paid an honest price for his work, does not hesitate to submit it for moving picture production. More would enter the field if their names appeared on the films. The only companies to comply with their aspirations have been the Edison, and the Paris studio of the Pathe Freres. Of the better-known writers writing for moving pictures may be mentioned Richard Harding Davis (a novelist and short story writer of international reputation), Rex Beach, John Luther Long, Carolyn Wells, Elbert Hubbard, Roy Norton, Opie Reid, Hal Reid, and a score of lesser-known literary lights. Does anyone for an instant imagine that these experienced novelists, playwrights, and short story writers of national and international reputation, write for the "10-20-30" prices paid by some of the film companies (Licensed included)? Hardly, considering that good moving picture plot is worth to them anywhere from one to five hundred dollars when written up in short story or novelette form, or when elaborated into a play may pay a royalty of thousands monthly. We will now consider the editor of scenarios. What are his qualifications for holding this very important position? How many scenarios does he review daily? What proportion of these receive his approval and are forwarded on to the director for his final approval or rejection? The qualifications and abilities of scenario editors vary. Many disgruntled scenario writers believe they have neither. They are recruited from various positions. Many of them are men and women who have had many years of theatrical experience. Not a few are retired newspapermen, but all of them may be said to be men and women of high intelligence, and long training, who are quick to recognize true theatrical values, whether they be written by a shining literary light or the veriest novice. Several of the larger Independent companies receive in excess of one thousand manuscripts monthly, while several Licensed companies receive double and treble that number. Allotting one editor to every two thousand scripts, we discover that every day, Sundays and holidays included, he must pass upon the merits or demerits of more than sixty scenarios daily. Many of them are illiterate. A big percentage do not even contain a synopsis. Of these a big percentage is seen to be unavailable at a glance. Those that possess possible merit are read and laid aside for further consideration, and eventually are considered by the director whose judgment is final. The scenarios that are accepted, according to the authority of the various editors, does not exceed one per cent.! A percentage even less than in playwrighting and short story writing. In order to successfully market scenarios more depends upon the judgment of the writer than upon the editor to whom the work is submitted. The writer should be thoroughly familiar with the production policy of the company to whom the scenario is sent. Many companies specializing upon Indian, comedy, and other special themes, oftimes find themselves deluged with domestic drama and costume scenarios. The result is good for the postal deficit, but hard on the author. Much has been written lately concerning pirating and plagiarizing. Certain magazine writers have declared that many scenarios are mere dramatizations of published short stories, while the scenario writers have hurled back the defi by claiming a reversal of the process whereby they claim that recent short stories have for their plots material culled from produced moving pictures. There is no doubt that both have reason to complain. The production of moving pictures has reached a stage where originality is almost impossible. The ground has been thoroughly worked by playwrights before the moving picture camera was created, and with the latter opening up a new field, it is forced to use the same material in dramatic situations. Originality is at a premium, but when the dramatist does discover an original theme or situation, if it passes the editors and is accepted, he only gets a beggarly five, ten, or fifteen dollar check to compensate him for his week's hard work. At the prices paid now the professional scenario writer could not live if it were not for his magazine contributions to help out. The professional scenario writer is often unjustly accused of plagiarizing. Coincidences have happened to the author to see scenarios that he had written produced almost character for character and scene for scene, although be it understood that the producing company had never had the script submitted to them. Other instances may be mentioned of scenarios submitted to producers only to be returned with a letter explaining that the scenario was acceptable were it not for its similarity to releases then pending production. Amusing experiences are common. Not long ago the writer submitted a scenario to six Licensed companies in rotation, each time the script came back promptly. In despair it was sent to a seventh Licensed company who promptly accepted it and remitted a generous check in payment.

Ellensburg, Wash.—This hustling little town of 7,000 has the Cort Theater (a vaudeville house), and two picture houses. The newest venture is the Queen Theater, a modern and sanitary playhouse, exhibiting Independent films exclusively, and under the ownership and management of Mr. W. A. Chambers, of Tacoma, Wash. The house opened the middle of December and has been playing to good business. The seating capacity is about 400.

LONDON LETTER.

In the weekly notes which in future it is to be my privilege to contribute to the pages of the Moving Picture World, I shall endeavor to give manufacturers, exhibitors and operators in the "New Country" a pen picture of matters appertaining to the industry in all its branches in the "Old Country," in the hope that what I am able to tell them will make for that goal which we all have at heart, the uplifting of the picture and the cementing of friendly relations between those who, or a lot it is to be connected with film producing or picture projection in England and America. Nor will my remarks be confined to doings in Great Britain alone. I hope to be able to help the Moving Picture World to give its readers first hand and exclusive information of doings in the domain of moving pictures in other parts of Europe, besides our own little island.

* * *

And first let me say that never in the history of the film industry have things here looked more promising than they do with the opening of the new year. The relations between all branches are more harmonious than ever before, thanks to the work of our Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association, which looks after the interests of producers, the Cinematograph Defense League, which watches over the affairs of the exhibiting section, and the N. A. C. O., which is the operators' trade union. So far as cordial co-operation is concerned, there is not a cloud on the horizon. Even the question of price, which has so often been the bugbear, has sunk into oblivion, and there is a unanimous agreement that 4d. per foot is the minimum to which manufacturers can go if they are to make a living. Cut-throat competition in the renting business has also had its day, and it has been realized that present exchange rates must be maintained. For the employees in the electric theaters—as we call them here—we are not troubled with "photoplay"—a better wage standard is likely to prevail, conditions of employment are being improved and a six-day week is being that all prevalent. The operating booth in all our new theaters is being made a healthy and comfortable compartment.

* * *

We are troubled with neither trusts nor combines, nor with customs duties. American, French and Italian films find an open door and an open market. They are accorded a fair field and no favor. I am bound to admit that at present the American article is hard to beat, but still your manufacturers whilst lavish in their scenic effects, careful in the selection of their actors and actresses and fortunate in the possession of just that environment which lends beauty and charm to their Wild Western or Cowboy subjects, do not always pay that attention to little points of detail which the capacious brains amongst English subjects keenly look for. Only last week I saw one picture pulled to pieces by an English audience who laughed sarcastically as a wounded man was rolled carelessly on to a ranch gate which was hitched to a spirited horse and dragged over some bumpity country to a wayside cottage, the patient not even being hoisted to the gate, but in the kind of thing which goes against the American film. Many a good film is spoiled in this way and if English audiences show their disgust so energetically as did the one to which I refer, it tells against the American article.

* * *

One by one all the American manufacturers are being represented here. The latest leader is the American Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, for whom the Western Import & Film Company act as agents in the centre of film land here. They are releasing 2,000 feet a week and as one subject is always to be a cowboy one, which the Britishers have more than an inkling, much to the chagrin of their home manufacturers, they will soon be making good. Mr. H. E. Aitken is in London and seems out to do more to make things hum. Among the lines which American films have here I may mention that some electric theaters make a point of having programs in which only American films are given a place.

* * *

The reason for this is not hard to seek. Your wife has not ever some hard-headed business man of the U. K. Senses type who does not take "no" for an answer, and never cared quite how he got their films onto the programs of the halls. I only write a few of our English film men were endowed with the same resources and had the courage to invade your country. Then perhaps the British article would stand higher in the American estimation than it appears to do.

* * *

There is need for American manufacturers to look to their laurels. They have a powerful rival in the shape of Kenny Cowan who have lately made a great bid with their historic films and our travels of some well known place. Atmospheric conditions in Italy are peculiarly favorable to good photography, and when this is added to attention to detail and every regard to historic accuracy, it means a lot. This company has struck a new note in film productions and have done something towards getting us out of the Cowboy, Prairie and Dance Comic rut.

* * *

A subject which is occupying the trade in England is the need for a school for buyers. We have schools for operators who are not allowed to operate without giving satisfactory evidence of their capability, and anyone seems to think he is qualified to gauge the tastes of the public. Recently some exceptionally fine films have been turned down by these gentry for no reason on earth save that the picture was above them. Some enterprising great loss on the makers. It seems that the farmers are sometimes unable to view the picture from the public's standpoint, for the talented pictures when shown in the theaters have proved quite a success.

A. J. TURNER.

London, January 16.

THE NEW YORK EDEN MUSEE AND THE PICTURE.

Interview with Mr. R. G. Hollaman.

Recently in an article entitled "Kents & Pictures and the Picture," we gave the reader the views of a responsible director of public entertainments on the position of the moving picture in public esteem. This week we have sought an interview with a gentleman of even more lengthy experience in the matter, namely Mr. R. G. Hollaman of the Eden Musee, West 23rd Street, New York City.

The Eden Musee is New York's most unique place of entertainment. It is the Madame Tussaud's of America. The Madame Tussauds of London is a great wax works exhibition patronized by visitors from all parts of the world. In a very large building there are gathered wax figures of historical personages crowned heads and the like together with made up scenes of contemporary events, and events of the past in which apparently lifelike figures are placed. These figures are so many times so lifelike that they are mistaken at times for real individuals.

Here in New York at the Eden Musee we have reproduced practically the same feature. Notable figures of the past and present are represented in wax, and prove a never failing source of attraction to visitors from far and near. At the present time, too, Kinemacolor subjects are being shown at the Eden Musee, together with two reels of carefully selected Independent pictures.

The Eden Musee shows the largest picture in New York City, and probably the best. The entertainment is viewed by music and other scenes and the result is that the Musee attracts a wide patronage. Those who come for the wax figures invariably take in the picture.

Mr. Hollaman, the managing director of the Musee, is a gentleman who has been identified with amusement enterprises in this city for a good many years. He is one of the oldest managing partners of any in this country. Fourteen years ago he showed The Passion Play, and leased it to many others who are now prominent in the theater business. It is his aim, to which he is very successful, to elevate the picture part of his program, by showing some but the best class of subjects, when appeal to colored audiences. To that end he exercises a careful censorship of the subjects that are shown in his house. The result is that one is always sure of seeing at the Eden Musee the most pleasurable moving picture entertainment presented.

One of the features, for a considerable time at the Eden Musee was the Phonograph Talking Picture. The concert room looks with photographic views and accompanied with a great orchestra rendered music as the Eden Musee can produce it. The first acquaintance with this kind of talking picture and the success that it met with led to exhibitions being given in general.

Mr. Hollaman takes quite an optimistic view of the position of the moving picture as a part of public entertainment. He frankly says that large numbers of his patrons come from the vicinity of the Eden Musee and therefore no great increase in receipts. The result is that the Eden Musee stands out the exponent of the picture business. Mr. Hollaman's experience has been of a somewhat long character as that of many of those here in New York City and do not seem to grasp the continued growth of the picture. We hear much of the supremacy of the West in moving matters, but it seems to us that no such supremacy can be maintained, that the "show boat" is just as big business for West after all in regard to the presentation of the picture to the public.

New York manufacturers, he says, have done but little in relation to picture matters, but we are glad to have the opportunity of bringing to the notice of our readers the views and position of Mr. Hollaman and the attention he pays to the picture. The Eden Musee ranks in our opinion very high indeed as a picture house, although it seems very strange that other places for attracting the public, as we have described the picture to it has attained to it nothing of the subject of the music that used above which now and then comes in the place of the announced public entertainment.

Clune's Theatre---Los Angeles, Cal.

One of the Handsomest Theatres in the West

Clune's Broadway Theater, Los Angeles, situated between Third and Fourth streets, on Broadway, in the heart of the retail district, is claimed by the owner and manager, Mr. W. H. Clune, to be, without exception, the finest and best equipped moving picture theater in the country.

The theater is a two-story structure of brick and steel construction 70 x 140, and has a seating capacity of 900. The front of the theater is of tile construction, topping which is the most elaborate and largest moving picture electric sign in the world. This sign contains 2000 Tungsten lamps. The lights in the ellipse and columns, are colored globes of different colors harmoniously arranged so as to give the sign the appearance of an immense jewel, whose many facets at night flash forth in a dazzling burst of light. Topping the columns are red globes arranged in the form of a torch. Entwining the two columns and outlined in colored lights are the words: "Comedy," "History," "Zoology," "Aeronautics," "Drama," "Naval," "Military," and "Agriculture." Within the ellipse the word "Clune's" is slowly spelled in fire, and reaching the end of the word, "Broadway" is flashed forth. The two words glow for a moment, then go dark only to repeat the process. Outlining the front of the building, and on the upper cornice, are several hundred small lights in frosted globes. Mr. H. D. Brown, with the Clune Company, is the designer and builder of the sign.

The lobby is flanked by two store rooms, extending to the theater auditorium, and containing offices on the second floor. The lobby and the box office is wainscoted in white marble to a height of ten feet. On the sides of the lobby are panel mirrors. The floor of the lobby is of colored tile with a colored fleur-de-lis design inlaid. On the base of the wainscoting is a ten inch strip of black marble. The ceiling of the lobby is decorated with cream colored stucco, with white and gold trimming.

The spacious auditorium seats 900. The chairs are of the best, being upholstered in leather, and of comfortable proportions. The ceiling is beamed in stucco and decorated in the general color scheme of white and gold. The ceiling skylight is a beautiful art glass. At the rear of the auditorium are six rows of loge seats. The woodwork of the auditorium is of stained oak with green burlap paneling. At the rear of the auditorium between the entrance and exit lobbys is a ladies retiring room with a maid in attendance.

The proscenium arch of the stage is twenty-four feet wide, and flanking it on both sides are singing booths. The orchestra is of eight pieces, including violin, piano, base, flute, cornet, drums, clarinet and cello. An orchestral feature is a $1000 set of chimes.

The operator's room is equipped with the latest apparatus, including three Edengraph projectoscopes, and two stereopticons. The theater is warmed in winter by a hot air system, and cooled in summer by a cold air system using the same apparatus.

The program consists of five full reels of first run Licensed pictures, two illustrated songs, and one song specialty, making a program lasting one hour and thirty minutes.

The theater employs young lady ushers to seat their patrons. Shaded floor lights are placed at intervals about the auditorium. The prices of admission range from ten cents for the front section to the twenty-cent loge seats in the rear. The loge seats are of a special design of tufted leather bodies and backs, and of steel standards instead of wood. The loge seats are enclosed in brass rails, hung Foyer, Clune's Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.

Interior New Clune's Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.

with draperies, and elevated several feet from the auditorium proper, the arrangement permitting of an unobstructed view of the auditorium and stage.

A. F. Rosenheim, of Los Angeles, is the architect and superintended the construction of the building.

The theater employs twenty-five people. The daily performances run from 1:45 to 5 P. M., and from 6:45 to 11 P. M., excepting Saturdays and Sundays, when the run is continuous from 1:45 to 11 P. M.

The theater opened November 10, and has played to excellent business ever since, with frequent use of the "S. R. O." sign at the night performances.

Long Beach, Cal.—Moving picture men of Southern California held a meeting here February 1st to form a permanent organization.

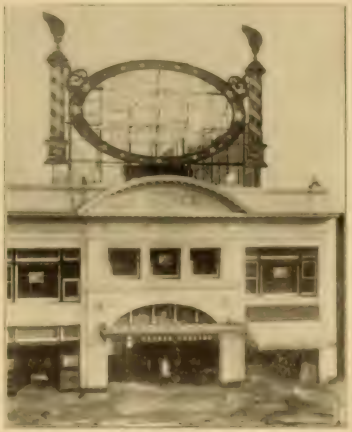
Albany, N. Y.—A bill has been introduced in the Assembly by Assemblyman Higgins (Rep. Manhattan), requiring all operators of moving picture machines to have a license.

Newark, N. J., will hereafter require all operators to be licensed. Applicants must be 21 years of age and must be residents of Newark preferably. An examination will be necessary to secure a permit.

Boston, Mass.—Moving Picture Operators' Union No. 182, I. A. T. S. E. held its first annual smoke-talk at No. 724 Washington Street, January 26th. It was a very successful gathering, and was addressed by several prominent citizens.

Denver, Col.—8,000 people took advantage of the free moving picture show and concert given by the city at the auditorium Sunday, January 8th. All records for Sunday attendance in Denver were smashed to smithereens. Wiseacres have stated that the moving picture is on the wane.

Tacoma, Wash.—Exhibitors have organized for their mutual benefit. Ten of the thirteen houses were represented at the charter meeting. Officers were elected as follows: William Pedroni, president (Lyric Theater); Elora Young, treasurer (Crystal Theater); Meyer Cohen, secretary (Savoy Theater).



Entrance Clune's Theater.

Oily Film.—Chadron, Neb., writes as follows: "Enclosed find $1.50 for Handbook. I am using a Powers No. 6 and am having considerable trouble with the front end of films getting oily, although I wipe the machine carefully after oiling. I have searched very carefully for the source of this annoyance and cannot find it. I start at the top magazine and go to the bottom, carefully examining everything along the path of the film, but have not discovered the difficulty. We are using three reels of the Independent product and it is giving excellent satisfaction."

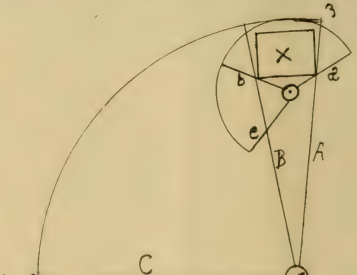
I think, Chadron, you have one of the older types of the No. 6 framing carriages with the oil cup near the top. This type of oil casing was discarded by the 'Powers people' for the reason that operators, having no means of knowing how much oil there was in the casing, would get it too full and the oil would run out along the cam spindle and in many instances would fly off on to the film. I would suggest that you try tying a string around the shaft close to the oil box to act as a wiper. What I mean by this is to make a loop in one end of the string so that it cannot draw tight on the spindle, and then fasten the other end to some fixed point below the spindle. This, I think, will prevent the oil from following out along the spindle and flying off, because it naturally would run down the string instead. A loop of wire wrapped with candle wick would be better. This is only offered as a temporary make-shift to find out if the trouble really is. If it works, that locates the trouble. You can then try using less oil in the oil casing. If you still have trouble, it will be up to the Powers Company to remedy the difficulty in some effective manner.

Lens Table.—Mr. Fred Rupert, South Bend, Ind., writes: "Friend Richardson: Enclosed find table of projection lenses, which I have used for four or five years and found it to be pretty accurate. It is handy to have, since it saves a lot of figuring. Keep up the good work through the Trouble Department and you will be thanked many times for it later on by the very people who now have their little hammers in operation."

Friend Rupert evidently went to considerable trouble in making the table submitted. It is the same identical table as is found on page 105 of the Handbook. Its reproduction in The Column would occupy a great deal of space, as it would either have to be double column or else very much reduced in size. We nevertheless thank Neighbor Rupert for submitting it. As to the people with hammers, I am not losing any sleep over their antics. Sensible men are more concerned in securing better projection than in paying attention to those who neither wish to advance nor let anybody else. Doubtless, as you say, they will see the error of their way in time. In fact, eventually they will either have to see it or get out of the business.

Wants to go West.—Mr. W. H. Mayhew, 98 Grove Street, South Chicopee Falls, Mass., writes that he has been operating six years, now holding Massachusetts license No. 2633, belongs to Operators' Union No. 186, Springfield, Mass.; says he can furnish excellent references and wishes to go somewhere west of the Rockies. Neighbor Mayhew writes a good letter and presumably can deliver the goods. He is a married man and does not wish to make a move without being fairly sure of landing a position. The publication of such matters as this is a little outside the province of the department and I think it must be discontinued. I am very frequently tempted to help out in things of this kind, but space is so valuable that much of it cannot be devoted to individual matters, and where I help one man the other fellow feels that if I do not do likewise for him he has been unjustly dealt with, and there you are. For this reason, save in exceptional cases, I shall keep a list of operators who send in their names and supply them to employers who make inquiry, without publishing individual cases.

Shutters.—Mr. Wm. H. Wood, Glendora, Cal., writes: "As a regular reader of the Trouble Department, I arise to make a few remarks. In the first place, I wish some information concerning the three-wing shutter. In a recent article in the Department a contributor told the readers he was going to put a three-wing shutter on his Edison Exhibition Model and asked you how you thought it would work. You replied you were afraid the scheme would not work out, because the shutter would be too small to get the right effect. The Edison Exhibition Model shutter is 5 inches in diameter. Now, suppose we make a three-wing shutter 5 inches in diameter, extended out on the same shaft in front of the lens. What difference would there be in effect between the 5-inch and the 8-inch shutter? Of course, the spindle of the 8-inch shutter would be set 1½ inches over away from the lens center than would the spindle of the 5-inch shutter. I fully understand that the parts of the 8-inch shutter which cover the lens would be making a greater circumferential speed than the same parts on the 5-inch shutter. I also know that this greater circumferential speed on the larger shutter does cause a different effect. I have thought that many have supposed the fact of the shutter having three wings was the whole cause of flicker being reduced, but after reading your answer to Richford, I have concluded that others have the same theory as have I in regard to the larger diameter shutter reducing the flicker. I would thank the editor or any contributor who would give their theory as to why and how the greater circumferential speed reduces the flicker. In Vol. 7, No. 24, is a communication headed 'An Excellent General Letter,' in which the writer says he will help any poor but aspiring operator who has a practical improvement. I have a couple of ideas I would like to get someone interested in, one being for a lamp house. The editor and all of us are aware of the trouble we have at times with lamps and lamp houses. I would be glad to receive the address of the author of the above-named article. I would like to give my views as to why so many pictures are not clear; that is to say, do not have sharp definition. First, dirty lenses; second, the operator having his spot too large. One can always tell from the picture when the operator is carrying an excessively large spot, since the sharpness of definition suffers under this condition. Another all too frequent trouble is the carbons not being set in line sidewise. I will now close, with a formula for making lenses chemically clean: Pure distilled water, one ounce; pure alcohol, ½ ounce; chemically pure nitric acid, 2 drops. Besides using this once a week, I clean the condenser lens next to the lamp and the outside parts of the projecting lamp every day."



The above drawing, Neighbor Wood, will convey the accurate idea of the effective difference in shutter blades of small diameter, and other shutter blades of larger diameter. In the sketch "X" aperture opening is 11-16 by 15-16 inch. With the small shutter shown, the lines a b indicate the necessary width of shutter blade to cover the opening, without providing for travel; while the lines b e indicate the additional width of shutter blade necessary to provide for the covering of the opening during the travel of the film. You will thus see that with a shutter of very small diameter a blade of more than one-half the entire circumference of the circle is required to cover the opening from the time the film starts until it stops. It would, therefore, be impossible to add a second blade of any effective width, since altogether too great a percentage of light would then be cut. On the other hand, take the shutter of the radius (radius means one-half the diameter) indicated by 1, 2 and 3, and it will be observed that lines A, B form a blade covering the aperture, whereas lines A C form a blade capable of covering the aperture during the entire movement of the film. You will observe, too, that this width blade instead of filling half of the circle fills only a trifle more than one-fourth. We can now put in two more blades of a substantial width and still get as large a percentage of light as we would with the smaller shutter. Study these drawings carefully, since they contain the meat of the whole shutter matter, particularly as applied to shutters of different diameters. Circumferential or peripheral speed is merely an incident. What we call "flicker" is in reality the change from absolute darkness to brilliant illumination on the screen. With the three-wing outside shutter the screen is dark 48 times each second and at times each second it is light while running at normal speed. This brings the alterations of light and darkness so close together that the optic nerve does not receive the sensation of darkness at all. With the two-wing shutter the alterations of light and darkness come 32 times each second and this brings them far enough apart that the eye receives a minute impression of the dark screen; and this is what we call a "flicker." If the shutter had but one blade then the screen would only be dark but 16 times each second, and the alterations of light and darkness would be so far apart that the dark portions would become visible in a very pronounced "flicker." Jack a wagon up and set its wheels rapidly revolving with all the spokes in and you won't see any spokes at all—just a blur. You can look right through the wheel and read a newspaper held on the opposite side. Take out all the spokes but a pair, however, and you will see both of those spokes very distinctly. The proposition of the flicker is analagous to the spokes in the wagon wheel. The more spokes you put in, up to a certain point, the less number of spokes you see. The more blades you put in a shutter, that is to say, the more flashes of darkness you cause to appear on the screen each second, up to a certain limit, the less impression of darkness the eye receives, which amounts to saying the less flicker there will be. As to the address requested, I will try to look the matter up and forward same to you by mail. Many thanks for the formula, but I would caution operators to be very careful in using acid on lenses. I do not believe a very weak solution of nitric acid would injure the polish of the lens, but it is well to proceed with caution along these lines. I might add to the above by saying that the eye really does receive the impression of darkness no matter how many shutter blades may be used, but instead of conveying it in the form of a darker screen there are more or more blades, it is a question of a diminution of light, the darkness being blended into the light so that the latter wholly steads out of even strength is less brilliant.

Two More Drawings.—Mr C. W. Bennett, Crystal Falls, Mich., contributes two more excellent sketches showing wiring diagrams. Drawing No. 1 shows one proper way in which to connect a moving picture lamp or another arc lamp in series with constant. Notice the pilot lamps. You will see that should any fuses blow it would put out one lamp, or both, and if both lamps should go out at the same time, then you would know your main fuse has blown, or else that the power has been shut off for some cause. Sketch No. 2 shows another proper way to connect up a moving picture lamp or ordinary arc lamp. This sketch is designed to show you how you can have fuse sets of fuses to protect your lamp, so that when one fuse blows you cut in on another set by simply throwing the double pole switch over, without waiting to install another fuse. Mr Bennett advises 7½ ampere wash for all operating room circuits, and the advice is good. He also advises that we wire nos. 8 than a No. 6 be used, while heavier wire is still better. Wire your booth to stay, with the proper size wire in the start, and then you won't have to be changing from time to time. "I am aware," says Mr. Bennett, "that you may not need heavy wire, but never get the idea that you can have your wires too big, heavier in this you are mistaken." All of which the editor of this department will cheerfully endorse. Mr. Bennett further says: "Remember at all times that the size of wire required is dependent on the following, viz.: The distance your booth is from the point where the current wires enter the building. The number of machines to be installed in the booth, and whether you are using alternating or direct current and what voltage you are going to use. If you find the installed current severe or unsafe modify your rules change a little."

I do not quite follow Mr. Bennett in all of this. The voltage has nothing to do with the size of wires current wires a transformer is using and. Neither does it make any difference whether you are using alternating or direct current as it is that a transformer or motd, or, at least, I know of no material difference. The necessary size of wire will be governed by the number of amperes the lamps in the booth will consume and, as Neuillie Bennett says, the distance of one booth from the supply wires, or main switch board. We are indebted to Mr. Bennett for the use of the original sketches on which will appear in the near future. What I mean as a transformer is [illegible] wires are necessary as the current will be reduced due to drop in voltage and increased proportionately.

Picture Postcards.—From Mr. W. T. Sexton, Los Angeles, Cal., come four beautiful colored postcards showing views of Sexton Broadway Theater, on that site together with the Sexton electric sign above it. The pictures are beautiful, but better than this, they show a very beautiful illusion one which I believe could not be duplicated in the city of New York. [illegible] of course, of theaters devoted to moving pictures. Many thanks, Neighbor Strohm.

Condenser Trouble.—Mr. John J. Knight, Evansville, Ind., writes: "We are greatly troubled with condenser breakage. Will you kindly advise as to the best remedies for this trouble. I have been informed that we run our arc too close to the screen. Can we get condensers of such sizes as to throw our arc further back?"

You will have to give me a little more information, friend Knight. You do not say what kind of a condenser trouble you have, or even what kind of an outfit. In general, however, I would suggest that you see that the vent holes in top of the lamp house are open and free so that there will be a good circulation of air thus ordering heat in the lamp house. See to it that there is nothing loading or cramping your lens, that is to say, that they fit loosely in the holder. In another section of the column this week will be found a letter from one of our readers who has just remedied his condenser trouble. You might see if you have anything of that sort. If you will send back through the Department for the last six months you will find a great many letters concerning condenser breakage. The distance of the arc from the condenser depends upon the focal length of the condensing lenses. I could not give you any definite answer as regards the focal length of condensing lenses without knowing the size of pictures you are projecting and the distance from the lens to the screen. Screen multiply the distance in feet from your machine to the screen by .10 and divide the product by the size of your picture in feet. To the final result so many times a you may use two 7" inch condensing lenses, which will set your arc back farther than it now is, if you are using shorter lenses than that.

Condenser Length.—Thus, this comes to a Hamilton and wants to know what size condensers to use for a picture to fill 8 inches in width, there 8½ feet [illegible] says Powers No. 6 machine and lamps. D. Wayne Commentary has no machine lamp house and knows to-line, has moved the same back and forth, tried different condensers, changed his lenses and tried everything he could think of; in every case light becomes worse as soon. He does not say what the trouble is but apparently it is either in the picture.

The trouble probably is that you are using a too long focal length of projection lens in [illegible] same as 8 to [illegible] have used such a lens with two 7" inch condensers a way, and it was but you must get your lamp house back a way, and if you cannot get the lamp so close enough to the condensers to get a spot of proper size, you will have to change the lenses to one of shorter focus. You could also consult matters by getting condensers of longer focal length, but this can usually be avoided. What I would really recommend, however, is that you get a lens [illegible] or a half size projection lens. You will find these very much [illegible] and I advise you to write the manufacturers and have them send you a projection lens which could, I believe, at [illegible] this to be the best way to [illegible] your work, and you will find the [illegible] greatly improved in all respects. [illegible] lens [illegible] you [illegible] further back.

Ghost.—I have the [illegible] "Phantom and Ghost [illegible] Hamilton. I have [illegible] part of that one to [illegible] Powers. We have a Powers No. 6 machine [illegible] lamp house. If possible, [illegible] A. C. to [illegible] with enough [illegible] them to [illegible] you and use [illegible] Thanks for [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible]

Use two 7-inch lenses. Urbana, and set your lamp house back far enough to eliminate the ghost. It is, however, possible that the ghost effect thing is due to the wrong set of your carbons, the same being a shadow of the lower carbon tip. Study carefully the matter on carbon setting on pages 82 to 91 inclusive in the Handbook. With two 7½-inch lenses, your lamp house set clear back and your carbons set right, the ghost should disappear. If it does not, please communicate further. As to the other inquiry, I will attend to it by mail.

Angling Throw.—Minedosa, Manitoba, writes: "Can I get a good picture with the machine set at an angle? Hall is 54 feet long, 20 feet wide, curtain in the center; machine to be at one side of hall, Edison Model "B"; picture 8 by 10. What size condensers should we use?"

I believe, Minedosa, you would be able to get a fairly good picture if that stand were by setting to one side of the hall, provided you communicate directly with a lens manufacturer and get a lense of extra quality, explaining what it is wanted for. The picture will be somewhat distorted, however; that is to say, one side will be higher from top to bottom than the other. The lens will be about a 5-inch E. F. and with that you may use two 7½-inch condensers. It will be much better, however, if you are able to set your operating room directly in the center of the house and have a straight throw. You might get a fairly good picture with an ordinary lens, but the chances are against it. It would probably be somewhat out of focus on one side.

South America.—From Arthur Salton, Palm Beach, Fla., comes a communication of considerable length marked personal. It, therefore, cannot be published, though I would like to give it space. Neighbor Salton has just returned from two and one-half years in the West Indies and South America, traveling with a Powers No. 5, the Pathe Passion Play and other things. I would like Friend Salton to send a letter describing his experiences in South America, giving such data as he thinks will be of interest to moving picture fans. We shall await the letter with interest.

Cement Bottle.—From Thomas Wise, San Francisco, comes a cement bottle having a glass stopper with a brush fixed in same with plaster of paris. He says he tried this before and it seems to work very well. My first impression was that the cork would stick in the neck of the bottle, but it does not seem to.

Auto Engine.—From Homer, Ill., comes the following: "In January 28th issue I see on page 189 under the title 'Electric Light Outfit' an idea that I thought of trying out this winter, but found many things against it besides the cost of the outfit. To begin with, I could not get an engine on an auto with a governor, so as to get the necessary steady regulation to produce good light. Also, I believe any city large enough to get an audience that would pay would have a light plant. Anyhow, that is the case in this locality. Two years ago I operated six towns along the Wabash Railroad, all having light plants. I made each town once a week and by the time expenses were paid there was not much left for myself, perhaps I averaged $25 a week for the season. But what made even this possible was that I put on the Passion Play at all the places and it took immensely. I found it necessary to pay the newspapers at each city about $250, give all the city 'dads' six or seven comps each night at each place every time I went there. It sure made me some sore. I smile to think what some of the operators I managed who kick at $1.00 a night for light would do if they were told by local companies it would cost $5 per night to get light from their wires, the customer doing all his own work, such as running wires a block or two, putting up a larger transformer, etc., and wiring inside the building. Then about the first time you struck an arc you would blow the fuse at the power plant and put the whole town on the bum, with everybody cussing the moving picture show. It would take a whole bundle of dollars for my experience that winter. And say! The free advice I got as to how to run picture shows has sure been a big help. I see Mr. Hallberg has took a whack at your scalp in the 'Film Index.' Well, maybe he knows a whole lot about the arc and how to advise, but it seems what he does know he is a long time getting out with. And I, for one, don't care if he never comes out with it. Looks to me as if the 'induced air currents' are working overtime to get the results he has pictured. How do you keep those sheets you use to make slides with from curling up when you expose them any length of time. Last election I used them to typewrite on and after leaving them for a short time they curled up. Of course, when I cut down the amperage it didn't do it so badly."

Well, Homer, I was amused on reading your experience. An auto-truck engine, however, can be equipped with an effective governor. I looked into that matter myself. The governor will not be used when the engine is pulling the truck, of course. I have had a few of the experiences you relate myself in the days gone by. However, my idea of that kind of a proposition is to charge 50 cents admission and run the show from 8 p. m. until 10:30 or 11 o'clock, with high-class projection and carefully selected films. In considering this proposition you must remember that Mr. Lyman Howe fills the biggest opera house in the country at 50 cents to $1.00 a throw, and nothing but moving pictures. As to Mr. Hallberg's "Induced air currents," well, I have had $9.65 worth of laugh out of that proposition myself. Mr. Hallberg may be a competent electrician, but what he does not know about operating in general would fill quite a number of volumes. This I will venture, however, that he is competent as an advertising man, particularly when it comes to getting free advertising; which statement, I think, will be vouched for by the editors of the Moving Picture World. Such foolish statements at this last attempt of Mr. Hallberg are not, however, worth taking seriously. As a joke, they are par excellence.

Various Things.—Mr. A. E. Siebert, E. E., Norfolk, Va., writes: "The Trouble Department is what takes my first attention when I get the paper. I must compliment you on the way you answer all inquiries. I am an electrical engineer, but of late years have had charge of several theaters and have naturally followed things very closely. For the benefit of the Trouble Department readers I will give you my idea of running a moving picture show. To begin with, we must have an operating room of ample size and well ventilated. Machine may be any standard make. It must be set absolutely rigidly and as nearly as possible exactly with the curtain, so that the light rays will strike the curtain evenly all around. The best test for this latter point is to focus the opening of the aperture plate on the screen. It must appear sharp and clear cut on all four sides. Unless it is sharp and clear cut on all four sides the definition of the picture will not be good all over, and it is up to the operator to discover and remedy the fault. If he is an operator he will know what to do and do it. The machine should be as near level and central with the screen as possible and the lamp, lens and aperture plate opening in perfect line; tension springs barely tight enough to perform their office of stopping the film, aperture plates not worn, and everything else in first-class condition. There will then be no question as to results on the screen, provided a real operator is in charge. The light I use is 110 volt D. C., 31 amperes; ⅝ Electra cored above and ½ inch solid below. I set my carbons so that the top one is parallel with the rack bars and the bottom one projecting a trifle forward. I give the entire lamp a rake back of about 35 degrees. I use two 6½ condensers fitting loosely in their rack, keep the rack ventilation holes open and have broken no condensers in two years. As to the matter of speed, you may say it is anywhere from 40 to 75 or 80, but that is not the answer. The only answer is, run your machine at the speed that is necessary to produce action, the same as though what you are looking at is not a picture, but the real thing. You cannot have a fixed speed at which to run the machine. It depends altogether upon the film action. There are some subjects which should be run at, say, 40, while others on the same reel may be run at 85. The real answer lies in a good operator who knows his business and when to go fast or slow. (That is precisely the advice I have been giving, Neighbor Siebert, all along; and that is what I meant by running at 900 feet per minute.—Ed.) Now, as regards the machine head, I overhauled mine two weeks ago after eight months' run. That is to say, I stripped it down to the bare frame, went over everything carefully and where new parts were needed they were put in. And now, right here, I want to say something which I believe you are broadminded enough, Friend Richardson, to take no offense at. In a recent issue I note an answer of yours as regards a three-wing inside shutter, in which you say that you do not believe a three-wing inside shutter will work successfully. In this you are wrong. I have had a three-wing inside shutter in practical operation nearly a year on my Powers No. 5 and the results were the same as those had with the new Powers No. 6. For the benefit of the readers who have a Powers No. 5 and wish to bring it up to date, I enclose a full size outlined sketch of the shutter which may be cut from the pattern from any sheet metal. In setting, go by the large wing and put your framing lever exactly midway. Turn the machine in the direction it runs until the pin is just leaving the star. At that point set your shutter so that the least motion will begin to open the aperture.* This is not an experiment, and anyone who has a Powers No. 5 will be amply repaid by putting in this shutter. My machine is wired so that by throwing a D. P. D. T. switch I can switch from one rheostat to another should anything go wrong with the rheostat. I have fixed up my booth for my operator from an electrical engineer's point of view for convenience and safety, and an intermission of over 30 seconds is unknown in my house. I give nothing but pictures; no illustrated songs, as they are a thing of the past with me. A poor singer is worse than none, and a good one couldn't stand it."

Many thanks, Friend Siebert, for the cut and for your excellent letter. I may be wrong about that three-wing shutter proposition, but I am perfectly willing to be set right. Your letter, I think, doesn't require much comment and most of the things set forth are excellent. I do not know where you got the idea that

I advocated a set given spirit by the operator. I [illegible] haven't made myself clear to that subject. What I [illegible] noted in the matter of speed is certainly what you have set forth in this letter. The shutter pattern is exact size.

Some Class.—Your attention is invited to the photo of the Toronto Operators' banquet, appearing herewith. Taken as a whole the assemblage will compare favorably on looks with those seen at any similar affair given by the manufacturers, exhibitors or film men. The faces are those of alert, clean-cut, intelligent men who could grace any walk in life.

A New Stunt.—[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

Condensers Again.—Mr. Wm. H. Hepburn, Los Angeles, Cal., contributes the following: "Through the kindness of the Trouble Department the writer wishes to thank Brother F. W. Freeland for his remarks for making film cement (Page 1408, December 27th issue). I have tried same and find it to be O. K. Glad to see my remand and your approval, as it is an especial pet of mine. Concerning the matter of condenser breakage, I found my trouble and its remedy. Am using an Edison outfit. Have two condenser tubes and had the same trouble with each. Used one 6-9 and one 7— lens and then would break them as fast as I put them in. You you know, the Edison tube is flanged at one end and has a screw collar at the other end. I discovered that the flange was not quite wide enough, consequently when the lens contracted the condenser would tilt a trifle, the top protruding beyond the flange, as shown in sketch. Now, when the lens would expand under the action of heat it would be cramped and the result was a broken condenser. I remedied this by cutting a tin washer just to fit in the tube, but extending 1-16 of an inch beyond the flange. Since putting these washers in three months ago I have not broken a condenser. I may say that it looks as though this fault would be easy to see, but, as a matter of fact, the tilt is so slight that it is hardly perceptible, though I have exaggerated it in my drawing to bring out the meaning. Thanking you for past favors and wishing you every success, I shall lay down my pen and not bother you again."

We are indebted to you, Neighbor Hepburn, for the condenser idea, which speaks for itself and requires no comment. As to not hearing from you again, I won't stand for that. I shall hope and expect to hear from you whenever you have anything of interest to communicate, which, let us hope, will be frequently.

A Mistake Somewhere.—Mr. Fred R. Wolcott, Syracuse, N. Y., makes a strenuous kick because the name E. A. Walcott appears on the cut of a carbon saw on page 102, January 28th issue, whereas Mr. Fred R. Wolcott is really the inventor and owner. He says that Mr. E. A. Walcott's name being attached swipes all his glory as well as the benefit of any possible stray orders which might come.

All I can say, Friend Wolcott, is that it is up to you. You sent in the original drawing and on it appears the name E. A. Walcott, just exactly as it appears in the drawing, with the name spelt "Wal" instead of "Wol." Now, old man, the thing is up to you. I am sorry, however, that the mistake has been made and hereby do the best I can to remedy it. Friend Walcott says that the screws which look quite small in the drawing are really 5-16, and the terminal lugs 3½ inches long. This, of course, renders my comment as to a larger thumb screw and a longer terminal unnecessary. I was deceived by the appearance of the drawing.

NEWS BRIEFS.

A Busy City Block.—One block on Main street, Los Angeles, between Second and Third streets, boasts of five moving picture theaters, they vary in size from a "hole in the wall" to a big modern theater. Four of the theaters are five-cent shows, and the fifth, a ten-cent house. All of the houses are playing to excellent business, despite the competition of two penny arcades and a "Wild West" exhibition in the same block. This busy street is getting to be a regular Coney Island thoroughfare, there being nineteen theaters in a space of four blocks.

Pictures for the Insane.—The supervisors of San Bernardino County are making arrangements with local film exchanges for a projectoscope and films, that are to be shown at the County Asylum for the Insane, near the city of San Bernardino. It is the intention of the supervisors to have weekly shows which will be shown in one of the buildings. How the films will affect patients is, as yet, mere conjecture, and the experiment will be watched with interest.

Pictures on Trains.—It is rumored that several overland railway companies contemplate equipping limited trains with projectoscopes, films, and an operator, to while away the tedious hours with the latest thing in photoplay. The experiment would doubtless be a welcome one to travelers in the West. The pictures, when shown at night, would in no way interefere with the travelers' enjoyment of the scenery. Why not carry the experiment to sea, and show the films aboard the big ocean liners? Projectoscopes could be installed in the dining salons for temporary use, and when the entertainment was concluded, could be stored away out of the way. The suggestion should be taken up by enterprising producers, and made a reality.

NOTES OF THE LOS ANGELES STUDIOS.

By Richard V. Spencer.
Coast Correspondent of the World.

Miss Daniels, a member of the Bison Company, has gone to San Francisco on a short vacation. She is expected to return in two weeks.

* * *

Since the amending of park ordinances having a bearing upon moving picture manufacturing, the different companies operating in local parks are compelled to register their names, and receive the park foreman's approval of scene locations. In the past, some of the companies have left the scene location scattered with waste paper and other rubbish. The other day, Brown, the park foreman, at Griffith Park, called Mr. Balshofer, the Bison director, aside and complimented him upon the orderliness and cleanliness of the Bison Company in leaving the scenes in as good condition as they found them before taking pictures. The recent unpleasantness resulting from park complaints has been dealt with leniently by the Park Commissioners, and good will has been restored to all parties concerned.

* * *

Mr. Francis Boggs, the Selig director, and the members of the company have returned from their recent trip to Santa Barbara.

Pathe Studio, Los Angeles.

Mr. James Young Deer, the Pathe director, has discovered a new photographic process for taking moonlight and firelight effects. By his method the negatives show a clearness of outline and background that could not be obtained by the old method. Mr. Young Deer discovered the process by accident, and is, of course, keeping the secret to himself on how it is accomplished. The new discovery will be demonstrated with startling effect in a forthcoming Western release, which Mr. Young Deer claims is the best all around picture that he has so far taken. This release will be watched with special interest by the moving picture manufacturers.

* * *

The photograph reproduced herewith shows the exterior of the Pathe West Coast Studio, located in Edendale, a surburb of Los Angeles. The studio covers a whole city block. One block further up the same side of the street can be seen the wall surrounding the Selig Studio. The interior of the Pathe studio is beginning to resemble a "wild and woolly" frontier town of the early '70s. Here may be found a reproduction of the old frontier towns. Main street containing the "Sheriff's Office;" "Dance Halls;" several varieties of "Saloons;" "Hotel;" "Stage and Express Office;" "Gambling Halls," etc., too numerous to mention. Fill this street with cowboys, and different characters in costume, and you are once again transported to the West of long ago—yet outside the wall modern electric trains whiz by at intervals, the tourist and commuter occupants staring in amazement at the cowboys, Indians, and posses in costume, galloping back to the studio after a hard day's work on exteriors.

A Mixup in Names.

A local tangle has come to light where two producing companies have been working under the name of "The California Motion Picture Company." It appears that two separate and distinct companies have, by a singular coincidence, adopted the same name. The California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company of Long Beach and Los Angeles has been mentioned in these columns before. As told in previous issues of the World, the company has been incorporated under the state laws of California in the name of the California Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, and have established a studio at Long Beach, a beach resort near Los Angeles. Recently there appeared at the company's Los Angeles office, Mr. Fred Siegert, who told the astonished officials of the above corporation that he had already appropriated the name California for his own use. Mr. Siegert, a former Los Angeles exhibitor has recently retired to take up moving picture manufacturing. Little is known of him among local moving picture men, but I am informed that Mr. Siegert has established a studio on the West Side, and that he has chosen part of his company of actors and extra people, and that he is making arrangements to soon enter the producing field.

* * *

The Passing of the Range.

"Plumb gone" are the days of the open range. Cowpunchers from the French Ranch in New Mexico drove the last nail in the coffin when they piled into a 60 horse-power touring car and started in pursuit of a couple of horse thieves who had stolen a bunch of cayuses from the French Ranch. They trailed the horse thieves and caught up with them at Trinidad, Colorado, where the thieves were trying to dispose of the stolen cayuses, and tamely turned them over to the Trinidad police officers without even the suggestion of an old time "mching bee." Then they returned to the newspaper reports: "They cranked up the automobile for the return trip and the New Mexican prairie heaved as a thousand of more 'old timers' turned in their graves."

* * *

Among Los Angeles Exhibitors.

Mr. Arthur S. Hyman, local amusement promoter, is to erect the finest moving picture theater in America, at Venice, a seaside resort near Los Angeles. The building will exceed in size and luxuriousness the Hyman and College theaters in this city. The building, which will be erected on the ocean front at Zepher avenue, Venice, will cost with the land investment, $125,000. The building will be two stories high and will cover a lot 60 x 100 feet. The entire building will be devoted to theatrical purposes. The plans for the theater are now being drawn by B. Cooper Corbett, of Los Angeles, after ideas and suggestions made by Mr. Hyman. Mr. Hyman has already named the theater the Mermaid. The theater in its construction will include boxes, loges and a balcony, with a total seating capacity of 1,000. Back of the balcony, on the second floor, will be the manager's office and five rooms which will be fitted up as living quarters for the performers. The rooms will front on the beach

NEW JERSEY NEWS JOTTINGS.

New Jersey legislators are "gunning" for the moving picture theaters too, it would seem, and so are a number of clergymen and law and order folks. In the Senate of the New Jersey Assembly January 24, Mr. Lasott introduced a bill to "prevent the admission of children under 16 years of age to any dance house * * * or moving picture show without the consent of parents or guardian, or unaccompanied by parent, guardian or an adult Penalty, fine or not more than $100 or imprisonment not exceeding one year.

M. Greenberg, of Chester, Pa., is said to be at the head of the company which is erecting a new steel and brick moving picture theater at 209 Broadway, Camden. The theater is already up to the first story and is the only one in Camden built expressly for a vaudeville and moving picture amusement place. It is 50 by 130 feet in dimensions and will be handsomely equipped.

The Bible School class of Linden Baptist Church will give a series of motion picture entertainments every Thursday evening until April 27th. Religious and educational films will be shown and an admission fee will be charged. The "Color Bearers" of the class are "chaperoning" the "shows," and no protests have been heard.

The Star Palace Moving Picture Theater, Camden, exhibited a gruesome electric death chair in front of its place during the week of January 30 to February 4 and ran films depicting life in Joliet Penitentiary. Much adverse criticism of the "show" was made.

W. H. Pennock.

KEYSTONE STATE NEWS NOTES.

Plans are almost completed for the new $100,000 theater which is to be built at the southeast corner of Eleventh Street and Lehigh Avenue, Philadelphia, for I. Fred Zimmerman. The will give vaudeville and moving pictures.

While the critics are criticising the moving picture shows the latter, especially in Philadelphia, have been doing good. So far as their means permitted there were no more liberal contributors to the fund for the firemen killed at the December Bourse Street fire than the exhibitors and moving picture theaters. [illegible] every theater in Philadelphia contributed, gave benefit performances and the fund now has been augmented to such an extent that the fund being raised to erect a new $1,000,000 Y. M. C. A. building.

Lastine & Friedman are erecting a new moving picture theater on Snyder avenue, below 12th St. at 1316 South 16th Street, Philadelphia. It will cost about $25,000.

Louis Sewall will erect a new moving picture theater at 2546-2548 Kensington Avenue, Philadelphia, as soon as plans are completed by architects.

F. J. Kreutzberg will build a new moving picture theater at Darby, Pa.

Louis M. Swaab, of the Swaab Film Exchange, 528 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, is "fighting the so-called film trust." About the middle of January three deputy sheriffs entered Mr. Swaab's place, accompanied by six representatives of film manufacturers, and demanded that no more films be returned to any exchanges to whom Mr. Swaab, some years ago, sold Sascos. He declined to turn over the films, called in his attorney, Henry M. Wessells, and the latter, a Judge Barrett's court ordered out a regularities in the writs of replevin. Thereupon the court declared that Mr. Swaab should hold the films and that he and the ten companies should appear before Judge Sandrerer Monday January 30th, to have the merits of the case gone into. The case is a complicated one, involving a number of unusual points. The writs of seizure were issued by the following companies: Selig, Essanay, Lubin, G. Melies, George Kleine, Pathe Freres, Edison, Kalem, Essanay, and Vitagraph. All these companies, Mr. Swaab asserts, are members of the General Film Company, a corporation subsidiary to the Motion Picture Patents Company, which he alleges is "a moving picture trust". Mr. Swaab says that he became a member of the General Film Company practically made up of independent film manufacturers, and that he has been "persecuted ever since." It is stated that the Swaab vs. Trust case will result in either putting Mr. Swaab out of business or that he will prove he is the victim of a monopoly in which case he will have serious brought against the monopoly by the government. It is considered quite a cross to the growth of the moving picture industry.

John Farrell is under arrest for having tried to collect money from Philadelphia moving picture theater owners. Claiming to be a building inspector, he put a number of exhibitors to some trouble by insisting upon "improvements" which were not in progress. David Kamp, manager of a Mammoth theater "sicked on" and hauled Farrell over to the police.

A screwing kitten caused almost a panic the last week in the Girard Motion Picture Theater, 2825 Girard Avenue. A hysterical lady there's always one in an audience—thought the feline's shrieks were a cry of fire, and the audience as one started to stampede. Coolness of the theater employees and two policemen averted serious accidents. The film showing found the kitten squealing in a tin trap.

Four bills, sponsored by Chief Factory Inspector John C. Delaney, will be introduced in the Pennsylvania Legislature at an early date. They provide for the regulation of motion picture shows and the keeping of boys under 16 years of age out of the first and second class. Juveniles over such theaters but Mr. Delaney's measures, if passed, will vest control in his department. Another of his measures provides that booths must be erected around all moving picture machines a provision the present law does not cover. Efforts of exhibitors to have the law of 1913 changed regarding width and number of aisles in moving picture theaters will go for naught it is predicted. Delaney will argue that there is no excuse for either new or old moving picture theaters with poor aisle facilities, and that if some wish to run theaters they should comply with the aisle and other regulations or stay out of the business. This argument will probably defeat the several exhibitors' associations from trying to have the 1913 law amended.

W. H. Pennock.

CINCINNATI

Although it was learned that the General Film Company had bought the Cincinnati Film Exchange, the Feinberg Film Service, Light & Film Company and the Majestic Film Service, the personnel remained any material changes and it was reported that the two partners, Mr. Louis Streit and Mr. J. Dreyer, would remain in charge of their respective companies. When Mr. Kane, the general representative of the General Film Company, returned to Cincinnati he found to his surprise that the two companies under one roof at Sycamore and Warren Streets and to object to the manager, Mr. James Sayer, the oldest in service. Mr. Sayer may be demoted, but he is a popular film man, having had his early education in this line under Mr. Laemmle, of Chicago, so was not a person to trifle with. The Majestic on the other hand is a popular film service house and a great trade and there is no doubt but if he decides to remain in the Queen City any organization in the General Film Company will have made the mistake it should.

J. D. S.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

The Clement Theater, Dover, N. H., until last week under the management of Mr. A. E. Wallis, has been taken over by F. D. Smyrnes-ait. The house will offer Independent films, vaudeville and a ladies' orchestra.

The Lyric Theater, also of Dover, N. H., is playing to big houses under the management of Messrs. Dolan & Paul. Independent films and vaudeville are offered.

Alderman Donahue by his excellent speech in favor of Sunday shows had much to do with the granting of licenses for Sunday concerts at Gloucester, Mass. For the last month, three of the Gloucester theaters had succeeded in obtaining Sunday night licenses. Then the Christian Endeavor Society, Church organizations, and individuals, rose in opposition. After a hot wrangle the licenses were granted by the Mayor. Alderman Donahue stated in his speech that the workingmen have no Sunday their only opportunity to attend such theaters, while the objectors, as a class, are wealthy, and can go to theaters week days.

Sheedy's Theater, Brockton, has been forced to cut out vaudeville for an odd reason—the Brockton Musicians' Union has decreed that any theater playing vaudeville must install a five-piece orchestra—not being willing to do this Sheedy's Theater cut out the acts, and now shows Licensed pictures and songs only. The chances seem to point to more of this matter in the near future. M. R. Sheedy has leased the Savoy Theater, Fall River, Mass., from Marcus Loew, and will run the house to moving pictures and vaudeville. Mr. Sheedy had control of this house some time ago, and gave it up. The chances are that Mr. Charles Cook, now managing a Brockton moving picture theater for Messrs. McCue and Cahill, will be placed at the head of the Savoy.

The Palace Theater, Fall River, which was recently acquired by Mr. George Graham from William Stecker, has added vaudeville to its program of pictures and songs.

It seems that "Richardson" is a name which this business finds to its liking. Mr. George E. Richardson, one of S. Z. Poli's electricians, is making an extended trip in the interests of the Poli theaters, and is superintending the installation of moving picture machines in the string of houses controlled by Poli.

Mr. Thomas Walsh, manager of the Pastime Theater, Pawtucket, R. I., tried a few weeks of musical comedies in the theater, and soon found that moving pictures and vaudeville show much better box office results. Accordingly, the Pastime is playing pictures and vaudeville once more.

HENRY.

BOSTON.

The Realistic Moving Picture Co., who control both the Jolliette and Olympic Theaters, Bowdoin Square, have made a change in the booking of their film service. The William E. Greene Film Exchange, the largest renter of Independent films in New England, will handle the two houses in the future.

Mr. Chas. Heath has severed his connection with the Beacon Theater, Tremont Street, as assistant to Mr. Jacob Lowrie, president and general manager for the company. Mr. Lowrie has not quite decided whom he will place in Heath's job.

The Star Theater, Tremont Row, has replaced vaudeville, after running without any acts for nine weeks. It was stated in these columns at that time, the idea was to try and ascertain just how the audiences feel on the subject of vaudeville in the phonograph theater. Applebey told the World's New England representative, that a close investigation, carried on by himself, and his assistant, Mr. Charles Cherry, had made the fact plain that vaudeville was what the people wished, and not illustrated songs. Both the managers state that they inquired of many of the audience day by day. Henceforth the Star will show four reels of first-run Association films and three acts of high-class vaudeville.

The demonstration of Kinemacolor in Boston, which was given December 16, evidently failed to satisfy the demand for the process. Kinemacolor was exploited at Tremont Temple, with two performances on January 31, and one exhibition February 1. The films shown were different in subject from those exhibited at the private exhibition. A trip Through Northern Wales, and the launching of the "Olympic," the largest steamship in the world, were among the films shown. Reserved seats were 50 cents and 25 cents, with the second balcony at 15 cents. Vocal and violin numbers were interspersed. The exhibition was unusually well received by large and appreciative audiences.

Mr. Burton Holmes, also at Tremont Temple, is entertaining large audiences, with moving-pictures at his chief drawing card. Mr. Holmes exhibited some unusually interesting and educational films, among which were pictures of a Bohemian glass factory, and another depicted the family of Jan Kubelik, the famous violinist.

B. F. Keith's Theater was the first one to exhibit "Daylight" moving pictures in Boston.

Although it was a Boston moving picture house, the Pastime, that was taken to task by Mayor Fitzgerald for crowding, etc., no notification was sent to Boston theaters on this matter from the Mayor's office. Many out-of-town moving picture theaters did, however, receive notices, in which they were warned not to allow any standing in the house or lobby; and to sell no tickets in excess of seating capacity. Evidently the crowding, and consequent breaking of the fire laws, can be laid to the moving picture houses outside of Boston, rather than to those in the city.

HENRY

BALTIMORE NOTES.

A new feature in the moving picture business of Baltimore was inaugurated several weeks ago, when Len Spencer, the well-known song slide man of New York, dropped in and opened a local branch of his famous Lyceum. The Lyceum, although entirely new to the moving picture exhibitors of this city, is fast making good. It is in charge of Robert G. Skillman, of New York, and carries more than 600 sets of slides for the latest song hits.

Mr. Skillman has secured the services of a first-class piano player who runs over the music for the singers who are not familiar with the new songs. In connection with the song slide agency there is also a musical and booking agency, which furnishes the majority of the moving picture and combination houses with first-class talent.

Mr. Edward Price, manager of the Blue Mouse, one of the largest exclusive moving picture houses in the city, has discovered a new scheme to run pictures with the house lights on. Mr. Price says he installed a mirror screen, and reduced his house lights from eight to four candle power. The lights have no effect upon the picture. Several other houses are carrying out Mr. Price's plan.

The Spurrier Amusement Company, which during the past few months have taken over several moving picture theaters in Baltimore and the surrounding territory, have taken over the Alhambra Theater on West Lexington Street. The house was formerly owned by Mr. James Hooper, of this city, who was forced to sell out his interests in the house and go abroad for his health. The name of the theater will be changed to the Lemmon and will be managed by Mr. I. J. Dawes, who will discontinue Association service and put on first run Independent.

Many of the moving picture theaters are running stock companies composed of four or five people, who also talk pictures. Among the leaders in the line are the Columbia, on Columbia Avenue, and Pearce & Sheck's Leader, on South Broadway. The new idea seems to meet with the public approval.

GEORGE O. WILLIAMS.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Mr. Joseph Hopp, president of the Standard Film Exchange, has returned after a brief sojourn in the State of Florida, whither he had journeyed in search of the "fountain of youth." Although he was unsuccessful in his search, his stay in that sunny climate greatly improved his general health, and he is again possessed with that vigor and energy which characterized "J. S." as the hustling film man of Chicago.

Mr. A. M. Gollos, proprietor of the Royal and Jefferson Theaters, Chicago, has just closed negotiations for the erection of a new exclusive picture theater to be erected at Kedzie and Twelfth Streets. The building will be 75 x 140 feet, with a seating capacity of 1,000, all on one floor. Plans are now being made for the building, which will be a model of architectural beauty, and strictly modern in every detail. This new theater will be completed about the first of September.

REX POSTERS.

We have just seen a poster for the first Rex Release, "A Heroine of '76." The border or frame design used is original and adds much to the attractiveness of this poster. We believe this design is to be retained, which will give the appearance of simply inserting the new illustration in a frame from week to week and will also give the Rex poster quite a distinctive touch.

Metal Covered Entrance for Open Air Picture Show

By W. W. Darby.

Summer is near at hand, and the open-air picture show man will soon get busy. Herewith is shown an entrance furnished with fancy stamped metal, especially designed to meet the requirements composed of two towers, connected by a neat arch. One tower can be used for a coat room, the other a box office.

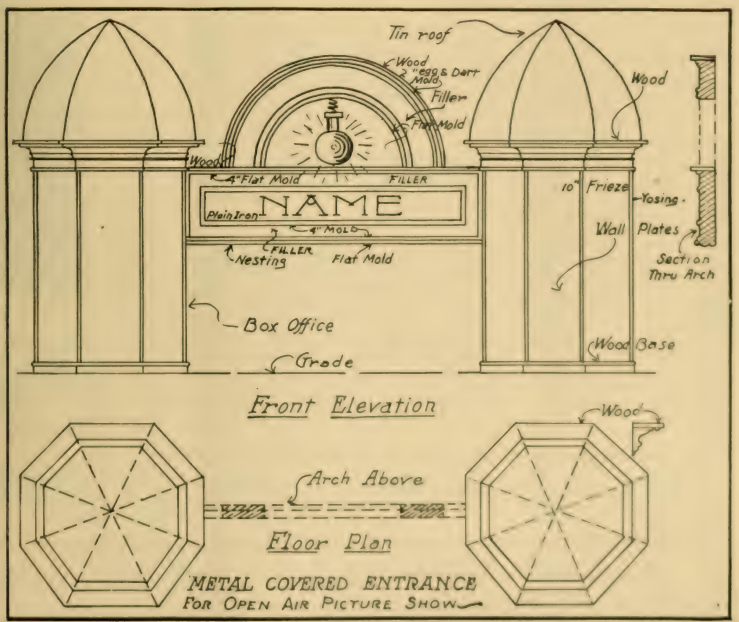
The framing should be done by a first-class carpenter. Cover all studding and roof rafters with ½-inch wood sheathing, all exposed surfaces to be true and even. Cover the roof with a good quality roofing tin. Use a 12-inch cornice with about a 9-inch projection. Select one with a nice bold pattern, with a neat profile, finished as shown in detail. The moulding used at the base of cornice should be about 10 inches deep. Cover the walls with some nice block or flowered pattern. Use a nosing at the corners. Provide a neat 6- or 8-inch wood baseboard. Care should be taken to finish arch as shown on plan. Top member of arch is curved, leaving an open space in the form of a semi-circle to suspend arc light. All material specified is regular stock size and patterns, and can be secured from any manufacturer of stamped metals. An entrance finished as above shown is sure to meet with approval in every particular, and the finished work cannot be equaled by any other material.

The cost is about one-third less than any other metal due to the low cost of the metal as compared with other material. There is a great saving in labor also.

It would be advisable to employ a metal worker, or at least a good practical man to apply the metal, as this is very important. The cornice mouldings and plates should be applied with care, keeping them true to line. All lapping joints should be well nailed. In painting, select some light color. The metal should be kept well painted to protect same from the weather.

If the material is selected and erected according to sketch, same will make a very handsome front, which cannot be equalled by any other material, except marble and staff, at a probability entrance in cost.

The author will be pleased to give any further information to the readers of the Moving Picture World on this comparatively new use for stock material.



NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

NESTO

"Rarely Equalled—Never

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

A HIT! A HIT!!

Nestor's Release of We

"THE TRA

An Extraordinary Foto

The Query—

A prominent Exchangeman recently remarked: "It beats me how Nestor manages to put out one good picture after another, when most manufacturers make occasional slips!"

The Answer—

We could not make a poor picture if we would, and we would not make it if we could.

That's Right!

Keep up that constant, insistent, persistent, strenuous, imperative all-compelling demand for Nestor Films, and your success will be as rugged and as enduring as the Rock of Gibraltar. Shun wildcat Exchanges; steer clear of junk dealers and beware of the "duping brotherhood". Deal with reputable Exchanges only—there are quite a few of them, and they all have the "real goods"—genuine Nestors—which you can always get if you always demand them.

There's but ONE NESTOR A WEEK, released every Wednesday. You can't afford to miss it—you can get it—Get It!

For Bulletins Writ
147 Fo

Scene from

"In The Com
Order Now!
Wednesday

"The Light Beyond" For Release Wednesday, Feb. 15th, 1911 The Very Essence of Pathos

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Ba

FILMS

...passed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

...PALPABLE HIT!!

...y, February 8th, 1911

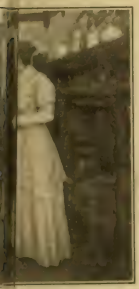
...GRESSOR"

...ic Feast in 998 Feet.

IT PAYS TO GET Nestor Films!

...WORLIST 1010" ...Y.



...aggressor"

...March 8th, 1911 Order Now!

...ned Ranks" ...!

Exhibitors! Exchangemen!

Nestor Enthusiasts know that we neither make idle statements nor indulge in pyrotechnic displays; so, when we say,

"IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD" we know whereof we speak. Good Nestors, however, are not good enough for us, hence our redoubled efforts to make Better Nestors—the ones we are now releasing and which are earning us showers of praise. Even this does not satisfy us—we want to do the best and we are doing the best to release the Best Pictures that human mind, experience, skill and money can produce.

Many of you have been so kind as to eulogize our product; but we would like to have all of you write us, telling of the faults rather than the virtues of Nestor Films.

We are broad-minded enough to know that we do not know everything; moreover neither we nor any other mortal will ever corner the "Know everything" market. But we know enough to know that, with your timely and helpful suggestions, we are bound to improve all the time and thus please the great majority of the people.

For Release Wednesday, Feb. 22nd, 1911 "His Father's House"
A Nestor Winner

...Building, 4th Avenue and 14th Street, New York

MELIES IN TEXAS.

The San Antonio Daily Express, dated January 8, contains an interesting feature story, occupying more than one page of reading matter, with illustrations dealing with the Star Film Ranch. Of course, moving picture people know that this ranch refers to the Melies Stock Company, now in San Antonio, where the popular Western pictures are now being produced. The players are all described and a lucid description is given of incidents connected with the taking of moving pictures. In part, the San Antonio Daily Express says:

"Like all people, who accomplish things, the members of the Star Film Company are thoroughly in sympathy with each other, and their surroundings, and comfortably above or below, the little conventionalities of living that occupy the time and attention of ordinary mortals. Individually, they have reached a certain eminence in their professions, and they are willing to take this little holiday from the strenuous business of creating a life, and spend a working lark in this winter in sunny Texas. After working hours, they employ their time in various cultural and recreational pursuits.

"The cowboys, unofficially known as Big Bill, Spence, Joe Flores, Heffinger, the two Coopers, and McNooe, are hearty, fun-loving fellows, with soft Western drawls to their voices, and absolute unpretense to their appearance to 'put the chaps' on every other good fellow that comes among them. They are all exceptional riders, Joe Flores in particular, having worked in the Buffalo Bill Show, and they are as genuine as the free distances of their own rugged prairies.

"Their boon outdoor companion, little Miss Storey, has gained their sincere good will by her ability to "ride anything with hair on it." They have even called one of their favorite ponies by her nickname—Billy. Miss Storey rides and frolics with them day after day, under the chaperonage of her mother, Mrs. Storey, of New York, and is achieving a really wonderful suppleness and beauty of physical development. Flying about on her intelligent-faced little cow pony, in red-banded sweater and feathered cap, she is as picturesque a little figure as will be found anywhere in this land of the unusual.

"William F. Haddock, the manager, really has no time for play, for his duties call for night as well as day hours. He reads all the scenarios submitted for the consideration of the company, plans out the scenes, makes up the casts, digs around in the capacious wardrobe rooms in search of costumes, aids Mr. Ford in the selection of settings and helps criticise the films when they are run off in the projecting room.

"Mr. Clifford is the scholar and gentleman of the party, for he spends his leisure time working out new themes, and planning for the production of outdoor plays. William Paley has a unique "past," which, like most pasts, is interesting. One of the striking incidents in it, is that he went through the Spanish-American War with his cinematograph and took a moving picture of Cervera's fleet leaving the harbor at Havana. And the rest of them have had lives as individually interesting."

THE "NEW THEATER," BALTIMORE.

With every seat filled and many standing, the initial performance at the "New Theater." Baltimore's new vaudeville and moving picture theater, took place Saturday night, December 17.

An exceptionally good bill was presented and a series of first-run Biograph pictures were also shown.

The "New Theater" will be conducted by the "New Theater" Company, which is headed by the Whitehurst Brothers, who have for the past few years successfully conducted the "Red Moon," a popular moving picture theater, in this city. Beyond a doubt it is the largest and prettiest playhouse devoted exclusively to pictures and vaudeville south of New York and seats 2,000 people.

The manner in which the building has been constructed is excellent. There are two galleries, each seating 600 people. The floors are covered with a deep red Brussels carpet; lobby is decorated with large mirrors and ferns. Beautiful paintings by Oskar Gross, the well-known artist, are prominent on the dome and the panels.

The "New Theater" will be devoted exclusively to continuous vaudeville and pictures. The price of admission will be 10 and 20 cents.

CHRIS CLINTON.

Chris. Clinton (stage name, Chris. Wilson), lecturer and singer, communicate with H. A. Fischbeck, Jersey City, N. J. Business opportunity.

STATIC ELECTRICITY IN THE CAMERA.

A Remedy Devised by Mr. Leon Ardouin, of the Carlton Motion Picture Laboratories.

Film manufacturers have always had trouble with the static effects or electrical markings in the negative. Especially in cold, dry temperatures have these tree formations been so conspicuous in some negatives as to compel them to be discarded. To the layman even it must be apparent that these markings are due to the friction of the rapidly moving film in contact with the metallic parts of the camera or the printing apparatus.

After many experiments I have discovered a remedy which seems to be effectual. First, I would suggest the covering of all the frictional parts with an insulating substance—ebonite or other. Also, in order to minimize the generation of frictional electricity, it is necessary to have a certain amount of moisture always in the interior of the camera. I have devised a very simple device for this purpose which answers admirably, and the cost of installation is infinitesimal.

A-DRY BATTERIES. B-COIL. D-FELT
C-GLASS VASE WITH WATER AND ALCOHOL

A, A, in the sketch is a small dry battery consisting of two cells which send a current through a coil (B). The heat produced by the resistance warms, in a glass vessel (C), a mixture of equal parts of water and alcohol, on the surface of which rests a piece of felt (D), which also acts as a wick. The whole device is placed inside the camera box and the slight warmth and humidity created has been found to prevent electric markings in the negative even under the most trying conditions. I trust that it will prove as useful to others as it has to me.

SCENARIO WRITING.

F. H. Richardson.

A gentleman in St. Paul, Minn., writes at considerable length as regards the matter of scenario writing. St. Paul says he has sent in forty different scenarios, which have each been kept from three to four weeks and finally returned. St. Paul says he has put in much time on these scenarios, besides paying stenographers' services to copy them, and intimates that it is his belief that companies have professional writers who read the scenarios, change the names, work over the plot and thus get their scenarios for nothing, the real inventor of the plot losing out.

I do not think, St. Paul, that your suspicions are well founded. In the first place, if the companies tried anything of that sort they would, I believe, very soon get caught. In the second place, scenarios are, at this stage of the game, too cheap to be worth stealing. The editor of this department writes, to some extent, for magazines. He would hate to tell you how many manuscripts were returned marked "not available" before his first one was accepted. He felt highly indignant, too, at times, believing the manuscripts to be at least passably good, but now from added experience and knowledge that comes with years, he can look over the work he once believed excellent and realize how crude it really was. I do not mean by this, St. Paul, that your work is crude, but you must come to a realization of the fact that the big producing companies receive hundreds of scenarios each week and naturally they select only those which seem of exceptional merit and which best suit their needs. Naturally, too, the readers are not able to read all manuscripts the day they are received, or even for several days after they are received. I should consider a return in two weeks, or even three weeks, as quite reasonable. St. Paul advises all scenario writers to have their work copyrighted before sending it in. That is all right, and not at all a bad idea. St. Paul promises an article soon on another topic, which we shall be very glad to receive.

THE FLAGRANT ABUSE OF POSTERS. ARE WE RETROGRADING?

The World's New England representative greatly deplores the fact that the methods in use at the present time, by several Boston moving picture houses, as regards posters, painting, and billboards, are extremely low grade. A recent able editorial in the World, made a detailed analysis as to whether the industry was progressing or going backwards—and cited instances to uphold both views.

The abuse of lobby advertising might well have had a prominent place in the "going backwards" section. The writer will cite a few phrases that recently adorned, or rather, disgraced, one of Boston's best moving picture houses.

"The greatest, grandest, wildest exhibition of blood-curdling buffalo, Indians and cowboys." "Hair-raising feats of risk and daring." "See the savage war dance of the Indian braves." "Frenzied, snorting horses," etc. It is useless to dwell further on this, as the foregoing is ample to give the reader the idea we wish to convey. The lettering was of great size, and coloring of the letters very poor. To every exhibitor, having the slightest real desire to help the business along, such an outrageous exhibition of advertising must be extremely humiliating. Five huge paintings, plastered in the lobby, on every available inch of space, added to a plethora of such written work as has been pointed out, utterly killed what, by itself, is a beautiful, artistic front. The worst of all this is, that we can never, successfully at least, compete for the trade of the upper classes as long as such absolutely rotten methods are employed. Such advertisements can only be calculated to catch the interest of the lower classes.

The particular house we have in mind, may do a good business by catering to this class. That is all very well, but what of the other moving picture houses scattered throughout Boston? The writer is absolutely sure that such lobby displays will wreak much harm in houses presenting only refined and high-class work. It is only fair to assume, that everyone not familiar with the trade, will place all moving picture houses in the self-same category as this one. That means the business is coining a new batch of knockers of the photoplay—not boosters, as ought to be the case—an extremely bad state of affairs. Although the instance we have just made note of is, perhaps, somewhat more flagrant than usual, yet conditions have been practically the same for months. To be candid, we would be only too pleased to see either the license authorities or the Watch-Ward take hold of this matter. Such a proceeding is, without doubt, severe, but the end justifies the means. This would be better than to allow a small proportion of the moving picture theatres to do so much damage to everyone concerned. Exhibitors should not be allowed to do just as they please with their houses.

If the public receives poor value for their money at, let us say, a shoe store, it does not mean all other shoe stores are doing the same. With this line it is different. All houses seem to be judged alike—especially on unfavorable points. The good theaters suffer for the evils of the poor ones. The unjustness of this is quite evident. However, that does not help in the least. The writer is willing to predict that summary punishment of some sort will be meted out to these houses in the not distant future—such as the losing of license. In order to show that such a proceeding is not without precedent in this city, the World's New England representative will dig up an incident that, under ordinary circumstances, would have been allowed to sleep in obscurity—so poor a showing does it make. Last winter, three representative Boston moving picture houses lost their licenses by special order of the mayor in office at that time. The cause was the "repeated use of vaudeville, after having been warned that such a proceeding was not in accordance with the license granted."

The houses after losing several valuable days of business, were only granted a limited [illegible] when they had publicly apologized their shortcomings by large advertisements in the daily papers, in which they promised, "never to do it again."

In conclusion, we must regretfully state that the poster abuse is, beyond, any doubt, the crying evil of this business so far as Boston is concerned, and far overshadows all other local evils. Will the exhibitors at fault change their tactics, or will they keep at it until forced to quit, and be publicly disgraced as in the case of last winter. "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine." Verbum sap. —HENRY.

IN THE COMMISSIONED RANKS. (Nestor).

"In the Commissioned Ranks" is not a [illegible] picture. It is a sad one, however, and contains a lesson to army wives and husbands, who should see it by all means. And having seen it, we are sure that they will never neglect their children to excess. The picture in this instance has to do with an unnatural mother who is frivolous and given to outgoing [illegible] to the neglect of domestic duties. She not only neglects her child, but seems to dislike it more than otherwise. It may be that she is the step-mother to the child, which would account for her attitude towards the youngster, but this is not made entirely clear in the picture.

The father of the child is of the opposite disposition towards the little one and seems to love the child; but he cannot give it his time and attention because his military duties require a great deal of his time. While he is away in service the mother mistreats the child in a very heartless manner, which further strengthens the impression that she is a step-mother and not the child's real mother.

Once, while the father is away in service, the child is taken dangerously ill, and when the news arrives the mother is found enjoying herself at a military ball. The husband coming home in haste finds his little daughter at the point of death and learns from the army surgeon and the maid that his wife is spending herself at the ball. In rage and indignation the father bursts into the brightly lighted hall amidst the guests and confronts the mother of his child. But in doing so he manages to offend the old general, and is promptly sent to the guard house, while the dance goes merrily on, and the little girl's life runs away. After the child's death the couple are cut asunder, and finally agree to a separation. While the [illegible] these events run across some of the baby's clothes, and these bring on memories that serve to reconcile the couple for the sake of the memory of their child.

This story is not at all new, but it is true that never grows old. It teaches a good lesson, not only to army couples, but to all couples that children often suffer on account of quarreling parents.

The picture is exceedingly well acted. We might say that it is the best acted picture of the Nestor brand that we have ever seen. It is nicely toned and tinted, especially attractive, interesting, logical and dignified all the way through.

Col. Wm. F. Cody obtained a permanent injunction against the Yankee Company of New York to restrain the distribution of a film entitled "The Terror of the Prairie or Buffalo Bill's Downfall." The Court also sustained the exclusive right of Col. Cody to the nickname of "Buffalo Bill."

Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has rendered a decision sustaining the act of Assembly regarding the population of theatres. The bill provides for at least three hour toilet parlors in every theater. This law, if enforced, means practically the extermination of the small three to four hundred seat house. The question has to be solved as "What constitutes a theatre?"

THE OLD MAN AND HIM

Unequalled Military Spectacle!

Reproduction of the Civil War Conflict at Petersburg, Va., on an immense scale. Absolutely a MASTERPIECE at tremendous cost. Your patriotism will pay you. . . .

WRITE FOR PARTICULARS AND ADVERTISING MATTER

The Champion Film Co.,

Distributed thro' The Sales Co., 12 East 15th Street, New York.

THE PICTURE THE AUDIENCE LIKES.

By the World Reviewer.

Theater audiences in New York, at least, are not given to violent demonstration. They will liberally applaud an indifferent vaudeville act, and let a much better picture disappear amid absolute silence—to wit: At Keith's, Union Square, on Saturday, the Gaumont masterpiece of photography and acting, "Herod and the New Born King," was received in impressive silence, while a ridiculous vaudeville stunt, which followed, was applauded.

Managers have argued from this, that an audience prefers vaudeville to pictures, and accordingly have put vaudeville into the program.

The writer of this, has seen practically every licensed release for more than two years, and every independent release since the independent producers became factors in the motion picture world. And he does not agree with the managers. Comments, heard over and over again, in all the principal theaters of New York, do not justify this assumption. It is, no doubt, true that some in every audience do prefer the vaudeville, but they are in a minority and form an inconsiderable part of the people who attend the shows.

The attitude of the audiences is much like that of most persons after finishing a book or looking at some picture. They do not lay down the book, or turn away from the picture with vigorous hand-clapping. They are in a more thoughtful mood, and their enjoyment and appreciation cannot be translated into applause. If goes deeper than that, and is more pleasurable than what causes a noisy demonstration of appreciation.

After setting in literally hundreds of audiences, sometimes as many as a dozen a week, the writer is prepared to lay down two rules producers must follow to make a picture popular.

First, it must tell a story so plainly it can be followed and understood without too great mental effort. The plot, if there is a plot, must be simple, and every move made by the actors must be concentrated upon the development of that plot. Probably the best is where the picture ends with the climax, though where the climax calls for the exhibition of some great sorrow or emotional effect, an anti-climax, showing some relief, or some change from the conditions required in the climax, is helpful. Occasionally a picture leaving an audience with their emotions aroused to the utmost, will be considered favorably, but one in a program is sufficient.

The second requisite is mechanical perfection. This means not only good photography, but proper staging. One otherwise excellent cowboy picture was spoiled by the men greeting each other with a kiss on each cheek. The cowboy greets you with a slap on the back so vigorous it would raise most men off their feet, and a grasp of the hand that would remind one of the grip of a vise.

Pictures supposed to represent the interior of millionaires' residences are often ruined by showing the same rooms as have appeared in pictures of common dwellings. For example, a party is seen alighting from a limousine car in all the glory of full dress, and disappearing into a brown-stone front. The next scene shows only a poorly-furnished room, showing that the same interior has done duty again that appeared, perhaps, in an earlier picture. Not all producers are guilty of these lapses, but a good many are, and all have been, at one time or another.

The audience sees this incongruity, and it often spoils the whole program. A frequent failing is to have a character wear the same costume through successive scenes, representing, perhaps, the lapse of days, or even weeks. The writer has heard many a woman wonder if the one shown in the pictures didn't have but one dress. It is a small thing perhaps, but like one false note, in an otherwise correct musical selection, it creates a discord which mars the entire piece.

The public will shortly demand that these incongruities be overcome. They will require that pictures shall present life as it actually is, not as it might be, or as some producer has an impression it is. The comments heard in two years' time will be reproduced from time to time, and will, perhaps, indicate to producers where slight changes can be made which will go far toward popularizing the picture and insuring the commendation of the public.

The manufacturers sometimesp disagree with the criticisms which appear in these columns, but in no instance has a film been criticised which did not contain some defect which appeared to the audience as more or less of an imperfection. From the standpoint of those who pay their money to be amused or instructed, the films criticised, have contained all the imperfections pointed out. Often suggestions have been given for improvement, and in not a few instances these suggestions have been the repetition of what one or more in the audience has said. Not many have seen an average of perhaps forty films a week for two years and more, consequently, perhaps, the suggestions made, or the criticisms offered, are more likely to be considered.

LACK OF AMERICAN ENTERPRISE IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Those of us who are inclined to swell out our chests, and point to the supremacy of American prestige, would be decidedly shocked, if we really knew how far behind the times some American moving picture manufacturers are in pushing their products beyond the borders of their own country. What is known to the picture trade as the "foreign market," is, generally speaking, Great Britain and France. The American manufacturers seem to be unaware that there are thriving, teeming, countless millions of people in other centers besides the countries mentioned, who must have amusement as well as their white-skinned brethren.

We have been going over the Consular Reports, that are received by the government at Washington from their agents in every land. It is a regular trade magazine, outlining the conditions of trade in general, in the different localities, and suggesting what American manufacturers might do to get their share of the business in each particular locality. From these reports, it appears that it is the Germans, the French and the English, who get the bulk of foreign trade in any line, whether it be moving pictures or railroad material, clothing, leather goods, or most anything else. Perhaps, by instinct, these gentlemen of German, of French and English birth, are of a roving disposition; or, perhaps, it is that their own home conditions are so overcrowded that they are forced to migrate, and nose around in the far-off corners of the earth. But at any rate they are there, and they are getting the business.

America is the land of comfort, comparatively speaking, and the American is very well satisfied to stay at home. It is difficult to get a competent man who will go to a foreign country to act as agent; therefore, the foreign market is allowed to go to the other fellow, because the American is too busy and contented with the home market. The American is a traveler; you will find him in all parts of the world. But, as Mark Twain put it, he is an "uncommercial traveler." He travels after he has made his money out of the home market. While traveling, he writes lengthy letters back to the trade journal of whatever trade he may be identified with. His letters are read by his trade brothers, who agree with his views, and that is the end of it.

The recent Consular Reports, published in Washington, are very interesting. From them we learn, that in Moscow there are 80 theaters, and in St. Petersburg a like amount. All running with a general admission of twenty cents, and, according to the consuls, who are very good authority, and not given to exaggeration, the theaters in Russia are doing a land-office business, especially on Sundays and holidays, when police are sometimes required to keep order.

Now, with all this activity in moving pictures in Russia, American pictures are only seen once in a "blue moon." French and Italian pictures have the call. As the consul explains, this is not because the French and Italian pictures are greatly superior to American, but for the reason that the American has neglected the Russian market. He goes no to tell how the Russians are interested in pictures of American life, the same as Americans are in pictures of Russian life. The consul says, that in order to compete successfully, it would be necessary for an American firm to open a branch in one of the principal cities, and carry a large stock, the same as the French and the Italian manufacturers do. This is a very simple matter, involving nothing more than printing the titles and sub-titles in Russian, and the use of a reasonable amount of judgment in selecting films that would interest the Russian people. For instance, the Russian people like heavy drama. Their lives are probably so interwoven with tragedy that they understand its depths far more than an American can. But on the other hand, the Russian people are known the world over as "good sports." They love a horse race and a prize fight, just as well as anyone on earth, anl no doubt would like pictures of that nature.

With all that we have heard about Russia being the land

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

Release Monday, February 6th.

"A Pittsburg Millionaire"

A Dramatic film intense in its appeal. An exceedingly interesting story. A decided feature.

Length approx. 985 feet

Release Thursday, February 9th.

"On The Installment Plan"
"Too Much Aunt"

Split Reel Comedy. Both hilariously funny. A laugh-making reel from the first foot to the last.

Length respectively 560 ft. and 430 feet

Release Monday, February 13th.

"A Quiet Evening At Home"

A full reel comedy of exceptional merit. Not a dull foot in the reel. Very funny.

Length approx. 985 feet

Release Thursday, February 16th.

"In The Land Of Cactus"

A Western Drama. Realistic and abounding in thrilling situations.

Length approx. 980 feet

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy AMERICAN FILMS

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

QUALITY IS ECONOMY

The Machine that Lasts the Longest Is the Cheapest

BY MANY WHO KNOW IT IS SAID TO BE THE PERFECT PROJECTION MACHINE. BUT STILL GREATER IMPROVEMENTS FOR 1911 MAKE THE MOTIOGRAPH THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE

THE MOTIOGRAPH

Mr. H. G. GRIFFIN of Palmetto, Fla., writes Jan. 20, 1911: "My Motiograph is running fine. It gives the best picture of any machine seen in this part of the country. 1911 MODEL" most truly. [illegible]

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES of the oppressed life in that country moves at a pretty swift pace in the cities and small money is spent on amusements of all kinds. So much for Russia.

Taking a long jump from Russia to Uruguay, in South America, there is an interesting letter from the United States Consul at Montevideo, and his letter from there indicates that the people near the Equator are just as much in love with the picture as people near the pole, and this only further emphasizes the fact that human nature is human nature the world over, and has not changed one iota since the world began.

This Uruguay report is very much similar to that of the Russian Consul, except that he pays more attention to moving picture supplies. From his report we learn that there is only one large importer of moving picture supplies in Montevideo. He has the whole field to himself, and has been making some beautiful blunders. This importer buys all of his supplies from Europe, because he does not know much about the American market consequently the Montevidean people know more about Europe than America, so far as films are concerned. Some French concern got in there and sold them a lot of abominable French moving picture machines, that stood service for about three months, and then began to give trouble. Then an enterprising German came along and loaded them down with a lot of German machines, for which it is impossible to get any parts, and which are a nuisance in every way. It is quite certain that brand-new, up-to-date American machine would be a revelation to those people, both from point of service and improvement in projection. But, of course, they do not know, and never will know, if somebody does not go down there and show them.

There is another communication from the United States Vice-consul at Bogota, Colombia, in which he says that there are no machines of American manufacture in the State. The four cinematographs now in use in Bogota, being of an European make. If the United States can build a canal through the Isthmus of Panama and send workmen down there by the thousand, it is very strange that an American moving picture machine has never found its way to the Isthmus.

We would advise those of our readers, who are at all interested in foreign moving picture matters, to send for the Daily Consular and Trade Reports, issued by the Bureau of Manufacturers, Department of Commerce and Labor, at Washington, D. C. The issue we have been quoting from, is dated January 14, 1911. It is sent free of charge to any citizen of the United States. —H. F. H.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Detroit, Mich.—The members of the newly-formed Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association held their first annual banquet at the Burns Hotel, January 4th. Addresses were made by Thomas Lynch, president; Thomas Scott, booking agent; E. F. Sefton and F. F. Fisher. About fifty guests were served.

Valparaiso, Ind., for the second time in its history, saw moving pictures on Sunday. On January 8th the three houses opened simultaneously and did a big business without any interference. Apparently the people of Valparaiso want Sunday shows. The clergy are not going in their opposition.

Montreal Exhibitors are still putting up a stiff fight for their rights. The World wishes them all success in their determined stand against the $500 license ordinance.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Moving pictures have made an awful hit with the patients of the Western Kentucky Asylum for the Insane. The superintendent is of the opinion that the pictures are the greatest thing that ever happened for keeping these poor unfortunates happy. Diversion of mind is to insanity what fresh air is to tuberculosis.

Paterson, N. J.—New and more stringent regulations will be in force hereafter regarding the operation of picture shows in theaters, halls and schools. Operators must be over 18 and will have to pass an examination and carry a license card. No motor will be allowed for turning machines. One of the provisions in the ordinance is a fee. It stipulates that during all the time a cinematograph is in operation it shall be the duty of a special employee to stand ready in the booth with a three-gallon fire extinquisher.

Rochester, N. Y.—An application for a building permit has been filed for the erection of power house and factory at the corner of Dewey, Ridgeway and Knickerbocker Avenues for the manufacture of fireproof films. This will be the factory that was at first intended to be built in St. Louis by the Cramers, of dry-plate fame.

WHAT DO THE ACTORS SAY IN THE SILENT PICTURES?

What do the actors say in the silent pictures? Why, of course, exactly that which their parts suggest! Perhaps so, but perhaps not always. Admitted that in the majority of instances it does appear as if "action suited word," or more important that "word suited action," the synchronized phonograph has not yet appeared in perfection and use, but even if it had there would be no proof that in the play the actors were saying just what the phonograph repeated; it seems to be a case where the mechanical voice might be more truthful than the human voice.

It is not surprising to imagine that in the monotony of rehearsals, or even if in the final acting before the camera, the actors, too conscious of the fact that they are playing to the eye and not to the ear, may not always be suiting the words to the action; if we may rightly reverse the Shakespearian injunction to good actors. It may be asked, even if they do not, what does it matter? Nobody will be any the wiser. Stop a moment, a new issue has arisen, and, paradoxical as it may seem, we have among the patrons of the moving picture a class of people—a wonderful class distinct by themselves, of whom none of us may have given any thought—who can hear what the silent actors are saying. Again another and more strange paradox; these people who can hear the "silent actors" are themselves deaf; yet, herein lies the secret of their hearing, for they both see and hear through the eye—they are lip readers. Able to synchronize word with action, they are also able to harmonize them, and is it a surprise or not? They tell us that often the words suggested by the moving lips of the actors do not harmonize with the actions, and often do not even agree with the parts. What a revelation is here! Faithfulness in diction, as well as in action, must now rule, and our old teacher Shakespeare, although ignorant of the cinematograph taught well—even better than he expected—when he laid down the imperative injunction of suiting words and actions. In a recent issue of a New York daily there appeared an account of how some deaf "lip readers" had been surprised at some moving pictures in which the actors were saying things entirely inappropriate with either the occasion or their parts.

The days of mutterings and useless speeches has now gone by, synchronization and harmony must prevail, even with only the camera as an audience, as under this new discovery the camera has become the eye and ear of countless thousands. A further benefit must accrue, as a thorough and faithful acting will tend to give more life and spirit, driving away much of the inertness of many of the earlier pictures. We owe a debt to the lip readers. —W. H. J.

CHAMPIONS OF THE PHOTOPLAY.

A great many so-called reformers, who are generally persons of narrow views and poor judgment, are raising various objections to the cheap moving picture shows. All this indicates misdirected zeal. The agents of the various societies who are placing the picture theaters under the ban appear to be proceeding on the theory that the theater itself is the evil, and that all such places are pernicious in their influence. There was a time when the film manufacturers turned out occasional pictures of a suggestive or improper character, but that time has passed. The views now projected on the canvas in nearly all the cheap theaters offer no menace to the morals of either child or adult. They are generally clean, wholesome and entertaining, and particularly interesting to the young.

If girls are started on the downward path through the moving picture theaters, it is not the fault of the pictures. There may be some theaters which are not properly conducted. If they exist, they should be weeded out. Confectioneries, cafes, drug stores, or any establishment in which the youth of opposite sexes meet, if they are not properly conducted, are open to the same objections as are being urged against the motion picture houses. The thing most needed is more parental supervision and restraint. If young girls are permitted to go out alone, they are in as much danger elsewhere as they are in the picture theaters, but it is wrong to place severe restrictions upon the theaters because a few managers are careless. Go after the managers, and if necessary, put them out of business, but do not take away from the people of limited means, one of their most popular forms of amusement.—Editorial in Wheeling, W. Va., Register.

Plymouth, Mass.—Moving pictures of this city have been taken by a local exhibitor, and are a great drawing card at the local house. The views were taken from a moving automobile. The fire department closes the picture with a lively sprint.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Linton, Md.—Mr. John I. Wright purchased the Lyric Gem Theater on West Vincennes street from Lorraine Hunt, who has conducted that place of amusement for the past two years. Mr. Hunt will devote his time to the management of the Dixon theater, his other theater on North Main street.

Holyoke, Mass.—Mr. William G. Commerford, formerly school and assistant manager of the Strand Moving Pictures Theater of this city, has purchased the Grand theater in Chicopee Falls.

Danbury, Neb.—The home Moving Picture Show, that has been running in the building south of the Bohlandt's for several weeks past, has closed as the proprietors claim they were compelled to do owing to the lack of patronage.

Atlanta, Ga.—L. A. Hubbard has leased the first floor of the store at 659 Cherry street from Arlington Loan and Trust Company, for a period of four years, to be operated as a moving picture theater. The place at present is being fitted up and will not be open until July 4 a year.

Waverly, N. Y.—Mr. C. L. Rand, the local manager of the Star Theater, has closed that theater and will add the picture machines and fixtures over to M. Peters, who owns a string of moving picture theaters in this vicinity. Lack of patronage was the cause for the closing of this theater.

Savannah, Ga.—A new moving picture theater is being planned to open in the building now occupied by the Savannah Pool Room parlors, at 125 Bryan street, which will be under the management and proprietorship of Mr. M. Lee.

The Golden Spike Company, of Ogden, Utah, has purchased the Pastime Moving Picture Show, that has been running in the building south of the Bohlandt's for about twelve years, and will remodel the property, after which the moving picture machines and fixtures will be moved over to the new theater.

Atlanta, Ga.—L. Hubbard has leased the first floor of the store at 659 Cherry street from Arlington Loan and Trust Company, for a period of four years, to be operated as a moving picture theater. The place at present is being fitted up and will not be open until July 4 a year.

Waverly, N. Y.—Mr. C. L. Rand, the local manager of the Star Theater, has closed that theater and will add the picture machines and fixtures over to M. Peters, who owns a string of moving picture theaters in this vicinity. Lack of patronage was the cause for the closing of this theater.

Savannah, Ga.—A new moving picture theater is being planned to open in the building now occupied by the Savannah Pool Room parlors, at 125 Bryan street, which will be under the management and proprietorship of Mr. M. Lee.

The Golden Spike Company, of Ogden, Utah, has purchased the Pastime Moving Picture Show, that has been running in the building south of the Bohlandt's for about twelve years, and will remodel the property, after which the moving picture machines and fixtures will be moved over to the new theater.

Columbus, Ohio.—W. L. Jamison has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater on the north High street lot for Pastime Company.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Fred Bever is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater on Dubuque street.

Dayton, Ohio.—W. Edward Hanley has decided to erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater on the corner of Fifth and Ludlow streets.

Shamokin, Pa.—Dodd Gutterg is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—S. D. Woodin is making arrangements to erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 333 S. Main street.

Los Angeles, Cal.—J. Greenblatt is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Mariposa avenue and Twenty-third street for W. H. Hamilton.

Hamilton, Ont., Can.—James Wilmott has secured the services of Architect Armstrong to draw plans for a moving picture theater at the corner of Barton and Emerald streets.

Quincy, Mich.—S. E. Butterfield has purchased the Bijou Theater here from D. J. Robson.

Portage, Wis.—Messrs. Jaboob & Avers have completed the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Gosport, Ind.—Hal Harrington has opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Gem.

Bradford, Ill.—Frank Warren has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Independence, Kan.—Messrs. Jess Compton and Gene Stubbs have sold the 5¢ moving picture theater to R. E. Turner.

Toledo, Ohio.—The Empress Amusement Company is preparing to open a new theater on Summit street.

New Orleans La.—H. W. Lamb has purchased the Winter Garden here and will conduct a first-class moving picture theater.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Mr. A. B. Vance is contemplating the establishment of a new moving picture theater here.

NOTES.

Newark, N. J.—A new moving picture and vaudeville theater is being planned for 193 Spruce street, which will be under the management and proprietorship of Mr. Bernard Arkin. So said about town.

Reading, Penn.—The Central Theater Spirata's new amusement palace has thrown open its doors to the public and is now doing an excellent business.

Hartford Conn.—The Pastime Moving Picture Theater has reopened under new management.

Morristown, Penn.—The Hippodrome Theater, which is under the management of Mr. M. Saltinski, has thrown open its doors. This amusement house will operate all of the finest and latest vaudeville and moving pictures that can be produced and will seat about 1,500 patrons. The location of this theater is on the street near the Youngstown, Ohio.—The Bijou Theatorium in West Federal street next to the First National Bank, has been sold by Paul Fitch and Walter Hansen to Robins Brothers, owners of the Star Theatorium in West Federal street, near Chestnut.

Hardwick, Vt.—Mr. R. C. Moodie has sold his moving picture show to Messrs. Green, Moody and Bankhead.

Gardner Mass.—Mr. William A. Wesley, of the Garden Theater, has taken a lease on the Princess Theater of New Bedford and will remodel and convert it into a high grade moving picture theater.

Scranton, Penn.—The Opera Amusement Company will convert the Opera House here into a moving picture theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mr. Benno Sauter has purchased from J. M. Rosenthal the moving picture show screen in the basement at 210 Seneca street, for $8 000.

Rochester, N. Y.—Mr. J. Brown has secured the contract for the Lyceum Theater Moving Picture Theaters. Mr. Wm. B. Dougherty has leased charge of the management.

Eugene, Ore.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this city and will be under the management of Mr. Alfred Wilson.

Los Angeles Cal.—Mr. W. B. Hamilton, architect, has prepared plans for a moving picture theater to contain three stories and basement. He has purchased the Anaheim theater and will convert it into a first class moving picture theater.

Norfolk, Va.—Wm. L. Abbitt has purchased the building on High street, recently occupied by the Lowering Dry Goods Company, and will conduct a moving picture theater. Capt. Abbitt has also let contract for the erection of a moving picture theater on High street, near Monroe, and contract for new motor, and will have a seating capacity of about 1,000 people. It will be known as the Olympic.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is to be planned for Mr. James Sweeny, at Linden Avenue, near Avenue O, and will be known as the Linden Park Palace.

Red Bluff, Cal.—Messrs. Hoggard and Hoggard have leased for some time connected with the Hoggard's theater on Main street, and will open it with Motion Pictures. The two men of the Red Bluff opera house will also run a moving picture show in connection with the Grand.

Carthage, N. Y.—Preparations are practically completed for the opening of a new moving picture theater in the county town, on upper Main Street. Two hundred chairs have been placed in the room and a stage built. The theater will be primarily for Ballads.

Mason City, Iowa.—Lease has been taken on the building at 621 Central Street, by Mr. John R. Medlon, who will convert it into a moving picture theater, which will be open about May 20th. It will be the fifth Nickelodeon started in this town. The Palace, a picture house which has recently changed hands is being run by Mr. Hall and managed by Mr. Edward A. Bowe.

Bienham, Texas.—Bienham is to have a new moving picture palace, which will be established in the Healy Building. In addition to moving pictures there accompanying will be high-class vaudeville performances.

Columbus, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater is being built in this city during the year. A syndicate, whose will be under the proprietorship of Mr. Frank Bernard and Mr. W. H. Hamilton.

Grand Junction, Iowa.—Messrs. Hostike & Orson have sold their moving picture theater here to Messrs. J. J. Brock and C. H. Brock.

Fairbury, Nebr.—Fairbury now has two moving picture theaters, the Majestic and the Idle.

Lackawanna, Pa.—Work has begun upon the remodeling of the building at the northeast corner of Main and Ridge streets, which will be converted into a beautiful high-class moving picture theater, which is said not to be the basement to the Golden Spike. The seating capacity of the new enterprise will be 250 and will be under the supervision of Messrs. Chambers and Hendrie.

Berlin, Wis.—Messrs. Hostike Brothers and W. L. Barnes will start a motion picture show next spring, presumably in the new Lyric theater building now being erected by Messrs. Hostike Brothers. The home of vaudeville and Waterloo, Iowa.—M. J. Judy, local theater manager of the Nugget Theaters, has secured control of the Washington Hall and will transform it into a modern up-to-date moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Rockford Ill.—Mr. L. B. Sumner has purchased the Star Theater here.

Oshkosh Iowa.—Messrs. Edward Jones and J. Fred Calhoun have purchased the interests in the Lyric Theater heretofore held by Harry Millard and will conduct the place of amusement as in the previous administration.

Rhinelander, Wisc.—The Miramar, the new moving picture theater on North Brown street, which for some time has been under course of construction, has thrown open its doors and is now doing an excellent business. The seating capacity is about 250.

Benton, Wisc.—Messrs. Calvert & Kramer have purchased the Dreamland Theater at Cuba and will conduct the same as a moving picture theater. The Star Theater now has been leased to close due to the lack of patronage.

Chicago.—Mr. Ben Harris has sold his moving picture theater, located at 5241-43 North Clark Street, to Mr. Jacob Lieberman.

Mendota, Ill.—Messrs. Charles Kennedy and the Vaudette Moving Picture Theater to Messrs. B. J. & R. Hall.

Portage, Wisc.—The Avenue Inn on East Cook Street, recently purchased by W. C. Jaboob and F. G. Avers, will be run now for a moving picture theater.

Milwaukee, Wisc.—Mr. Henry Kaiser will soon have in the moving picture theater at 2402 Lisbon Avenue.

Pittsburg Kansas.—Messrs. Hoss & Atchison have purchased the Crystal Theater here and will convert the concern into a first-class moving picture theater.

Duluth, Minn.—Mr. [illegible] Alexander, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Letters to the Editor.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—In your issue of February 4th, you printed a letter which was sent by the writer to the New England moving picture managers, and with the letter some statements by your New England correspondent, who hides his light under the pseudonym of "Henry."

I think that in justice to the theater managers who so promptly and courteously answered my communication, it might be well if you publish this letter, which gives the true aspect of the matter. The portion of "Henry's" statement which I wish to flatly contradict is that relating to the answers to my letter, as follows: "The great majority even went so far as to offer the unasked-for information that the main trouble with the Vitagraph was that the recent releases had been far from the usual standard."

Here are the facts; you may judge for yourself. The writer sent out about seventy-five letters and received up to date thirty-one answers. Five out of the thirty-one complained of not getting enough Vitagraph reels. Twenty-five expressed the greatest satisfaction with the General Film Company's service and one wrote a very insulting and scurrilous letter, which, I am convinced, could not have been written by the proprietor of a moving picture establishment, but must have been penned by some employee who had a grudge against the Vitagraph Company and the world in general. It was so ridiculous as to be unworthy of either notice or comment. The last, "for Henry's sake," that the writer of that scrawl was not a friend of his. Outside of this one letter, all the managers spoke very nicely about Vitagraph films, and the majority of them were enthusiastic, as the following extracts will show:

"Regarding getting your releases, will say that I get quite a few, and would like them all, as my patrons like them."

"I find the Vita reels gaining in favor each week."

"It seems to me that the Vitagraph films at the present time are unusually good."

"We would like to get more of your films, but we cannot kick. We have had sixteen Vitagraphs in several weeks."

"My exchange gives me very good service on Vitagraph reels, for which I am thankful, as they always make a hit with my patrons. Personally, I consider them the best made."

"We are running ten reels a week, and since September 26th, almost five months ago, we have had just eight Vitagraph reels. We consider the Vitagraph films among the very best in the licensed service and regret our inability to get more of them."

The originals of all these letters are in my possession and I shall be pleased to show them to you if you desire.

I think you will admit that the statements contained in this letter do not exactly agree with "Henry's" very unwarranted remarks and I trust that both you and "Henry" will accept this retaliation as being made not in a spirit of hostility, but in fairness and truth by one who is always ready to fight at the drop of the hat when his beloved Vitagraph is in question.

I would say in conclusion that the answers received prove conclusively, first: that the General Film Company's service in New England is most satisfactory and a great improvement over the old service, and second: that Vitagraph films stand ace high in the estimation of New England managers and audiences.

Yours truly,

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA,
J. STUART BLACKTON,
Vice-Pres. and Secretary.

To the Editor of the World:

Some time ago there appeared in your publication a most bitter and scathing attack upon COWBOY and INDIAN PICTURES, under the name of One Who Does Not Like Them, the writer evidently not having the courage to append his handle to such an article. However, I watched carefully the following editions in hopes that I might discover the author whose identity I suspicioned, and sure enough in a later copy appeared another slap at these same pictures under the name of the writer of one of your departments, whose principal contributions consists of giving advice to be kind to animals, or that he saw such and such an animal do so and so, very interesting indeed, but entirely foreign to the matter which your valued paper is intended to convey to the moving picture industry, as I fail to see where cruelty to animals has anything to do with the trade, unless it be that some one should start a crusade against the cruelty of certain manufacturers in killing horses, lions, bears, etc., to get realistic results.

I take the opposite side of the fence in the argument concerning Western pictures of every description, especially Indian and Cowboy subjects. I covered ten thousand miles of territory on the great rivers of the Middle West, on my floating theater seating 1,000, this summer. A different town or city was played every day and almost every nationality was played to in widely diversified parts of the country.

I claim to be in as good a position as any man in the United cause in addition to the musical comedy show that I presented I gave moving pictures, and usually the first questions asked after States today to say what kind of pictures these people want, before we had made a landing and the advance sale was started were, was almost always the same, not from any age or class, but "have you got any Wild West pictures this time? The question from the darky of the South to the solid business man of the North, whose curiosity laid in the same channel. We put on at the start of one season a brand new copy of Pathe's Witches' Cave and The Vengeance of the Algerine, one a beautifully colored trick file, the other a very good dramatic subject at that time and they wouldn't sit through it. I paid $125 for this reel, but it only took me a few days to see that I had to invest in a new subject. I secured a fine Western and they literally ate it up all the rest of the season. These same conditions exist at my Zanesville theater, where all I have to do is to advertise a Western subject and I do capacity. Without them the business here would soon go to the bad. Taking all into consideration, our esteemed friend from over the pond will have to show me where he gets his idea that because he, like most Englishmen, thoroughly dislikes anything American, that the public is in accord with his expressed opinion that he, for one, does not like the dirty, unromantic, uninteresting American Indian or Cowboy.

Most truly yours,

Zanesville, Ohio, Jan. 10. W. C. QUIMBY.

The Editor, Moving Picture World.

145 East 23d Street.

Sir.—Far be it from me to rush into print in a frivolous or trifling mood, but when I hear the calumnies heaped on the poor ostrich for hiding his head in the sand, and then considering himself invisible, I am tempted to speak out and invite attention to certain scenes in our films that put the ostrich to blush.

I refer to the naive way in which our Moving Picture Indians "take cover" and imagine themselves hidden. Some time ago I saw "Ononko's Vow" in one scene of which we have a bunch of "war-whoops" making their way across a snow-covered field. In doing this, they ever and anon would flop flat on the snow, presumably for the purpose of concealment. The veriest schoolboy would know better.

This same fault has been observed in many films with Indian subjects. Soon we shall see Lo surprising the hero by creeping down the middle of a state highway on his stomach.

Is there no help?

Yours sincerely,

"ROOKY."

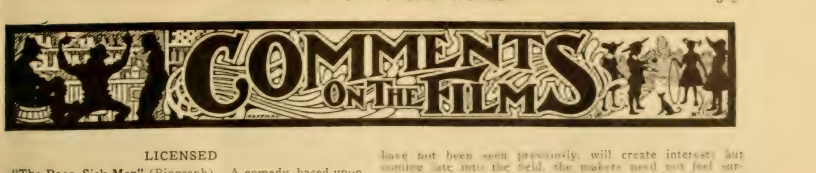
INVESTIGATION OF PICTURE SHOW CONDITIONS IN NEW YORK CITY.

"Yes, there is an investigation of the moving picture shows at present going on, but the Board of Censorship has no part in it. Other civic bodies working in connection with the Board have this matter in hand."

The Board of Censorship is not a prosecuting agency, and its work is the censorship of pictures for the national market. But we are interested in the movement for local reform as well. There is a great deal of misunderstanding about the law which limits the seating capacity of motion picture shows to 300. It is assumed that this law is beneficial to the moving picture men, as they can put in less than 300 chairs and thereby evade the theater law. Just the contrary is the truth. The moving picture men are most anxious of all to have the law changed, and to have the seating capacity enlarged above 300, so that the business will be large enough to justify a first-class performance in a safe and sanitary hall. But at present the law governing the construction of theaters is so stringent that it puts almost a prohibitive expense on the construction of small theaters, seating five or seven hundred, in the congested districts. The building code should be amended to provide for moving picture shows built as moving picture shows. If the enlarged seating capacity can be secured, the small and undesirable places will be killed by competition in short order.

This is one of the reforms the Conference on Motion Pictures is urging. There are a number of other reforms, such as improved ventilation, improved lighting, and some kind of control over the cheap and undesirable vaudeville seen in many picture shows.

We have heard that the Commissioner of Accounts is carrying on an investigation of the picture shows, and it is possible that his recommendations will be so complete as to make an aldermanic investigation unnecessary. Any investigation is merely preliminary to constructive law-making on this subject. There is nothing sensational in the present motion picture situation. It is better than it has ever been in New York. The evils that exist are the product simply of inadequate laws and lack of co-ordination between the city departments that have to regulate picture shows.



LICENSED

"The Poor, Sick Men" (Biograph).—A comedy, based upon the old theory that men are obliged to deceive their wives to get out evenings. These men have all kinds of trouble, chiefly of the impossible sort; arriving at home just ahead of their wives, whose commiseration is liberal. Whether or not this is a representative comedy, may be left to the judgment of those who see it. Probably it would be more popular in a city or large town than in a country district, since in the latter locality, such illusions are not so well understood.

"Father Love" (Lubin).—A touching domestic drama, which has both weak and strong places. Moreover, it introduces paralysis, which seems hardly the proper thing for dramatic presentation. Men do have paralysis. They are left stranded like the hero of this drama, but after all, it isn't quite pleasant to look at pictures of this character. The girl's part, after she finds her father, is pleasing, and the fact that the grandfather takes the unfortunate man home, makes a good ending for what is otherwise a rather gloomy picture.

"How Mary Met the Cow Punchers" (Melies).—A Western drama, with cowboys and a girl from Boston, who rather looks over their heads until they rescue herself and a companion from a ticklish position, with a band of Indians. Then she frankly acknowledges that she has been at fault, and accepts them as friends. The interest lies in the reproduction of Western scenery and types, rather than in the action. The chase is somewhat thrilling, but aside from that, the picture develops comparatively little interest.

"The Spy" (Selig).—A war drama, well presented and containing a man-hunt that is thrilling. The audience is disposed to applaud when the spy finally makes a thrilling escape from the soldiers, and ultimately delivers his important message to the commanding general. No novelty has been introduced, but a picture of this character is always popular with practically all audiences. No matter where it is shown, the movements of a spy will invariably attract favorable attention, and if successful, will receive applause.

"The Lover and the Count" (Edison).—A comedy, which offers some suggestions to opposed lovers, though it cannot be said that the introduction of a trunk for carrying someone away, is a novelty. However that may be, it is well done in this instance, and the audience watches with growing interest, the methods adopted by the lover to secure his bride before she is married to the count by her officious mother. It is undoubtedly true, that they all rejoice with him when in their flight, they meet the minister, and are married before the count and the mother arrive to prevent it. Some of the situations are very funny, and the audience loudly marks its appreciation of them.

"The Secret of the Still" (Kalem).—A melodramatic Southern story, consisting of a love affair, built up around a moonshine still, with a described villain in full operation. The escape of the turpentine and the fire which destroys it, make a very realistic scene. Some of the Southern scenery is attractive, and there is sufficient action in the play to hold the interest. The ready way in which the word of a negro is accepted in these Southern plays is rather unusual. Negroes are in no particular favor with white people down there and probably their assertions regarding murder must would not be taken as reported, as is shown in the picture. This may be a minor fault but it is not true to the life this picture is supposed to accurately depict. The same fault has been noted in previous releases of this type. Apart from this, however, the picture is good and finds favor with those who see it.

"Saved by Telegraphy" (Pathe).—Though this is efficiently worked out, the basis of the film, saving persons from smothering in a safe through the means of telegraphy is not new. It has been done several time before, though forgotten, the producer has been content to shut some persons in the safe—in this instance, two, the girl and her father, and they are rescued by the girl's lover, in approved style. The picture is dramatic enough, and if others of the character have not been seen previously, will create interest; but coming late into the field, the makers need not feel surprised if the picture passes less than it might do otherwise.

"Whiffel's New Sleeve" (Pathe).—A comedy that may cause a laugh in some audiences, though where the writer saw it, there was scarcely a ripple of merriment. Possibly it was the audience, but the guess is ventured that the film itself had something to do with it.

"The Sailor's Return" (Urban).—Excellent in photography, eminently satisfactory in acting, but lacking in strength of plot and interest of story. It is the same old feature of the son returning with a fortune, just in time to save the old people from being driven from their home and releasing the unfortunate girl from attentions the relentless landlord forced upon her. It is a waste of effort, a waste of material, and a waste of time to look at it.

"Scenes in Jersey" (Urban).—Picturesque and instructive scenes on the Island of Jersey in the English channel. The operator selected his view points with discretion, and the mechanical work of the picture has been exceptionally fine. It will hold the attention of any audience. The assortment includes pictures of scenery and are agreeably intermixed and forming a series of educational views of much value.

"The Two Reformations" (Essanay).—The story is well told. Perhaps it is not as strong as some Western stories, but it, at least, possesses the merit of directness. Holdups are common enough, or have been common enough, in some parts of the West, but probably no holdup was ever stopped by the presence of the wife of one of the highwaymen. In that respect the picture presents a novelty. Its whatever, and the setting of the pictures are evidently accurate. The photography is excellent.

"The Baby Fortune Hunters" (Gaumont).—Just why two children should be sent out in a picture to perform such apparently impossible work is difficult to understand. Possibly the producers will declare that there is sufficient justification in the fact that the picture shows they performed their work. But it scarcely appears natural, and for that reason lacks in strength. The farm scenes are interesting, and the mechanical portion of the film is all that could be desired.

"Gorges of the Bourne" (Gaumont).—An excellent outdoor picture, presenting well selected views of the picturesque gorges which form such a conspicuous portion of the scenery along the Bourne in France. The operator understood the selection of view points, and he took pains to let the artist's appreciation of the beauties inherent in such a scene.

"Father Against His Will" (Pathe).—A silly comedy purporting to represent a young man as charged with being the father of two babies with which he was playing. The picture has little merit.

"Betty Rolls Along" (Father).—One of those instructive comedies which has no merit beyond a series of everyday views which could be launched from motion pictures.

"Davy Jones in the South Seas" (Vitagraph).—Nothing has been seen of Davy Jones for ten years from his transient visit and stopped for a social call on the antipodes. Here he turns up in the South Seas, still in trouble with the dominant portion of humanity. His usual fate overtakes him, however, and when informed that he must marry one of the Sadie Ichies to whom he has made love, his choice of the second would be made in favor of the first. Not in this instance does a simple person find approach. The fate is found behind him, and the shower of weapons which follow him toward the ship are evidences of the supreme hour of the scene for him. It is plain that wanted him back and what would have suppressed afterward can only be conjectured.

"A Black Bordered Letter" (Lubin).—One of sensitive absorbing interesting with what may be termed absorbing situations. The detective part is cleverly acted and relieves from the asylum as a thrilling as the motive for placing the girl there surprises. The fact that the frontier is guilty is a diminishment and exposure and adds that much interest to the film. Just how the girl acquired that invitation ink that told of her whereabouts doesn't quite appear, but much latitude is permitted in a detective story and the producer has evidently taken due advantage of that. In the main the photography is good, while the actors have performed their parts satisfactorily.

"Puritan and Indians" (Kalem).—Supposed to be a scene from New England life in the early times. Costuming and setting are declared to be historically accurate. The love story is little more than a motive for putting together a series of pictures, one of which are sensational. It is scarcely conceivable that the Puritan father would relent, even after the young man saved his daughter. The dice throwing incident is a clever bit of character sketching.

"The Girl of the Mountains" (Vitagraph).—Nothing especially important about this picture. A mix up of a love story, with the so-called perfidy of a man as a basis. Some of the mountain scenery is good and the acting is as good as the opportunities afforded by the film allow. Duplicity in love, unless something novel can be introduced, is scarcely a sufficiently captivating topic upon which to waste 999 feet of good positive film, to say nothing about the rest of the material.

"Il Trovatore" (Pathe).—An ambitious production, presenting one of the most popular operas of past years. Undoubtedly the plot is known to a larger proportion of those who frequent motion picture theaters, hence scarcely requires repetition here. Suffice it to say that the actors have performed their parts in full sympathy with the piece and with an appreciation of the opportunities that makes the work exceptionally good for such a complicated drama. Of course only a part is possible in a film, but the main thread of the story is well maintained and those who are not wholly familiar with the opera will be able to understand it from the picture. The staging deserves commendation. It has been done with a sumptuous disregard for expense that makes it notable. In short, the entire film will please with the evidence of liberality in production which is plainly apparent. This picture should be popular in any theater.

"A Wreath of Orange Blossoms" (Biograph).—The plot of this film turns upon the sight of an orange blossom wreath and a bridal veil worn by a young woman at her wedding. The domestic difficulty leading up to her attempted elopement, stayed by these remembrances, is one which might be common enough and could be easily understood by almost any audience. Misfortunes come, and there are certain differences which may arise in every home. Elopements do not always follow, but sometimes the tempter is present. The biograph company has depicted this phase of life with much discretion and with a reasonable appreciation of the requirements. The audience was clearly pleased with it and apparently it is of the type that will be understood and liked by almost any audience.

"His Bogus Uncle" (Lubin).—A lively comedy, detailing the adventures of two young men whose affections for a certain girl are pronounced. She doesn't favor either, and when one appears with a rich uncle and the aforesaid uncle leaves half his fortune to each of the young men, even though he possessed no money, there is surprise in the denouement when the plotter discovers the girl has married his rival. The scenes are all lively and a good deal of humor is scattered along through the picture.

"The Escape from the Tuileries" (Pathe).—A scene from French history made thrilling and real by the work of the excellent Pathe company. This house never fails to make good pictures of events in the history of France and this one is no exception to the general rule. The staging is upon an elaborate scale, even for Pathe, and the actors perform their parts with fidelity to what may reasonably be supposed to be historic accuracy. The costuming alone is well worth seeing. Whether or not any such episode as is here depicted actually occurred, it might easily have done so and the characterization which accompanies the story is altogether interesting. An accurate impression of the story times which accompanied the events depicted is shown and the film acquires historic value because of this fact. The story serves to hold the interest by running a connecting thread through it all. The film is worthy of commendation for its many excellencies.

"The Little Circus Rider" (Selig).—A story beginning in the oft told tale of the country girl deceived by a city man, and ending in a circus tent. The principal points of interest will probably be found in the reproductions of circus scenes. There is some humor, too, scattered through which will have its influence upon some.

"The Tryout" (Edison).—Chiefly interesting because it gives a peep behind the scenes in that glamorous world, the theater. The story is of no particular interest aside from showing what happens to young actors who are trying to get ahead in the world and depicting in a graphic way what happens to the unfortunates when they fail.

"The Jilted Joker" (Essanay).—The average person has little patience with any one who jokes with anything as solemn as marriage. It is to be feared that the joker in this supposed funny picture has gone too far and has succeeded only in making the whole picture appear ridiculous to the audience.

"Hank and Lank" (Essanay).—This strangely assorted pair of comedians appear again in a comedy which afford them both opportunity to perform some amusing stunts. One, as usual, succeeds in corralling something worth while, but the other, with his customary misfortune is stung. And therein lies the laugh.

"The Last Curtain" (Gaumont).—A little interest is injected into an otherwise weak film where the old actor returns to his dressing room to find how soon he has been forgotten. The last scenes are somewhat pathetic representing the actor filling the place of one in a barn-storming company taken suddenly ill. Aside from these two points the film is of almost no interest to any one.

"At Eventide" (Gaumont).—A picture of evening which has much artistic interest and presents an example of excellent photography which it would be hard to equal. Some of the water views are as good as have ever been shown upon the screen.

"Jean Rescues" (Vitagraph).—Once again this popular dog performs some interesting stunts. The rescue of a man from drowning seems a little far fetched, still it is not impossible and is a good example of canine intelligence. The dog is the only interest in the picture.

INDEPENDENT.

"Phone 707 Chester" (Imp).—A graphic story of how a young married man was cured of a sporting life. It is the familiar story of going to the city to collect winnings, a dashing company at supper and the sudden appearance of the wife. It is a dramatic scene when she turns away and he leaves the room convinced that he has lost her forever. The novelty in the situation develops when the company of sports in the Turkish bath make up a purse to send to the baby and open negotiations with the wife on the man to return. In the city this will all be understood and will prove an interesting film, but for country districts remote from cities and their environment it is doubtful whether this would be altogether intelligible. No fault is to be found with the story, or the acting; it is a question of locality and worldly knowledge only.

"A Triumph of Intelligence" (Great Northern).—When mind defeats muscle in this picture the audience is ready enough to applaud the victory. A considerable majority in any audience will see the humor in this and will laugh heartily at its production. The actors have developed some extremely funny situations and the entire picture is made up of a combination of comical fancies which cannot fail to please.

"Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done" (Great Northern).—A comedy which introduces sufficient novel situations to interest any audience and keep them in good humor from beginning to end. Some novel situations are introduced which add to the enjoyment of the spectators.

"The Masqueraders" (Powers).—Curious situations are sure to result when both the villain and lady interested in a love affair seek to learn the other's real intentions by masquerading as some one else. This picture tells a story of that kind, and the denouement, when the parties to the deception learn the real truth, is a laughable conclusion of a humorously mixed story.

"My Son is Guilty" (Itala).—A humorous skit, showing the mental disturbance of a gentleman who is made to believe that his son is guilty of a horrible offence. The close is inexpressibly funny when the tangle is all straightened out.

"Little Willie Goes Cycling" (Lux).—Great disaster follows Willie's cycling exploits because his elders insist upon accompanying him on his trip. A knockabout comedy in which the tumbles and the smashes quite make one dizzy. The film will raise a laugh, however, because of the absurdity of some of the stunts.

"Bertie's Bandit" (American).—Recently the releases of this house have improved in photographic quality. Earlier releases were frequently criticised by managers as well as patrons because the photography was hardly what it should be. This picture is a comedy, one of those lively Western comedies that appeal directly to very many people. It was made in Arizona and has the typical setting of that region. This in itself is an attraction, but the story of the bandit, or the supposed bandit, is sufficient to make any audience laugh.

ENTERTAIN YOUR PATRONS WITH

The Regina

Mandolin Orchestrion

THE music furnished by this wonderful instrument is alone worth the price of admission to your show. It will draw the crowds and hold them as no other musical attraction can do. It is operated by spring motor or by electric motor, as desired, and plays upon piano strings by means of vibrating hammers, making most delightful music which combines the effects of piano, mandolin, violin and organ.

It is furnished either with or without a nickel-in-the-slot attachment and when equipped to play on the insertion of a coin has proved to be a most successful and profitable investment for use in public places.

The Regina Mandolin Orchestrion is fully guaranteed and is sold at a reasonable price. Easy terms of payment can be arranged.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a musical instrument, send for full description of the Regina Mandolin Orchestrion with prices and terms.

THE REGINA COMPANY

Broadway and 17th St., New York 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago

MANUFACTURERS OF

REGINA MUSIC BOXES
REGINA MANDOLIN ORCHESTRIONS
REGINA HUNAPHONES
REGINA PNEUMATIC CLEANERS

MAKE it your business to visit our Sales and Demonstrating Room to inspect the :: :: :: ::

Advertigraph

automatic stereopticon advertising machine.

Post Card Projectors

will show opaque subjects. For home and professional use.

Stereopticons

single, dissolving and automatic, "for Home and Professional use."

Moving Picture Machines

Edison Professional.

Kodograph

Moving Picture Machine, "for Home use."

Asbestos Booths

Permanent, Semi Portable and Portable for 1, 2 or 3 Machines.

Mirror Screens

A demonstration of any of the above mentioned can be had at any time.

HARRY A. MACKIE

853 Broadway, New York City

And the comic situations follow each other from the beginning to the end of the reel. It should be popular in any locality, city or country.

"The Revenging Picture" (Italia).—A strongly dramatic film which works out to an interesting denouement. The question of whether it will be popular everywhere or not is hardly as easily decided as it is in some instances, but the story is clear and the actors have performed their parts with discretion. It should attract where drama with a peculiar twist is wanted. As a rule the Italia pictures are popular with all audiences. Their plots are clear and the details are generally well worked out. Sometimes the photography fails in places, but not often. Managers say they find this firm's releases satisfy by far the larger portion of their patrons.

"Irish Hearts" (Atlas).—A strongly dramatic recital of some stirring events in Ireland between British soldiers and their greed on one side, and loyal Irish hearts on the other. While this sort of picture is new to the Atlas company, there is little question about its complete success. The principal parts are played by well known actors. The old gentleman is a well known actor now seventy years old and Miss Bainbridge, whose work with Chauncey Olcott is well known, successfully portrays the colleen. The situations are dramatic and the producer has worked them out to the best advantage, assisted by excellent staging. Indeed, the friends of this firm will be disposed to extend warm congratulations upon the excellence of this production.

"A Wife's Calvary" (Ambrosio).—A picture which perhaps has its merits, but is not up to the standard which characterizes most of the releases of this house.

"Tweedledum in a Case" (Ambrosio).—A comedy in which this popular funmaker performs his usual successful stunts in making the audience laugh. He has been in numerous scrapes, always with a degree of fun which is highly appreciated by the audience and this one is quite up to the standard previously set.

"The Man in 23" (Nestor).—A comedy of this character is something of an innovation for the Nestor people, yet they have succeeded admirably in producing it. The mix-up affords opportunity for the actors to develop some amusing situations and as the complications increase the audience becomes more and more interested. Reference has been previously made to the excellence of the photography of this house, which embodies some strong features. While it is impossible to make those features prominent in a film photographed inside, the operator has done his work well and the mechanical portion could scarcely be improved. The effects of dim light are successfully produced, which is not always the case. In short, managers will make no mistake in including this in their program.

"For Remembrance" (Reliance).—While the Reliance films are always interesting, no matter what the subject may be, this one will, perhaps, appeal to many who would not be interested in others. The dramatic unities are carefully observed and the actors have performed their parts to perfection, while the stars are, as usual, particularly good. In Miss Leonard the Reliance people have an actress who attracts by her excellent work. Numberless patrons have been heard to commend her work over and over again and this film was no exception. Even though they do not always like the picture they have nothing but praise for the actress.

"The Last Laugh" (Reliance).—A case of jealousy with a divorce to follow. Later all parties to the transaction meet again in the wilds of Alaska. The story is good, but probably the principal interest in the film will rest with the change in locality. The picturesque elements which are contained in the Alaska picture will afford an occasion of more than ordinary interest and for this reason, perhaps, the film will be considered good. It must be admitted, however, that it is not up to the average of releases of recent date that have come from this company. Mechanically, some of the defects which have hitherto been pointed out have been overcome, but the story admits of no dramatic situations such as are characteristic of a majority of the Reliance films. The actors have done as well as they could under the circumstances, but the opportunity was not there, consequently it was impossible to produce the picture.

"An Infamous Son" (Lux).—A drama presenting the end of a son who departed from the straight and narrow way. His mother died of grief, his father a broken man, himself in a cell. That's the situation at the close when the chief of police hands him a revolver. He is executed and thus endeth a film of sorrow.

"His Best Friend" (Solax).—The Solax people, in this film, have not covered themselves with any great slathers of glory. It is a scenario that is obviously written to exploit the performing ability of a very smart fox terrier. The acting of the dog is far superior to the acting of the people in this picture, and the excellent work of this well-trained canine, may carry the picture over to the average audience. But, as was said before, the plot is so obviously written around the dog's tricks, that without the dog, the story would not bring five cents in the scenario market. The photography in the studio scenes is out of focus. One of the Solax Company was present when we reviewed this film, and he himself admitted that it was not quite up to snuff.

"Prompt Payment" (Thanhouser).—A comedy detailing the adventures of an impecunious lawyer in devising a means to secure money to pay his debts. The clever way in which he performs this highly interesting operation, thorough the medium of a game of poker with his creditors, is one scarcely to be commended. It is amusing to see him pay them their own money.

"Stealing a Ride" (Thanhouser).—This will interest the children since it details the adventures of two tots who hitch behind, are thrown off and wander away in the snow. It is true to life. No one will deny that, and for that reason will excite interest. Maybe mothers will want to point to this as a horrible example of what will happen if the little chaps hook behind.

"A Son of Old Glory" (Yankee).—A picture that will interest with its lively acting and its well worked out situations. The subject will attract at the beginning, and the working out of the theme fulfils whatever promise the subject may contain.

"Trials of Bub Brown" (Bison).—A live tale which details some interesting experiences of an unfortunate individual with fidelity to facts. The photography and the acting are good and the picture will attract in most theaters. The improvement in the photography of the Bison films is a marked feature of all their recent releases.

The Man in 23 (Nestor).—A comedy from start to finish, illustrating the evil of curiosity. Father and son go to the country to enjoy a quiet vacation. The landlady becomes curious, very curious; and, assisted by her daughter, starts investigating the guests' baggage. The men return unexpectedly to their rooms and the women hide as best they may. A burglar alarm is sounded and chaos reigns supreme. The inevitable "chase" is shown in this picture, but, being quite different from the "usual thing," we enjoyed it immensely. The acting is good and the photography equal to Nestor's best. More comedies of this kind would be appreciated.

The Bridal Trail (Nestor).—A love story that could have been told in less than 1,000 feet of film, for the action is tame and at times drags. The acting is good and at times excellent. The picture is unquestionably a beautiful one, abounding in magnificent pictorial views and photographed without a blemish.

"Only in the Way" (Thanhouser).—Sometimes a motion picture arouses recollections that are anything but pleasant. Here, for instance, is a development of a domestic tragedy which has its counterpart in numerous homes and probably more than one in every audience will recall similar instances within the circle of their own acquaintance. When this is the fact it will be recognized that the producer has reproduced actual situations with singular accuracy. The part played by the grandmother and the one played by the child are both pathetic and cannot fail to touch the heart of any person who can sit through this and not feel the tears welling up to his eyes is strangely callous to human grief and emotion.

"For My Pal" (Powers).—It is not that these people are miners that the audience will feel an interest in them, but because they depict the various phases of human nature with a fidelity to facts which will make the picture appeal to almost everyone who sees it. The unfortunate accident, blinding one man, the mistake which causes the blind man to strike his best friend and the manly way in which this insult is accepted, with the pleasant working out of the whole story will appeal to those who like a good story, clearly told in a good picture.

"A Tough Tenderfoot" (Bison).—Another of this lively western tales which affords considerable play to the imagination, but perhaps is a bit overdrawn in some places. The tenderfoot surprised those who had to do with him and they discovered what was in him before they finished.

"The Taxicab Mystery" (Yankee).—A good, healthy detective story is not half bad, but the audience must accept it as a detective story and it is well known that most of them are more or less improbable. The chief novelty in this one lies, perhaps, in the fact that the audience has no means of guessing what the solution of the mystery may be until the film closes. Often they are too transparent to be really interesting. It isn't particularly good to watch a plot worked out after it has been guessed. This company has succeeded in leaving the denouement to the last, a feature which has added materially to its interest. The audience liked it. That was plainly evident.

"Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship" (Imp).—Supposing you were going to see the girl you expected to marry, and your clothes were appropriated by a rival, while you were left awaiting their return from the tailor, attired in a blanket. Suppose a lunatic, dressed as an Indian, flourishing a tomahawk, suddenly appeared to you, and compelled you to join in an Indian war dance, how would you feel? If you can imagine a situation of this character, then you can appreciate the feelings of the inoffensive Brother Goodleigh. Eventually, however, comes the denouement, and the rival is discovered masquerading in the minister's clothes. But he doesn't get the girl. The rival wins her, and the disappointed lover goes sadly home, his short, but exciting courtship at an end. Some of the scenes are improbable, but they are so novel that they please the audience and keep them in good humor.

"At Cedar Ridge" (Nestor).—The general excellence of this film is marred by a rather tame story. The actors however play spiritedly all throughout and deserve great praise. Magnificent scenic views and photographic excellence place this picture in a class by itself.

"Sleepy Holow" (Nestor).—A powerful, convincing and alluring picture of mountain life with rugged scenery, rugged action and ragged sentiment. The advent of an amateur photographer caused a good, but jealous, husband to dream a fearful dream, which effectively cures him of his malady and all ends very happily.

"Their New Minister" (Nestor.)—A clever comedy, full of wholesome merriment. A young man goes West to visit his uncle—the uncle and the church committee mistake him for their new minister—the young fellow impersonates the "good man" and the fun begins. Humorous complications follow one another with kaleidoscopic rapidity, keeping the spectator amused to the end. Acting and photography are good.

SAVE MONEY and use our Program Board
with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters
Make your own Program
You cannot afford to be without one
Announcements can be changed
Prices and full particulars on application
Agents Wanted.
THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.

NO HEADACHE
Do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use
WOOLF'S HYPOZONE
OZONE
the modern scientific germicide. Free from the OZONE (nascent oxygen) it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at ONE CENT PER GALLON.
WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,
2 Rector Street Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

OPERATORS WANTED
To handle Lavezzi's improved repairs as a side line. Excellent chance to become a jobber. Write today. Refer to back issues
PAT. APPLIED FOR INDESTRUCTIBLE
NEW TYPE
Star, Cam, Arbor and Sprocket - - $12.00
Intermittent Sprocket - - - 3.50
Feed Sprockets - - - - 2.50
Aluminum sprockets can be continually repaired for - - - - - - 1.00 & 1.50
Also make of sprockets repaired with steel teeth - - - - - - 2.75
Set of tempered Punches for removing Taper Pins - - - - - - .50
Metal Block to support aprons to keep from springing out of true while guns are being drawn in or out - - .25
Two Pin Machines rebuilt and exchanged
E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant for the Theatre
AROMA FOAM
Aroma Foam is manufactured expressly for use as a spray and is the most effective and agreeable method of purifying and disinfecting. Also effectual in fumigating purposes. Aroma Foam will not injure the most delicate fabrics. Sample and literature sent upon application. Send 25 cents in stamps for sample quart with Metallic Sprayer, or $1.00 for four quarts and pay your local dealer a quantities the purchaser which may be based following formula. Write for prices in quantities.
SANITARY SERVICE CORPORATION
80 Wall Street, New York City

FOR 12 HOURS Genre Motion Slides
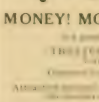
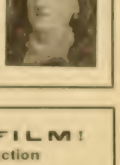
Kept the Boston Theatre, Chicago
P-A-C-K-E-D
An exhibition of these slides will do the same for you . .
GENRE TRANSPARENCY CO., Sole Manufacturers for U. S.
507 NORTH CLARK STREET : : CHICAGO, ILL.



LOUISE M. MARION'S
Great Novelty of
ILLUSTRATED POEMS
MONEY! MONEY!! MONEY!!!


LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23d St New York City

THE DEAD MAN AND HIS GRAND, PATRIOTIC, FEATURE FILM!
Washington and Lincoln's Birthday, Stupendous Art Production
Order now from your exchange.
Distributed thro' The Sales Co
THE CHAMPION FILM CO.,
12 East 15th Street, New York

URBAN ECLIPSE.

THE SAILOR'S RETURN.—An old farmer, ruined by misfortune to no escape to trouble to meet my brother's daughter. She is a pretty daughter attracts the attention of the husband, and to, having neither worn nor present attractions to recommend him, unscrupulously takes advantage of the family misfortunes to further his suit. He offers to release the farmer from his obligations if the daughter will consent to marriage. The girl's love comes to her aid. By undertaking a voyage before the time set to marry, she will be able to raise sufficient money to satisfy the landlord's demand, and stop the sale of the old man's property. The cruel landlord, however, tries fresh wiles to secure the girl. He convenes false news to her that her lover is lost at sea, and then as the girl still looks on him with disfavor, he resorts to violence. At this juncture the young man returns safe and sound, the wretched villain meets with his deserts, and the true lovers are united.

SCENES IN JERSEY.—The charm of this island —half French and half English is well preserved. Appropriately enough, the spectator arrives by steamer, and has first a general view from the Channel. After landing he finds much to interest him, the picturesque and the mediæval being skillfully combined.

St. Heliers, the docks, a well-built town. The Elizabeth Jersey cattle, some prize winners. A panorama of land and sea.

Mount Orgueil Castle, a curious contrast, modern houses nestle beneath the old, time-honored ruin. Some general views, an artist at work, embarrassing interest. Corbiere lighthouse, a treacherous coast.

DISINHERITED.—Robert, the son of a wealthy factory owner, falls in love with Lillian, one of his father's employees.

His parents, having already chosen a wife for him from among their circle of wealthy acquaintances, object to an alliance with the poor girl.

Robert, however marries Lillian and is driven from home.

Through his mother's help Robert is enabled to establish a private furnace while his father suffers reverse of fortune, until an accidental meeting leads to reconciliation.

SELIG.

THE CURSE OF THE RED MAN.—Terapal, a Maricopa Apache, receives a scholarship in the Indian School. He is bright and an athlete. He wins at football, and graduates from school with honors.

A return to the reservation, soon fellows and mixes to his surprise and grief he finds that he is outcast by his tribe. His heart is broken; he has lost the love and respect of his people.

Then the call of the wild soon claims upon him. He angrily throws aside the garb of civilization. Soon his downward career is started. Whiskey is the curse of the Red Man. Terapal imbibed freely, until Terapal becomes a degenerate vagabond.

The fatal day arrives at last when, through revenge he kills a brutal bartender and he flees to the desert to escape the sheriff's posse.

How he eludes the bloodhounds of the law for many days on the burning sands of the great barren waste and his desperate fight for all vividly told in this wonderfully realistic film story.

TOO MUCH MOTHER-IN-LAW.—A young man promised his bride-to-be that they would make their future home with her dear good mamma. "All's well that finds well." So the girl packing her running gear of true love soon begins receiving letters—all from the same husband packs beg their baggage and everything else. The mercenary soon to work and forget his rash promise. A telegram summons the home darling in a taxi arrival. In his anxiety to reach the turbulent home he encounters obstacles at every turn but finally succeeds—where all ends happy and fond father.

THELMA.—Thelma is seeing on the cliffs over Lochinvar the sea. Suddenly Thelma sees a yacht, which proves to be that of Sir Philip Errington, who is cruising the Northern Isles. He lands with his cousin Sir George Lorimer. They ask the natives the way to Graf Gundmar's home. They proceed to the Vikings's house. Thelma knocks at the door which is opened. Graf greets them cordially and takes a strong fancy to Sir Philip. He invites the two young men into the house to dinner.

Later on Sir Philip asks Graf for the hand of Thelma and is accepted. They are married and sail for England.

A year has passed and Thelma is very unhappy. Lady Wilfred tries to be nice with Sir Philip manages to win him, proves a better woman than can see it. The letter pretends to be in answer to Sir Philip. Thelma reads the letter, reads it and goes to her room. Her heart is breaking and she makes up her mind to go back to her father. Some she finds her father dying. She tells him She writes a note and leaves at once. Arriving home she finds her father dying. Some days after her arrival Sir Philip follows quickly and demands an explanation of his flight. He gazes in and plainly shows that no white woman was from the machinations of a jealous woman. Sir Philip and Thelma are reconciled.

PATHE.

MAX HAS THE BOXING FEVER.—One day Max attends a boxing bout and comes home very enthusiastic about the sport. In his way home he purchases a punching bag and attaching it to the chandelier proceeds to break up domestic keeping. Furthermore, he finally becomes professional and one the night when Max has bested his opponent the wife of the latter is told he challenges his friend to a pugilistic encounter. His friend accepts and there in the restaurant they put on a fine glove-and-fist fight. Finally they shake each other momentarily. Great comedy stuff is introduced because the two men both wear roller skates during the entire stunt.

LEGALLY DEAD.—Arthur Stanley marries a girl who, though she loves another, yields to her father's wishes. A year later Stanley is called away to the quarry which he owns and is buried beneath hundreds of tons of rock by a premature blast. His foreman sends a telegram to Mrs. Stanley, telling her of the tragic death, for he doesn't know that Stanley was married. After a great mass of rock and debris he succeeds in unconsciousness finds a way out on the opposite side of the mountain. The awful shock, however, has robbed him of his memory and he doesn't know who he is. Assisted by kindhearted people he finally marries a lovely girl and lives happily until is snatch of music his present wife plays brings back all the past with a rush. He looks that he must go home but when he arrives he finds his first wife married to his father-in-law getting a lawyer on the job finds that Stanley has been absent over seven years and is legally dead. Consequently his wife is remarriage legal. He returns to his second wife and all live happily ever after.

THE MISSING BRIDE.—The tale opens with a marriage after which, as was the custom, the guests play games in and out of the ruins of the old castle. The bride, unobserved by the others, wanders away alone and finally through a mistake, finds herself in the dungeons. She looks around her terrified and sees, clothed in garments like her own, a skeleton! She tries to escape but the door has closed behind her. She realizes the solution of this mystery and finds it in an old book beside this skeleton. Horrified by mystery and how the bride escapes by the aid of a kitten is told in the film itself.

SILVER LEAF'S MEART.—Silver Leaf, a little Indian maiden, is saved from a cruel beating at the hands of one of her tribesmen by Bob Stevens, a frontiersman, injured at the encounter. The disgruntled Indian calls on his tribe to avenge his insult and in consequence the Stevens cavalcade is ambushed and Stevens captured. His capture is carried off while Stevens himself is badly stunned by a blow on the head. Castaways ride hotly in pursuit of the Indians but lose the trail and Stevens recovering consciousness rides alone in search of his child. Finally he comes upon Silver Leaf whom he questions. She tells him where his child is but warns him not to go near the camp and for safety she takes him there that night. He consents to wait and later Silver Leaf appears with the little girl. She consents to return again to her people however on the horse has to carry three up in the mad ride to outdistance the now pursuing savages.

MELIES

ONLY A SISTER.—If John was half the man that Molly is, she and her father would have been a great deal better off. Molly by her industry and thrift has saved up enough money to allow her to go to college and complete her education, she is very proud of her achievement.

John is a young fellow with extravagant idle notions who refuses to hold his jobs as a skilled mechanic. He finally becomes prey to gambling and dissipation. Molly loses her brother and sister and tries to mend his ways and make a man of himself.

Molly's father who is editor of the local paper, starts a journalistic campaign against the gamblers and they decide to get square with the him by ruining his son John. They draw the boy into a game, win his money and get him to forge a check on the bank at San Antonio.

The leader of the gang of gamblers starts early the next morning to get the check cashed. John hears of it, and by generous attempts to kill himself, but is prevented doing so by his sister Molly, to whom he confesses his wrongdoing. She takes her college money, pumps on her house and reaches the bank in time to deposit the money in her brother's name, saving him from arrest and imprisonment.

Her brother wakes up to a sense of his sinfulness, resolves to make good, gives Molly the note for five hundred dollars, and starts at work again to redeem the past and make a man of himself.

BIOGRAPH.

HEART BEATS OF LONG AGO.—A feud existed between two Italian houses and it meant murder to any one of its belligerents to intrude into the opposing house. The head of the house gives a feast in honor of the arrival of a wealthy foreign nobleman and expects to make him son-in-law. The daughter however has given her heart to the son of the father's enemy. That he may be present at the festival she surreptitiously leaves her father's support ring, throwing it to him. From this incident the interesting plot unfolds itself. The lovers attempting the intercession of his enemies makes death to any member who enters the side of the house. The clandestine love-trial takes place and the forbidden lover braves death to see his sweetheart. While she in clandestine meeting a guard is seen to enter the corridor see the girl flashes her sweetheart in a secret passage way and then turns to meet with her. Not finding the intruder, the guard imagines he was mistaken. The favored suitor, however, is obliged to make decisive action. His manner the father is called away for a time and on a pretext he has sent his brother from the household in his absolute charge. This move works in favor of the nobleman to more effectively pursue his wishes, and finally one night he finds the forbidden lovers one on the floor outside the door. This attempt is opposed would make the nobleman the laughing-stock of the entire courts of Europe, so he vows vengeance. The girl realizes her lover's danger in the all-night chase and makes a desperate attempt to release him, but in this she is surprised by the noble who secures from her the key, and despite her tender pleadings off alone she has called to break open the door. The guards are then sent to release the lover who as he has been placed in charge by the master, latter the master of the house returns and the nobleman tells of the attempt and says that the imprisoned lover has met his fate by this time, opens the door. His anticipation was correct for the lifeless form of the forbidden lover falls headlong across the corridor.

PRISCILLA'S ENGAGEMENT KISS.—Priscilla is ill with fever. Freddie and Paul in the room concerned about this and his sympathy for her interested his love rather than the proposal that he proposes. Priscilla, of course, is willing, but prior to a take declares Paul no doing to marry. He must grow whiskers and become more manly. At this point the doctor calls to treat Priscilla for her sore throat. This M. D. is a crank on germs and microbes, arranges that Priscilla is kept isolating and thorough and frequent disinfection is our order. Paul is jealous and that he pays much to the doctor, but before taking Paul's hand Dr. disinfects it. Maybe Paul don't care, but the next scene shows where Dr. assumes role in taking Priscilla's pulse lingers. Paul leaves the room beneath dashes of the doctor, for Priscilla, since she is supposed to be pleased with the doctor's attentions. However, when Paul arrives at the club he has but small sympathy and call again to see Priscilla. He is met by her mother who hands him a note to the effect that the doctor has declared Paul out of the picture. His final tribute if she hopes to recover. It is a message "Dearest Priscilla germs are all gone." Paul is now furious and determines to do away with himself by smoking himself to death, procuring all the cigars he can find for the purpose. This is rather a slow and disagreeable method so he desists. Furthermore, he reasons that the doctor's disinfectants must smoke it. Priscilla, now cured of her sore throat, is lonesome and longs to see her lover. Paul arrives later receiving for him. Mother, however, sends a note—"There is a little girl who would like to see you." To this the assumption of Paul is that little girl see the germ doctor." It is now Priscilla's turn to get angry and through pique she accepts the proposal of the caterer, inviting the engagement kiss. The doctor is about to kiss her, when he catches himself and disinfects her face on. Paul, oh my! but she is wild and chases him out. The mother now sends a second note—"Priscilla dear, the doctor has gone and I am very ill." Then decides Paul, and sailing, everything ends happily. Here's a case where germs proved more and microbes received a fall.

GAUMONT.

THE LAST CURTAIN.—St. Leon, an old actor, retires from stage life, but finds the days of inactivity grow very long. He makes his home in a small country town, where there is ample opportunity to rest.

His last day of a Road Show's visit to the village he is requested to play the leading part. In spite of a serious illness he accepts the opportunity, knowing the greatness of stage life. but grows with such vigor that he dies within a few hours.

AT EVENTIDE.—Twilight in the mountains, on the river, over the fields, on the ocean, and in the village gradually dissolving into moonlight views of the same scenes.

JIGGERS LOOKS FOR A JOB.—Jiggers makes a record as a most rapid worker, when his sweetheart is looking on. He builds walls, digs holes, carries stone and mortar at a rate never before accomplished by man; he easily breaks all records.

KRIMMEL WATERFALLS IN THE AUSTRIAN TYROL.—A remarkable excursion to one of Europe's most beautiful natural show places. It shows a wild mountain torrent rushing through a narrow channel.

LUBIN.

HIS BOGUS UNCLE.—John Burns and Bessie Loraine were rivals for the hand of Mary Smith. John was merry and frank while Byron was gloomy and taciturn. Now Mary believed in having as many strings to her bow as possible so one didn't seem to favor either one. Byron, however was eager favor from more if he had a rich relative so he decided to pose as a wealthy bachelor uncle. Bessie Loraine a jolly looking, old "Tar" Mackey quickly responded to the call "Tar" to play the part of Byron's wealthy uncle. In the time, Byron called on Mary and told her of his fine prospects. The old "Tar" acted the part to perfection—even Byron was amused. The time came when the money was all gone and then Byron insisted that the matter make a will in his favor that disagreed. But the matter and taken such a hitting as John that he made out this bogus will leaving his supposed rich uncle's wealth to each of the boys. He was gone before Byron discovered the mistake and then Mary and her family congratulated John on his good fortune. Mary and John were married the next day. Byron wasn't even best man.

AGE vs. YOUTH.—T. Sterling died leaving his son in charge of his business. The young man immediately discharged a number of the old employees including his father's faithful secretary. The old secretary didn't know where to turn to secure a living, when he was notified that he employment had left him $20,000. He immediately started business of his own which was quite successful. At a ball the daughter of the young man who received him in cold and unfounded rumors concerning her father's business. The old man's daughter to her father who refused to make further advances from the young man. Soon afterward the young man succeeded in "busting" the old man by getting up "shoot" while the old man was buying long. Bessie won up, with the result that Stewart was ruined. The old man obtained house on and the daughter of his good fortune, for she responded him on the first that young man's proposal by leaving him up $20,000 and made all the excuses possible. Plans for old man vanished. He dropped a letter showing another that the young man position for a young man in his office and that he dropped out into her own window. In the young man "back in" his secretary's home and everybody was happy.

ESSANAY.

THE JILTED JOKER.—Allie Bell has two suitors, Professor Frank Bowers and Bachelor Joe Winchester. On a day Mary Bell receives a box of candy and a bouquet of flowers and has either with an elegant box of candy. Her parents, also somewhat hungry for candy and flowers, suggest that the box of candy who is honoring the housewife. Bessie swears and the next week the old Adam and Bachelor Joe are rather peeved at Professor Frank Bowers. Then a spirit of mischief has entered to play a trick on the second couple and Bessie with the telegraphic operator in the hotel to send a box of candy to Bessie Bowers and Professor Bowers who answered Bessie sent and ordered consternation. Upon receipt of the box of candy Professor Bowers and they send for Professor Bowers' home to the office to the consternation and the whole quarrelsome. Let matters rest as they are for a week or two. Bessie sees Professor Bowers, but is unseen by Bachelor Joe during the vacillating, the former receiving complaints of his wife and the latter receiving the box of candy. Bessie is somewhat embarrassed when the flowers and candy arrive at the office of Bachelor Joe on the same day. Bachelor Joe sees Bessie and the telegraph operator in the hotel and the box of candy is taken from her hands.

HANK AND LANK.—They made a match. It has been some time since Hank and Lank made such a match and they were out for a good time. "Let's go skating tomorrow," Lank's latest. "Lank made a good suggestion, now you're talking." The beginning of an accident he pointed to one of those. It is with everyone else, that Hank and Lank made a mistake. Hank, being at was the first young woman they met and whom he felt sure they go on a pair tonight to Hank fooled for the fair young woman.

CARMENITA, THE FAITHFUL.—A Mexican love story of the days when Mexico was under the rule of Spain. Carmenita is the daughter of a Mexican nobleman and is loved by a Spanish officer. The young officer is ordered north and must say farewell to his sweetheart. Before leaving he asks her to wait for him and promises to return. She promises to be faithful. Soon after the departure of the officer, Carmenita's father dies and she is left alone in the world. She is then approached by a Mexican nobleman who wishes her to marry him. She refuses him, telling him that she is waiting for the return of her lover. The nobleman then tells her that her lover has been killed in battle. Carmenita refuses to believe this and tells the nobleman that she will wait for her lover's return. Years pass and Carmenita, still waiting, becomes a familiar figure in the village. Finally the news reaches her that the war is over and that her lover will soon return. Carmenita is overjoyed at the news and prepares to meet her lover. Upon his arrival he finds Carmenita waiting for him and they are married.

THE MEXICAN'S DOUBLE.—Pedro Gonzales, a Mexican, is the owner of a large ranch. He is married and has a son. Pedro is a kind master and is loved by all his servants. Among his servants is Juan Gomez, who is a half-breed Indian. Juan is a bad character and is disliked by all the servants. Pedro has had trouble with Juan and has discharged him. Juan, angered at his discharge, swears revenge. Pedro's son is a baby and is the idol of his father's heart. Juan, knowing this, kidnaps the child and demands a large ransom for its return. Pedro refuses to pay the ransom and starts out to find the child himself. Juan, knowing that Pedro is coming after him, kills the child and leaves it in the road. Pedro finds the child and, thinking it is his own, takes it home. Juan, seeing that his plan has failed, tells Pedro that the child is not his own. Pedro refuses to believe him. Juan then tells Pedro that he will prove it. He tells Pedro that the child has a mole on its left arm. Pedro examines the child and finds that Juan has told the truth. Pedro then tells Juan that he will not prosecute him if he will leave the country. Juan agrees to this and leaves. Pedro then finds his own child and is happy.

VITAGRAPH.

SOCIETY AND THE MAN.—[illegible] fashionable [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] of plunking victors from disaster they rearrange the sad and unsung history the same audacious. And in the meantime one of their pint trials and tribulations is here. Two story has grown, and they find that the victorious have a measure for those to many were many one.

KALEM.

THE BROKEN TRAIL.—A railroad family with their entire household effects occupy one car. Sandy is Trail Blazing engineer. The chief passes a message to Sandy to speed up. Sandy by the way, is a jolly soul and the contrast between Sandy's jollity and the chief's sternness is to be noted. Sandy and the chief are the only white men in the train. Others are Mexicans, evidently employed by the railroad company. Sandy's fireman is a Mexican. The train is attacked by Indians and the little orphan boy is adopted by kind-hearted engineer.

Twenty years later the brothers meet as strangers. Through a combination of circumstances they long for a love-sick girl. Dick's jealous nature causes him to commit a mean action and later, believing that his successful rival is his best friend, becomes taken possession of him and he wanders off in the mountains bereft of reason.

LITTLE SISTER.—The story is laid in the Southland and centers around a beautiful estate where live two typical daughters of the South. The younger girl is a regular tomboy, devoted to her home and to outdoor sports. The elder is of a different type. In fact, has long since reached the marriageable age and is looking for a husband in every direction. The hero arrives in a young chap from the North who is touring the South on a motor cycle. He meets with an accident and is taken to the home of the two sisters. There he convalesces from his injury and of course finds an opportunity for him to become acquainted with the two girls. The elder marks him for her future partner, but he naturally prefers the young one. When his visit ends there is a great deal of hard feeling, but the younger girl wins out in the end and her elder sister has won out.

A year passes and the young chap is invited back again to attend a house party. A big dance is given in his honor. While the hall is in progress he looks about for the younger sister, who has not been allowed to attend as she is so badly tanned. Her big sister pronounces her a fright.

Little sister determines to join the guests from the veranda, where the young man find her. This offers an opportunity for a pretty climax of the affair. There is a tender love scene and when it is over the younger sister finds that although cast off from the party she has won the great prize after all.

Independent Film Stories.

THANHOUSER.

THE WESTERNER AND THE EARL.—Mrs. Montague is as American society woman who has a great regard of titles. So when Lord Ingrill is promised to pay a visit to her bungalow in the Western mountain region, she was delighted. In her mistake she, she could see, was another in-law of an Earl—for the Earl was poor and the Montagues were rich while the woman's daughter was decidedly charming.

Probably there would have been another interested marriage, had it not been for the girl in the case. She had an American sweetheart and seemed upon the foreign nobleman much as her mother seemed. So Mrs. Montague, driven to desperation, finally received a plot which she believed would win the Earl for her daughter.

A Wild West show was giving performances near her summer home, and the Earl, advised by Mrs. Montague, sought out the proprietor and hired his band of performing Indians. They were to capture the Earl and the heiress. Then the Earl was to be allowed to escape and free the woman whose hand he sought.

But the young American cutter heard of the plot and decided to put back the Earl in his own coin. The scene also had romance and Jack engaged them with the complicity of Rattlesnake Bill to capture the real Earl and to have the Indians after once had captured the Earl. The counterplot worked successfully and so, instead of being regarded as a hero the poor Earl acquired quite a different reputation. He was fugacious—literally and literally, a "foiled Earl" before he finished and Mrs. Montague found that the real hero was the man her daughter loved and she was willing to have him marry her. Rattlesnake Bill, who successfully helped both sides, as he agreed, was well satisfied. In fact, the only unhappy person was the Earl.

THE NORWOOD NECKLACE.—The disappearance of the famous Norwood Necklace gave Violet Gloss, the 2nd detective, a chance to gain new records and also to have a laugh at her superior officer.

The jewels disappeared in another city and the police considered a clue to them unnecessary. Just one was to be arrested. But Dad wished the particulars. Violet was to detain each servant. A well dressed woman who was a passenger on a certain train.

In time, however, the suspect received warning by telegraph, and when the woman is taken in custody there are no signs of the gems. Later the woman is released as nothing can be found on her. Violet receives apologies profusely, which he does in good part. He is pleased to be discharged and of course a superior.

The only person who did not express an error and keep his head was Violet Gloss. Even when he was sent on suspicion, he would be convinced that he was right and with the custom on the subject you see won.

Her first clue was a little girl. Her second a doll. The doll's body was found to be a bag full of hair.

Each one of those incidents was a trifle but they served to form the chain that dragged a pretty woman to prison. The captain admitted he was a pretty woman and that was her sex. But she was too diplomatic to tease him about it, but she spent the money for a new ring so that her commissioner would be cautiously confident in error of judgement, and yet public so compatible of being "nagged" about it.

AMERICAN.

THE GENIUS.—John Smith has devoted the best years of his life to an invention which he firmly believes will be revolutionizing the manufacturing world. His efforts to bring the people likely to be interested to his way of thinking have reduced him to a state of abject poverty, but even for a moment has it shaken his faith in the value of his invention nor soured his happy optimistic nature.

Day after day he makes the weary round, lugging about with him his precious plans and each day getting nearer and nearer to the jumping off place, only to return each night to his garret room with the real fear that he must soon be discouraged. At last his efforts in the search for consideration are rewarded and Howard Livingston, a wealthy and well educated man interested in the tenet of granting him an interview. He has adopted a fanciful whim of posing as a chauffeur for himself is and shares with them his "Chambers near the roof" and the few crusts he manages to obtain. He takes the plan him and then proceeds to the rich man's house to explain on the wonders of the life's work. He is kindly received by the daughter of the house, who, womanlike, at once recognizes the nobility of the character the inventor has created himself. She takes the utmost care of and he is delicately offered the food he so much needs. His pride won't allow him to accept only a well meant gift, but the pangs of proximity of real food is too much for his impoverished condition and he succumbs in a dead faint. In this unconscious condition his would-be benefactor's partner robs him of his precious plans. He is ordered by the daughter to leave the house, but when asked by her father to produce his documents finds that they have vanished. He is dismissed as an impostor and arrives at home dazed and heartbroken.

He wanders the streets all night and is found by a friendly policeman early the next morning asleep on a Park bench. He is taken to what he is pleased to call his home. In the meantime, however, the kind fates have not neglected him. The unscrupulous partner has taken copies of plans from the unfortunate fellow's pockets and is discovered. They are returned to their owner by Livingston who, moreover, has the pleasure of offering him employment and a just share in the profits.

THE MISSION IN THE DESERT.—Nell, the Mexican girl, trusted Ned, the young prospector, but Ned loved Jim's wife and to him that wife's woman holds sacred. She loved him. He was young and rash, but not bad at heart and he did not weigh sufficiently the seriousness of his relationship with Nell.

Jim, Ned's partner, loved Nell, too. He was an older man than Ned, and in a spirit of nobler sacrifice, held back and encouraged the young folks in their love. Self contained love is sometimes impatient and that impatience conquered the discretion of Nell and Ned, and when the girl realized what she had done, she pleaded with Ned to marry her and save her honor. He bade her wait until he could take her back to his people in the East.

Jose, Nell's brother overheard the girl's plea and challenged Ned for an explanation. They were about to clash in combat when Jim came upon and learned the strained condition of affairs. He sent the Mexican on his way and broken-hearted, took like counsels that they must part. This blow was terrible to Ned, for he loved Joe better than a brother, but his plea was in vain. Joe left all the gold to Ned, save one nugget and went away.

No sooner had Joe gone than Jose stole in upon Ned and killed him. When Nell learned of her lover's death she ran distractedly to his side and hysterically pleaded with him to come back to life and save her honor.

A Ranger found her beside the body and took her to her home. Jose confessed his crime and was arrested. Poor Nell was turned away from her home disgraced. A kindly neighbor took her in and resigned to an outcast a subject of pity and charity. She began to pine her young life away.

After a week of terrible suffering, she could stand it no longer and going to the grave of Ned, she knelt her comforter and seeking a secluded spot was about to plunge a knife into her breast when she discovered before her the "Shrine of Loneliness." A sad spirit entered her heart, and looking out across the desert she saw the Mother Mission standing in the sun, beckoning her to come where rest was waiting. The Mother Superior took her in and she was soon at the Mission blessed on the suffering of the world.

Time in vain that Joe returned, and learning of the tragedy of his young companion, he sought the grave. Nell was there in the garb of a sister, revering the Mission flowers. The Mission superior was with her. Joe pleaded with her to give up her seclusion and come with him for the Mother learned over Ned's grave and let her back to the Mission. Joe followed, pleading for his love but the church had taken the girl to the service and forbade her to leave. The big oaken doors closed on Nell and brokenhearted, Joe turned back to strangle in the desert wilds.

FOR MY PAL.—Jim and Bill are chums and partners in a mine. Both are in love with pretty Nora Kelly, but Nora accepts Bill. An explosion of powder in the mine destroys Bill's eyesight. Jim falls in love with Nora's friend Lucy, and Bill in despair over his blindness is about to commit suicide, but Jim prevents him from doing so. Then Jim persuades Nora to go with a stagecoach to Bill's cabin to marry Bill and save him from despair. Bill, thinking that Jim intends to marry the girl himself, becomes insane, and because he has killed him. Then Bill learns the truth from the girl and Nora's message that he has not killed his chum, who presides at the wedding. Later Bill brings about Jim's marriage to Kate.

THE CATTLE KING OF ARIZONA.—Gregory Holmes, the "Cattle King of Arizona" plans to amalgamate his vast possessions with those of Don Ramon Romero, another of his wide acres. Infatuated with Ruth, the Cattle King's daughter. She is in reality in love with Jack Hamlin, a young cowpuncher. They are invited to a house warming by Romero. As Jack arrives at the house, Ruth's young friend Lucy takes Jack in tow. Jack also is in love with Ruth, but is afraid to let her know and open Ruth's arrival at the house, Lucy engages Jack in a game of "truth" questions him and he tells her of a home made desolate, by a mother's death and of his wish years for the one man he wants to meet, a man whose hand is marked with a blood red cross. Ruth promenades with Jack. Romero's daughter, Jack "Billy" pretending to sprain her ankle asks Romero to escort her to the house. She finds the young people alone. Romero reminds Ruth of her promise to dance with him and she accepts his proffered hand. Romero discovers Hamlin's hand the red cross he has been seeking and is about to kill him when he hears Ruth's voice calling. Ruth's discovery of Romero's scheme is the father of the girl he worships, drops his gun and rushes from the scene. Holmes demands that Ruth marry Romero, she refuses. Romero plans to kidnap Ruth but "Bowie" Bob, before he commits the acts signs an agreement promising Romero leaving him. Ruth, sends Jack a note, but on this way to the house he is knocked unconscious and Ruth is carried away. After the most exciting scenes ever shown in a picture, Jack finally wins the consent of Ruth's father.

CHAMPION.

HER THREE PROPOSALS.—Through a series of trifling mishaps, Katherine Crosby meets three strangers in the Eastern train. Miss Crosby, before being a prosperous Bankman, had entrusted her education to an Eastern Boarding School, and from which she had graduated but recently. Her home, when the much life monotony is broken by this all important event.

In descending the slippery stairs of the general store, she accidentally trips and falls, sliding to the bottom on a greased pig. Assistance is at once helped to her feet by Samuel Stuart, a traveling salesman. Thanking him for his assistance, she also tenders her card upon his request for permission to call and ascertain her state of health.

He finds her suffering from a slight bruise. Rutherford Ford Banker from the East, and picks up her fallen packages and hands them to her. A few courteous words are spoken and he also receives her card. Turning the corner, she is saved from a snowball attack of an urchin by the timely interference of William Handler, cowpuncher and faddist. A third card is then presented which is graciously accepted.

In each instance, the man avails himself of the opportunity and calls three and presents their cards on every evening. Kate is equal to the occasion, however, and at their departure each man considers himself the favored one. A week of calling and receiving serves to embolden the three suitors, and on this particular snowy afternoon, while lounging in her window, Kate becomes the recipient of three proposals of marriage. To each is accorded a request for an immediate answer.

Smiling and happy, this gay young woman falls asleep, crowing over and fondling her proposals as a child does a toy. She dreams—married in turn to each of her admirers, her experiences are harrowing—gay enviements in hand with intrigue and treasons—house of squalor with privations, hunger, brutal treatment, and then driven forth homeless, alone and unaided for! She awakes, but so startling are the after effects that she destroys the proposals with a solemn vow to ever remain single.

Years after—again we look in that window and see her with her only companions, her dog, her cat, and her parrot, also the sole connection with the past, which is a box containing the torn-up proposals.

IMP.

HER DARKEST HOUR.—We see "Little Mary" first in charge of a school room with a boy for unruly schoolmate over whom she apparently has no control, being a novice in pedagogy. Her failure has evidently reached the ears of the members of the board of education, and a committee of the guardians of public instruction visits the institution of learning and the shortcomings of Ruth, the teacher, are spurred. She is dismissed from her position in disgrace; a holiday is proclaimed. The children depart, and Ruth is left to her sorrow and bitterness of her failure as a teacher. Sorrowfully she dons her wraps and leaves the school room with its disappointing memories.

We next see Ruth in her struggle for her livelihood making application for the position of stenographer in an office. Her beauty is rewarded by the male clerical force and she is subjected to such strategy. Her struggles are not unlike those of many a prepossessing young woman who, much of necessity earn a living by being associated with men in business.

Ruth is ushered into the presence of the head of the firm, and as her face is perhaps her best recommendation, she is immediately engaged. She assumes her duties, only to be called by telephone into the presence of the important and designing head to take dictation. They are alone, and during the process, the blase man of the world remarks how pretty she is in a manner not at all suit. Smarting under the cruel treatment she leaves the office. The clerical force surmising what has happened, admires the girl for her determination.

The story shifts to the home of William Lawrence a widower, and his little daughter Dorothy, Dorothy is a petted child and it is quite beyond the power of her father to control her appetites. He realizes the child needs the care of a mother.

Ruth, unable to find employment, feels the pangs of hunger, and walking on the street, she sees a milk wagon standing in front of the Lawrence residence. She is impelled to steal as the milkman is temporarily absent, and she takes a bottle of the milk to be detected in the act. She is being arrested by the vender of the milk when Lawrence puts an appearance and saves her from further humiliation. He is at once interested in Ruth, takes her into the house and finds a hungry for a woman's affection, loves her.

Ruth's persistency as a member of the household and learns to love her benefactor. She is discovered by Dorothy kissing the photograph of her father, and an avowal of love is forced from the child's lips by the declaration of Dorothy that she desires a mother.

The story ends with the prayer of the child about to be fulfilled, and Ruth finds a loving husband and a home.

THE CONVERT.—Lieut Howard West and Agnes Boyd are plighting their troth in the presence of Father Aston and other friends.

Immediately afterwards West is ordered to report to his regiment in the Philippines to head a charge in a battle territory. During it and he is shot. Badly wounded, he wanders about weak from loss of blood, until he is found by a native, who carries him back to his hut.

He is reported dead at military headquarters, and to his loved ones at home. The sad tidings are brought to his sweetheart, Agnes, who, seeks the seclusion of a convent.

West regains his strength returns home, and is welcomed by his brother John with open arms. Howard now makes inquiries for Agnes. John informs him that she is not married, but has entered a convent. Howard then rushes to the convent, and arrives just in time to witness Agnes voluntarily to go to the leper colony to minister to the unfortunates Father Aston recognizes Howard, and the young man is in conversation with the priest when Agnes appears clad in the habiliments of her sacred order. Howard and the girl meet and recognize each other. Howard extends his arms and Agnes falls unconscious into the protecting arms of Father Aston. Howard leaves while the girl is unconscious.

Realizing that Agnes is lost to him, he is taken ill and desires the attendance of Father Aston, who comes, bringing Agnes with him. The scene of the parting of the lovers is intensely dramatic. Agnes, inspired to a life of labor and plague-stricken community leaving her lover without even a caress, and West racked with emotion, is only softened by the words of comfort from the Holy Father. The story closes with Howard receiving comfort and consolation from the kind priest.

LUX.

THE ORPHAN'S FRIEND.—Little Jack's mother has just died, and committed her son to the care of his grandfather, from whom she has been estranged for many years. The grandfather regards his adoption in the light of a unpleasant duty, and the little boy is left much alone. One day he makes friends with a stray dog, and, braving his grandfather's wrath, leads the animal indoors. Only to be scolded, while his friend is shut out. During the night Jack is awakened by bark and dressing himself steps out of the house. Accompanied by the dog the animal, Jack sets out to find his mother, but has not gone far when, tired and weary, he falls asleep on the grass. The dog cannot leave his charge, and remains on the part of his new master, and promptly trots back to the house. Meantime the boy's escape has been discovered, and aroused by the dog's bark the grandfather, accompanied by the nurse, with the dog leading, follows in the direction of the dog. The sight of the poor little lad, sleeping peacefully, touches the grandfather's heart, and he himself tenderly brings his small charge back. The next day the dog is finally adopted as a member of the family, and, surrounded by the old man's kindness, now and then to be followed by the grandfather. The little boy has been petted and springing out of the sliding place is soon clasped in the old man's arms, while the delighted grandfather looks on, insanely proud and pleased with himself.

THAT HORSE DID RUN.—Gibbs has just driven from the country to town, and after a spirited ride, leaves his sober horse and enters for a drink. Here the appearance of some of the townsmen to indulge in a few rough jokes, and Gibbs, suddenly turning, quickly throws the jester out. The latter, enraged at his ejection, plots to obtain his revenge, and accordingly gives the horse good feed, with the result that when Gibbs commences to drive off, the horse takes off at full speed. Gibbs, quite unused to his steed's accelerated speed, cannot pull him up, with the natural result that the horse creates much damage. Soon a crowd follows in pursuit of the runaway and their numbers are augmented by the police. Gibbs, finally, hears down upon a hand-barrow a cart with eight, on the back of the cabin. Finally the Gibbs ends his career by smashing in the walls of a house and his pursuers entering, make things lively for the occupants, who is certainly more sinned against than sinning.

NESTOR.

THE TRANSGRESSOR.—The way of the Transgressor is hard, and indeed, none felt this more keenly than Jim Collins, the only survivor of the Collins-Hardgrave feud. While his daughter, Mary, hurried farewell to Mary and the baby, the marked man had remained in hiding for four years. They, concealed by the bedding of his sick wife. he ventured home only to be captured almost upon the threshold of his cabin. Flung into the closed door, Mary Collins lay dying, while little Regina was being given to Colonel and Mrs. Clark for adoption.

Fifteen years passed—Jim Collins had become a fixture in the Atlanta penitentiary, his daughter, known as Regina Clark, had refused her various suitors, among them, the family lawyer, Victor Mills, the latter eloping with Constance Warren. Hoping to obtain some valuable information for a case which was to be re-opened, Victor Mills visited the State Prison, where he was taken in charge of by a trusty and later turned over to a guard. As the lawyer returned to the office, however, he discovered that his hat and coat were missing; for Jim Collins, taking advantage of the warden's absence from the room, had slipped them on and made good his escape.

Two years elapsed, when Mills learned a small country store, he came face to face with Jim Collins, the trusty who had shown him around. Mills, realizing that with the aid of his coat, Mills' first impulse was to inform the authorities, then a picture of Regina and the successful lawyer, and arose in his mind. He knew that the girl was adopted and that her father might still be alive. Now, if this convict could be made to represent himself as her father, he believed that Lieutenant Warren would hastily withdraw.

Hurriedly following Jim to his cabin, the lawyer gave the wretched man his clothes, and as a result he got the former's coat and hat, and home breaking the news to that unhappy family.

Reluctantly, Jim forced himself to read the letter, began it over and over for the last sentence and to find that it had been written by his own wife, murdering him to keep from her knowledge of his past. Guardian of his wayward daughter, the former realized how many and sudden were the unusual events in the life of the woman he called his father—I have lied to you.

Then with one last look at the girl, he stole silently from the house and are strangers presented themself at the warden's office, content to finish out his prison term rather than disobey his dying wife's commands.

ECLAIR.

MR. FADDLEWAY IS ON STRIKE.—Mr. Faddleway has had enough of work! "Whenever the row," says he, "I've got work too hard, the pay is too small, why not rest and take it easy for awhile." By continually giving expression to such sentiments, Mr. Faddleway soon succeeds upon his comrades to go on "Strike." Accordingly, at the given time, they all walk out, and return to their homes, resolved upon taking a pleasant holiday with resting and festivities. Far away from the dusty factories they gather merry by the grape air of freedom. Mr. Faddleway, in a burst of hospitality invites his friends and fellow workmen to come and see him. The strikers needs do not find all things as pleasant as they anticipated. There is a lot of work to be done about the house, and as the number of unpleasant kind must be supplemented by an idle husband. Mr. Faddleway's wife soon tires of it all, and calls his friends together and it's a big crowd speeds upon the fact that, though they have had a delightful time, idleness is the root of all evil, and, therefore they had better return to their work. So, led by our breezy friend, they all go back to the shop—except one of them, agreed that the dusty place is the happiest spot on earth!

THE ELDER BRAVE.—Jack Coward is the cause of a disagreement as his wife to bedtime. Being pestled by an ill-tempered pedestrian, Mrs. Coward becomes incensed at the latter and insists that her husband engage in a duel with the impolite offender. Poor Mr. Coward is at his wit's end, when a friend offers to supply to mix him an Elixir of Bravery, which will enable him to overcome his opponent accordingly. Mr. Coward appears on the fighting ground well prepared, and in the manner in which he vanquishes his foe is as ludicrous as it is novel.

THE HEART OF A WARRIOR.—Jack, a lieutenant, has been paying his addresses to Helen for some months, and the young girl has named Daisy. She, however, will not listen to his avowals, as she considers him to be too fickle and in love to be the object of her devotion. Jack decides to join the Army and to win the fame and honor that will make him worthy of the affections of his idol Daisy. He accordingly enlists, and at their parting Daisy gives Jack a locket as a token of her love, promising that she will wait until he returns with honor, to claim his bride. Urged on by his great love for the girl at home, Jack fights valiantly, and distinguishes himself. A few years later he returns home having attained the rank of officer, and wearing the insignia of the "Legion of Honor." He at once makes his way to the home of his beloved Daisy, but alas! he finds that the fickle young Daisy has moved away, and no one can give him a clue as to her whereabouts.

Years pass by—Jack has never married he cherishes in his heart his love for the long lost Daisy. He has become a colonel, and is in charge of the head of a body of soldiers when he sees a carriage being attacked by a party of Cossacks. On the carriage door he recognizes the locket he had given to the girl of his heart. Jack recognizes, within, the face of its beloved Daisy. The carriage also contains her husband and their children. The wife becomes during the long years of gone a true hero has and offers a broken page to take possession of him, he orders his men to advance, and at the risk of his own life after having overcome enormous wounds, he rescues the occupants of the carriage. When the excitement is over Jack hands the locket back to her who had passed unfaithful to the man who had loved her so long and saved her life in the face of all her tenderness!

HOSPITAL FOR SMALL ANIMALS.—A very interesting institution was established in Paris years ago, where there are facilities for the caring for lost or abandoned small animals. We forgive, this institution has become a hospital for animals. This film shows us some of the numerous patients—dogs, cats, monkeys, birds, and other animals. We see the operating room, and the doctors at work, and then we see the comfortable beds in their separate rooms awaiting convalescence.

A most interesting exhibit, something out of the ordinary!

FOR this week's CHAMP see release dates and synopses on another page. Don't forget—Wednesday is CHAMP DAY.

THE CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Distributed thro' The Sales Co. 12 East 15th Street, N. Y. City

SOLAX.

MIXED PETS. Mrs. Rose wants a little pet dog, and wants it badly. Mr. Rose, however, has decided views of his own on the subject and will not consent. Uncle Billy, who is visiting the young pair sympathizing with his niece, determines to get her a pet, and without the husband's knowledge, does so.

James, the butler, and Annie, the maid, of the Rose's household, have been secretly married, and their union blessed with a bouncing baby, which they have left in the custody of a friend as they fear for their position, should their marriage and the existence of the infant be discovered. Just as Uncle Billy departs on his mission in quest of a dog, Annie receives a note from her friend telling her the baby is not well and that she must take her away at once. Annie breaks the news to James, and they both decide to bring the baby to the Rose's home. Annie goes for the baby and returns about the same time Uncle Billy arrives with the dog.

A string of amusing complications ensue which results in the servants being permitted to keep their baby, and the young wife her dog.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE CRIMINAL CHIEF'S CAPTURE.—Bob Walsh, a former criminal who has reformed and stoned for his misdeeds, receives a note from some of his former pals telling him that he must rejoin their gang or else stand the consequences, and is requested to send his answer to a certain place at once. Having made a successful new start in life, and being determined to continue, he consults a detective. The latter advises him to tear up some paper and send it in an envelope as an answer to the appointed spot in order that he may follow them up. The detective follows his client's messenger, and afterwards trails the recipient of the envelope noticing where he goes. The chief and his gang discover the trick which has been played upon them, whereupon they go to their victim's house, gag him and take him away. The detective goes to the gang's haunts, and allows himself to be captured, and is put in a cell with his client. When one of the bandits brings them food, the prisoners bind his hands and take the key from him. The detective's little helper gets away with the client, but the detective himself is recaptured and placed in a room with a bomb operated by a clock. The boy helper climbs to the roof and goes down a chimney to his master's rescue. The detective's bonds are cut, and the bomb thrown out of the window just in time before the explosion. The detective has been able to secure proof that the leader of the gang is a noted character. He is wanted by the police, and in a final scene he is denounced and arrested.

BISON.

THE RED MAN'S WRATH.—To avenge his squaw the Indian pursues the desperado, and sticks to the trail of his quarry with savage persistence. Wounded, he tumbles off his horse, but again takes up the relentless chase. His efforts are rewarded, and the men become engaged in fierce combat, in which the white man is vanquished.

A WIFE'S CALVARY.—Owing to a dissolute scamp, and his wife's efforts to reform him proving unavailing, she leaves him and secures employment as a servant in a rich banker's family, which proves a happy refuge for herself and child. Hartman plans to loot the banker's home, and a slight noise awakens his wife. She gives the alarm, and the banker fires a gun at the marauders, wounding Hartman, who is captured.

Thus the woman whom he so grievously wronged is unwittingly made the instrument of his punishment.

RELIANCE.

THE LAST LAUGH.—George Waring becomes infatuated with Miss Lowe and his wife divorces him. While driving, Miss Lowe's horse runs away and she is heroically rescued by Dick Watts, a handsome youth who falls in love with her. Miss Lowe, attired in bridal gown, is about to marry Waring when Watts rushes in and tempestuously exhorts her not to marry Waring, and as she has really learned to love Watts she accedes to his wishes. Waring is furious at having his bride snatched from his hands at the very altar, but resigns himself to his fate. Watts marries Miss Lowe, and, alone, seeks his fortune in Alaska. Meantime Mrs. Waring has met a childhood sweetheart, Paul Durkin, a soldier of fortune and a gambler, marries him and drifts to the Alaskan gold fields. Watts makes a rich strike and prepares to return home, but meets Durkin, who fleeces him. He attempts suicide, and is found badly wounded by Mrs. Durkin, who nurses him back to health, and, touched by his story, persuades Durkin to give back the gold and sends for his wife. When she arrives Mrs. Durkin learns that she has befriended the husband of the girl who wrecked her home and struck by the humor of the situation bursts into hysterical laughter, in which she is gradually joined by the motley crowd of picturesquely attired men from many lands, forming a tableau of irresistible humor.

YANKEE.

CONDEMNED TO DEATH.—When the stern old judge was notified that twelve deviled men had arrived at a verdict and were waiting to deliver same to the court, a hush fell over the crowded room. The prisoner, pale but hopeful, took his stand in front of the jury and searched their faces for a sign of encouragement.

His mother and the girl smiled cheeringly and whispered words of hope. The last scene in a long and bitterly fought murder trial was about to take place. The only evidence against the accused was purely circumstantial. Yet the jury convicted him and he was sentenced to death.

The story leading up to this point, tells the details of the midnight attack. It also takes the reader through a maze of conflicting situations on to the concluding scenes when justice is finally meted out to the guilty one.

Nothing has been so well and carefully told in pictures before. There are twenty-five distinctive scenes in which upwards of fifty acting people are seen to advantage.

ATLAS.

COALS OF FIRE.—Tom Stuart left wife and daughter to join the Nome gold rush. In his absence the daughter eloped with a rich broker's son and they also started for Nome. Meantime, Tom Stuart was faring badly. He was being quietly robbed by a Mexican roustabout. The two elopers arriving, sheltered themselves in the same cave the Mexican hid the gold in, and they took the gold. Stuart had already accused the Mexican and they were about to lynch him when the appearance of the young couple put a stop to it.

Father and daughter met for the first time in three long years and Tom accepted his new son-in-law in good faith, in spite of his innocent escapade which almost caused a tragedy.

Some time later a happy and prosperous couple returned to the East just in time to save a ruined broker from suicide. A father's forgiveness followed, of course.

THEATRICAL ARCHITECT

FRANZ-CARL-KOENIG

OFFICE, STUDIO AND SHOPS 4912 TO 20 PARKSIDE AVE., PHILA.

We not only make Plans and build

Theatres and Vaudeville Houses

We also build

MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

We have built over 60 Theatres the last 5 years which are all ORIGINAL in Construction, Design and Decorations

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders

German Savings Bank Building

147 Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY

THE PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION COMPANY

¶ WE buy thirty (30) new reels every week (ask the Sales Co.) and double copies of all the feature reels.
Let us give you a service that will insure your box office receipts.

44 North Ninth St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A MARVELOUS PRODUCTION befitting WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY, will be released Feb. 22nd, entitled, "THE OLD MAN AND JIM."

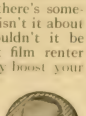
DO NOT FAIL TO GET THIS HEADLINER

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.,

Distributed thro' The Sales Co. 12 East 15th Street, New York.

With tears streaming down his frontispiece, old Gen. Flimco has gone to law and begged the Court to make me quit picking on him. He declares I have busted his toys, taken all the joys out of the world for him, caused him great mental anguish and given him a case of aggravated pip. He says I am a dangerous man. And, by golly, I AM! I'm a as dangerous as Roosevelt, or as Heney of 'Frisco, or as Loeb of New York or any other man who throws the searchlight of publicity on dark places and exposes crookedness, graft and thievery. I am a regular rip-snorter for danger. I'm a bearcat for exposures! I've built my success on a foundation of truth. If the truth hurts Flimmyboy, it's because there's something rotten in Denmark. If the truth hurts him, isn't it about time for you to quit doing business with him? Wouldn't it be better for you to hook up with the biggest and best film renter in the world and get a film service that will actually boost your receipts sky high? Come to Papa!

CARL LAEMMLE, President



The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:

196-198 Lake Street CHICAGO

Other Offices: OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases

New York City and Vicinity

Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Telephone 1344 Gramercy

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make very practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

For Rent

1000 Reels of Film

$1.00 per day Each

WRITE IMMEDIATELY

Alamo Film Exchange

Maison Blanche Building,
Canal and Dauphine Streets
New Orleans, La.

You pay express charges both ways.

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made

Most Attractive Designs

PERMANENTLY NOISELESS

There Are Reasons

Write for Catalog V

American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK

BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.

Posters free. Prompt service. Day and night service. Write, wire or phone.

143 NORTH EIGHTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.).....990
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.).....999
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.).....998
Jan. 26—The Boss' Stick Man (Dr.).....991
Jan. 30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.).993
Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.).....997
Feb. 6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.).....997
Feb. 9—Pris. Stick Engagement Kiss (Com.).....997

EDISON.

Jan. 17—With Interest To Date (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 18—Dada's Birthday Gift (Com.).....993
Jan. 20—Mike the Miser (Dr.).....990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.).....995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Try Out (Dr.).....995
Feb. 1—Dumptons as Rough (Com.).....
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 8—Too Valentines (Com.).....1000
Feb. 10—His First Commission (Dr.).....990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY.

Jan. 10—The Sophomore's Romance (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 31—The Jilted Joker (Com.).....980
Feb. 3—Hank and Lank (Com.).....990
Feb. 4—Carmencita, The Faithful (Dr.).....995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Votes (Com.).....980
Feb. 7—Ten Weeks For Twenty-five Cents (Com.).....425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Jan. 24—The Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.).945
Jan. 28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.).....982
Jan. 28—The Gorges of the Bourne, France (Sc.)1200
Jan. 30—The Last Curtain (Dr.).....828
Jan. 31—At Eventide (Sc.).....1173
Feb. 3—Fingers Looks for Job (Com.).....537
Feb. 4—Krimmel Water Fall in the Austrian Tyrol (Scenic).....435

KALEM.

Jan. 11—For Love Of An Enemy (Dr.).....995
Jan. 13—The Heart of An Indian Mother (Dr.).1000
Jan. 18—Chum's Routine (Dr.).....980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.).....880
Jan. 28—The Secret of the Still (Dr.).....950
Jan. 30—Christmas and Indians (Dr.).....970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.).1000
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks (Com.).....980
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.).....950
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.).....950
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come To This (Com.)..750
Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.).....250
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)..975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—His Rogue Uncle (Com.).....1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Dr.).....990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.).....1000

MELIES.

Jan. 5—The Crimson Scars (Dr.).....980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L" Ranch (Dr.)..980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.).....980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Commanchers (Dr.).880
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—Tony the Greaser (Dr.).....980

PATHE.

Jan. 28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.).....280
Jan. 30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.).1000
Feb. 1—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (Com.)..722
Feb. 1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Ind.)279
Feb. 3—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.).....722
Feb. 3—Rice Industry in Japan (Ind.).....266
Feb. 4—A Cowboy's Decoteedness (Dr.).....922
Feb. 6—Max Has The Boxing Fever (Com.)..561
Feb. 6—An Imitator of Bloodlin (Com.).....400
Feb. 8—Legally Dead (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 10—The Missing Bride (Dr.).....850
Feb. 10—Review of the Civilian Troops (Sc.)..780
Feb. 11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Jan. 18—Reddy (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—Englishman's Honor (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Com.).....1000
Jan. 30—The Spy (Dr.).....
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider (Dr.).....
Feb. 2—The Curse of the Red Man (Dr.) ....
Feb. 6—The Much Mother-In-Law (Com.).....
Feb. 9—Thelma (Dr.).....
Feb. 12—The Survival of the Fittest (Dr.) ....

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.).....670
Jan. 11—Wood Carving at Belenz (Ind.).....320
Jan. 18—By The King's Order (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.).....688
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey of the British Isles (Scenic).....266
Feb. 1—Disinherited (Dr.).....990

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 24—If Did Look Suspicious (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Firemen's Parade (Scenic).....
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Love Tones In the South Seas.....
Jan. 31—Jane Rescues (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Sandy and the Man (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day (Com.).....
Feb. 7—The Deluge (Dr.).....978
Feb. 10—The Legend of Mercy (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.).....

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Jan. 19—The Bonanza King (Dr.).....990
Jan. 23—When A Man's Single (Com.).....1000
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 30—The Genius (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 2—The Mission In the Desert (Dr.).....
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.).....985
Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....480
Feb. 13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)..1000
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....1000

ATLAS.

Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION

Jan. 23—Why He Went West (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Fredrika Bremer Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Friend (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Jan. 30—The Empress' Diamonds (Com.).....603
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber 373
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.).....984
Feb. 13—Fredrika Bremer Ranch (Dr.).....950
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery 424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Insane (Spec.).....286

GREAT NORTHERN.

Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery (Dr.).....
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence (Com.).....
Jan. 28—Mexico Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.)...

IMP.

Jan. 28—'Phone 1707 Harrison (Dr.).....997
Jan. 30—Maid or Man (Dr.).....998
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement (Com.).....500
Feb. 4—The Red-Tie Plot (Dr.).....500
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convict (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Jan. 20—His Faithful Furniture (Com.).....380
Jan. 27—Little Willie Goes Coeling (Dr.)....298
Jan. 27—The Infernal Mystery (Dr.).....682
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Dr.).....944
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....711
Feb. 17—That Rose Bush (Com.).....272

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison.")

Jan. 31—A Tough Tenderfoot.....900
Feb. 3—A Sunset's Bravery.....900
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 21—The Visit of a Friend.....500
Jan. 21—A New Kind of an Arm Chair.....500
Jan. 26—The Reconquering Picture.....500
Jan. 28—We Son Is Guilty.....900
Feb. 2—Confession of the Village.....500
Feb. 4—The Feast of Poolshead.....900
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 18—The Blue Domino Disguise.....500
Jan. 25—A Wife's Calvary.....500
Jan. 25—Tweedledum Tries a Cask.....500
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports.....500
Feb. 1—The Return from Sea Side Bathing...500

NESTOR.

Jan. 11—Sloane Hollow (Dr.).....995
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Com.).....1000
Jan. 25—The 'Phone 23 (Com.).....980
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 8—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Jan. 28—The Mannequedors (Dr.).....
Jan. 31—For Mr Pal (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.).....
Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.).....
Feb. 14—Ye Unforseen Complication (Com.)....
Feb. 18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Jan. 25—For Remembrance 900
Jan. 28—The Last Laugh.....900
Feb. 1—A Brass Button.....900
Feb. 4—The Command From Gallfee.....900
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage.....900
Feb. 15—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....

REVIER.

Jan. 4—For Retter Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Gooseneck Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....500

REX.

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....990

SOLAX COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Ring Of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 31—Only In The Way (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Ashes (Dr.).....
Feb. 7—The Westerner and the Earl (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—For Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Patrol Maid of '76 (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Jan. 27—A Son of Old Corp (Dr.).....
Jan. 30—The Taxicab Mystery (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—The Counting House Mystery (Dr.)....
Feb. 6—Foiling the Camera (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 6.

Biograph—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)....997
Lubin—A Double Elopement (Dr.).....990
Pathe—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)....561
Pathe—An Imitator of Bloodlin (Com.).....400
Selig—Too Much Mother-in-Law (Com.)

Tuesday, February 7.

Edison—The Doctor (Dr.).....1000
Essanay—A Woman's Votes (Com.).....566
Essanay—Two Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.).....425
Gaumont— (Title Not Given)
Vitagraph—The Deluge 978

Wednesday, February 8.

Edison—Two Valentines (Com.).....1000
Kalem—Little Sister (Dr.).....970
Pathe—Legally Dead (Dr.).....1000
Urban (Title Not Given)

Thursday, February 9.

Biograph—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)..997
Lubin—The Heart Sheriff (Com.).....1000
Melies—Tony the Greaser (Dr.).....980
Selig—Thelma (Dr.).....

Friday, February 10.

Edison—His First Commission (Dr.).....990
Pathe—The Missing Bride (Dr.).....850
Pathe—Review of the Civilian Troops (Scenic)..180
Kalem—The Broken Trail (Dr.).....1000
Vitagraph—The Legend of Mercy (Dr.).....

Saturday, February 11.

Essanay—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.).....1000
Gaumont— (Title Not Given)
Pathe—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.).....1000
Vitagraph—At the White Man's Door (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, February 6.

American—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.).....985
Eclair—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.).....984
Imp—The Mirror (Com.).....990
Yankee—Foiling the Camera (Dr.).....

Tuesday, February 7.

Bison—The Half Breed's Plan.....900
Powers—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Thanhouser—The Westerner and the Earl (Dr.).

Wednesday, February 8.

Ambrosio—Tweedledum as a Detective (Com.).....
Ambrosio—Sons Cavalry (Sc.).....
Atlas—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Champion—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.).....950
Nestor—The Transgressor (Dr.).....1000
Reliance—The School Ma'am's Courage (Dr.)...900
Solax—Ring of Love (Com.).....

Thursday, February 9.

American—On the Installment Plan (Com.)...500
American—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....480
Imp—The Mirror (Com.).....900
Imp—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....500
Italo—John Milton (Dr.).....

Friday, February 10.

Bison—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Lux—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....711
Lux—That Rose Bud Run (Com.).....272
Solax—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Thanhouser—The Norwood Necklace (Dr.).....
Yankee—Was She Justified? (Dr.).....

Saturday, February 11.

Great Northern—Found Again (Dr.).....
Itala—Foolshead at the Cinematograph (Com.).
Powers—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.).....
Reliance—The Little Avenger (Dr.).....

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a Massachusetts town of 100,000 to 125,000. Best location in the town, on the main street and at an important transfer point. Seats 700, all on ground floor. T. & D. M., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—Theater in Massachusetts city of 110,000. Seating capacity 600, equipped for playing pictures and vaudeville. Good location and business, price low. Must sell at once. Address, The "S" Co., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 278, Washington, D. C.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—$25.00 takes new Edison gas generator with burner. Dr. A. O'Neill, Ridgewood, N. J.

FOR SALE—I will sell my new Edison Exhibition Style Machine complete for $100.00. Never been used. T. Mitchell, 4024 Lexington Street, Chicago, Ill.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—First Class Trap Drummer for picture theatre, able to handle effects properly. Steady employment. State salary and experience. Address Box 283, Michigan City, Ind.

WANTED—Lecturer for road show, sober and reliable. State all in first letter. Address E. F. R., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

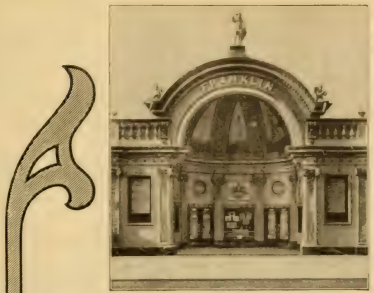
EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Good second hand exhaust fan for A. C. current. Must be a 15 or 24-inch fan and in striking state price. J. D. Wainrup, 51 S. Main Street, Mansfield, O.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOR SALE—Cheap for cash, the only Independent Film Exchange in city of 150,000. Exclusive territory of two States. Address Alb. Smith, Room 326, Dickson Bldg., Norfolk, Va.

In corresponding with advertisers kindly mention The Moving Picture World.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.

STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY

seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 205.

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Moving Picture Exhibitors—Attention

We can positively save you 40% on your moving picture supplies and guarantee you A No. 1 standard articles. Compare our prices and articles with those you are now using or give us a trial order and be convinced.

Arc lamps with heavy carbon jaws	$4.75 each
Carbon jaws, with knuckles	.90 "
Carbon jaws only	.75 "
Raybig Picture Wire, No. 8	2½c. per ft.
Moving Picture Wire, No. 6	3½c. " "
Metal Slide Carriers	40 cts. each
New York Approved Lamp House No. 0, complete, $25.00 with stand for Arc Lamp and rheostat, $12.00

Post Office Money Order or our acceptance with goods and 5 to 10% will pay cost of transaction.

ROYAL MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.,
1340 Moore Street Philadelphia, Pa.

LEADERS for Sale, perfect condition, in original package rolls of about 250 feet. Will be shipped C. O. D. subject to examination at the following prices: 1,000 ft. $18, 5,000 ft. $85, 10,000 ft. $14, per 1,000. Send for samples.

PERFECT LEADER COMPANY
Rochester, N. Y.

Moving Picture Supplies

We are the largest dealers in Moving Picture Supplies and Machine Parts in the United States. We are also the largest jobbers of "Bio" and "Electra Pink Label" Carbons, and always carry a large stock for immediate delivery.

WRITE FOR LIST

American Moving Picture Supply Co.
110 Fourth Ave. New York City

To Trap Drummers

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3x4 $10.00 / Size Shell 3x15

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb screw rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Skunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F CLEVELAND, OHIO.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $300 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars.

ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS
908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., CHICAGO

LIGHT EFFECTS

Everything Electrical for Theatres, Parks, Productions and Vaudeville Acts.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros.

PROPRIETORS

1393-5 Broadway, New York City

FOREIGN SPEAKING MOVING PICTURE MEN

REALIZING that among our readers are many who speak one or more European language and who would undoubtedly find much of interest in some of the foreign Moving Picture Papers, the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be glad to forward the subscriptions of any of its readers for any of the following weekly publications. Yearly rate is given and applies to either new or renewal subscriptions in United States.

Canadian Exhibitors will add 50c. for Postage when ordering Moving Picture World with either of the foreign Papers.

Moving Picture World and Cine-Journal [French]	$4.40
Cine-Journal [only]	2.50
Moving Picture World and either The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly or The Bioscope [British]	$4.00
Either of the British Papers [only]	2.10
Moving Picture World and La Cinematografia Italiana [Italian]	$3.60
La Cinematografia [only]	1.70
Moving Picture World and Nordisk Film Tidning [Swedish]	$3.10
Nordisk Film Tidning [only]	1.20
The Moving Picture World and Der Kinematograph [German]	$5.00
Der Kinematograph [only]	3.15

KINDLY NOTE FOR FUTURE REFERENCE

Moving Picture World

Box 226 Madison Square P. O., N. Y. City

READY FOR DELIVERY—Moving Picture World BOUND VOLUME No. 7

July to December, 1910

TWO DOLLARS, EACH, $2.00 Express charges collect

Atlas Disinfectant

IS MADE IN TWO FORMS ODORLESS OR PERFUMED

Your exchange will give you prices on it, or write to us direct.

ATLAS SUPPLY CO.

MANAYUNK

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE DAYLIGHT SCREEN.

Noted for its Brilliancy; Non-Cracking, Flexible; cuts light bill. This screen has been thoroughly tested for a year and has proven satisfactory in every way.

For Prices Address KOCH & STACKHOUSE, Stroudsburg, Pa.

SONG SLIDES

Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable

Colored Song and Announcement Slides

Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

WRITE FOR OUR LATEST CIRCUIT PROPOSITION. It means money to you.

Our 1911 Catalog is just from the press Get one

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE

Sixth Floor, Portland Block

107 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Dept. I

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

50,000 feet of fogged film, excellent for leaders. Some unexposed and good for regular work. Not guaranteed. Price 1½c. per foot.

A. M., Moving Picture World.

ATLAS WESTERN FILM

Out Wednesday, Feb. 15

Coals of Fire

DON'T MISS IT

Atlas Film Co.
10 East Fifteenth Street
New York City

TWO—YANKS—YOU—NEED

OUT MONDAY, FEBRUARY 13th

CONDEMNED TO DEATH

A Tale of the Bridge of Sighs.

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 17th

"HER BIRTHDAY SURPRISE"

A Delightful Comedy.

Write for Posters and the "Yankeegram."

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 East 32d Street New York

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

"ARCO-B" BIOGRAPH CARBONS

Made Expressly for Moving Picture Machines

THAT'S ALL

WRITE TO US

L. E. FRORUP & CO.

SOLE IMPORTERS

232-234 Greenwich St.
NEW YORK

The Independent Film Exchange
of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
A. S. DAVIS, Manager
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENSES HAVE PUT THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS ON A HIGHER PLANE by improving the quality of the picture, increasing the illumination and fitting the picture to the screen. No other optical concern in the world has attempted to make projection lenses so carefully corrected and graded so closely in focal lengths that the right lenses for each exhibitor's conditions can be shipped as soon as the order is received.

Order Gundlach Lenses if You Want the Best Picture it is Possible to Produce

A complete stock of our lenses is carried by
NICHOLAS POWER CO., 115 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y.
THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago, Ill.
Makers of the Motiograph

Every Film Exchange sells them subject to approval.

TO ORDER, state the size of the screen, the size of the picture wanted and the distance from the lens to the center of the screen.

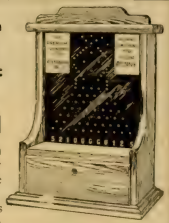
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.
828 Clinton Avenue So. Rochester, N. Y.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100,000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.
315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO
309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

WE WANT



ONE THOUSAND
Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine."

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised, will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
56-58 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

READY FOR DELIVERY

Moving Picture World

BOUND VOLUME, No. 7.

July to December, 1910

TWO DOLLARS EACH, $2.00

Express charges collect

WHY SEND TO EUROPE FOR

FILM PERFORATING DIES

When we can make them for you?
High-class repairing and alterations on Foreign Machines.

THE A. DEWES COMPANY

249 Centre Street, NEW YORK

Phone, 2351 Spring

SECOND HAND MUTOSCOPES

Twenty; in first class condition. Reasonable. See Mr. Alvord, Grocery Dept., 14th Street Store, New York City.

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Telephone 1344 Gramercy

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

EXHIBITORS
DON'T PAY FOR POSTERS

No doubt you have been notified by your Independent exchanges that you must pay for Posters commencing Feb. 10th, and we advise you not to pay for Posters as we can furnish you with all the Posters you want, free of charge.

We are Headquarters for Moving Picture Machines of all makes, such as, Powers, Edison, Motiograph, Standard, etc. We also handle all parts and supplies pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Write for our proposition on the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Nelson-Gans Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knights Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Nebr.

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

Second-hand Independent Films, all makes, 60 and 90 days old

The largest dealers in new and second-hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

SECOND-HAND FILM
$5.00 per reel upwards
NEW FILM
4c. per foot upwards
CAMERAPHONE FILM
new, with two sets records

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request

Annual Subscription Moving Picture World $2.00

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.00	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP
STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address
Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre Chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Films
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
Mayer-Silverman, 105 4th Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. HALLBERG 36 East 23d St. New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats | GET OUR PRICES Before You Buy Largest Variety Lowest Prices | The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 West 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated
THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ills.

The Mortimer Film Cleaner is now in use from Maine to California. If you want to know what it can do to your old films, send for the booklet.
The Mortimer Film Cleaning Company
FIDELITY BLDG. PORTLAND, MAINE

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

Concert Pianorchestra

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 and 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way and 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 and 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chestnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave. S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE 75 CENTS

Also latest cue music Series 1910 for 10 parts and piano, $1.00.

1-4 discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, may from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic including resonators, stagnets and keyboards, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 3810 N. Clark St. CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW SLIDES
For the following Songs—JUST OUT

Killarney, my Home o'er the Sea.
Dancing Starlight.
Broncho Nell.
For Killarney and You.
My Country Has First Call.
Mandy Lou.
Dolores.
The Best Place of All.
The Moon Swings Low.
Springtime Brings Roses and You.
You're the Sweetest Girl in All This World To Me.
Moonlight, Dear.
We've Kept the Golden Rule.
If Your Heart knew a Heart Like Mine.
Be My Sweetheart.
I Get So Lonesome for You.
I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams.

De WITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St. New York City

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

School classes every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00.

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years' Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write for list.

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

BIO CARBONS

ARE USED IN PRODUCING THE FINEST PICTURES IN AMERICA

Whenever you see pictures that impress you by their exceptional quality, you will nearly always find BIO Carbons in the lamp house.

This recognition of the superiority of the BIO Carbon is a high tribute to the intelligence and progressiveness of the man behind the machine.

If your operator uses BIO Carbons, you may be sure that he is making an earnest, intelligent effort to produce the very best pictures possible.

Do not hamper him by attempting to save a few cents in price by the use of inferior carbons.

BIO Carbons cost us a great deal more, your Film Exchange and you a little more than other carbons, because it takes money to put the quality into them, but this quality is worth twice as much as it costs you.

Insist on obtaining genuine BIO Carbons (branded BIO on each Carbon).

All progressive Film Exchanges and dealers handle them.

Charles L. Kiewert Company

Largest importers of Flame Arc Lamps and Carbons in America

39 Cortlandt St., New York

114 Huron St., Milwaukee, Wis.
309 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa.
58 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.
195 Fremont St., San Francisco, Cal.
15th & Pine Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

A RELIABLE HOUSE

WHERE EVERY PROMISE IS FAITHFULLY CARRIED OUT

Whenever we agree to furnish a certain grade service you get it or we refund your money

An immense stock to select from. All the best Trust and Independent reels in our stock. Banner and poster service free. The only real independent Film Exchange in New York. Drop us a line and we will have our representative call on you.

ACME FILM CO., Inc., 12 E. 15th Street, New York

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Economy, Flexibility
Non-cracking. Safety, strength. Send for circular.
Ralph J. Goisen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

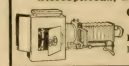
FOR SALE—Late film, $5 and $10 per reel; new Power's, Edison machines, $100; Model B gas machines, $25; used Motiographs, $100. Theatres cheap; will buy same. Condensers, 50c.; sprocket wheels, $1; tickets, 7c. per 1,000; carbons, 1½c. Will trade you new machines for old ones. For Rent—10,000 reels film, $1 per reel per week; 20 reels $15; one shipment. Will buy Passion Play, films, machines.
H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

FILMS FOR SALE
after sixty or ninety days of release.
Also commercial in excellent condition at reasonable prices
M. YSSEL
973 N. 7th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

THE KODAGRAPH

A "STANDARD" MOVING PICTURE MACHINE FOR THE HOME

The only machine in the world showing a picture by a dry battery. A new system of reflection, and a specially made 4 c/p Tungsten Lamp, in conjunction with a patented reflector, projecting a clear five feet, 100 c/p picture. Price $7.50, including film. Send for circular.

HOME MOTION PICTURE CO.
Hartford Bldg., 41 Union Sq. West
NEW YORK CITY

Save Tickets

AND

Eliminate Choppers

at the entrance to every Theatre and Amusement Place

GET THE COUNT WITH

JONES DUPLEX CHECK GATE

and you GET all the money

Ask us to send you further details

JONES CHANGE REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

18 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Investigate At Once!

WE INVITE YOUR IMMEDIATE INVESTIGATION OF OUR SQUARE BUSINESS METHODS, UP-TO-DATE SERVICE AND MOST COMPREHENSIVE

Program

OF LATEST and BEST

Independent Films

CHOICE RUNS

Only a few left
Write, wire or call for them

WASHINGTON

Paramount Film Co.

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

THE
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

Tuesday Saturday

INSIST ON BOTH

TWO EVERY WEEK

Powers Picture Plays

Released, Tuesday, February 14th

AN UNFORESEEN COMPLICATION

A RIP ROARING COMEDY

An old Professor mesmerizes a student. Their souls commune in the air, get mixed and locate in the wrong bodies.

Can you GUESS what happens ? :: TRY, and then see this "HIT."

Released, Saturday, February 18th

UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES

A DRAMA

A Southern Romance which makes your blood tingle. The settings are superb. A real Mississippi Steamer. Plantation scenes. Wharf with the darkies piling cotton. I'ts so real you can almost hear them singing as they work.

Feature this and watch your box office receipts pile up

Have you one of our Lobby Display Frames. They are "Beauts."

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue, New York City

Vol. 8, No. 7 February 18, 1911 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS
NEW YORK

Project Perfect Pictures

By using only "the perfect moving picture machine"—POWER'S
You can make a steady picture as if

PAINTED ON THE SCREEN and the only kind of machine that does project pictures of perfect steadiness is

Power's No. 6

That is one reason why its sales exceed those of any TWO other American picture machines, and its popularity is steadily increasing.

If you want to know a score of other reasons why "Power's" machines lead the world

Send now for CATALOG G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
For thirteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines
115-117 Nassau Street New York

"FOR WASHINGTON" IS READY FOR YOU!

THE THANHOUSER

W O - A - W E E K "2-4-U—AND GOOD ONES, TOO!"

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21st

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON SPECIAL

FOR WASHINGTON

ONE of the BEST "THANHOUSER PATRIOTICS."

We all know of Washington's remarkable feat in crossing the Delaware River at Trenton with half of his command, surprising the Hessians and making them his prisoners; but how advance word of helplessness of his enemy reached the great general has ever been a mystery. The bearer of the message was the very Patriot Maid here portrayed, who, with her American scout sweetheart severely wounded, cleverly disguises herself and takes her lover's message to Washington. Through her aid, the latter reaches the Hessian headquarters, is admitted by the wounded scout, and the enemy awake to find the American flag flying over them and the American army in full possession of their camp, the victors in one of the most bloodless yet decisive struggles of the Revolution. No. 187. Code word, Patriot.

RELEASED FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24th

"And A Child Shall Lead Them"

A NEWSBOY HERO

was one of those remarkable youngsters that poverty could not down nor misery sour. For deep in his heart of hearts was a spring of goodness, of strength, and even of charity, that betokened brighter days and an honorable position in the important life that was to come. Small wonder, therefore, that at the first test of his manhood, he aquitted himself with rare distinction. He merely acted according to his lights—and they were strong with the flame of righteousness. He had been weighed and not found wanting, as may have been expected. The weighing is what the reel takes up. No. 188. Code Word, Hero.

For System's Sake address Art Dept.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company
EVERY TUESDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
EVERY WEDNESDAY
AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Co.
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories
EVERY THURSDAY
AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
REX—Rex Moving Picture Mfg. Company
(First release Feb. 16.)
EVERY FRIDAY
BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.
EVERY SATURDAY
CAPITAL—Capital Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories

TENACITY

Josh Billings once said:

> "Konsider the postage stamp. Its USEFULNESS konsists in its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there."

Now, a stamp does not stick out of principle—it has none. But YOU have, and you must stick to what's going to butter your bread.

WE'RE TENACIOUS, we're battling for you, and TENACITY on your part means joint prosperity.

Today the exhibitor has the most logical reason in the world for sticking to our

PROGRAM

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company

111 E. 14th St., New York City

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11th

FOUND AGAIN

A well acted and appealing dramatic production

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18th

The LIFE of A MUSCHIK

A film that, with the aid of an excellent plot, gives a very clear idea of the daily life of the oppressed Russian peasant.

THE FALSE ALARM

A rattling good comedy film

The Bear-on-the-globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

IMP ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

¶The first two "IMP" releases filmed in Cuba are certainly excellent moving picture productions. An innovation that will be welcomed by Independent exhibitors everywhere—and there are more to follow.

¶If you are not showing two "IMPS" a week you are knocking your own game. Demand two a week from your exchange—and see that you get them.

"Pictureland" The First 'Imp' Cuban Release

"PICTURELAND" is the title of the initial Cuban release, February 20th. If the excellency of this picture is any criterion by which to judge, the expense of sending two producing companies to a clime where exterior scenes can be filmed in the dead of winter has been justified. "PICTURELAND" is a beautiful and elaborate production, with a pretty love story told in an intensely dramatic manner, interpreted by the stars of the "IMP" Stock Company. The settings are gorgeous, and the picture has for a plot a romance of love. Be sure you get this first Cuban release.

FILMED AMID TROPICAL SETTINGS

"ARTFUL KATE," the release of February 23rd, in which "Little Mary" appears, is a romantic little comedy of a Cuban-American love affair, in which a handsome soldier and his fiancee figure as the principals. It is a rich production, set in a background of tropical scenery, bewildering in its loveliness, the locale being tastefully selected in which to portray the action. "Little Mary" appears at her best as a Spanish beauty, handsomely gowned in habiliments of that country. It is refined comedy—such as has made the "IMP" Company famous. "ARTFUL KATE" is a film you can feature and make good.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
CARL LAEMMLE President
102 West 101st S., N. Y.
All "IMP" Films sold through the Sales Company

Demand Two Imps Every Week

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy, Fireproof, Flexibility
Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular.
Ralph J. Gotaas Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

LEADERS for Sale, perfect condition, in original package rolls of about 150 feet. Will be shipped C. O. D. subject to examination at the following prices: 1,000 ft. $18; 5,000 ft. $76; 10,000 ft. $14, per 1,000. Send for samples.
PERFECT LEADER COMPANY
Rochester, N. Y.

At Last

it is possible to secure comfortable, even illumination throughout a theatre without a brilliant light in range of vision.

¶ The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination is a notable success in the lighting of Moving Picture Houses.

¶ Theatres in all sections of the country installing this inexpensive and very desirable electric lighting system.

¶ You are undoubtedly interested in this important matter.

¶ Write us for full information. Our engineering department on receipt of particulars, will furnish, free of expense, report and recommendations.

Sold by Electrical Trade Generally
WRITE TODAY
National X-Ray Reflector Co.
227 Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO, ILL.

BEGINNING
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th
WE WILL RELEASE

2–Solax–2
EVERY WEEK
WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY

Solax films have been on the market three months and have become so popular we cannot longer withold our second release.

FRIDAY, FEB. 17th
CORINNE IN DOLLYLAND
(Comedy)
Little Corinne's toys give her a Moving Picture Show.

FRIDAY, FEB. 24th
LOVE'S TEST
(Drama)
A most interesting and remarkable test of a woman's affection for her husband.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3rd
A COSTLY PLEDGE
(Comedy)
John Martin signs the pledge. Wait until you see what happens to him.

Solax Company
147 Fourth Avenue = = = = NEW YORK

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS
INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

GEORGE WASHINGTON THOUGHT INDEPENDENCE WORTH FIGHTING FOR. IF YOU cannot get it otherwise, we want you to fight for this week's Lux and we believe you ought to fight for Lux every week. It will pay you.

Release, Friday, February 17th, 1911

Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy
DRAMA—639 Feet
A Cowboy Picture by a foreign producer. You ought to see it, and your audiences will thank you for showing it. It has the right atmosphere and we will leave the acting and riding to your judgment.

Matilda Lovestruck
COMEDY—272 Feet
This is a rare little comedy, in which the woman is the ardent lover and does the wooing. It is guaranteed to produce roars of laughter.

GET LUX

A Split Reel of Quality and Variety for the Best Programs.
SEE OTHER PAGES FOR SYNOPSES AND PAST RELEASES

R. PRIEUR
10 East 15th Street 'Phone, 3427 Stuyvesant New York City
Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

HAVE YOU BOOKED IT?

The Famous Buffalo Jones Pictures

Lassoing Wild Animals

IN AFRICA

A Unique and Sensational Picture, Showing the Capture of Lions, Giraffes, Rhinoceroses, Cheetahs, Zebras and other Wild and Dangerous Animals of the African Jungle, without the use of Deadly Weapons

NOTHING USED BUT THE LASSO

Rights to Exhibit this Picture Have Been Acquired by the Licensed Manufacturers. The Pictures are Made and Marketed by Pathe Freres.

LENGTH, 2,000 FEET. RELEASED SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1911

GET IN TOUCH WITH YOUR EXCHANGE TODAY

DON'T MISS THIS, THE GREATEST FEATURE of the YEAR

ECLAIR FILMS

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 27th

"Punch"
595 FEET
A sweet story of mother-love. Beautiful. Artistic in every respect.

Two on One

"Beware of the Bomb"
370 FEET
A cleverly acted comic. First class in every detail. A film that excites laughter throughout!!!

THE FILMS of PICTORIAL QUALITY, Combining PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY with POPULAR PLAYS

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th St. CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph St.

George Washington Saved

—BY—

"A Heroine of '76."

We tell all about it in a picture which you must see, released on Thursday, February 16th.

If this courageous girl had not acted as she did, Washington could not have crossed the Delaware, probably Cornwallis would never have surrendered at Yorktown, and maybe there would'nt be any United States at all—but the fact is, his life was saved, so all this unpleasant contemplation is eliminated, and all these "ifs" of history can be better appreciated if you see "A HEROINE OF '76."

"THE STORY OF A PRAYER RUG," released Thursday, Feb. 23rd

Another REX

REX MOTION PICTURE MANUFACTURING COMPANY

573-579 Eleventh Avenue - - - - - - New York City

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR :

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

Talk is Cheap So is Hot Air

We don't want to give either, but we want to give you Samples of

"Arco-B" Biograph Carbons

If you are not already a user you will then become one.

Each package and each Carbon to be genuine must be marked

"ARCO-B"

L. E. FRORUP & CO.

SOLE IMPORTERS

Headquarters for all kinds of Carbons

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

Andrew Carnegie $10,000,000

In the Cause of Universal Peace
The Greatest Argument Against War is

"The Old Man and Jim"

James Whitcomb Riley's Great War Poem, showing vividly the horrors of War. The Rattle and Din and Hellish Pandemonium of the Battlefield, where young and old Life-Blood is sacrificed to the Fiendish Doctrine of Mars, and the false machinations of Men.

This Film is a Historical and Educational Masterpiece, in which Humanity's Greatest Cause is espoused in a Combination of DRAMATIC and SCENIC effort, unparalleled.

Over 140 Men
Horses
Cannons
Fire

PATRIOTIC SCENE FROM THIS CHAMP. MASTERPIECE

An Accurate Historical Representation that includes impersonations of AMERICA'S GREATEST HEROES.

Released Feb. 22d--Washington's Birthday

Exchanges—This is a feature film that will positively be a leader in Independent product. Order your copies at once as the Exhibitors will demand it.

Exhibitors—This will be for you a money-maker, a business-bringer, a patriotism-producer. Order from your Exchange at once and write now for advertising matter to the

Champion Film Company

MARK M. DINTENFESS, General Manager

12 East 15th Street, New York City

Distributed through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY • 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada $2.50. Foreign Countries, $3.00. Post Paid.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅛ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.
TIME DISCOUNTS: 10% one months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone, Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 8 FEBRUARY 18, 1911 No. 7

Is "Kid Business" Worth Bidding For?

The fifth annual wave of moving picture law-making is about to sweep the country everywhere. The Legislators in Los Angeles and in Pennsylvania have been particularly obnoxious in the hair-splitting laws that they have recently enacted. Again we get word from Ohio by telegraph as we go to press that the State Legislature there is about to pass more drastic legislation, and so on from all points. Dispatches indicate that the wave of law-making is about to break over the business in all its fury. Now there must be a reason for all this. There is something that has put the so-called better element down on moving pictures, and simmered down to the marrow of the subject, "kid business" is the cause of it all.

The first rumbling of opposition to moving pictures came in the form of Childrens' Society agents who claimed that the pictures were not fit for children to see. They also claimed that the picture houses were conducive to immorality, crime, etc. Perhaps that was so at one time, but it is not so now. Instead of trying to eliminate crime from their programmes in the early days, the exhibitors in most cases adopted the opposite course of trying to prevent or repeal what are known as "sixteen-year" laws. Of course the more they bucked the child welfare people, the harder they came back and the more laws they passed. Therefore it would seem that the better course in the beginning for the exhibitor would have been to let them pass their child laws and then obey them.

Managers differ in regard to the value of "kid business." Some are of the opinion that too many children in the house are harmful, while there are others who claim that they are entitled by every right to do business with children, the same as the candy store man and other caterers to the child's fancy. It is not our intention to discuss whether any of these child laws that have been passed are just or unjust. There are good arguments on both sides of that case, as all right minded men will admit. But with all of the accompanying and extraneous law making that followed the resistance by the child laws, it is a question whether "kid business" was ever worth bidding for.

Too many children, in an audience, have a tendency to drive away adult trade, and it is not always considered a good thing for a house to have a reputation as a children's theatre. No manager can deny that children in large numbers are very noisy. It is also a well known fact that they stay as long as possible in a theatre, getting their money's worth, keeping others out of a seat and oftimes getting the manager into trouble. No manager can deny also that youngsters are very destructive to furniture, and often wantonly cut and destroy seats and fittings without the slightest provocation.

Our loyalty to the picture and the picture business will not permit us to entertain for a moment the idea that a moving picture theatre is a dangerous place for the child. And it is our opinion that there are very few picture houses in America that are not fit for any child to go into. But glancing back over the situation it appears to us that, after all, if the child laws that have been resisted were allowed to be passed without interference by the exhibitors and obeyed by them when passed, there never would have been any hue and cry about crime pictures, and all the succeeding array of laws against moving pictures that are the outcome of the original child agitation.

The surest way to repeal an unjust law is to enforce it with a vengeance and let public opinion do the rest. Law is law; and when a law barring children was passed, it should never have been circumvented by the manager who kept always a "guardian" who was ready to escort a child into a theatre. Such things do more harm than good, and are not worth the money that is made thereby.

